ARBITERS AND CHIEFS WORK TOWARD PEACE.

Strike Is Held Up for Three Days With Bright Hope of Settlement.

Knapp and Neill Meet Both Sides and Dates for Further Discussions Are Set—Men Have Already Lost Million—President's Influence Is Lost If Employees Fail to Accept Principle of Arbitration.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Conference follows conference between the railway managers, the trainmen's representatives and the officials of the United States government at Chicago. Prospects are brightening for a peaceable adjustment of the trouble. The employes have announced their willingness to again meet the managers in an effort to settle the difficulty without strike.

As a positive indication of the situation Commissioner of Labor Neill said at midnight: "There will be no strike for at least three days and the prospect is we will be able to effect some agreement between the warring factions."

It is announced that while the men will not move from their position as to wages, they will, at the solicitation of the commissioners, meet the general managers in a friendly spirit and talk over the situation.

On the other hand, hot-headed members of the unions and even their responsible representatives make boastful and brutal assertions of their supposed power to wreck the best interests of the country or to win the last tittle of their demands. As, for instance, the following, from Morrissey:

"We are willing to arbitrate provided we are assured that our demands will be granted. If the board of arbitration can get us the increase in wages we demand we had just as soon take it from its hands as from those of the general managers. It's the money and better conditions we are after and we are going to get them."

This statement is [illegible] to represent the [illegible] [illegible] Chicago [illegible] railroad [illegible] [illegible] at a joint conference arranged for Monday, it is feared that nothing can prevent the strike. The fact that the employes were willing to meet the officials at all was thought to have been an indication that a peaceful arrangement would be arrived at, but from the reports of the conferences today it is feared that no settlement will be reached at all. Another meeting of the trainmen and commissioners will be held tomorrow morning. Tonight a long conference between the managers and commissioners was held but nothing was given out on either side that would indicate that peace is in sight.

Chief Morrissey refused tonight to make any statement relative to the conferences on the situation. He even declined to make a statement when asked if the situation did not appear more hopeful.

He admitted that the unions had not changed in their position on the question of arbitration.

PRESIDENT IS AT ISSUE.

That the union leaders are opposed to arbitration is not denied. The question remaining unanswered tonight is, how far will they be carried by this sentiment in opposing the earnest plea of the President who has given so many instances of his sympathy with labor in its just demands. That the union officials will go to the extent of rejecting the efforts of the President's commission and call a strike, an act that would without question alienate the sympathy not only of the President, but of the entire country, seems incredible in view of the fact that the railroads have already agreed to grant an increase of 10½ per cent.

The union leaders undoubtedly realize their position and it is predicted that the loophole for escape which has carefully been left unobstructed throughout the negotiations, will be sought at the psychological moment.

NEMESIS CONFRONTS THEM.

Although the leaders of the trainmen are fortified with authority to call a strike should they so desire, signs are not lacking that their paths will be pleasant on and after they have accepted the inevitable and bowed to the dictate of public opinion which is unalterably opposed to a strike and the resultant paralysis of business. It has been pointed out that the increase offered by the railroads to take effect March 1, would have resulted in an increase of pay for the trainmen to April, of more than half a million dollars.

MEN LOSE HALF MILLION.

That is [illegible] money lost to the [illegible] their leaders continue to haggle over the remaining [illegible] per cent. additional.

The men's demands [illegible] as proceeding of an arbitration commission pledged before hand to grant the full demands of one party to the controversy are being obstinately insisted upon. Another month will be frittered away and the employés will be out more than a million dollars in addition to the [illegible] expensive [illegible] four months of [illegible] carried on in Chicago. [illegible] up to the union officials to explain to their followers why, if the generous terms offered by the railroads could be accepted to take effect on May 1 they could not have been accepted to take effect March 1. That they will accept the terms offered by the railroads or the arbitration offered by President Roosevelt is inevitable.

The commissioners will hold a session with the managers' committee Sunday morning, and at that time it will be arranged to fix the time for Monday's meeting for the trainmen and conductors with the managers' committee, with Commissioner Knapp and Commissioner Neill acting in the capacity of mediators.

The chairmen of the grievance committees from the different railroads are growing restless and discouraged over what they term unnecessary parleying. They say the power to strike has been placed in their hands and that it should be exercised to bring about a settlement. They are not afraid of a weakening on the part of P. H. Morrissey, but think that the further the strike is set back, the less chance they have of winning a victory. The chiefs, however, will exercise the full measure of indulgence with the mediators just as long as no material concession is pressed from them, in the hope that they will secure the approval of the public when the strike is made operative against the roads.

PROSPERITY SUN IS BRIGHTLY SHINING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Business throughout the United States for the first three months of 1907 is greater in volume than for the same period last year. Heads of corporations and mercantile agencies and merchants and manufacturers, whose business brings them in close touch with all parts of the country, declare that the whole trend of business is toward increased volume and activity.

Factories in every line are unable to meet the demands of the jobbing trades. "Overproduction" is a cry that has been forgotten in the face of conditions where the demand from all parts of the country is ahead of production. Better prices maintain in this year than last in almost every line and there is plenty of money in the hands of the people to meet the advances.

"People don't care what things cost. They want the best and they are willing to pay for it," said a man at the head of a great wholesale business, in summing up the situation.

Excluding New York, where Wall street conditions have affected the situation, the bank clearings for the first two months of 1907 have shown decided increases over the same periods last year. The figures for March are not yet obtainable.

Wearing apparel offers the fairest basis, experts say, by which to measure the prosperity of a community, since it is in the luxuries of dress that people first begin to cut expenses. In the manufacture and distribution of dry goods and notions of all kinds the volume this year shows a vast increase and in some cases the prices are higher than since the Civil War.

Lumber has suffered a slump in prices this year of about 5 per cent. under 1906, but it is pointed out that this condition is due to lack of cars in which to ship. The same lack of sufficient rolling stock is tending in other lines also to modify the abounding prosperity of the country in some degree.

Labor Gangs Celebrated Installation of Crooked Supervisors [illegible]—Earl and Haynes to Feel the Probe of Justice—[illegible] Sensations Yesterday—Also "Blackmail" Exposed by Pillsbury.

RESPONSIBILITY for the [illegible] is [illegible] fixed upon the labor unions, who elected Ruef's [illegible] tools, impudently admitting that he was a grafter.

Schmitz's cache-chest, which the Mayor claimed was used to hide his fiddle in, was found yesterday to be too small to hold it.

Reuf yesterday denounced what he termed a "conspiracy" to railroad him to prison.

E. S. Pillsbury, attorney and director of the Pacific States Telephone Company, declared that Reuf received $1200 a month for preventing a rival company from obtaining franchises. Reuf afterward "double-crossed" his hirers.

Heney positively stated yesterday that E. Tobias Earl and Dr. Haynes of Los Angeles will be called upon to tell what they know of the briberies.

A ROTTEN REGIME.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Were Sammy Clover to be summoned before the grand jury the grief of Los Angeles would be complete.

Dr. Haynes, who went through Europe on a passionate crusade to help the dear public to own all franchises, has been subpoenaed. The grand jury wants to find out what the doctor really knows of the telephone franchise being taken away from the same dear public by alleged bribery—possibly with the doctor's own coin—while the doctor was weeping such sympathetic tears.

E. Tobias Earl, imitation apostle of temperance, is also summoned to tell of the famous telephone dress-suit case.

San Francisco dances with glee upon the carcasses of these and other Los Angeles men who have been drawn into this. It diverts the fire. Any outside observer cannot but feel disappointed in the attitude of San Francisco in this terrible disgrace.

It is doubtful if the eruption does any good. Instead of taking up whips and driving out labor union politicians who have brought about this debauchery all newspapers are breathlessly making frightened apologies for them.

NICE, BUT MISLED.

One says the unions are "nice people," but were "misled." Not at all accountable. The Bulletin smirks over the whole back page tonight with a fawning laudation of the sailors' union. Rudolph Spreckles, himself, says publicly, that the very men who contribute money to Heney would not have their names mentioned.

The papers deliberately falsify when they assert that the unions were misled into electing these men. San Francisco's last election was flashed around the world as the first complete political triumph of the unions.

The unions knew Ruef to be a grafter. Union leaders impudently acknowledged it. Andrews's grand jury practically proved it.

But the unions didn't care. It was "anything to win."

The night after the election, all the union leaders—and Ruef—joined in a wild jubilation. They hailed him as a "dear brother."

Friday night the Los Angeles Native Sons elected delegates to the grand parlor at Napa to be held in about a month, at which time a furious fight will be made to expel Ruef and Gallagher. Ruef is trustee and Gallagher past grand president.

"Gee, that man Gallagher once made a speech on civic duty, and honesty. That speech made tears come to my eyes," said a prominent Native Son today.

BANKERS NOT NEEDED.

The officials of several banks in which Abe Ruef and Mayor Schmitz deposited vast sums of money, who were subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury today, did not do so. At the eleventh hour, Detective Burns concluded he had secured sufficient circumstantial evidence to corroborate the fact of the passing of bribe money by the boss to the Supervisors, without the testimony of the bankers. They were, therefore, notified that their presence was not needed before the grand jury. It is possible these bankers may be called at the next meeting, when Burns announces that the results of his findings will be presented.

Burns spent a large part of Friday night in conversation with Charles D. Stewart, the expert accountant who is probing the books of the different institutions where Ruef kept his princely fortune.

While the prosecution will not give out the details of the investigation, it is hinted that some startling revelations have been made.

The prosecution believes that a search of many safe-deposit boxes in which Ruef kept considerable ready cash will also reveal much of value in the way of evidence.

It is believed the power of the grand jury will enable it to make such an inquiry. Ruef had vaults at the Western Bank, the California Safe Deposit and Trust Company, the First National Bank and the Crocker National Bank.

At the next meeting of the grand jury, Burns says he will be able to solve the mystery of the $300,000 Los Angeles fund, besides the boodle which Ruef got from other franchises.

INDICTMENTS PENDING.

"Special Agent Burns expects two important arrivals from Los Angeles today—Edwin T. Earl, multi-millionaire owner of the Evening Express, and Dr. John R. Each is stated by the bribery prosecution to have knowledge of intimate Home Telephone Company affairs, which the grand jury proposes, if possible, to secure.

RICH MEN LOSE NINE MILLIONS.

VANDERBILT, ASTOR AND GOELET ARE VICTIMS.

They Bought Union Pacific in Time to Profit by Harriman's Great Coup but Hold Too Long and Scorch Their Fingers in Recent Stock Flurry.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It was learned today that three of the heaviest losers in the "rich man's panic" in Wall street are John Jacob Astor, Robert W. Goelet and Cornelius Vanderbilt. Their aggregate losses are said to be $9,000,000. All of the money was lost in the Union Pacific stock on a "tip."

E. H. Harriman, it is said, won the friendship of the three by advising them to buy Union Pacific prior to the famous meeting in August last when the dividend rate was unexpectedly increased from 6 to 10 per cent., the price of the stock running up in a few days from 160 to 195.

It is stated that as a result of this inside information they bought something in excess of 200,000 shares of Union Pacific. Finally came the big break on March 15. The average price which the pool got for its shares is said to have been a shade under 125 or a loss of more than forty points a share—or more than $8,000,000 for the entire holdings.

LOOKING FOR OHIO.

Steamer Bearing the Los Angeles Excursionists Not Yet Sighted Off San Pedro.

At the hour of going to press this morning the steamer Ohio bearing the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce excursion returning from Honolulu had not yet been sighted off San Pedro.

A vessel thought to be the Ohio was seen not far off the outer harbor breakwater last evening. The San Pedro correspondent of The Times went out in a launch, but learned that the steamer believed to be the Ohio was the Pleiades bound north.

It is expected that the Ohio will arrive today.

SUNDAY TIMES, 10 CENTS A COPY.

This will be the price of The Sunday Times, beginning today, March 31, when sold by newsboys, train agents and news dealers generally. Any attempt by any newsboy or dealer to charge a higher price should be reported promptly to the publication office.

Remember that the regular subscription prices of 20c per week (seven days, including the Sunday edition) and 75c per month are the same as heretofore. If the price of the Sunday paper seems high to those who have been accustomed to paying but 5c, by subscribing by the month they can secure The Times for an average of about 2½c per copy.

No other daily and Sunday paper in the United States prints as many columns of news matter as The Times, or as many columns of advertising matter. All other Los Angeles papers print a much smaller paper, both daily and Sunday.

Subscribers to The Times get a newspaper bargain every day in the year.

SEEK TO FIX THE BLAME.

Official Inquiry Into the Colton Wreck.

No Additional Bodies Found. Injured Improving.

Reports of Looting Denied by Colton People.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COLTON, March 30. — [Exclusive Dispatch.] The Southern Pacific officials held an investigation here this afternoon and tonight. The different employés involved are undergoing severe examination. The officials here are Superintendent Platt, Trainmaster Dodds, Assistant Superintendent Thomas McCaffery. The Coroner's investigation, which was to have been continued tonight, has been postponed until Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

The wreckage is being rapidly cleared away. The main track is clear tonight, and the first train passed over at 7 o'clock. What remains of the tourist car, in which most of the fatalities occurred, was taken into the yards today. The dining car was sent into Los Angeles last night. Only the engine and two tourist cars are yet to be removed. As yet no additional bodies have been discovered.

Consular Agent Castruccio and Steamship Agent Orsatti said today that about ten Italians were missing, but as the wreckage has been well searched it is presumed these have continued their journey and will be located later.

Tonight men are at work cutting the tender from the engine, and all signs of the wreck will soon be removed.

MAKING LIBERAL SETTLEMENT

The claim agents of the Southern Pacific were in Colton today, settling liberally with the injured. Satisfactory settlements were effected with all, excepting one man, whose claim is regarded as excessive. B. Castruccio, the Italian Consular Agent, and Morris Orsatti, steamship agent, were also here from Los Angeles today, identifying the dead and looking out for the interests of their families.

The woman killed was identified as Gerolama Berrazo. The widower, James Canepa, will arrive tomorrow from San Francisco to take charge of the remains.

Morris Orsatti, the agent for the steamship company, stated in an interview with The Times correspondent that the unfortunate immigrants landed in New York March 22. Most of them were natives of Central Italy, while a few came from Sicily and Rome. Most of the victims were single men, while about four left families.

There are seven patients still at the Colton Hospital. Two Americans, a man and a woman; two Italian children and three Italian men. Two of these men, Filberto Patale and Perracchi Grachamo, are not expected to live through the night. Patale is suffering from concussion of the brain and a badly injured spine. Drs. Champion and Pritchard operated upon him this afternoon, since which time he has been gradually sinking. Grachamo has serious wounds on the knees and feet and one toe is gone.

Ten of the victims were buried in Hermosa Cemetery this morning. The remains were carried to their resting place in five express wagons, two bodies being placed in each wagon. Father Gleason conducted services both at the morgue and the cemetery.

No arrangements have been made as to who should meet the expenses of the burial, although it is generally understood that the Southern Pacific will do so. It was impossible to hold these bodies any longer.

The remainder of the dead, nine in number, are being held pending instructions.

INDIGNANTLY DENY LOOTING.

The police force of this city as well as the citizens, are indignant over the story told by J. E. Mayer, theatrical electrician of the Florence Roberts Company, who was in the wreck, to the effect that he saw much looting done by Americans. While Colton is no better than other localities, in this case the charge is wholly unfounded. Mr. Mayer said that he saw the bodies of the Americans as well as those of the Italians being looted. What he witnessed evidently was the care given by the Knights of Pythias to George L. Sharp who was instantly killed. He was recognized by the emblem on his ring and was tenderly cared for.

In the case of the eighteen Italians, money was found in every instance but one. On this man over $77 was discovered and in nearly all cases the money ranged over $25. Watches and passports were on every man except one whose coat was missing. The bodies of the Italians were searched by Coroner Van Wie and Consular Agent Castruccio, and the effects of each labeled, and put together. Justice Hanna, in the absence of the Coroner, went with the Italian consular agent to identify the dead and secure their effects. If the looting had occured all money, trinkets, etc., would surely have been taken. Harry Albee assisted with almost every body removed, and states that he knew every man helping there, and denies indignantly the looting story. Doubtless there was some looting done, but it was for relics more than for valuables and not a body was touched. It has even been stated that fingers were removed for the rings. The Coroner reports not a finger missing.

CORONER COMING.
TO EXAMINE ENGINEER.

Coroner Van Wie of San Bernardino county will probably come to Los Angeles some time tomorrow to take the deposition of Engineer Warmington on the latter's knowledge of the Colton wreck. Meantime the inquest in Colton is hanging fire, pending the return of the Coroner from near Otis, whither he was called Friday night.

Switchman Grinsmeyer was discharged yesterday. This was in line with the statement of Superintendent Platt, who held the switching crew as the particular body of employés at fault. The Coroner and the jury, however, from their questions, seem to take the ground that there may be others at fault, as well as the crew of the yard engine.

Old railroad men talk along the same lines as do the Coroner and his jury.

"There are," said one of these, who has put in years of service on Southern California roads, "several reasons for wrecks, of which one always seems to be a basic cause. This one is the fact that the railroad officials are coming to be men who have not risen from the ranks—not only the officials, but men in positions of responsibility in the operating departments. They get their positions through favoritism, pull, the company's surgeon's mistakes in rejecting men of experience and other causes. This is a day of young men with slight experience, who are closely bound by written rules of whose reasons they know nothing.

"The consequence is mistakes—and wrecks. Men of experience whether they be on yard work or on trains don't take chances as a rule, and they don't accept responsibility where it doesn't belong to them. Then, too, nowadays roads work short-handed, and they drive their men. Yard crews have too much to do. They are apt to make such mistakes as this one did at Colton. The present era of bad wrecks is, in a large measure, due to the fact that men are worked too hard and are handled by others, who have not themselves learned every little detail of the intricate work of railroading."

The injured in local hospitals were reported last night as slowly recovering. Warmington's condition had slightly improved.

GREAT FALLS COAX DEATH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NIAGARA FALLS (N. Y.) March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] All Niagara stands amazed tonight at the demonstration the falls of Niagara have made of their ability to coax human beings to death, for within twenty-four hours no less than two men and one woman have surrendered their lives on its bosom and permitted the flood to carry their bodies over the falls from the higher to the lower level. When a woman leaped from Prospect Point last night it was felt that the suicide season has opened.

An early visitor to the Third Sister Island this morning found a hat, an overcoat, letters and other articles, indicating that a Japanese had gone over. He was from Brooklyn.

Suicide number three occurred this morning, when a man was discovered in the upper rapids out from the Sister Islands. He was swept over the Horseshoe in full view of many.

RESUME WORK OR OPEN SHOP.

SUCH IS ANSWER OF BREWERS TO THE STRIKERS.

Men Are Ready to Take Places of Deserters in All of Twenty-three Beer Factories of St. Louis—Owners Willing to Arbitrate If Work Goes on.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] At a meeting this afternoon of officials of all the St. Louis breweries at the headquarters of the St. Louis Brewing Association, the following ultimatum was issued in the shape of a telegram sent to the headquarters of the United Brewery Workers' Union in Cincinnati and to the strikers assembled at Concordia Turner Hall:

"Unless your members resume work Monday morning in all local breweries in St. Louis, East St. Louis and Granite City, pending negotiations, we will be compelled to declare an open shop so far as the striking brewery workers' unions are concerned. This step will be forced upon us, not by choice, but by prevailing unfair conditions."

This was signed by Philip Stock as "secretary of the St. Louis Brewers' Association."

The meeting also adopted this resolution: "We desire to go on record that any difference between the old terms and new demands will be arbitrated, providing the men resume work on or before Monday morning next."

Otto Stifel, president of the Union Brewery, has received telegrams from Philadelphia, Boston, Springfield, Ill., and New York offering to supply all the men needed in all the branches of the brewery business in St. Louis.

The messages state that the workmen can be in St. Louis in three or four days. Stifel says that unless the striking employés return to work Monday, the employers will be compelled to accept the offer.

The bottlers' local of the United Brewery Workers struck at noon today, 1100 of the bottlers leaving the twenty-three breweries in St. Louis and East St. Louis. Millionaires are acting as stokers in several breweries.

August A. Busch, vice-president of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association, stated today that he has in his plant 600,000 barrels of beer, or enough to supply the city trade for about six months, and that it is sufficiently aged for use. The problem is to get it bottled and kegged.

Forty office men and wealthy members and friends of the Busch family worked today on a freight platform at the plant, loading bottled beer. "Gussie Busch," who worked three years in the brewery as a laborer and stoker, says he is also a competent malter and brewer, and that he will do this work himself if necessary. He expects to begin brewing Monday.

LOAFERS PAY PRISON BIRD.

I. W. W. Gives Coin Daily to Silva's Slayers.

Proof That Totemites Plotted Murder Is Plain.

Jury Indictments Hang Over Big Officials.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Cumulative evidence tends to prove that John Silva, the restaurant man, who was guilty of accepting the patronage of men not affiliated with the I.W.W., was murdered as the result of a foul and deliberate conspiracy among labor leaders of the I.W.W.

The I.W.W. walking delegate, who fired the fatal shot, ran straight from the scene of his deed up Main street to Miners' Union Hall, which is the citadel of the I.W.W. He was surrounded during his flight by more than a hundred I.W.W. followers, and was hid away in their hall until the officers learned where he was, when he gave himself up on the advice of an attorney of I.W.W. leanings.

The grand jury at Hawthorne indicted not only M. E. Preston, the slayer of Silva, but Joseph Smith, his superior officer in the I.W.W. The grand jury returned four secret indictments against I.W.W. officials higher up. There must have been substantial evidence of conspiracy to justify such indictments.

NAMES WITHHELD.

The names of the officers against whom true bills were found are withheld for the reason that the authorities fear they would escape before arrest. The Hawthorne jail is strongly guarded to prevent the delivery of Preston and Smith by the I.W.W.

The last bit of evidence to confirm the proof of the conspiracy is the shameful fact that the I.W.W. is paying Preston and Smith each $5 a day for the time they are confined at the Hawthorne jail.

Preston actually confessed that he killed Silva, though he pleaded not guilty and every man in Goldfield believes he is the criminal. In the face of this the I.W.W. is allowing him $5 daily for his time in jail, thus paying a premium on crime and attempting to make a martyr of a felon and a mockery of law.

The trial of Preston and Smith will probably take place in Goldfield, which will be the county seat after May 1. Unless the Western Federation of Miners soon finds a way to divorce themselves from the I.W.W. an army of substitutes will be brought into camp from Arizona and other points and the mines will resume activity with a clean sheet and American methods.

One thing is certain: No sympathizer of the I.W.W. will ever again pound steel in the Goldfield district. A second certainty is that the mine owners will not dally much longer.

LABOR BRIEFS.

Strike Nearly Over.

GENEVA (Switzerland) March 30.—The general strike is about over and the troops will probably be disbanded shortly.

Telephone Girls Organize.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—A strike of the telephone girls in every office of the Pacific States Telephone Company is said to be imminent. Uniting against threatened stringent rules and reduction in their wages, the young women, numbering over 3000, have been secretly meeting, and they say that the Federation of Labor has promised them a charter. Unless the company recedes from its rumored intention to reduce wages, April 1 will find the service paralyzed, declare the organizers of the employés.

Vilify Government.

PARIS, March 30.—Violently-worded manifestos have been placarded throughout the city vilifying the action of the government in refusing permission to the state employés to form trades unions. The Central Committee of the organization declares it will not accept the government's decision.

Want Contract Broken.

COLUMBUS (O.) March 30.—The brewery workers in six local plants will strike Monday, because their employers refuse to break their own contract.

RETURNS WARD'S MONEY.

STOCKTON, March 30.—Attorney W. M. Gibson, charged with the embezzlement of some hundreds of dollars from the estate of the minor sons of Mrs. Helen Troy, and upon which charge he was once tried, a disagreement resulting, today paid into the hands of Dist.-Atty. George F. McNoble the sum of $744, principal and interest, in full settlement. The charge was dismissed.

BAKERSFIELD, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] H. G. Morrow, right of way agent for the Standard Oil Company and deputy sheriff of Alameda county, was fined $50 today in the justice court for disorderly conduct and discharging a revolver.

Last night Morrow was involved in a poker game and, losing a big bet, on three jacks against four aces, drew a revolver and laid it on the table in front of him. Those sitting at the game refused to continue until the weapon was removed and in the melee that followed, Morrow discharged the firearm twice without damage. He was arrested on a warrant sworn out by the proprietor of the house.

TRAVELERS' TROUBLES.

Passengers Leaving Los Angeles Are Thirty-one Hours Going to San Francisco.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Passengers who left Los Angeles Thursday night after the Colton wreck were over thirty-one hours getting to San Francisco.

Misfortunes seemed to pile up. Two freight cars left their trucks, tying up four trains near Caliente. At Bakersfield a tourist coach broke down. It was a Chicago coach, but half filled with San Francisco passengers. After hours of delay it was repaired and attached to the train which left Los Angeles at 11:30 o'clock.

At Tracy, despite protests, sleeping cars were switched off to Sacramento, leaving the San Francisco passengers to shift for themselves. Many were made to travel the rest of the way to San Francisco in filthy day coaches loaded with Italian immigrants.

It took five hours and a half to travel eighty-three miles, from Tracy to Oakland. Passengers, women included, landed at the Oakland depot at 3 a.m., unable to find conveyances to take them to town. They appealed to railroad officials, who told them to sleep on benches in the depot.

No other casualties were reported.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CINCINNATI, March 30.—In reply to the statement made public by Senator Foraker a few days ago, Charles P. Taft, proprietor and editor of the Cincinnati Times-Star, gave out the following today in behalf of his brother, Secretary of War Taft:

"Senator Foraker's statement indicates that he is running for the Presidency and for the Senatorship. The friends of Secretary Taft are urging him for the Presidency. As the Senator has included the two offices in this primary contest, Secretary Taft's friends accept the proposition and will make it a distinct contest, Taft for the Presidency or Senatorship, or Foraker for the Presidency or Senatorship.

"If the Republicans of Ohio, by their votes at the primaries, indicate that they prefer Foraker for the Presidency or Senatorship, Secretary Taft is eliminated from the situation.

"If the people of Ohio indicate Secretary Taft for the Presidency or Senatorship, Foraker is eliminated from the present situation in Ohio.

"This is a direct contest between the friends of the administration of the President and his opponents. We are willing to submit it to the Republican voters of Ohio, and the sooner the better.

WRECKER IN DITCH, TOO.

Complete Block of Espee Lines South of Bakersfield by Odd Mishap.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BAKERSFIELD, March 30.—Tonight the Southern Pacific lines south are completely blocked. Coming on top of the tie-up of the Coast road is the third of a series of small freight wrecks on the Tehachepi Mountains near Caliente, which occurred early this morning.

The wrecker was dispatched from Kern and while picking up one of the derailed freight cars the wrecker itself toppled over, making the blockade complete. There being no other wrecker on the division, the ginger method of building a spur track around the wreck had to be employed, and it was after midnight before this was completed and trains again moving.

At Caliente five passenger trains are stalled. They include last night's Nos. 8 and 10, and the morning trains from Los Angeles and the Coast road. In the local yards are last night's Owl and tonight's No. 8, and the evening and morning Santa Fé trains.

CAN REACH POLE NOW.

By following the route taken by Commander Robert E. Peary when he made his record attempt to reach the North Pole last year and profiting by the experience of his voyage, another Arctic expedition will be able to reach the pole in a single season, according to statements made by the famous explorer in an address at the Auditorium tonight. Commander Peary asserted his faith in the dog and sledge method in making polar explorations, and said that had he known as much about the conditions in the Far North as he does now, he feels confident that he could have attained the goal of his desire. He expressed the hope that he might sometime have another opportunity.

BUSSE FAR AHEAD.

If Fred A. Busse runs as well Tuesday at the polls as he did today in the books and in private betting in downtown and outlying sporting resorts, he will walk into the office of Mayor like the glide of a ray of sunlight on a cloudy day. Busse was the favorite everywhere and the odds were hammered down from 8 to 10 to 5 to 6 and late tonight even money was being placed, though not in large amounts.

DOG RESTS IN PEACE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LOUISVILLE (Ky.) March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Judge Shackleford Miller today handed down an opinion in the case of Henry Hertle against Alice Riidel, in which he decided the court would not interfere to enforce the removal of a dog buried in Cave Hill Cemetery because the plaintiff regards such an interment as a nuisance and dislikes the idea of some day being near the canine. The defendant buried "Billy Mensbrough," a pet fox terrier, in her plot in Cave Hill, and the plaintiff sought to have the body removed.

WASHINGTON.

PRESIDENT'S MEAN TOOTH.

This Adds to Nervous Strain of Past Two Months.

He Intends to Take Exercise for Slight Debility.

Many Conferences Have Worn His Energy.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Stories in circulation that the President is in ill health are denied at the White House. Because the appetite of the President fell off for a day or two during the hot spell of the past week, and some of his callers noticed that he was not quite as active and vigorous as usual, a story went the rounds that he was really ill.

He has also been bothered by a mean tooth, which his dentist has been treating. This has given him some discomfort and did not conduce to allay the tremendous wear and tear on his nervous system for the last two months.

The President went to his dentist again today, a large number of visitors in the White House grounds saw him as he passed out and returned. He appeared to be in excellent health. If the President does not show some signs of failing strength before summer is well on there will be surprise among his intimate friends.

He has never had a harder winter and spring, and there is still before him a large accumulation of work. Congress left him much to do, and he has had forty or fifty difficult appointments to make. The Ohio judgeship, in which he once again clashed with Senators Foraker and Dick, was one of these. There has also come the crash in the stock market, and general uneasiness in business circles throughout the country. The President has shown more concern as to this situation than any other since he has been in office.

He has conferred with many people and been subjected to severe strain as to the best course to pursue.

The general effect has been a prey upon a strong nervous system. Many conferences, together with a rush of regular work, have prevented the President from getting as much exercise as usual. In the past frequent exercise has been synonymous with medicine with him. It is understood that from now on the President will get outdoors oftener than in the past few months.

Kidney and Bladder Trouble

Mrs. Jackson Hadley, Esopus, N. Y., writes:

"It is with the greatest pleasure I write this. For years I have suffered terribly with kidney and bladder trouble. The pain in my back by spells was so great I could scarcely stand on my feet, and such terrible headaches and pain around my heart, and was so nervous all the time that life seemed a burden to me.

"I paid out a great many dollars, both for doctors and patent medicines, and no benefit only for the time.

"One day, looking through a Peruna almanac, I saw how many had been benefited by using Peruna. I at once wrote Dr. Hartman and stated my health. He promptly replied. I followed his directions, and after taking four bottles of Peruna can stand on my feet and work all day with comfort. The pain in my back and head have entirely left me, and I am not so nervous, and can say I am completely cured from all kidney trouble."

Pe-ru-na Restored Health

Mrs. William H. Cottrell, 118 High St., Westerly, R. I., writes:

"I am perfectly restored to health as regards catarrh. Peruna has been a sure and reliable cure for me. I have passed a very fine winter as regards my health. I have tried different remedies, but Peruna is the right thing for me. I cannot speak too highly of it. I heartily recommend it to every one."

Both Depend on Peruna

Mr. C. P. Griffin, box 10, Wilmington, Del., writes:

"My wife and myself have been greatly benefited. I wish to say to all who suffer with such an unpleasant disease, catarrh, that they should try Peruna. My wife and I are taking your medicine now."

Had Doctored for Seven Years

Mr. Andor Kiss, 512 E. 13th St., Kansas City, Mo., writes:

"I cannot thank you enough for being cured. For seven long years I doctored steadily for my catarrh and cough, which cost me hundreds of dollars.

"But my catarrh grew worse all the time. Even though I was under the treatment of some of the most famous doctors, I still had a terrible cough and thought sometimes that I would choke—I could get no air.

"I then bought a bottle of Peruna, and that evening and all night my wife gave it to me, according to the directions, and I felt better the following day already. Three days later I felt much improved, and, today, after the use of the fourth bottle, I feel entirely cured.

"I can conscientiously recommend this grand medicine to every citizen."

Headache and Neuralgia

Mrs. M. Kliner, 2648 E. 36th St., S. E., Cleveland, Ohio, writes: "I had suffered for a good many years previous to taking Peruna, and ever since I can say that I do not know what headache or neuralgia is."

A Good Appetite

Peruna very promptly produces a vigorous appetite. It is especially applicable to those people who have lost their relish for food. They get up in the morning with coated tongue, and do not care for breakfast. They drag along through the forenoon, sit down to dinner with a languid appetite, or perhaps a distaste for food. And so on through the day.

Almost the first dose of Peruna will help such people. They want to eat at once. To their surprise, food sets well on their stomach, and digests well.

It is a universal experience with Peruna that a natural hunger is produced. Where there is a loss of flesh as the result of disease or fatigue, Peruna immediately increases the weight of the patient, good solid flesh.

One bottle is amply sufficient to convince anybody that Peruna is an appetizer, prompt in action, harmless in operation, and lasting in results.

Chronic Nasal Catarrh

Mr. Charles H. Stevens, 122 Sixteenth St., Detroit, Mich., writes:

"It affords me great pleasure to testify to the merits of Peruna as a remedy for catarrh.

"I suffered for some time with chronic nasal catarrh, but after five months' treatment, during which time I used seven bottles of Peruna, I am pleased to say that I am entirely well, there not being the slightest trace of catarrh left."

Mrs. F. E. Henderson, 221 9th street, Milwaukee, Wis., treasurer of the Schiller Club, writes:

"I never had any faith in patent medicines until I tried Peruna, but my experience with this reliable medicine has taught me that there is one which can be trusted and which will not fail in time of need.

"For the past few years I have found that I caught cold easily, which would settle in a most unpleasant catarrh of the head. I had to be especially careful about being out of evenings, and not to get chilled when dressed thin for parties, but since I have used Peruna my general health is improved, and my system is in such good condition that even though I am exposed to inclement weather it no longer affects me.

"I have a splendid appetite and enjoy life, being in perfect health."

Catarrh and Weak Nerves

Mrs. Francisca Ludgering, Cornwall, Cal., writes:

"I was troubled for years with catarrh and weak nerves. In the year of '96 I began to use Peruna and Manalin, and obtained Dr. Hartman's free advice. His medicine cured me, and also cured my daughter."

Stomach Trouble

Mr. Aug. Gerling, Troy, Ill., writes: "I have suffered for several years with stomach trouble. I have taken Peruna, and find myself in a very good condition now."

Peruna His Traveling Companion

Mr. August Haase, St. Anthony, Dubois county, Indiana, writes:

"I was troubled much with catarrh for several years. I was advised to take Peruna and used two bottles of it, which did me much good.

"I decided to see my old home in Germany again, after an absence of forty years, and bought a bottle of Peruna to take while on my way. Whenever I would have symptoms of catarrh I would take Peruna, and so was very well while going over. I would advise every one who crosses the ocean to take Peruna along.

"I was in Germany nine months and during that time had no attacks. I was then sixty-six years old.

"Last winter I took cold and got catarrh of the head. I took Peruna and was helped.

"Everybody who is troubled with catarrh should take Peruna."

Catarrh of Kidneys

Judge C. J. Park, R. F. D. No. 1, Buckhead, Ga., writes:

"For a long time I was troubled with catarrh of the kidneys, and after taking Peruna I feel like a new man. I think it the greatest catarrh medicine of the age, and believe it will cure any case of catarrh on record.

"Rest assured that Peruna will ever be highly praised and recommended by myself."

"I find much [illegible] let you know that I [illegible] your wonderful tonic [illegible] perience I have decided [illegible] be no greater medicine [illegible] Peruna.

SEEKS PAY FOR SAVING WATER.

FORESTER PROPOSES TAX FOR USE OF RESERVES.

Says Power Companies on Public Domain Should Be Charged a Reasonable Sum for Conservation of Water—Question Being Considered by Atty.-Gen. Bonaparte.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Forester Pinchot has recommended to the President that electrical and water-power companies using water for power and power transmission purposes in forest reserves shall be charged a reasonable sum for the conservation of the water.

The question will be submitted to Attorney-General Bonaparte for an opinion as to the legality of the proposed charge and if it is found to be legal, the President will issue an order putting it into effect.

The schedule of charges is being prepared in anticipation of an affirmative opinion from the Department of Justice. If the new policy is entered into it will affect a number of the companies in California.

The theory of the new plan is that as the government maintains and extends the forests, thus conserving the water supply it is only fair that the companies using the water should pay for its conservation.

A protest is expected from the power companies as soon as they learn of the proposed tax but if the Attorney-General finds it legal it is very likely to be imposed.

TO STOP THEFTS OF PUBLIC LAND.

COMMISSIONER REORGANIZES WORK OF DEPARTMENT.

Field Divisions Are Redistributed and Enlarged, and More Authority Is Given to Chiefs of Divisions. Plan Will Enable Increased Efficiency in Detecting Fraud.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 30.—In accordance with orders issued by the President and the Secretary of the Interior, the commissioner of the General Land Office has closed up the work of reorganizing the field and office force under his control.

In order to secure greater efficiency in the field work of the special agents the commissioner has found it advisable to redistrict the public land territory, changing the lines so that for the most part the field divisions have been enlarged, thus giving greater territory for the several chiefs. The chiefs of divisions have been invested with more authority and greater supervisory powers than heretofore.

The special agents will be detailed to the several chiefs from time to time and placed directly under the jurisdiction of the chiefs of the several divisions of the field, each chief being held responsible for the efficient performance of all work in his division. The chief will also be required to furnish reports respecting the conduct of local offices and the offices of the surveyor-general in their respective divisions.

The methods thus adopted, it is hoped, will bring the field force more compactly together, and will enable the agents to appreciate that they have as their chief one directly in authority to whom they can appeal for instructions, support and advice. It is also believed the method will place the chief of the field division in such a position that he can organize and direct from his local headquarters the work of investigation throughout his entire division.

It also had been the purpose of this rearrangement to make it possible to increase the number of agents employed in the several districts in which the field work is of the most important character and in which close investigation is necessary to be carried on to prevent fraud and illegal entries and dispose of suspended cases as rapidly as possible.

It is also the purpose of the commissioner to so detail and concentrate the force as to keep the department advised of the principal land frauds and illegal efforts to acquire title to the public lands and secure evidence to convict those guilty of such offense, especial attention being given to coal and timber entries.

Among the field divisions and assignments of chiefs is No. 2, all land districts in California and Nevada, Louis R. Glavis, of Oakland, Cal., chief.

PRESIDENT ON RAILWAY TALK.

THINKS JAMESTOWN MORE SUITABLE OCCASION.

Opening of Exposition Seems Better Opportunity Than Meeting of Manufacturers at Springfield and He Is Carefully Consulting All Experts for Data as to Actual Situation of Traffic.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Unless something happens, which, in his opinion, makes it advisable and necessary to do so, the probability now is that President Roosevelt will not go to Springfield to address the Illinois manufacturers on the railroad question in response to the invitation extended to him early this week. In any event, he will not be able to make the trip for two or three weeks.

On April 26 he is to deliver an address at the opening of the Jamestown Exposition, at which he will have the opportunity to say what he desires to say on the railroad subject. In conversations with his callers, reference has been made by the President to that occasion as an appropriate one in which he could speak of the matter which is uppermost in his mind at this time, and the impression now is general that he may avail himself of the opportunity. The President has said that he would like very much to go to Springfield. By some of his advisers he has been urged to attend the convention, by others not to go, and, as he said today to one of his callers, he has not yet fully made up his mind on the subject. He is seeking knowledge from every point of view on the railroad situation, with a view to a definite conclusion on this important matter before outlining it in a public speech.

Conferences are being held almost daily by the President with members of his Cabinet, with the Interstate Commerce Commission and with railroad men and financiers, primarily with regard to railroad matters, and incidentally bearing on the financial situation. Today he talked with August Belmont and Jefferson M. Levy of New York, and with Frank B. Kellogg, special counsel of the Interstate Commerce Commission, at which the railroad question was gone over. This afternoon there was a conference with Secretaries Root and Cortelyou and Attorney Kellogg.

The question of State rights also is thought to be an important feature of the discussions which have been held by the President and his advisers in the treatment of the subject. It involves many perplexing problems, to which careful consideration, the President feels must be given before a decision is reached.

DESCRIBES LAST EARTHQUAKE.

LAWSON TELLS SOLONS OF IT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Prof. Andrew C. Lawson, head of the department of geology at the University of California, delivered a lecture on "earthquakes" before the members of the National Geographic Society and their friends last night.

He stated that it is hardly likely, according to the way of thinking of a number of scientists, that another earthquake will visit California for many years, but that he would not be surprised to hear of an earthquake occurring in Oregon and Washington and in the western part of Mexico.

In his discussion he attributed the California quake to a series of ruptures that have been traveling along the western coast of America. "So far earthquakes have occurred everywhere along the coast except in a stretch between the southern part of California and Central America and an area between the northern part of California and the southern part of Alaska.

These stretches, I believe, will be visited before long, and then the long line of this earthquake will be complete from Chile to Alaska."

Prof. Lawson devoted most of his lecture to California earthquakes. "The vertical displacement," he said, "amounted to about three feet, while the horizontal displacement, as evidenced by the breaking of pipe lines, fences, boundary lines, etc., was from ten to fifteen feet."

RECEIVES CANADIANS.

PRESIDENT IS GRACIOUS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The President today received about 500 school teachers from Toronto and surrounding places, who are on a visit to Washington. The President addressed them.

"There could be no body of visitors," he said, "whom I should more gladly greet than I greet this. I have, as every good American must have, the very warmest and strongest feeling for our brothers across the line in Canada. So I welcome you as Canadians; then as a father of six children, I have a strong feeling for teachers. I may sometimes have a strong sympathetic feeling and when I greet you both as Canadians and teachers, I greet you with a double fervor.

"It is a real and great pleasure to see you here and I would have not missed on any account the chance of greeting you personally in the White House to say how very, very glad I am to see you, both in your individual capacities and for the sake of the mighty dominion you represent."

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

Home Boys Take Diploma.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Andre Edward Lee, Rudolph Ingatus Longbaugh, and Frank Schaller of California, graduated today from the United States Naval Medical School. Diplomas were given them by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Newberry.

PLAN TO CAMP ALONG COAST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Chief of Artillery is at work upon plans for an encampment this summer of coast artillery and organized militia in artillery districts along the Pacific Coast. The letters from State officials interested, in response to the invitation of the Assistant Secretary of War, were enthusiastic, and much good is expected to follow the joint encampment of regulars and militia.

Instruction will be given in artillery tactics and gunnery and the working of range finders will be explained. The site of the camp has not yet been selected.

TWO MILLIONS FOR THE PIPER.

Wily Scotchman Causes Some Pretty Panics.

Remarkable Swindle Perpetrated by Him.

Three-Year American Notes Are His Means.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] All "smart" financiers are not Americans, as the just-discovered reasons for the panics on the Stock Exchange here at the times of the January, February and mid-March settlements, prove. These panics, it develops, were caused by a remarkable swindle perpetrated in connection with the recent introduction of three-year American railroad notes.

Alexander Fisher, a Scotchman, succeeded in placing considerable parcels of the three-year notes among stock brokers, insurance men and elsewhere. He went a little farther and traded on the credit which dealing in these notes gave him.

By posing as a millionaire operator and one of the "inner ring" in Wall street, he induced various unsuspecting brokers to execute large buying orders for him. Soon he had a big bull position open and his was one of the accounts which caused trouble in the market at the January settlements.

Two or three weeks ago Fsher, seeing that the game was up, decided to quit without leave-taking. But he went around to the parties to whom he had sold three-year notes and asked them to return his provisional receipts in order to be exchanged for the script. In many cases, if not in all, the receipts were given up, even for large amounts, in one case as much as $150,000.

Having gathered them in, Fisher made off with both the receipts and the script. He is said to have cleared up about $2,500,000.

ROBBER IS SHOT.

DISOBEYS SHERIFF'S ORDER.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

GRAND JUNCTION (Colo.) March 30.—Refusing to obey two commands to halt, Howard Smith, aged 20, charged with robbing the safe of Barton & Terrell's livery stable at Grand Junction, was shot and killed at Clifton last night, by Deputy Sheriff Munson. Smith came here some time ago from Ely, Nev. Munson says he did not aim to kill Smith and is much distressed.

CRIME BRIEFS.

Lottery on Gulf Coast.

JACKSON (Miss.) March 30.—Sensational disclosures regarding a lottery scheme upon the coast were placed before the Federal authorities today. The authorities decline to reveal the details, but it is learned that a regular drawing of prizes has taken place aboard vessels on the Gulf.

May Commute Sentence.

LONDON, March 30.—It was announced today that as a result of the popular agitation in favor of a reprieve for Horace G. Raynor, who on January 24 killed William Whiteley, the well-known merchant, Home Secretary Gladstone has advised the King to commute the death sentence to life imprisonment at penal servitude. The King almost invariably acts upon the Home Secretary's advice, and therefore Raynor's reprieve may be regarded as an accomplished fact. The exercise of the royal influence of mercy is probably due to the public feeling against nursing a dying man back to life only to reserve him for the hangman's noose, together with the sympathy for the prisoner's wife, who is about to be accouched.

Beats Sheriff to Prison.

MINNEAPOLIS (Minn.) March 30.—Dr. J. F. Force, former president of the Northwestern Life Insurance Company, beat the Sheriff to prison today. Early in the week the State Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's sentence of Dr. Force to three and a half years for grand larceny from the company. Dr. Force was then in California. Today the Sheriff received this telegram from him: "Meet at 11 a.m. Saturday at warden's office, Stillwater." The Sheriff found Dr. Force there waiting commitment.

Mrs. McDonald Out.

CHICAGO, March 30.—Mrs. Michael C. McDonald, who was two days ago indicted upon the charge of murdering Webster Guerin, was today released from the County Jail in bonds of $50,000. The bondsmen are her husband and Wesley Schemmel.

His Sentence Expires.

JEFFERSON CITY (Mo.) March 30.—Harry A. Faulkney, former member of the St. Louis House of Delegates, who was convicted of boodling and sent to the penitentiary for three years, was released today, having served his sentence.

Prisoner Faints in Court.

CHICAGO, March 30.—Leonard Leopold, one of the defendants in the Margaret Leslie murder trial, was called to the stand again today for cross-examination, but before many questions could be asked of him, he fainted and fell from the chair. The court proceedings were postponed to await the improvement of his condition. Leopold fainted yesterday after making a sudden rush from the witness stand. He was ill the greater part of the night, but declared today that he felt able to take the stand.

"Jim Crow" Gang Passes.

OAKLAND, March 30.—Percy Pembroke has been found guilty of complicity in the robbery of Edward Stanley in Fruitvale three years ago, and his conviction today marks the passing of the "Jim Crow" gang which terrorized Fruitvale for months and against which one murder and a series of other serious crimes have been proved. Of the four youths who originally made up the gang, John Schneider and George Blaker are serving life sentences for the murder of Thomas Cook, and James Crowhurst is serving a seven-year sentence for the part he played in holding up Stanley.

BIG GUNS MOW DOWN RIOTERS.

GRAPESHOT SLAUGHTER TERRIFIES PEASANTS.

Roumanian Revolutionists, Armed With Hay Forks and Scythe Blades, Withstand Cavalry Charges, but Frightful Carnage Following Use of Artillery Subdues Them.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BUCHAREST, March 30.—Field guns loaded with grapeshot, according to official reports, are winning against the revolutionary peasantry, whose arms are mostly hay forks and scythe blades.

The insurgents were able to hold their own against the troops at close quarters and even withstood cavalry charges, doing terrible execution with long pronged forks and scythe blades strapped to long poles, but the slaughter since the troops used artillery appears to be terrifying them into submission.

In the district of Vlashica, where the outbreak was particularly serious large numbers of insurgents have surrendered and have denounced their leaders to the authorities with the result that many of the latter have been arrested. The government hopes that with the leaders in jail the undisciplined bands will soon abandon the field.

The self-styled "Generals" usually turn out to be country school masters and village priests. Many women are fighting in the insurgent ranks and some of them have been found among the killed, side by side with their husbands, sons and brothers.

Details of the attack made by the peasants on Galatz show that a pitched battle was fought. The insurgents who were several thousand strong, commenced the assault at midnight, carried the outer earthworks and captured a suburb which they set on fire after pillaging it.

Three battalions of infantry attemped to stem the peasants entry into the city itself, but the fork and scythe armed rustics fought desperately hand to hand and almost routed the troops when the Governor ordered field guns, loaded with grape shot, to be fired at the insurgents, who wavered and fled. The fire of the guns wrought havoc on the retiring masses. A number of conflicts between troops and marauders continued to be reported.

Two thousand insurgents at Gorj are said to have been quieted by the assurances of the authorities without resort to force. One hundred and fifty more rioters have been wounded at Balleschtchi, and several of them killed and many arrested.

Artillery was used at Cucuesti and elsewhere and in some instances whole villages are said to have been utterly destroyed by the fire of nine-inch shells.

JEWS SEEK AID.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Secretary of State Root has received a number of appeals from Jewish organizations in this country for the exercise of good offices by the government for the protection of the Jews in Roumania who are suffering from the excesses of the rebellious peasantry of that country. So far the Secretary has been unable to see how he could make any representations on the subject with benefit to the distressed people, in view of the fact that the uprising in peasantry seems to be political and directed against the throne which is doing every thing possible to stop the disorders.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When the plush-lined treasure chest was discovered under the bed in Mayor Schmitz's old home, now used as a jail for Abe Ruef, the Mayor declared jauntily that the chest served as a safe place for keeping his choice Cremona, used when he was an orchestra leader.

Today the story was proved a pleasant fiction, when one of Burns's men tried to put a violin in the receptacle. It wouldn't fit. It was tried in every way.

Ruef watched the work with a grin on his face. This discovery of the treasure chest, in which the Mayor presumably kept the boodle which he received in the form of gold coin and currency, has excited more comment than any other phase of the graft development of the week. It explained how Schmitz was able to build his new house without drawing on his bank account.

LOOKS BAD FOR SCHMITZ.

The prosecution declares that it has in its possession evidence sufficient, and—in fact, complete—to insure the conviction of Schmitz. The lawyers for Schmitz, however, insist that the prosecution has no case whatever against their client.

The confideice of the prosecution that it will bring Schmitz to bay in a trial court is understood to be largely on the strength of their main witness against the Mayor, who is said to be Morris Golden Roy, the partner of Frank Maestretti.

There are several lines of work under consideration by the immune Supervisors. There is talk of street improvements and of new sewers and reservoirs for fire protection.

To secure funds to meet the demands that will result from all this work being placed under way, it is proposed by those having the immune members in charge, to advance the saloon license tax from $500 to $1000.

Representatives of the churches, the Anti-Saloon League, and others interested in temperance, have already prepared to give the prosecution assistance in the proposed campaign against the saloons.

ONE ON "GASSY."

Among the many stories that have been circulated in graft circles in respect to the confessions of Supervisors is one of Supervisor Kelly, familiarly called "Gassy."

Kelly took the witness chair in the grand-jury room, and before any questions had been asked him, said:

"All I ask for, your honors, is clemency."

Kelly was let off easily and went away happily.

Gallagher is reported to have been the hardest of the Supervisors to secure a confession from. He was shown the confession of Lonergan, but that made him smile. Sanderson's statement did not move him, nor did even that of "Gassy" Kelly have any deep effect upon the leader of graft in the board.

It is said to have been the fifth confession shown him—that of Boxton—that caused the chairman of the Finance Committee to squirm. He asked for two days in which to consider it, and was finally allowed one hour. At the end of that time he made a confession in his own behalf.

According to the programme of Detective Burns, Supervisors Gallagher and Boxton were to have been a committee of two to visit Ruef at the St. Francis and notify him of the disclosures made by the Supervisors.

The pair visited the prisoner, according to the arrangement, and had a long conference with him, notwithstanding reports to the contrary.

To their amazement and to the great surprise of Burns, they brought the boss no news; he knew all that had been done before they arrived. This caused a slip in the plans of Detective Burns. He had relied much on the surprise and shock of the confession of the Supervisors to cause Ruef to weaken, but there was no surprise.

RUEF SQUIRMS UNDER GUARD.

BOSS OF BOODLERS TURNS ON HIS PROSECUTORS.

Denounces Proceedings to Bring Him to Justice as a "Conspiracy" on Part of Public Defenders—Exhausts Vocabulary in Effort to Show "Unreasonable" Points Involved in Imprisonment.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—For the first time since his capture a month ago at the Trocadero, Abraham Ruef, the indicted political boss of San Francisco, today turned on his prosecutors and unsparingly denounced the "conspiracy," which he declared is responsible for his present plight. Ruef made the following statement to the Associated Press:

"This is the first time in the history of jurisprudence that an elisor has been appointed by a court for the purpose of keeping in custody a defendant. By committing one to the keep of William J. Biggy, and conferring upon him full discretionary powers to select a private prison and surround me with private guards, and otherwise use his own untrammeled judgment as to my confinement, Superior Judge Dunne has sought to establish a precedent which if commonly followed would tend to the overthrow of American history and the violation of our national traditions.

HE "ILLUSTRATES."

"For the sake of illustration, forget that I am the defendant and make the case impersonal: Here is one Abraham Ruef, indicted publicly by a grand jury and charged with a public crime. Whether innocent or guilty of that crime, he should be prosecuted by public officers, confined (bail being refused) in a public jail, and the expenses incident should be paid out of the public funds. Is this being done? On the contrary, this Ruef is the prisoner of a private citizen raised to peculiar power without authority or precedent; surrounded day and night by armed guards privately employed; incarcerated first in a hotel and latterly in a private dwelling, each selected in turn by a private jailer and each created for this purpose a private prison; he is being prosecuted—not by the regularly elected and duly authorized District Attorney—but by a private lawyer, especially appointed a deputy for the purpose, and a former Secret Service officer who is not even a citizen of this State, both of whom were privately retained and are being privately paid out of a private fund raised and guaranteed by a private citizen—to wit, Rudolph Spreckels.

"PUBLICLY ACCUSED."

"Yet Ruef stands publicly accused of a public offense, and the penalty to be visited upon him, should he be declared guilty, is one prescribed in the public laws.

"Is this American? Or is it not, rather, more odious than the letters de cachet that were instruments of infamous oppression which the French Revolution swept away?

"Consider. Under the powers conferred upon him by this judge, Elisor Biggy can make a private prison wherever and of whatever he may choose. Should he decide to abandon this dwelling jail, just as he elected to abandon the St. Francis, he could, if he willed, thrust me into the bare basement of a stable, or carry me to the Chutes and pen me up in an empty wild animal cage. He would not, for he is a man of decency and consideration; but, nevertheless, he could. I have no complaint to make against him personally. It is the method by which he was created my keeper that I denounce.

MORE 'LUSTRATIONS.

"Whither does it tend? If a Sheriff can be disqualified on the plea that he is friendly to a defendant, can he not by the same logic be disqualified on the claim that he is unfriendly to a defendant, and would refuse him those rights and privileges which the laws and customs allow? Assuredly. Then what could prevent Mr. Patrick Calhoun from hurrying here from New York, causing the arrest of Mr. Rudolph Spreckels on a charge of conspiracy, going before a judge of his own picking, and having an elisor appointed to take the custody of Mr. Spreckels, on the plea that the Sheriff was unfriendly to the accused—and, selecting, by the court's allowance, an elisor privately instructed and privately paid, enforce upon Mr. Spreckels whatever indignities of confinement and sequestration his private prosecutors might privately approve? Absolutely nothing, I say, if the action of Judge Dunne and his private conferees is to stand as a precedent in law.

"And then, if it suited the convenience of his political enemies, as it has suited the convenience of mine, he could be, by the elisor, refused the right to see and confer with his witnesses in preparation for his defense. And what recourse would Mr. Rudolph Spreckels have? Just what I have—none.

"I have affidavits, sworn to days before my arrest at Trocadero, to prove that all the acts of my private prosecutors are part and portion of a private conspiracy. At the proper time I will produce them in open court."

DETWEILER IN DENVER?

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DENVER (Colo.) March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Abraham K. Detweiler of Toledo, agent for the Home Telephone Company, who is fleeing from San Francisco authorities, is said to have spent three days in Denver, according to Chief of Police Delaney. The latter claims to have learned definitely that Detweiler stopped here, but continued East.

He also claims to have learned facts which will prove sensational when Detweiler is caught. What they are he refuses to say.

The telephone interests here, it is claimed, have no connection with those in San Francisco. Detective Loomis says facts learned here have been forwarded to the authorities at San Francisco.

RUEF'S FAT PAY AS BLACKMAIL.

TWELVE HUNDRED A MONTH FOR "PREVENTING."

Edward Pillsbury Provides More Sensations for Grand Jury—How Abe Gave Pacific States Company the "Double Cross" After Being Enriched for Crooked Work.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Testimony today before the grand jury brought out the remarkable fact that Boss Abe Ruef for two years has drawn a fat salary from one telephone company to which he gave the "double cross" when it entered the fight for the local franchise.

Edward S. Pillsbury, attorney and director of the Pacific States Telephone Company, testified that Ruef had received $1200 per month for two years from his company, on the ground that other companies were trying to break into this field, and that it was worth this amount to keep them out.

Ruef's name was not on the pay roll but the amount was charged to Theodore V. Halsey.

Pillsbury said if the money was delayed two or three days, Ruef always sent a reminder that it was due. Pillsbury did not know whether Schmitz received any part of this graft.

At the time Ruef was drawing this monthly blackmail he was negotiating to hold up the Home Telephone Company, and he finally decided to give the valuable local franchise to the Home Telephone Company, as Halsey unwisely passed over Ruef and gave his bribe money directly to the Supervisors.

TWO SURPRISES BROUGHT OUT.

THREE 'PHONE DIRECTORS UNCONSCIOUS OF BRIBERY.

Members of Pacific States Company's Executive Board Declare They Had no Knowledge of Money Paid to Supervisors—Detweiler Gets Time to Rustle in.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—Two sensational pieces of evidence in the bribery-graft investigation were adduced before the grand jury today. Three members of the executive board of the Pacific States Telephone Company, E. S. Pillsbury, Homer S. King and Timothy Hopkins, testified that they had no knowledge whatsoever of the alleged bribing of Supervisors to vote against the award of a competitive franchise to the Home Telephone Company, and that if bribery was committed it was "up to" Vice-President Louis Glass, whom the grand jury has already indicted on nine counts, to explain.

The second sensation came when E. S. Pillsbury, who is a director of and attorney for the Pacific States Telephone Company, testified that Abraham Ruef, the indicted political boss, has been for more than two years on the private pay roll of that corporation and has been paid regularly $1200 a month. This, said Pillsbury, was more than the salary paid to himself.

When he discovered this, he testified, he objected to the company and his own remuneration was increased.

WITNESSES EXAMINED.

The following witnesses were examined by the grand jury today: E. S. Pillsbury, Timothy Hopkins and Homer S. King; W. J. Kennedy, cashier of the Pacific States Telephone Company; John S. Cannon, janitor of the Mills Building, who was interrogated as to his knowledge of the alleged payment of Supervisoral bribes by J. V. Halsey, in behalf of the Pacific States Company in a room of that building; Dr. Fred Eaton and Miss Mary Ryan.

The latter was Halsey's stenographer at the time of the alleged bribery and is now employed in a stenographical capacity by the Southern Pacific Company. Miss Ryan was the last witness of the day.

Louis Glass caused considerable surprise by appearing in the witness room. He stated that he had come of his own volition. Heney and Special Agent Burns contradicted this statement flatly. They said that Glass had been subpoenaed, but by mistake. He was not called before the grand jury, but was excused a few moments after his arrival.

One of the seven guards employed by Elisor Biggy to watch against the escape of Ruef from his prison on Fillmore street having fallen sick, his place has been taken by former United States Marshal Shine. Biggy took Ruef for a walk in the streets this afternoon, the weather being exceptionally fine. Ruef was allowed to have a pair of heavy dumb bells brought into his prison chamber. With these he exercises regularly.

GIVES DETWEILER TIME.

Special Agent Burns of the prosecution stated today that he is purposely refraining from arresting Abraham K. Detweiler of Toledo, in order to give him full opportunity to arrange for the $130,000 bail fixed by Judge Lawler, who has formally declared Detweiler a fugitive from justice and issued a bench warrant for his arrest on each of the thirteen counts of bribery returned against him by the grand jury.

Abraham Ruef made it plain this morning that his defense on the charges made against him as the result of the confession of Supervisors, will be that in each case the testimony of the confessing Supervisor stands without corroboration.

He will seek refuge in the code provision that the testimony of an accomplice in crime is not sufficient for conviction.

This came out in the course of an interview in which Ruef was asked what course he intended to pursue with regard to the story said to have been told the grand jury by Supervisor Gallagher that he had received all the bribe money from Ruef and had acted as his go-between in disbursing the sums to the Supervisors.

"I can't say anything at this time," said Ruef, "but of course you understand that Gallagher's testimony is uncorroborated, he has no one to swear that he saw the money pass from me to Gallagher. I am not worrying about Gallagher's testimony."

RUEF UP A STUMP.

Ruef's incarceration has prevented him from ascertaining whether or not Heney and Burns have testimony that will support Gallagher's story of the passing of the bribe money, so there is no means at hand for him to know whether or not his reliance upon the code provision will afford him all the relief he looks forward to.

Mayor Schmitz in a statement today denied that there is any truth in the charge made by the prosecution that he is endeavoring to secure the resignations of any of the members of the Board of Supervisors for the purpose of defeating the declared intention of that body to revoke certain public-service corporation franchises which the prosecution claims were obtained by bribing the Supervisors.

Henry Ach of counsel for Ruef said today in answer to a question: "There is not a particle of truth in the persistent rumors that former Gov. Gage or D. M. Delmas have been asked to join in the defense of Ruef.

"No one of these men has been in any way approached on this subject. It has not even been decided to engage additional counsel. We expect to go ahead with the Ruef trial before Superior Judge Dunne next Tuesday."

DIPLOMATS CONFER.

Meeting of Prince Von Buelow and Signor Tittoni Is Declared to Concern Triple Alliance.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

GENOA, March 30.—Prince Von Buelow, the German Imperial Chancellor, and Signor Tittoni, the Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs, had a lengthy conference at Rapollo this evening. The business interviews between these two statesmen will take place tomorrow. In spite of official assertions that this meeting will have no political significance, that it will be merely an exchange of courtesies, it is believed that it will be effective for peace. In certain well-informed circles, it is even declared that the coming together of the two statesmen will have much influence upon the grouping of the powers of Europe.

It is remarked that although the Triple Alliance expires in 1914, the contracting parties may dissolve it in 1908, but the fact that twelve months previous announcement is required will stay action. The impression prevails in authoritative quarters that the Triple Alliance will not be denounced.

Mrs. Elmina Seip Allentown, Pa., 75 years old, was subject to weak spells until she was cured by DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKEY.

Mrs. Seip has just written the Duffy Malt Whiskey Co. as follows:

"I am 75 years old and was subject to weak spells, and when they would attack me I did not know what to do, so I sent for a bottle of DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKEY, and after I used your medicine a while I felt a change for the better. I have used it constantly as prescribed, until now I am healthy and strong.

"I have used many medicines, but never saw such a change or felt such a change as I did when I used DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKEY."—MRS. ELMINA SEIP, 71[illegible] Liberty St., Allentown, Pa., July 7, 1906.

Thaw's Past Condition Is Not Before Commission.

Jerome Objects to Narrow Latitude Given.

Dr. Hamilton Takes Stand, Also Restricted.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, March 30.—The plans of the Thaw lunacy commission to complete its work today, and to submit a report to Justice Fitzgerald Monday morning, as to the present mental condition of the slayer of Stanford White, were upset late this afternoon by an appeal from Dist.-Atty. Jerome to be allowed to produce more witnesses before the commission reaches a decision. After an all-day session the commission adjourned until next Tuesday morning, at which time it will hear experts offered by the District Attorney.

Chairman McClure served notice, however, that the witnesses will be compelled to confine themselves to facts and opinions which deal with the present condition of Thaw, and will not be allowed to go into the details of the past or future.

Thaw was under direct examination by the commissioners for more than three hours today, and then, for forty-five minutes, was under the fire of Jerome on cross-examination. This cross-examination was allowed by the commission only after vehement protest from the prosecuting officer that he had not been allowed sufficient latitude in the inquiry.

Enjoying his first opportunity of questioning the defendant, Jerome attempted to go into Thaw's past life, but objections to this line of examination by Thaw's counsel were sustained by the commission and held the District Attorney to the direct issue before the lunacy board—whether Thaw is capable of understanding the character of the proceedings against him and of rationally advising his counsel.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS.

Thaw's direct and cross-examinations today were held behind closed doors, and the commission took extraordinary precautions to have the hearing kept a secret. Attorneys connected with the prosecution were cautioned not to discuss the case in any way.

When Thaw's ordeal was ended, the doors were thrown open, and it was announced that the executive sessions were at an end. As soon as the session became public, Jerome called Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton to the stand. The commission had summoned Dr. Hamilton. As the alienist took the stand, however, Thaw's counsel pleaded the professional privilege to bar any testimony to be offered by him.

Dr. Hamilton himself asked to be instructed on this point. Jerome claimed that the defense, by introducing Dr. Hamilton as a witness in the Thaw trial had waived the right of privilege. The commission held that as the privilege had not been waived before it, Dr. Hamilton could not testify as to his personal examinations of Thaw.

Jerome took but a desultory interest in the proceedings after this until it seemed that the commission was about to close its inquiry. Then he jumped to his feet, protested that he had been hampered in the lunacy proceedings by the commission, barring out pertinent testimony, declared the commission had refused to "illuminate its intelligence from documentary evidence, which he had presented, and had neglected to hear expert testimony."

Jerome asserted with some feeling that if he were allowed the proper latitude he could prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Thaw is insane today and incapable of advising counsel in a good manner.

Chairman McClure told Jerome that if he could produce any experts who could give a competent opinion as to Thaw's present state of mind, the commission would hear them next Tuesday morning.

"That is all I desire," said the District Attorney.

JEROME IRRITABLE.

When the public session began, Jerome seemed irritable and was constantly thereafter involved in wordy clashes with members of the commission. His urgent manner of insisting that he had a right to adduce additional testimony before the commission was generally regarded as a concession that Thaw had made a favorable impression during his long examination.

During the District Attorney's cross-examination it is said Thaw comported himself most creditably and answered Jerome's sharp-pointed questions with calmness and deliberation.

When the public was allowed to enter the courtroom, Thaw appeared jubilant. To a reporter who leaned over and congratulated him on the showing he had made, Thaw replied: "Thank you very much, but I thought that was to be kept a secret."

Thaw's attorneys expressed themselves as entirely satisfied with the final stages of their client's severe examination. Altogether he was on the stand six hours, counting Thursday's session of the commission.

Jerome's cross-examination, an attorney declared, did not shake Thaw in the least. Jerome declined to discuss the hearings. He seemed much disappointed at the ruling which shut out Dr. Hamilton's testimony, the physician having already gone on record as saying that Thaw is a paranoiac with but a slight chance of recovery.

WITNESSES FAVORABLE.

During the public session, the commission examined four prison guards—one of them Thaw's personal warden in the courtroom, and a visiting physician to the Tombs.

All declared Thaw had acted rationally ever since his incarceration. One said Thaw had a haunted look in his eyes when he first came to the Tombs, but it began to disappear last September.

Attorneys Delmas and Hartridge also took the stand. They declared Thaw had fully comprehended this phase of the trial, and had made helpful suggestions from time to time.

Jerome asked Hartridge if Thaw had not repeatedly expressed a desire to address the court. Hartridge said he could recall no such instance. Asked if his associate counsel had not informed him of Thaw's wishes along this line, Hartridge was silenced by an objection from Attorney Gleason which was sustained by the commission. Jerome then said he would undertake no further cross-examination of counsel.

Chairman McClure asked Jerome why Dr. McGuire, the Thaw family physician, had not been produced before the commission. Jerome said he had not seen the physician today.

"We saw him last in the District Attorney's office," interrupted Hartridge, "and we supposed he would surely be here."

A messenger was sent to summon the doctor, but he could not be found.

DOCTOR NOT FOUND.

"Why has he absented himself," inquired Dr. McClure, "looking from one counsel to another. No answer was forthcoming and the chairman directed that the doctor be subpoenaed for next Tuesday and at the same time reminded Dist.-AAtty. Jerome that as he had made the suggestion on the court record as to Thaw's insanity, the burden of proving it rests on him. Jerome said that when his seven experts are allowed to testify he will submit to them a group of facts upon which they will base a scientific opinion that Thaw is now of unsound mind.

One of the entries of the book which Jerome said was made by Brunjes and which he sought to have introduced into evidence was as follows:

"July 28—He (Thaw) offered me $1000 a day to taste the food sent to him from the outside saying it might be poisoned, and that he thought it would be a good twenty-to-one shot."

Thaw, during the executive session, was carried over nearly every detail of his trial, it is understood, and was asked regarding the testimony offered by various witnesses as to the effect he thought this testimony might have on a jury and the general tenor of the court's rulings in the broader points of law.

On cross-examination Jerome sought to question Thaw regarding the letters he wrote to a banker, J. Dennison Lyon of Pittsburgh, since the tragedy on the Madison Square Roof Garden. Jerome said he based his contention as to Thaw's present sanity partly on those letters. The commission ruled that the letters could not be accepted as evidence.

GOLDFIELD'S BAROMETER.

STOCK MARKET SHOWS EFFECT OF INDUSTRIAL DISORDER.

When Boycotters Were Active, Stocks Went Down, and When Peace Reigned the Market Was Healthy—An Instructive Tabulation Tells Whole Story.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) March 28.—By the record of stock sales on the Goldfield Mining Stock Exchange can be traced the trail of the I.W.W., the most brazen trust that ever masqueraded under the banner of labor. A favorite mouthing of agitators of the Industrial Workers of the World is: "Nothing in common between capital and labor. We have nothing to lose, but the world to win."

During the hot summer months of 1906 Nevada stocks retired in siesta. They began to stir toward the last of August. From the week ending August 25 to that ending March 23 a complete record is offered in the tabulated statement, the first column of figures showing the number of shares sold on the Goldfield Exchange, the second the average price per share and the third their total market value.

Bearing in mind the industrial history of the camp, it is interesting and possibly enlightening to run down these columns.

Late in August and early in September boycotting was a favorite diversion with the I.W.W. Ignorant aliens, unable to decipher the very inscriptions they carried, walked the streets, bearing banners declaring in defiant terms that certain institutions were "unfair." The lowest types of ignorant immigrants paced up and down before stores, restaurants and one newspaper office, warning passers-by against their patronage. Customers of such proscribed houses, whether men or women, were jeered at and insulted. Some were beaten and stoned. This intolerable condition obtained until late in October, when a tentative peace was patched. In this connection, a glance at the tabulated statement of sales reveals the fact that stocks fell, quivered, rallied in sickly fashion, but generally declined until the week which ended October 27. One of the weakest weeks of all was that ending October 20, when miners caught in the act of stealing high-grade ore were arrested and an I.W.W. uprising was feared.

Rumors of a possible merger of some of the greatest of the camp's bonanzas worked as an antidote, which began to take effect during the week ended October 27, and displayed its greatest force in the banner week ended November 10.

Following this came again a feeling of unrest, occasioned by I.W.W. agitation and accelerated by famine, wretched weather, failure of railway and telegraphic communication, magazine attacks, the Union Securities fiasco, the Sullivan Trust incident and the approach of the holidays. Things came to a head with the calling of a strike by the I.W.W. on December 20. This endured until January 5. The very next week, that one ended January 12, was next to the largest in the history of the exchange, while the middle week of the three weeks' strike was the smallest of the thirty-one weeks listed.

About the first of February the anarchistic I.W.W. became obnoxiously bold in their attempt to intimidate into initiation workmen of antagonistic affiliations. The worst week in this period subsequent to January 12 was that one which ended March 16, the week which opened with the cold-blooded murder of John Silva by I.W.W. agents.

Immediately after that came one of the best weeks of the entire thirty-one, the week which ended March 23. In fact, it is the seventh largest week of the number shown in the following table and is accountable for purely on the ground that toward the end of it the miners had won in their fight for independent meetings apart from the I.W.W., and there was a feeling that the honest toilers were about to accomplish a complete divorce from the unscrupulous agitators.

These figures, with these historical reminders, tell the whole story of Goldfield's labor troubles to date:

RAILROAD RECORD.

DENIES PLEDGE TO PAY BONDS.

Espee Official Does Not Fear Croker Suit.

Miller Issues Statement of the Road's Attitude.

Harriman Says Action Has no Significance.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, March 30.—The Southern Pacific Railway Company never guaranteed nor in any way became bound to pay interest on the income bonds of the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railway Company, according to a statement issued today by Alexander Miller, secretary of the Southern Pacific, with reference to the suit which has been begun against the company at Austin, Tex.

The suit was brought by the Croker heirs of California, to enjoin the payment of Southern Pacific dividends until such time as the company sees fit to pay the interest on the second mortgage bonds of the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railway.

Mr. Miller says:

"The Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railroad Company is a Texas corporation, which owns and operates a railroad from Houston to El Paso. The Southern Pacific company owns its stock, but does not possess or operate its railroad as it does the roads west of El Paso and Ogden. The laws of Texas prohibit foreign corporations from operating railroads in that State, but not from owning stock.

"The bonds in question are second-mortgage bonds covering that portion of the road between San Antonio and El Paso. They were issued in 1881 to a construction company and, through the construction company, found their way into the hands of the Huntington, Crocker, Stanford and Hopkins interests, then in control of both companies.

"The interest originally was obligatory, but it was never earned, and the semi-annual defaults and the great accumulation of unpaid coupons were interfering with the marketing of the 5 per cent. bonds upon the same line which were held by the owners of these bonds, so that in 1891 they deemed it to their interest to waive the obligatory feature and the unpaid interest and convert them into mere income bonds.

"There has been absolutely no change in the methods of the accounting since the owners of these bonds parted with their control of the road. Much of the territory traversed by the line is unproductive, and has never earned the interest on these bonds. There has been an annual deficit, which, however, has been lessening and, the Southern Pacific company, to protect its interests in the stock, has advanced, from time to time, the money necessary to make up the interest on the first-mortgage bonds.

"The road has never contributed a dollar to dividends upon the stock of the Southern Pacific company, and the company has never guaranteed nor in any way become bound to pay interest on these bonds of the Texas company. Just what obligation, legal or moral, it is under, with respect to them, particularly in the hands of those who issued them, or what connection Southern Pacific company dividends has with them, we are unable to say."

E. H. Harriman, in speaking of the dividend suit, is quoted as saying:

"I do not regard it as of any significance whatever."

In view of the fact that the semi-annual dividend payment of 2½ per cent is due on Monday on the common stock of the Southern Pacific, Millar was asked whether there was any likelihood of the payment being held up.

"No," he replied. "This proceeding will not affect the April dividend as the courts have decided the hearing on the matter will not be held until May."

Gen. Hubbard said he regretted the suit has been announced just at this time.

"I expected that the papers would have been filed at least three weeks ago," he added. "It is unfortunate that the suit has begun at this time. I hope no impression will be abroad that this proceeding is aimed at Mr. Harriman.

"I have been negotiating with the Southern Pacific management for the last two years in an endeavor to persuade them to pay interest on our bonds. Our position may be summed up in these few words:

"We believe the present management of the Southern Pacific, while apparently willing to pay dividends on its stock issues, refuses to pay its just debts in withholding interest on its bonds."

Will Contest Fare Bill.

PHILADELPHIA, March 30.—Gov. Stuart approved the 2-cent fare bill, which has passed the Senate and House, and which is now in his hands. The Pennsylvania and Reading railways will begin action to test the constitutionality of the act.

Plan New Electric Line.

NEW YORK, March 30.—It is learned that the Toledo, Wabash and St. Louis Railroad, incorporated in Augusta, Me., with a capital of $6,000,000, is a proposed electric railway, financed by Toledo, O., interests. The road is to transact a passenger and freight business. An entirely new line is to be built, and no existing electric roads will be absorbed. Frederick Seymour is the legal representative here of the Toledo interests.

Enjoins Rate Law.

MONTGOMERY (Ala.) March 30.—An order was issued by the United States Circuit Court today temporarily restraining any application of the new railroad rate and regulation acts of the Legislature. The injunction is to stand until the contention of the railroads that these acts are ruinous and unconstitutional can be judicially determined.

BUYS SILVER CHEAPLY.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The directors of the mint today purchased 100,000 ounces of silver for delivery at New Orleans at 66.006 cents per ounce. PAGE 1

WRITER SCORNS BRYCE'S POLICY.

SCOLDS AMBASSADOR AND HITS AT ALL AMERICANS.

He Regrets That Canadians Sang "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" When Root Visited Them and Derides the Idea That Sacrifices Should Be Made to Secure Treaty.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OTTAWA (Ont.) March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "No more sacrifices," is the cry, says Henry J. Woodside, a prominent Ottawan tonight, writing in the Ottawa Journal, and scoring the American Secretary of State, Elihu Root, for sending British Ambassador Bryce here to "sound" the Canadians on the sacrifices Canadians are asked to make.

He says: "Root is a Presidential possibility and apparently is strengthening his position. Instead of Canadians singing 'He's a Jolly Good Fellow,' when Root was here recently, the indignation of all Canada should have fallen on Root and company and all should guard against helping the United States in its settled purpose of breaking up the British Empire by detaching Canada from it."

The writer contends the Americans always demand thrice what they would take. He says they blustered in the Behring Sea trouble, calling Canadians black legs, pirates and poachers, but that the Canadians to a large extent won out.

He severely scores Root and Bryce and others, and among many other things, says, "would it not be well to tell Bryce that Canada is not prepared to sacrifice anything but is willing to make a fair bargain or trade, on outstanding points."

He contends that even the President and Secretary Root, who used to bluff now find that honey is more useful in dealing with Canada. "Perhaps we can thank Japan's firm attitude toward the United States for some of the changes. We can play a waiting game longer than the States, and if it should come to a tariff war we can hit the United States just twice as hard as they can hit us."

Laurier and the British Ambassador had a conference at the government house today.

The latter was fully informed of the Canadian viewpoint on all present international disputes, so when he returns to Washington he can "put" the Dominion case properly to the British government.

It is thought closer relations regarding waterways adjacent to the boundary may be reached.

Bryce, Grey and Laurier, on Monday will speak at a banquet of the Canadian Club, which 400 will attend. Important international matters will probably be touched on.

SHE WAS NOT PRESENTED.

NEW YORK, March 30.—The Herald today says complaint has been made to the State Department in Washington against Charles H. Graves, United States Minister to Sweden, by Mrs. Ida M. von Claussen, formerly of this city, who alleged that he refused to present her formally at the court of King Oscar, although that ruler had invited her and her credentials were of the best. Mrs. Von Claussen arrived in New York last Saturday and she will go in a few days to Washington, where she will seek to relate her grievance to the President.

ONE MILLION SAMPLES OF THE GREAT KIDNEY MEDICINE
WARNER'S SAFE CURE
SENT ABSOLUTELY FREE

Thousands of people have kidney disease and do not know it. Our doctors have met with many cases in their experience where the kidneys had become so impregnated with the disease that they would be called incurable by most doctors, yet the patient was not aware that his kidneys were diseased.

Warner's Safe Cure has been tested for many years and found to be an absolute cure for all forms of kidney and bladder disease.

Warner's Safe Cure, to begin with, is purely vegetable and contains no harmful drugs; it is a most valuable and effective tonic; it is a stimulant to digestion and awakens the torpid liver, putting the patient into the very best receptive state for the work of the restorer of the kidneys. It goes right at its work, and does it with absolute method, preparing the tissues, soothing where soothing is needed, stimulating the enfeebled organs and healing at the same time. It builds up the body, gives it strength, and restores the energy that is or has been wasting under the baneful suffering of kidney disease.

The one great fact that stands out is that Warner's Safe Cure cures Bright's disease, gravel, liver complaint, pains in the back, rheumatism, rheumatic gout, bladder trouble, dropsy, eczema, blood diseases, too frequent desire to urinate and painful passing of urine are all caused by diseased kidneys and can be speedily cured by Warner's Safe Cure, which has been prescribed by leading doctors for 25 years.

FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE

To convince every sufferer from diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood that Warner's Safe Cure will cure them, a sample bottle will be sent absolutely free to any one who will write Warner's Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y., and mention having seen this liberal offer in the Times. The genuineness of this offer is fully guaranteed. The medical department of Warner's Safe Cure Co. is in charge of the most learned specialists of kidney disease the world has ever known. These doctors give their advice free and send a medical booklet containing symptoms and treatment of each form of the disease and samples of thousands of testimonials received from patients who have been cured of all forms of kidney disease.

Are you languid, low spirited, weak and flabby, have you a constantly drubbing ache in the small of your back? Have you chills, scalding and pains when you urinate and a frequent desire to urinate? If so your kidneys are diseased.

This is the supreme moment when you should begin to do something to arrest all these unnatural feelings and conditions, for they are the unmistakable symptoms of kidney disease. And they tell you that your kidneys have been diseased for a long time, for kidney troubles seldom put out such symptoms as the victim recognizes until they have been working several months. You have every reason to be alarmed, and you should take Warner's Safe Cure at once.

Taken at this stage your kidneys will get relief from the free trial bottle almost from the first dose.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

is put up in two regular sizes and sold by all druggists at 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Refuse substitutes. There is none "just as good as" Warner's Safe Cure. It has cured all forms of kidney disease during the last thirty years. It is prescribed by all doctors and used in the leading hospitals as the only absolute cure for all forms of disease of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

INSISTS UPON DISARMAMENT.

England Serves Formal Notice on Russian Ruler.

Czar's Reply Is Not Yet Sent to Great Britain.

Conference Is Expected Regardless of Answer.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, March 30.—Great Britain has made a formal and official request upon Russia to include in the programme of the next Hague conference the question of the limitation of the expenditure on armaments and has notified the powers invited to attend the conference of this action. This was done some days ago and up to the present the Foreign Office has not been advised of any opposition to this proposal.

Neither has Great Britain learned the nature of the negotiations in St. Petersburg between the ambassadors of Germany and Austria and Emperor Nicholas, but it is believed these exchanges have to do with the form in which the subject of disarmament should be introduced.

The reports emanating from the continent that Great Britain and the United States would withdraw from the conference if their wishes to discuss the limitation of armaments were not complied with and that Germany and Austria would follow a similar course if it included this question in the programme are stigmatized by officials of the Foreign Office as pure inventions.

"That any power would thus break up the conference, which doubtless will render much good to the cause of humanity because all of its wishes do not meet with favor, is incredible," said a Foreign Office official today. "Great Britain, supported by America, Japan and Italy will continue to press her point with every confidence in the outcome."

FAILURE IS NOT FEARED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Based on concise and accurate reports from its reports in European capitals on the progress of the negotiations relative to the negotiations to be discussed at the forthcoming Hague conference, State Department officials have reached the conclusion that there is no reason to apprehend a failure of the international gathering. A programme has already been arranged with the assent of all important powers. Most of the subjects are legacies from the first conference—matters which from lack of time or because the delegates at that conference were not empowered to treat—were by resolution left to be dealt with by a second conference. Others were the outcome of the sanguinary wars that have occurred since the first conference. These subjects proposed by Russia last June were accepted as a definite programme for consideration by all of the nations addressed.

If nothing more were accomplished at the second conference than action upon these questions, the gathering surely would result in great benefit, and it is entirely within the power of the conference to limit its scope to such a programme.

But to allow for the development of new conditions a paragraph in the call for the second conference provided that new topics might be considered if a majority of the delegates present at the second conference by vote express a willingness to do so.

NEGLECTED FAMILY.

Wife Claims Husband Gave Major Portion of His Income to Church While She Lacked Clothes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Alleging that he gave the major portion of his revenue to the church to which he belonged, and neglected both his wife and child, Laura B. Martin has petitioned the local District Court for a divorce from Carl H. Martin.

The plaintiff sets out in her petition that she was married to the defendant in March, 1903, at San Diego, Cal., and that she lived with him until June, 1906. She alleges that when she was in delicate health he refused to pay her car fare that she might go to her parents, and further alleges that all the time she was with her folks that the defendant would not send her money to purchase clothes for herself and babe.

She asks a divorce and the custody of her child.

CHICAGO FIGHT NEARING CLOSE.

IS FIERCEST POLITICAL CAMPAIGN IN HISTORY OF CITY.

Republicans and Democrats Both Claim Victory in Election Which Will Be Held Tuesday—Issue of Contest Is Entirely Lost Sight of in Violent Mud-Slinging.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Chicago will close tomorrow night the fiercest campaign in its history. It has been marked by most bitter personalities and libel suits already aggregating three million dollars, with more to follow. Men have been murdered in political arguments, houses divided against themselves and real issues lost trace of in the violent mud-slinging contest to which the campaign has degenerated.

Briefly, Republicans, headed by Frederick A. Busse, stand for acceptance of the ordinances approved by the City Council, providing for the immediate settlement of the traction problem. These provide for complete rehabilitation of all lines, such extensions as the city shall direct, profit-sharing, paving, sprinkling and permission for the city to buy at any time it is ready.

The Democrats, whose campaign is being directed by William Randolph Hearst, stand for rejection of the ordinances and municipal ownership—that is, forcing traction companies to accept whatever price the city decides to pay. If the ordinances are rejected, the companies will make no improvements, for their property stands to be confiscated any day, and the city is not in a position to buy the lines. Other live issues are the elimination from the school board of the faddists; enforcement of laws against gambling and other vices, war upon murderers and footpads, clean streets and placing of bureaus in the hands of experienced men instead of theorists.

Victory for both Busse and Dunne is confidently predicted by their respective managers tonight.

James R. Eddick, chairman of the Republican County Committee, says:

"All the indications favor the election of Fred A. Busse. The Republicans have made a clean campaign and will win. In my judgment the total vote of the city will be in the neighborhood of 345,000. On that basis I estimate the Mayoralty vote will be divided as follows:

"Busse, 175,000; Dunne, 140,000; Socialists and Prohibitionists, 30,000. This would give Busse a plurality of 35,000."

W. L. O'Connell, chairman of the Democratic Central Committee and manager of the Dunne campaign, says:

"Mayor Dunne will be reëlected by from 25,000 to 45,000. We have been gaining rapidly in the past week. Mayor Dunne is strong because of the enemies he has made. All good Democrats will rally to his support and he will gain an immense independent vote."

Victory for the traction ordinances passed recently by the City Council against the protest of Mayor Dunne was predicted tonight by the leading officials of the several non-partisan organizations that have been crusading for the measures during the campaign.

Mayor Dunne vetoed the ordinances because they did not provide for immediate municipal ownership of the street railways. Should the ordinances receive the approval of the voters on Tuesday the city will practically control the surface lines of the city, as the measures provide for twenty-year franchises with the city having the privilege of purchasing the lines after six months' notice.

The ordinance also provides for the immediate rehabilitation of the system under the supervision of the City Engineer, universal transfers throughout the city, books of the company open to the city officials, and the city to receive 55 per cent. of the net earnings of the lines.

ROAD IS FIRM.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—That it was totally impracticable, if not impossible, to give telegraphers working for the Southern Pacific seven hours off out of the twelve on Sundays, and that promotion by seniority from telegraphers to station agents did not yield the best results for the company or for the public, was the gist of the testimony given yesterday before the Arbitration Committee by officials of the Southern Pacific Company.

W. A. McGovern, superintendent of the Tucson division of the Southern Pacific; W. H. Norton, assistant superintendent of the western division, and W. R. Scott, superintendent of the western division of the Southern Pacific Company, testified for the railroad company. In his testimony Scott stated that he did not think it would hurt telegraphers to work 365 days in a year. He himself had done it for years and had experienced no evil effects.

PAY RAISED.

Chief Operators and Clerks of the Postal Telegraph Company Get Increase.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Postal Telegraph-Cable Company announces an increase in the wages of its chief operators an clerks. The increase in each case will be graded according to length of sevice, efficiency and the responsibility of the postion. The increase is to take effect April 1. This is in addition to the 10 per cent. increase, which was given the operators, traffic chiefs, wire chiefs, assistant chief operators, chief operators and managers on March 1.

PRESENT DEMANDS.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—The question presented yesterday to the Board of Arbitration, which is to decide the differences between the Southern Pacific and the telegraph operators, was "the elimination from operation of the schedule of certain important agencies where the duties of soliciting traffic are paramount." This meant that the stations where the telegraphic duties were a small part of the work, or where the agent does not do any telegraphing, were to be eliminated from the schedule.

In the regular stations the promotions were by seniority. In the stations which are "starred" the railroad company claims the right to make any appointments they want to, regardless of length of service of the others in the station. The railroad wants to have such stations eliminated from the operations of the schedule.

OWENS RIVER FACTS OFFICIALLY STATED.

Chief Engineer Mulholland Files His First Annual Report.

Whole Story of the Great Water Project Up to Date, Showing What the City Has Acquired in Owens Valley, What Has Been Spent, and What the Completed Aqueduct Will Cost—Pipe Dreams Dispelled.

CHIEF ENGINEER MULHOLLAND of the Los Angeles aqueduct, has presented to the Board of Public Works his first annual report, dated March 15, 1907. The report comprises seventy-eight typewritten pages, and is accompanied by maps and voluminous appendices, including the report of the Board of Consulting Engineers, special reports by experts on transportation, cement plants, power development, hydrography of Owens Valley; studies of water supply in Southern California; lists of lands purchased by the city; acts of Congress and the State Legislature pertinent to the Owens River project, and other details of matters dealt with generally in the main report. The report will be printed in full in pamphlet form, and will be ready for distribution in a few days.

THE URGENT NEED.

Following a brief history of the Los Angeles waterworks and a presentation of facts demonstrating the need of additional supply and the inexpediency of trying to obtain it from the coastal plain, the San Gabriel, the Mojave or any other source nearer than Owens Valley, the report shows that the present available supply, in a dry year, for Los Angeles, Hollywood and Pasadena is forty-five second feet; that one million people would require 232 second feet, and that the deficiency of 187 cubic feet per second must be supplied from outside sources. The present plan is to build an aqueduct with a net capacity of 400 second feet, which would supply water for a million people, and leave 10,000 miner's inches available for irrigation, which would be sufficient for 75,000 acres of land, about half the area of agricultural land adjacent to the city. The same amount of water is required for the irrigation of a square mile of citrus fruit that is required for the domestic uses of a square mile of the city; so that the areas upon which surplus water at first may be used for horticulture may become strictly urban regions without affecting the demand for water.

INCEPTION OF PROJECT.

The report gives the history of the inception of the Owens River project, the negotiations with former Mayor Fred Eaton and the purchase from him of property, options and water rights. The official minutes of the Water Board covering the negotiations and the contract with Mr. Eaton are given in an appendix. The facts concerning the Reclamation Service's operations in Owens Valley are presented, and the conclusion is reached that the Federal government now has no valid water rights in the valley.

In July, 1906, the Water Board heard rumors of an "amended Federal project" in the northern end of Owens Valley, and wrote to the Reclamation Service for information of the plans and purposes of the government. The latter was forwarded to the Secretary of the Interior, with a request from Chief Engineer Newell that it be answered. No answer ever was received from the Secretary.

It is pointed out in the report, however, that no promise or agreement to build any works in Owens Valley ever was made by the Reclamation Service; that field work was stopped in January, 1906; that no construction ever was begun; that the city has filed upon all surplus water under the State law and has followed this up with surveys and construction; that the city has become a very large riparian owner and has bought the principal reservoir sites; and therefore the government could not proceed with a reclamation project in view of the law and the President's opinion, expressed emphatically in his famous letter to Secretary Hitchcock.

OWENS VALLEY SUPPLY.

The water supply of Owens Valley is derived from the crest and eastern slope of the Sierra Nevada, and the annual flood season is from the first of May to the first of August. The rise occurs gradually and recedes slowly. This is a natural condition which greatly increases the value of this water supply in that the period of greatest supply is coincident with that of the greatest summer demand. Observations of Owens Lake show that the mean annual inflow is 29,700 miner's inches, which represents the run-off of the entire Owens River basin. All the data on the hydrography of the region are given in an appendix to the report.

Concerning plans for storing and regulating the flow of water from Owens Valley, the report says:

LONG VALLEY RESERVOIR.

Long Valley reservoir site is situated in the northerly portion of the drainage basin of Owens River. It has 391 square miles of drainage area tributary to it. A dam 100 feet high above the bed of the stream would impound 83,485 acre-feet, an acre-foot being enough water to cover one acre one foot deep. A 120-foot dam would impound 160,000 acre-feet and a 140-foot dam 260,000 acre-feet. This latter is greater than any existing reservoir in California. The province of the Long Valley reservoir site would be to hold over waters from years of excessive stream flow, like 1906, for years of deficient stream flow, such as 1898 or 1905. Its function, therefore, is purely annual, intended to meet unfavorable conditions during cycles of dry years. Water from the Long Valley reservoir site when liberated would flow down the natural channel of the river to the point of diversion from the Owens River at Charley's Butte at an elevation of 3814 feet. At this point the diversion canal would begin with an initial capacity of 700 cubic feet per second or 35,000 miners' inches. This canal would be increased in capacity as it passed the various tributaries of Owens River until at the Cottonwood Creek crossing its capacity would be increased to 900 cubic feet per second or 45,000 miners' inches. It continues with this capacity until the Haiwee reservoir site is reached, sixty miles below the point of diversion. The Haiwee reservoir with a dam of seventy-five feet in height at its southern end has a capacity of 64,000 acre-feet. This reservoir commands all possible sources of supply and is near enough to the head not to require a great length of conduit of large capacity necessary to carry flood flow to it.

HAIWEE RESERVOIR.

The province of the Haiwee reservoir site is the regulation of the monthly flood flow. All ordinary floods can be conveyed to the Haiwee reservoir site by the large canal and regulated to the capacity of the aqeduct below the Haiwee reservoir. Below the Haiwee reservoir site the conduit has a capacity of 430 cubic feet per second and it is proposed to continue this uniformly through to a reservoir site on the south side of the Antelope Valley near Fairmont. The Long Valley and the Haiwee reservoir sites will permit of utilizing this 140 miles of conduit to its full capacity for the twelve months of each year. The Haiwee reservoir site will also guard against breaks which may occur in the lines above it.

FAIRMONT RESERVOIR.

The province of Fairmont reservoir is to insure a supply in spite of breaks in the line above and also to permit varying the daily flow in the conduit below it in order to meet the fluctuating hourly and daily demands for power. The Fairmont reservoir site is at the head of the power line. With a dam 100 feet in height, it has a capacity of 6656 acre-feet or an eight day's full flow of 400 sec. feet. The elevation of the water surface in the Fairmont reservoir will be 3025 feet. The outlet tunnel will be run from the bottom of this reservoir site through the crest of the coast range into the San Francisquito Cañon. This tunnel will have a capacity of 1000 cubic feet per second. Below this point it is proposed to install the power plant for the system.

POWER POSSIBILITIES.

The demand for power varies with the days of the week and the hours of the day. The load factor, as it is called, is the ratio between the average continuous consumption of power and the maximum demand, which maximum usually occurs in the winter time between 5 and 6 o'clock in the evening. At this time power is needed for both lighting and manufacturing. If a power plant can be designed so that its output can vary with this flunctuation in demand its efficiency is correspondingly increased. In and around Los Angeles this load factor is approximately 32 per cent. The capacity of the conduit below the Fairmont reservoir site to the power plant will be two and one-half times the mean discharge of the conduit above the Fairmont reservoir site of 1000 cubic feet per second. This phase of the situation is fully discussed in the report of the Board of Consulting Engineers. From the south end of this Elizabeth Lake tunnel, to the point of diversion from the San Francisquito Cañon below, the fall is 1500 feet. At first the water will be liberated from this tunnel and allowed to flow down the natural channel of the cañon to the point of diversion. Therefore, as far as the aqueduct proper is concerned, there will be no construction expense in getting the water through the heart of the Coast Range after the tunnel at the crest is passed. This obviates a great expense. A small regulating reservoir will be constructed in the San Francisquito Cañon at this proposed point of lower diversion sufficient to regulate the hourly fluctuation from the power-house. From this diversion point to the San Fernando Valley the aqueduct will have a capacity of 410 cubic feet per second.

SAN FERNANDO RESERVOIRS.

In the San Fernando Valley the water will be discharged into two reservoir sites. The city controls the greater portion of the land in these two sites. Their combined capacity is 36,600 acre-feet, or enough to furnish a full supply from the reservoirs for a month and a half in case of breaks in the line above or 50 second-feet per year. The great value, however, of these reservoir sites, is that they will permit of accumulating water during the winter time in the San Fernando Valley and holding it for use during the following summer. The normal midsummer use in Southern California is naturally from two to three times the normal winter consumption. These reservoirs are of such capacity that an aqueduct discharging 400 cubic feet per second, or 20,000 inches for twelve months into them, may have its flow so regulated that the discharge therefrom may be 500 cubic feet per second, or 25,000 inches during the six summer months, and 300 second-feet or 15,000 miner's inches during the winter months. This practically permits of furnishing 25,000 miner's inches with an aqueduct capacity of 20,000 miner's inches. This system of storage regulation must be kept fully in mind in determining what the available water supply for the city is from the Owens Valley. There is a great fluctuation in the flow of the Owens River, but it is not subject to violent floods such as occur in Southern California. The statement is untrue that the Owens River goes dry at the point of diversion proposed by the city. No public records show this, and as far as known no Reclamation Service engineer has ever made this statement. During the May, June and July floods caused by the melting of the snow there are large volumes of water which, when regulated through reservoirs will permit of delivering a continuous flow, such as is described below. These flood waves are now passing into Owens Lake and wasted. In addition the irrigation season in the Owens Valley is not over five months in duration each year. During the remaining seven months the elevation of the valley being 4000 feet and cold, irrigation is not feasible. Therefore, for seven-twelfths of the year the water rights which the city has not purchased, are not used, beneficially at least, by the irrigators. It is not possible to make an absolute statement of the amount of water which a stream will yield under varying future conditions, or even as to the volume, exact legal rights for which the city has in the Owens Valley. There is given below, however, a statement which is as accurate as can be made from an engineering standpoint. It is not the province of your engineer to determine what the legal rights are.

WHAT THE CITY OWNS.

The city has acquired, by purchase, water rights aggregating about 15,000 inches, based upon appropriations by its predecessors on the river and tributary streams. These rights are for the use of water during the irrigating season, and from careful measurements will yield during such seasons to the city a continuous flow during normal years of about 11,000 inches. In addition to these rights the city has acquired practically the entire river frontage from the intake to Owens Lake, a distance of nearly fifty miles. As riparian owner of all such lands, the city would have the right to divert winter waters which flow during the non-irrigating season, and also the right to regulate the flood waters through its reservoir system below the point of intake. Combining these summer irrigation waters with the winter flow, and by so regulating the flood waters, the city would receive during normal years a mean annual flow of from 15,000 to 20,000 inches. With 240,000 acre feet storage at Long Valley, the net supply that may be delivered in all years from these rights is estimated at 400 second feet, or 20,000 inches.

LAND AND WATER PURCHASES.

The effort has been made on the part of the city to purchase all lands riparian to the Owens River from the south line of township 10 south, range 34 east, M.D.M. (which is four miles north of the proposed point of diversion) to Owens Lake. The city has also filed under the State law on all surplus water in Owens River at the diversion point and on all tributaries south of the diversion point, as well as on the main river at the Long Valley reservoir site. The California court's rulings as to the relative rights of appropriators of water, as against lower riparian owners, are not entirely clear, consequently the purchase of these lower riparian lands was considered desirable. With very minor exceptions the city now owns all of the riparian lands on both banks of the Owens River from the diversion point to the Owens Lake, and Owens Lake has no outlet and is saline. Purchases have also been made of lands riparian to the tributary streams entering the valley from the diversion point south, and also of lands having water rights on these tributary streams.

The total area of the lands purchased in the Owens Valley to date, including the Long Valley reservoir site, is 70,951 acres. The following additional purchases were made:

Swartout reservoir	2040 acres
Fernando reservoir	198 acres
Fairmont reservoir	10 acres
Tehachepi cement lands	3382 acres

The grand total area of all lands purchased and contracted for is 76,581 acres, at a total cost of $1,140,000 in round numbers, including deferred payments not yet due, or at the rate of $14.89 per acre. Appendix F gives a list of all lands purchased.

GOVERNMENT AID.

For the protection of the city against speculators and obstructive filers, the President has withdrawn from entry or sale all public lands in Owens Valley, and the boundaries of the Sierra Forest Reserve have been extended to include the greater portion of the drainage basin. The Bureau of Forestry has aided the city repeatedly.

WORK IN PROGRESS.

At present three survey parties are at work on the aqueduct route and one on a railroad route; a construction camp is maintained in the valley, where work on the canal is progressing, and cement quarries are being opened. A line of precise levels is being run from Los Angeles to the intake.

The aggregate length of the aqueduct, as estimated by the Board of Engineers, is summarized as follows:

	Miles.	Per cent.
Conduit, unlined canal	22.20	9.9
Conduit, lined with rubble masonry or concrete	164.22	72.7
Tunnels, in rock	18.24	8.1
Tunnels, in earth	10.11	4.5
Siphons of steel pipe, crossing canyons	9.30	4.0
Steel flumes, crossing shallow and narrow depressions	1.80	0.8
Total	225.87	100.0

The total number of miles of line surveyed to date is 709. Topographic survey has been made of the Haiwee reservoir and dam site, of the Fairmont reservoir, of the Llano Verde reservoir, and of four reservoir sites in the San Fernando Valley. Surveys have also been made for the installation of a power plant on Division Creek.

The Board of Engineers recommend modifications in the grade from the Haiwee reservoir site to the Fairmont reservoir site. This calls for a resurvey of the line between these two points, a total distance of 146 miles. These changes were made because the board was opposed to the construction of steel pressure pipes across ravines or depressions, where they could be avoided. Further material improvements, looking towards the shortening of the line and the cheapening of the work, will be made. The length of the line probably will be reduced ten miles from the figures used by the board of engineers.

CONSTRUCTION.

About $1000 a month has been spent on construction work in the Owens Valley during the last eight months. The main canal has been opened for a distance of five miles, and partially graded, 66,084 cubic yards of earth having been moved to date. About six miles of wagon road have been built along the proposed line of the aqueduct, on the west shore of Owens Lake. Arrangements are being made to install a power plant on Division Creek in the Owens Valley, for the purpose of obtaining electric energy for construction work. A right of way map has been filed with the United States land office for this power plant. Bids have been received for the installation of a pressure pipe, 5100 feet long, to develop 400 feet of head. Bids are now being called for the hydro-electric machinery for the power plant. They will be opened on March 15, 1907. Plans have been prepared for the erection of a hydraulic dredge, to be used in building the first twenty miles of conduit from the diversion point to the Alabama Hills. The total estimated cost of this power plant and dredge is $26,120. A crew of miners have been employed and are at work opening up the limestone quarries for the cement plant at Tehachepi.

TRANSPORTATION.

Preliminary survey for a railroad has been made, but the engineers believe that a railroad corporation could build the line more quickly and economically than the city, and that a permanent road would be a benefit to Los Angeles and to Owens Valley, and they have taken up the matter with the Santa Fé and the Southern Pacific. A report on the transportation situation by W. S. Post is given in an appendix.

CEMENT MILL.

The city has bought 3000 acres of land containing clay deposits near Mojave, and secured options on limestone quarries. Mr. E. Duryee, cement expert of the Reclamation Service, makes a report, in an appendix, in which he estimates the cost of a 1000-barrel cement mill at $302,363, and the cost of manufacture of cement at $1 a barrel. The engineers estimate that 1,300,000 barrels of cement will be required. Tests of material show that superior Portland cement can be made. The city will not exhaust the deposits of clay and limestone, and it is thought that the plant, at the end of the construction, will be worth almost as much as its cost to the city.

POWER PLANTS.

The most important site for development of water power is in San Francisquito Cañon, about forty-five miles from the city. A total drop of nearly fifteen hundred feet is available at this point. Another minor site for power development may be found a short distance below the end of the aqueduct, in the San Fernando Valley. Another opportunity for power development occurs near Little Lake, 150 miles northerly from Los Angeles, where a fall of 270 feet can be obtained. The average continuous output of power, with a complete water supply from these plants, is estimated by the board of engineers at 49,000 horse power. The Fairmont reservoir site at the intake of the main plant will permit of the water being liberated for this power as the demand occurs in the city. The water may be conserved for this purpose during legal holidays and nights, and liberated during working hours in such a way as to meet the demands. This the board estimates will permit the city to enter into contracts for a total output of 93,000 horse power, measured at the point of delivery in hours of greatest demand.

The board finds that the conditions for the economic development and maintenance of power are very favorable, and its safety against interruption or diminution by drouth, and the permanent character of the aqueduct, tend to make the power development feature particularly attractive and valuable. E. F. Scattergood, an electrical engineer of extended experience in the construction of hydro-electric-power plants in Southern California, has made a detailed estimate on the cost of installing the power plants, and his report is attached as appendix J.

The proposed plan is to build the aqueduct for the purpose of supplying water for municipal purposes, and, after its completion, if the citizens of Los Angeles consider it desirable to install these power plants, they may subsequently be built as independent works. The installation of power has not been included in the aqueduct estimates, because the power situation is considered as wholly independent of the proposition of supplying water, and should stand on its own merits.

COST OF THE CONDUIT.

The board of engineers estimated the cost of the aqueduct proper as $18,221,300. After adding for railway, cement plant and other accessories, including 15 per cent. for contingencies, they reach a total of $23,110,700, and they further add, "for land and water rights, and for all legal and other expenses connected with their acquisition, from estimates presented by Messrs. Mulholland and Mathews, including what has already been expended, we add $1,375,000, making a total of $24,485,600." They report the quality of the water satisfactory. The board designed sections of the conduit on most conservative lines, and based their estimates thereon. Their estimate is given in detail in their report, attached hereto, as Appendix E. They estimate the time necessary for construction after the voting of the bonds as five years. No insurmountable engineering difficulties were found. The report concludes:

"We find the project admirable in conception and outline, and full of promise for the continued prosperity of the city of Los Angeles."

FINAL COMPLETION OF SYSTEM.

The aqueduct, as planned by the board of engineers, with the water rights now owned by the city, is adequate to deliver to Los Angeles a large proportion of the 400 second feet (20,000 miner's inches) above named, "sufficient for all probable needs for several years after the completion of the aqueduct." It would be obviously unwise for the city at once to pile the cost of works that were not immediately necessary for the operation of the aqueduct, onto the present cost of building the portion which is now essential. These additional works are left to be supplied as the demand for water approaches the total supply available. These extensions and betterments should be paid for from the earnings of the aqueduct itself, in a similar way to the present policy of the city water department.

The aqueduct will be so constructed that it may be covered progressively as funds are available after its completion. The arguments that are so potent for the covering of aqueducts in the East on account of pollution do not obtain with equal force in a desert region, such as that traversed by the Los Angeles aqueduct, which is practically devoid of human habitation, and where little animal life is found. Of the total length of line, 16.6 per cent. is in tunnel and pipe line, and is, therefore, to be immediately covered. Below is given an estimate for covering the remaining portion of the aqueduct from the Alabama Hills in the Owens Valley, south to the Fernando Valley, and of building the Long Valley dam, the Fairmont dam and two dams in the San Fernando Valley. This will complete the aqueduct:

Extra cover from Alabama Hills south, 97.8 miles	$1,180,000
Fairmont dam	150,000
Fernando dam, No. 1	530,000
Fernando dam, No. 2	360,000
Long Valley dam	560,000
	$2,780,000
15 per cent. for engineering and contingencies	417,000
Total	$3,197,000

The installation of the power plants in the San Francisquito Cañon, including all necessary hydraulic and electrical work, for about 75 per cent. of the total power available from the complete aqueduct, and its delivery at substations in Los Angeles, is a separate matter, and is estimated upon as $4,689,000.

END OF A PIPE DREAM.

The advisability of building a pipe line with a capacity of 5000 inches from the Owens River to the city of Los Angeles has been suggested. Despite the fact that 6978 meters were added to the water system in Los Angeles during the year 1906, the increased summer consumption was 154 miner's inches for that year. The percentage of connections metered increased from 20 to 31 during that period, so that, while there was a great addition to our population, the per capita daily consumption was reduced. The most wasteful consumers have now been metered, and the present per capita rate of 144 gallons daily may be considered as wellnigh the most economical use that may be expected. If our population continues to increase at the present rate of 30,000 annually, with a summer consumption of 150 gallons per capita daily, this would call for an additional annual increment to our water supply of 350 inches. The necessity of our suburban towns is even greater than Los Angeles, and their growth is being retarded by their deficient water supply. It would be safe to assume that the demands in this entire area would be for 500 inches of water additional annually. At this rate, 5000 inches would be sufficient to meet the demands of this locality for a period of ten years. One of the controlling factors in the location of the Owens Valley aqueduct is the difficulty of tunneling through the crest of the Coast Range north of Saugus, and on the south side of the Antelope Valley. The less the fall or grade of a conduit, the slower the velocity and consequent discharge. The larger the conduit with any fixed grade, the higher the velocity and discharge, provided other conditions are similar. From the intake until the crest of the Coast Range is passed, every possible saving in grade is made in locating the aqueduct. South from the crest at Elizabeth Lake to the San Fernando Valley the fall is 1700 feet and here power will be developed. North of the summit, at Elizabeth Lake, the prevailing grade is about one foot per mile and seldom exceeds two and one-half feet per mile. The conduit is about fourteen feet wide and eight feet deep, and has a capacity of 430 second-feet. A riveted steel pipe on these grades, having a capacity of 100 second-feet (5000 miner's inches,) would vary from eight and one-half to six feet in diameter, and would cost about $21,800,000. The diameter could be decreased by increasing the grade, but this in turn would involve lowering the south end of the line in the Antelope Valley. This would materially increase the length of the longest tunnel, which will be under the crest of the Coast Range. Even if the grade were increased to 4.2 feet per mile, which is about the greatest possible, the pipe still would have to be fully six feet in diameter and would cost about as much as the concrete conduit. The possible power development would be reduced over 75 per cent., because there would be but one-fourth the amount of water and the increased grade of the pipe line would leave less fall for water power. The construction of tunnels would not be avoided by substituting a pipe line for an aqueduct, and these tunnels are the most expensive construction. They fix the length of time required to complete the work.

It is a ground for congratulation that the City Council has concluded to submit to the people the question of authorizing at once the entire bond issue of $23,000,000. It will be desirable to enter into a number of long time contracts for the driving of the long tunnels. The contractor who is given long-time contracts for the excavation of the canal or its lining, can afford to buy much more complete equipment. In order to enter into these long-time contracts, it will be necessary that the funds will be available throughout a term of years, for the payment of the city's liabilities.

In starting a great work of this kind, a very large percentage of the expenditures must be put into equipment and organization; so that with, say 50 per cent. of the funds expended, it very seldom follows that 50 per cent. of the work will be performed. After the organization and equipment has been assembled, the latter part of the work should go with relatively greater rapidity and smaller expense. It is frequently difficult to make this plain to those unfamiliar with works of this kind, but any one connected with large construction enterprises will fully appreciate this condition.

A diagram is presented herewith, showing the rate of growth of the city of Los Angeles from 1880 to date. The increase is remarkable and probably as rapid as that of any city in the Union. In 1880 the population was 11,093; in 1890 it was 50,395; in 1900 it was 102,479, and in 1906, as indicated by the school census, the population was about 240,000. Projecting into the future the rate of growth during the last six years indicates an increase at the rate of 25,700 per year. The rate of growth during the last three years, however, is 36,700 per year. This rapid increase in population has a direct bearing on the necessity of providing for an additional water supply.

According to the State law, the bounded debt of the city for all classes of bonded debts, including waterworks and sewers, is limited to 15 per cent. of its assessed valuation. For the year 1880-81 the assessed valuation of city property was $7,259,568. In 1890-91 it was $49,320,670. In 1900-01 it was $65,599,920. In 1904-05 the assessed valuation was $126,126,563. In the year 1906 it was $202,985,704. As regulated by this 15 per cent., the bonding power of the city increased between 1902-03 and 1904-05, from $12,962,510 to $18,918,984, or about $6,000,000. During the last two years, the advance has been from $18,918,984, to $30,447,855, an increase in bonding power in two years of $11,528,871. This increase in bonding power during the past year has been $7,000,000. There are outstanding about $6,800,000 in city bonds of all classes. It is proposed to issue $23,000,000 in bonds for the Los Angeles aqueduct. This would make a total bonded debt of $29,800,000, which is $647,000 less than our ultimate bonding power. The next city assessment will be made during the coming summer, and if the same rate of increase occurs for this fiscal year that occurred during the previous year, there will be added $7,000,000 more to our bonding power.

In closing this report, particular attention is called to the fact that in building our own cement plant and in constructing a concrete aqueduct the bulk of the expenditures will be for labor and material which will be supplied locally. The money that is used for this construction will stay in and around Los Angeles, and will not be sent to eastern manufacturers, as would be the case for instance, if steel pipe were used.

Particular mention should be made of the manner in which the various official and commercial organizations of Los Angeles have consulted and cooperated with each other, in all the vital stages of this enterprise. There has practically been no dissension, no marked differences of opinion, either as to the general advisability of the enterprise, or as to the policy for carrying it out.

Respectfully submitted,
WM. MULHOLLAND,
Chief Engineer.

WERE PLAYING WITH DEATH.

Boys Find Dynamite Under a House and Make Toys of the Explosive.

When the police arrived at the residence of R. G. Simons, No. 157 West Twenty-fifth street, last night in answer to a hurry call, they found two lads, 5 and 6 years old, amusing themselves by pulling percussion caps out of sticks of giant powder.

The lads found the powder under the foundation of their home and took it into the street to play with. A pedestrian noticed that the objects that the children were playing with resembled dynamite and called the officers from the University Station. According to the police, the lads had removed the detonating caps in a manner usually productive of an explosion, and were tossing the dynamite about the street.

An investigation was made by the police. The boys said they were playing about the foundation of their home and found the powder concealed beneath the Simons house. All inquiry failed to disclose how the powder came to be under the house. The explosive was taken to the police station.

MAYOR, CUPID AND COMPANY.

Municipal Matrimonial Bureau Bears First Fruit in Marriage Last Evening at City Hall.

The first fruit borne by Mayor Harper's matrimonial bureau was the marriage, in his office last night, of Frank Bernard Hopkins of No. 206 1-2 South Broadway, and Miss Rose Mariam Collier, who is said to be an actress.

It was their desire that the Mayor perform the ceremony, but he, after taking counsel with a Superior Court judge, said that he could not do it legally. The Mayor's brother, Rev. E. J. Harper, finally tied the knot.

It was definitely ascertained yesterday that the amount involved in the recent failures at Brussels announced on the stock exchange here was greatly exaggerated. The total only reached about $200,000, but the banks furnished assistance to several houses.

A Voice From The Stomach

A Bloodless Fight Between a Tablet and a Habit—The Tablet Wins.

At the age of 22, Clarence had good digestion. He had gastric juice that could dissolve doughnuts and turn apple-skins into good blood corpuscles.

At the age of 24 he began to be profuse about the waist and lean backwards. He also began to cultivate several chins. In his new-found pride he began to think it his duty to gorge himself on everything, the good and the bad, for appetite feeds on appetite—and every good thing is abused.

His pictures showed that he took on weight after he put his collar on.

At the age of 26 Clarence married and went to boarding. On top of all this, he attended oyster suppers and wine dinners, which reduced the size of his collar from 16½ to 15. With still abiding faith in the strength of his stomach he gulped his meals, and chewed them afterwards.

At the age of 28 Clarence began to hear an inward voice—a warning from the stomach. After each meal he would feel bloated—and belching became a habit.

He began to be a light eater—and a heavy thinker. He tried to think out a cure, for now he would sit down at his meals absolutely disgusted at the thought or sight of anything to eat.

He would sit down at his meals without the trace of an appetite, just because it was time to eat.

He would often feel a gnawing, unsatisfied "still-hungry" feeling in his stomach, even after he was through eating, whether his meal was well cooked or not.

And he suffered a good many other things with his stomach that he could not explain, but that made him grouchy, miserable, out-o'-sorts and generally sour on everybody and everything.

Finally he read an account, something like this, about the truly wonderful results obtained from Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all cases of stomach trouble, dyspepsia, and so on. He bought a 50c box at the drug store and took the whole box. When he started, he had little faith—and less appetite. When he finished he had absolute faith—and more appetite and more good cheer. Things began to taste different and better to him.

Now he has no more dyspepsia, no more indigestion, no more loss of appetite, brash, irritation, burning sensation, heartburn, nausea, eructations bad memory, or loss of vim and vigor.

Remember, one ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest for you, 3000 grains of food, just as it did for Clarence.

This relieves your stomach of the work of digesting until your stomach can get strong and healthy again. Your stomach has been overworked and abused. It's fagged out. It needs a rest.

Let Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do the work of your stomach. You will be surprised how fine you'll feel after eating, and how lusciously good everything will taste to you.

Heed the call of the stomach now! There's a world of good cheer in one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets—at any drug store, 50c.

Wholesale Grocers' Trust Before Grand Jury.

Attorney Lawler Is Receiving Startling Evidence.

Many Stories of Threatened Boycotts Abroad.

An interesting combination among the wholesale grocers and jobbers which virtually dared the manufacturers to sell their products to any concern or person not mentioned among its membership and uttered thinly veiled threats against those violating the order, is expected to be disclosed at the next session of the Federal grand jury, which has already started an investigation of the Wholesale Grocers' Association of the State.

The first day's session of the grand jury which was held Friday afternoon merely pointed out the general trend of the inquiry. Yesterday great things developed. The grand jury was not in session yesterday, but the retail grocers were elated over the first day's work of the jury and began to gather up what evidence they had to offer against the wholesalers.

There were frequent callers yesterday at the office of United States Dist.-Atty. Oscar Lawler, and each one of the visitors was ready to produce some sort of evidence that the California Wholesale Grocers' Association had worked to prevent them from purchasing goods as theysaw fit, and had made threats to boycott certain [illegible] articles if they were [illegible] retailers direct, and not through the hands of the wholesaler or jobber.

TIGHT AS A CASK.

It is claimed that the wholesalers and jobbers had perfected an unusually tight organization and completely dominated the marketing of goods in California. Manufacturers located in other States, but who sold their goods in California, are said to have been completely under the thumb of the organization. If a manufacturer dared to sell his wares to any wholesaler or jobber, or retailer for that matter, whose name did not appear upon an official list, he was threatened with a boycott. If he dared to persist, all members of the organization struck his wares from their lists and advised their agents to "knock" the goods.

One Angeleño, who was for years prominent in the wholesale grocery business, but who is now retired, called upon Dist.-Atty. Lawler yesterday, but failed to find him in. This gentleman had on his person documents which he claimed to be official and which revealed plainly the tactics of the wholesale grocers.

One of the documents is in the form of a letter sent from C. M. Carr, secretary of the wholesalers, to a firm in New York which was understood to have sold some of its goods to persons outside of the grocery trust. It reads:

"At a recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the California Wholesale Grocers' Association, the writer, its secretary, was directed to write you and officially request you to confine sales of lines represented by you to the legitimate wholesale grocers of California, and not to sell to any retailers direct or at jobbers' prices. Find above on this sheet a complete list of all of the legitimate wholesale grocers of this State at present existing, together with the names of members of the Executive Committee of the California Wholesale Grocers' Association. A like request is being made of all brokers and manufacturers of articles entering into the jobber grocer's business.

"Thanking you in advance for your approval and prompt action, I remain, Yours truly, [Signed] "C. M. CARR,

"Secretary."

GIVES LIST OF MEMBERS.

In the reference made to the complete list of members of the organization the following Los Angeles firms are named: R. L. Craig & Co., M. A. Newmark & Co., Haas, Baruch & Co., Mebius & Drescher Company, United Wholesale Grocer Company.

This letter is said to have been issued by the combination as a result of a certain New York manufacturer selling his goods direct to one of the two largest retail grocery houses in this city.

Hermon T. Ammon, No. 1743 West Thirty-eighth street, was arrested yesterday on the charge of bigamy. For several months Ammon has been residing in Los Angeles, and has been employed in the Santa Fé Railroad shops as a machinist. According to the police, Ammon was married in West Plain, Mo., about ten years ago, and has three children. He is said to have left his wife and children and gone to Tombstone, Ariz., where he resided for some time and married his present wife. From the Arizona town they came to Los Angeles.

YOUTHFUL HORSE THIEVES?

Four lads ranging in years from 9 to 14, were arrested by patrolman last night on the suspicion of having stolen a horse and buggy from Chutes Park Sunday night. The boys are T. Smildine, 10 years old, No. 145 Lemon street; Robert Ellis, 11 years old, No. 212 South Alameda street; Earnest Reherez, No. 337 North Figueroa street, and William Globenfeldt, No. 227 North Figueroa street. They were sent to the Detention Home.

ARREST FOLLOWS JEALOUSY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HELENA (Mont.) March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Judge W. H. Hunt in the United States Court today granted the motion of the defense for a modification of the injunction which for years has prevented operations in one of the richest mines in the State of Montana. The title of the suit is that of the St. Louis Mining Company against the Montana Mining and Milling Company, in the latter of which the Rothschilds of London are the chief stockholders. About a year ago a jury awarded the St. Louis company $192,000 damages against the Montana company for illegal extraction of ores, but the United States Supreme Court ordered a new trial, and today Judge Hunt modified the injunction so that the foreign corporation may resume work. The Montana company owns the Drumlummon mine near here, having paid a prospector $15,000,000 cash therefor and it was under this purchase that it claimed the title to the land between its property and that of the St. Louis company. It was to again appeal in this case that former Senator Brown of Utah recently went to Washington, only to be assassinated by the Bradley woman.

WEALTHY CATTLEMAN PLANS TO AID CUPID.

Offers Fifty Dollars for Every Baby Born and One Hundred Dollars for Marriages Within County—Believes Scheme Will Increase Population of Sparsely Settled Section.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NORTH PLATTE (Neb.) March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Thomas Roseman, a retired cattleman of McPherson county, who has accumulated a considerable fortune and has no wife or children to bestow it upon, has devised a unique plan for increasing the population of the county, which is very sparsely settled.

He proposes to give $50 in gold to every baby born in the county, and $100 in gold to every couple marrying in it. The $50 will be given in trust to the parents of the baby as soon as sufficient proof of its birth within the county are furnished him, and the $100 will be given the husband and wife as soon as sufficient proof of their marriage in the county is furnished him.

Roseman believes that his plan of giving money to babies born and men and women married within its boundaries will have a tendency not only to increase the number of children in families already residing in McPherson county, but to stimulate immigration to the county, which is capable of supporting many more people than now live in it.

REPLIES SARCASTICALLY.

Premier Clemenceau Denies Sending Secret Woman Emissary to Rome, and Scores Church Policy.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PARIS, March 30.—The publication yesterday of the synopsis of the documents that came into the possession of the French government at the time Mgr. Montagnani, secretary of the papal nunciature, was expelled from France, has elicited an indignant letter of denial and protest from Premier Clemenceau.

Discussing the mysterious "Mme. X," the Premier states that he never sent any secret emissary, male or female, to Rome. The Premier writes sarcastically of Mgr. Montagnani's "innocent thought" that he could draw him toward Rome by means of a large sum of money, which would be especially acceptable to the Premier in view of the dire extremities to which he was reduced by "his well-known love of luxury."

The Premier's letter winds up vigorously as follows:

"Under the present circumstances, I have no right personally to make use of the Montagnani documents while the other side can with impunity make them public after expurgating their indiscretion with the object of minimizing the inevitable shock of their publication. I will merely confine myself to observing the Jesuitical faiht quoted by you. This cannot, it appears to me, be laid to the account of Mgr. Montagnani. It was brought to him quite fresh, as he says, by a person whose name, I think, must be perfectly familiar to you. You may be sure I will lose no time in explaining myself publicly as soon as my duty permits me."

TO RULE HONDURAS.

Gutierrez Is Choice of Revolutionary Leaders for President—Bonilla Is Fugitive.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Gen. Dioniso Gutierrez, one of the most prominent leaders of the revolution in Honduras against President Bonilla, probably will be the President of the provisional government established by the Honduran revolutionists, with the aid of President Zelaya of Nicaragua.

A dispatch received today from Commander Winterhalter of the American gunboat Paducah, now at Port Limon, Costa Rica, states that it is reported there that Gen. Gutierrez is the favorite candidate for the head of the new government in Honduras. It is also reported in Port Limon, according to Commander Winterhalter's dispatch, that President Bonilla is completely surrounded. The dispatch does not state exactly where President Bonilla is, but it is believed that he is somewhere near Amapala, on the south coast of Honduras.

Dispatches received by the State Department from several different points in Central America announce the bombarding of Amapala.

RAILROAD RESPONSIBLE.

ST. LOUIS, March 30.—A decision was handed down in the Circuit Court of Appeals today, written by Judge Hook, affirming judgment for an award of damages against the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad for the death of an express messenger killed in a wreck, and holding that excessive speeding of railroad trains is dangerous. The case was that of Mrs. Mary O'Brien of Cascade, Iowa, suing as administratrix of the estate of her son, James J. O'Brien, who was killed in the wreck at Boone, Iowa, on August 1, 1899. The jury of the lower court awarded the plaintiff $8250 damages.

The court in affirming judgment sets forth that the evidence supported "the conclusions that the train was being negligently operated in unusual and excessive speed." It was shown in the evidence that the train's schedule was forty-five miles an hour.

PORTO RICO COUNCIL ELECTS.

SAN JUAN, March 30.—The executive council has elected William Franklin Willoughby, Treasurer of Porto Rico, to be its president in succession to Regis H. Post, who will be made Governor of the island. This is a departure from the precedent that has been observed since the establishment of the civil government here, for the secretary has always been the president of the council. Willoughby is the oldest member of the present council.

ANTI-FUSION PASSES.

DENVER (Colo.) March 30.—The Senate last night passed on third reading the anti-fusion bill, which prevents a candidate from having his name appear in the list of more than one party. The House adopted on final passage the insurance bill, which makes provision for an insurance commission to supervise the work of insurance companies within the State. Both bills go to the Governor today for signature.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Stout Davison, 45 years of age, and his 6-year-old son, of New Brunswick, N. J., were drowned in the Raritan River yesterday. The craft was upset, while its occupants were endeavoring to change places. The father struggled to save the boy, but became exhausted and both sank.

PURE FOOD IS REFORMING 'EM.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, March 30.—Pure food is to be an important factor in the reform of delinquent husbands, conducted by Municipal Judge McKenzie Clelland of the Maxwell-street district.

Instead of sentencing the husband, the wife will be sentenced in the future. Instead of meting out "$50 and costs," it will not be unusual to hear a sentence of "two weeks on ham and eggs," varied by "hot biscuits, mashed potatoes and steak."

After several weeks of physiological researches conducted upon practical lines, Judge Clelland has discovered that food served in indifferent style by more indifferent wives has more to do with sending husbands to the corner saloon for solace than any other one thing.

If there were any doubt as to the truth of this theory, it was forthcoming at last night's review of palled husbands in Judge Clelland's court. There were fifty husbands who had been placed on their honor and good food. The latter had stimulated the former to such an extent that there were few wives who had any complaint to make of their husbands.

FIND STOLEN DYNAMITE.

Thief Takes Two Tons of Explosive and Conceals It Close to Railroad Tracks.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BUTTE (Mont.) March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Two tons of dynamite which were stolen during recent labor troubles in this city, were found by officers today cached in a building surrounded by a wooden structure in the eastern portion of Butte.

The find caused fuch excitement by reason of the fact that powder had been secreted within twenty-five feet of the railroad tracks, and within twenty feet of a big bonfire which had been built several nights ago. The powder was stolen from cars of the Amalgamated Copper Company on the way to the company's magazines. The thief was amazingly bold.

HILL ON WATERWAYS.

NEW YORK, March 30.—James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railway, taking as a text, the recent action of President Roosevelt, in appointing a waterways commission, said today that, through the waterways of the country, properly improved, must come the much desired improvement in freight conditions. The country, he said, must look to its waterways for immediate relief from the freight pressure.

"If the government would improve its waterways and extract from them one-fifth of their latent possibilities," said Hill, "the freight handling problem would be nearer solution than the railroads themselves can ever hope to bring it.

"There has been in the past a feeling among some railroad men that waterways development would be inimical to railroad interests. I do not think it would, and if this idea has not already wholly disappeared, it is in a fair way of doing so soon.

"Take for instance, a fifteen-foot channel in the Mississippi from St. Louis to New Orleans. There is no more important work for the general government than this improvement. It might cost $100,000,000, but when it was finished a single powerful tow-boat could pull from thirty to forty trainloads. Heavy freights, requiring only moderate speed, would go to the sea by way of the Gulf and there would no longer be freight congestion between the East and West."

WOMAN PROTECTS NEGRO.

CHICAGO, March 30.—A dispatch to the Tribune from Indianapolis, Ind., says: Mrs. Ruth Prindele saved a colored man from a mob of glass workers last night, holding a mob at bay until the police arrived. In a row at the glass works, William Brown, colored, stabbed Ray Rutledge, white, and friends of the latter took up the quarrel. With stones and clubs Brown was attacked on every side till he turned and fled into the Prindele home. Seeing that he was pursued by a mob, Mrs. Prindele shut the door and despite the fact that men in the mob hurled stones and threatened her with death, she protected the negro till the police dispersed the crowd.

FIRE IN HOMESTAKE MINE.

DEADWOOD (S. D.) March 30.—Fire in the Homestake mine which started last Sunday is still burning and probably will make it necessary to close a number of the stamps in the mills as the ore is running low. So many of the men were engaged in fighting the fire that it is not possible to take out the necessary amount of ore. By evening steam and water will have been added to the fighting force.

BARTENDER KEPT MOVING.

J. Winkup, a bartender living at the Hotel St. Croix, near Third and Flower streets, was taken to Central Station last night by a policeman. It is said that he took strychnine to end his life. According to the police, Winkup's father took him away from Central Station, saying that he was going to take his son to a physician. No one at the hotel seemed to know anything about the affair.

THEY SET LONDON AGOG.

LONDON, March 30.—The newspapers are greatly interested in the arrival of E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe, who open in London April 15. Later they will play in Paris and Berlin. The illustrated papers are filled with pictures of the players. Sothern and Miss Marlowe will play "Hamlet" in the Hamlet Theater at Elsinore.

GRIEF CAUSES SUICIDE.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—Thomas E. Green, a shoemaker, despondent because of the death of his room-mate and friend, E. N. Wentworth, today committed suicide.

AUTO INJURES BICYCLIST.

OAKLAND, March 30. — Jacob Hoeck, an insurance broker of Alameda, was seriously injured today by colliding with an automobile, while he was bicycling. Hoeck was thrown from his wheel, striking on his head on the street car tracks, sustaining a fracture of the skull at the base of the brain.

INTERCHANGE TEACHERS.

VIENNA, March 30.—Animated by the example of Germany and the United States in exchanging university professors, the Austrian and French Ministries of Public Instruction have reached a mutual decision to exchange a certain number of grammar school teachers.

IGNORE RIVAL'S BROTHER.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—When shown the statement of Charles P. Taft, brother of Secretary William H. Taft, in reply to the one recently issued by Senator Foraker on the political issues in Ohio, the latter declined to be interviewed.

"I attach no importance whatever to it," said Senator Foraker, "and, therefore, I refuse to discuss it in any way."

FLASHES FROM WIRES.

Foreign Minister Pichon and Premier Clemenceau conferred in Paris at length yesterday upon the subject of Morocco. The Premier Minister has indefinitely postpond his visit to Spain owing to the pressure of ministerial affairs. It is suggested, however, that the visit was postponed because too great significance was likely to be attached to it if made at the same time as the meeting of King Edward and King Alfonso at Carthegena.

According to a notification received by the government from the Vatican, the Pope has decided that the removal of the body of Leo XIII from St. Peters to the new tomb in St. John Lateran shall take place in the daytime, provided it is guaranteed that the cortege shall pass through Rome unmolested.

Misgivings as to the longevity of the Douma have been strengthened, according to the St. Petersburg correspondent of the London Times. He telegraphs that it is evident that the policy of ostracising the constitutional demands will not be abandoned, and in these circumstances it will be difficult if not impossible for the Constitutional Democratic center to fulfill its mission of moderation.

IN HIS COFFIN, BUT NOT DEAD.

MINER THWARTS PREPARATION FOR HIS FUNERAL.

All Ready for Burial When He Recovers Consciousness Climbs Out of Casket, Staggers to Nearest Town and Gets Drunk—Partners Have Trying Experience.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SHERIDAN (Mont.) March 23.—Henry Cowgill, several days after he was announced dead, suddenly regained consciousness and found himself laid out in a coffin all ready to be to advices received south of here last week. buried, from the mountains, according Cowgill slowly climbed out of the coffin and, finding nobody but himself in the cabin in which what was supposed to be his dead body had been locked up, set out on rather unsteady legs for Twin Bridges, the nearest town.

Cowgill's two mining partners firmly believing him to be dead, had dressed his body in his best suit of clothes and laid him in the coffin that morning, locked the door of the cabin, and set out for town to make preparations for the funeral.

They had not summoned a physician to make sure that their friend and partner was dead, but they could discover no signs of life in his body and were sure that they knew a dead man when they saw one.

When the two men returned to the cabin at night, they found the door open and on entering the supposed death-chamber, were startled to find the coffin empty. They searched the premises but, of course in vain.

The next morning, the mystery was solved by Cowgill himself, who, when his partners were at breakfast, staggered into the cabin with drawn face, blood-shot eyes and a very thick tongue, and threw himself on his bunk and went to sleep.

In two hours he was sober enough to tell his story and to explain that he had celebrated his return to life by a big drunk.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

MAKE ATTACK ON THE MAYOR.

TRIO OF PASADENANS ISSUES A STATEMENT.

Declares That the Head of the City Administration Has His Face Toward Municipal Water While the Animal Under Him Is Facing the Other Way—Easter Programmes.

Office of The Times, No. 28 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, March 31.—Tomorrow will tell the story of who is to be Mayor of Pasadena for the next two years. Intense interest is being shown in the contest, and that a heavy vote will be polled is a foregone conclusion. Both candidates profess to be confident of victory, but popular opinion seems to give the victory to Earley.

One of the strong points in Earley's favor is the fact that he has made his position known to every one. On no issue has he attempted to sidestep, having taken every opportunity to make his stand clear to the people at large.

On the water question, a matter in which Pasadena is vitally interested, Earley has gone on record as being wholly in favor of carrying out the will of the voters as expressed at the bond election last year. The action of the present administration in undoing what had been done has come in for general condemnation by the Earley supporters and a pledge has been made that every effort will be made to carry out the will of the voters.

H. H. Klamroth, H. W. Wadsworth and J. H. Merriam have issued the following statement to the voters of the city:

"The contest is purely non-partisan. The leading candidates on both sides for Mayor are both conscientious, upright men of exemplary habits and unquestionable integrity. Therefore the only contest is upon their policies, their views upon city affairs and their personal fitness for the positions to which they aspire.

"Our platform has been often published and is clear-cut and stands 'square-toed' for municipal water, to secure an adequate water supply for the future, and municipal electric light on the bond plan.

"The present administration is condemned for inaction and adverse action in the manner of buying the water plants, as voted by the people two years ago; and for imposing an excessive direct tax of $52,000 in one year to be added to the cost of the electric lighting plant; when the people had voted, on their recommendation, to pay for the plant by bonds, distributing the tax burden over a period of forty years.

"Many of our best citizens doubt, and have good reason to doubt, both the inclination and the ability of Mr. Waterhouse to consummate the municipal water plan on any basis. Two years ago he chose his own mount, after election. This time he is already mounted before election. But while his face is turned toward municipal water, the animal under him is faced the other way.

"Because of its failure to accomplish municipal water on any plan, or even to make progress in that direction; because of its poor business judgment as shown in estimating the cost of the municipal lighting plant; because of its serious civic mistakes, both in assessing and levying taxes; because it has won the distrust of so many of our best citizens, and because it stands for no forward movement, which is better represented by the Citizens' party, the present administration is not in a position to accomplish the best results for our city's advancement on any line."

EASTER SERVICES.

With the close of the Lenten season Pasadena will doff her mourning attire and today will be fittingly celebrated in the churches as the anniversary of the resurrection.

At All Saints' Episcopal Church there will be celebrations of the Holy Eucharist at 7:30 and 11 o'clock in the morning and evensong and sermon at 7:30 o'clock in the evening. The rector will preach at both the morning and evening services. The 11 o'clock celebration will be choral.

At St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Church there will be low masses at 6:30 and 9 o'clock and solemn high mass at 10:30 o'clock a.m. At the 11 o'clock service Hahn's mass in F will be rendered by the choir, augmented by additional singers. The Easter sermon will be preached by Rev. Father Farrelley. In the evening there will be solemn vespers and benediction with sermon by the Rev. Father Hughes.

At the First Methodist Church there will be a service of praise and thanksgiving at 11 o'clock in the morning. At this service the Rev. Dr. Lamport will deliver an Easter sermon and appropriate music will be rendered. In the evening there will be a service given up entirely to song. The choir has been putting in considerable extra practice on the Easter music and especially interesting services are promised.

At the First Presbyterian Church there will be preaching services at 11 o'clock in the morning and in the evening as well. Special Easter music will be rendered and the sermons will be appropriate.

At the Y.M.C.A. this afternoon at 4 o'clock R. M. Smith will address the men's meeting. Music will be rendered by the Glee Club.

CROWN CITY BRIEFS.

Yesterday morning at 7 o'clock the guests of Hotel Maryland and cottages were aroused from slumber by the melody of Easter carols sung through the halls and among the bungalows by a male quartette. A pretty scene was presented in the lobby by a happy family of white rabbits and a large mother hen and brood of white chicks.

A general street-cleaning crusade has been in progress for several days past and many of the thoroughfares, which have been in a rather dilapidated condition since the rains, are now putting on a better appearance. Gutters have been flushed out and rubbish has been carted away. In spite of the heavy rains of the past few weeks the streets have suffered but little injury and the highways are all in the best of condition.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Mrs. Norman Bridge of South Grand avenue achieved a social success yesterday with a Norwegian luncheon given in honor of Mrs. William Stanton, Miss Charlotte Thomas and Miss Hannah Nevin, who with Mr. Stanton will sail for Europe April 23, for an extended trip abroad. The guests, fourteen in number, were served at small tables and the center table was beautifully decorated with nasturtiums and wood ferns. The informality of the function was one of its chief charms, and the service was a la Norway. Present were Mmes. R. J. Dobbins, F. H. D. Banks, Oliver Picher, James F. Moore, John W. Gay, Jr.; J. H. Holmes, Colin Stewart, Mumfords Lassieur and Miss Sanborne.

Whittenmore, Charles Mattison and Robert Ford. In the Japanese dance those dancing will be Miss Florence Bland, Miss Jessie Thomas and Miss Irene Grosse. The affair is given for the benefit of the Emergency League.

SOUTH PASADENA WATER.

New Wells Which Will Supply the Eastern Part of Town Are Completed.

SOUTH PASADENA, March 30.—The Merengo Water Company, which supplies the eastern section of South Pasadena with water, has just completed two new wells. For the last week or two testing pumps have been at work and the wells have been pronounced in good order. An almost unlimited supply of water can now be procured. It is interesting to note as showing the growth of South Pasadena in the last two years, that the number of consumers of this water has increased from 125 to 375.

Several cottages are being built on Fremont and Greselia by the Taylor Real Estate Company. Mr. Ballis is also putting up a new store building on Mission street.

A St. Andrews Club is being organized at the Episcopal Church under the leadership of the Rev. Mr. Henstridge. The Episcopal Easter service is to be held in the temporary church. The decorations are to consist of callas and smilax. Rev. Hibbard will preach in the morning and Rev. Henstridge in the afternoon.

In the second week after Easter a large number of young people expect to be confirmed at the Episcopal Church.

The Methodist Episcopal Church is to hold a sacred concert tomorrow evening. Mr. Abraham Miller will furnish the programme. The church is to have palms and lilies for its chief Easter decorations.

The bi-weekly musicale at the Hotel Capitola took place tonight. Andreast's Orchestra rendered several selections.

Mrs. Heath of Vermont street gave a luncheon to some of the ladies in the neighborhood Friday.

BLAST ROAD OUT OF ROCK.

Workmen Trying to Make Catalina Ways Storm Proof—Light Tackle Club Records.

AVALON, March 30.—The familiar sound of heavy blasting is again heard on the island. The winter storms made sad havoc of some of the beach drives, which were constructed last spring and summer, and in many places they were almost entirely obliterated. The Santa Catalina Island Company is rebuilding between Avalon and Pebbly Beach, and is endeavoring to make a storm-proof road this time by blasting into the solid rock. Exposed places will be rip-rapped with heavy stone.

The Light Tackle Club has had three accessions to its membership this week, but none got higher up the scale than the bronze button. Merrill K. Waters of New York won with a twenty-seven-pound albicore; Dr. B. F. Olden of San Francisco won with a twenty-two-pound yellowtail, and Edward Y. Weber of Stanford, Ct., won with a twenty-six-pound yellowtail.

Raymond Nestell has purchased the little pleasure launch San Diego from Jim Gardner.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Stewart Tupper and Misses Jennie and Frances Tupper of Winnipeg are guests at Hotel Metropole.

Robert M. Strauss and Dr. E. Linton of Nome, Alaska, are enjoying the fishing at Catalina.

Dr. A. S. Shorb and family arrived today, and will occupy their cottage for a time.

The best modern sunny flats, cottages and tents are for rent by J. Albert, opposite Pacific Hotel, Avalon, Catalina Island.

JOY IS TOLD IN LONG BEACH.

SUCCESSFUL IS THE HARBOR-CHARTER JUBILEE.

Superb Parade Is Viewed by Crowd and Various Events of the Day Attract the Attention of Many Visitors—Horse Races and Auto Contests Are Features.

LONG BEACH, March 30.—Nature could not have devised a fairer day for celebration purposes than the one which dawned today for the Long Beach Harbor-Charter Jubilee exercises. The sun came up bright and warm and the white airy costumes of the sightseers and the visitors all betokened a touch of summer sunshine and merry making. The postponement of the celebration from last Saturday proved fortunate, as it gave an opportunity for more elaborate display.

The visitors from various parts of the country began arriving early, but Long Beach was astir long before that, giving finishing touches to the decorations, which were the most elaborate of any heretofore attempted. Pine avenue as far north as Sixth, was ablaze with flags, pennants, and streamers, and Second, First and American avenue were not a whit behind.

The crowds gathered rapidly, and by 10 o'clock the sidewalks along the line of parade were a living panorama of color, ever changing and never still for a moment. The parade was the finest ever witnessed in Long Beach, not so much in length as in the excellence of displays, novel trade, mercantile and civic floats, and the fine showing made by the school children, the quaintest of which was the design of the Daisy-avenue school, where clustered in the center of the white petals were five Titan-haired children, whose sun-kissed locks formed the stamen of the Daisy. Co. H, Seventh Regiment, N.G.C., turned out its full strength, and were an attractive part of the parade. Decorated floats and flower-trimmed autos added to the effect of a beautiful pageant.

The awards of gold medals for best displays as made by Judges S. L. Lent, Frank McCutcheon, and Stewart Goodsell were: Best decorated auto, Y.W.C.A.; best civic representation, Lady Maccabees; best school display, Daisy-avenue; mercantile display, Cash Store; trades display, Holloway Plumbing Company; best labor display, Lewis & Clarke grading outfit; best decorated one-horse rig, Mrs. Jotham Bixby, Jr.; best two-horse vehicle, A. M. Pike; best ladies' saddle rider, Miss Irma Heath; best gentleman saddle rider, Gerald Counts; best comic outfit, "Lie, Cheat and Steal Real Estate Co.;" best unnamed exhibit, Street Superintendent Taylor, his white hay burner, Felix and the street department outfit; best band, Majestic. The High School won the $15 prize for the best float, Messrs. Hart & Leroy, $15 for best auto, and the fire department $15 for best vehicles.

In the afternoon there was an exhibition of horseflesh and some fine stock was shown in many gaits. H. F. Reinohl took first honors for best surrey horse; A. M. Pike, best carriage team; L. H. Moore, gent's driving horse, Miss Bessie Watkyns, ladies' saddle horse, and A. M. Pike, gent's saddle horse.

At 1:30 o'clock p.m. the afternoon's programme took place at the Auditorium, where 3000 people gathered. Dr. L. A. Perce presided, and the Royal Italian Band furnished the music. An address of welcome by Mayor F. H. Downs was responded to by Assemblyman N. W. Thompson, who had charge of the charter during its passage through the Legislature. Speeches were also made by John F. Craig, head of the shipbuilding plant, and Judge Wilbur of Los Angeles.

At 3 o'clock a series of auto races was given on the beach, and the bluff from Locust avenue to Alamitos was lined with spectators, while thousands more were strung along the strand from the pier to Devil's Gate. The results, over a two-mile course, were:

Motorcycle—Won by Mort Eaton; J. Boyd, second.

Two-cylinder, free for all, auto—Won by Barton & Ravencroft's Buick; Auto Vehicle Company's Tourist, second.

Auto, twenty to thirty-horse-power—Won by C. B. Bellows's Olds; C. L. Heartwell's Tourist, second.

Auto, thirty to forty-horse-power—Won by Jotham Bixby's Pope-Hartford; C. E. Heartwell's Rambler, second.

The festivities closed tonight with a ball at the Auditorium and a free illustrated lecture at the Tabernacle.

A neat incident of the day was the presentation of a handsome gold badge to Rev. W. J. Speers for unselfish and valuable services as chairman of the Craig fund and charter mass meetings, at which important progress was made in accomplishing the two objects which today's jubilee celebrated.

The annual meeting of the United Presbyterian Church shows that organization to be flourishing and leading the presbytery in benevolences. Messrs. Willey, Bell and Moore were elected trustees, and Will McCoy and John Kennedy, elders.

Easter Sunday will be generally observed with special services in all the local churches, and a special Easter concert at the Auditorium by the Roya Italian Band.

DIES IN GARDEN.

End Comes Suddenly to Foreman Heffner of the Carnation Company at Redondo.

REDONDO, March 30.—O. F. Heffner, foreman at the Redondo Carnation Gardens, died suddenly late this afternoon in the flower fields. Heart disease is given as the cause of death. First report had it that he had met with foul play or had committed suicide, but an examination by Undertaker Cates, City Marshal Maxey and Deputy Marshal Simpson proved that he had died from natural causes. The body was taken in charge by the undertaker.

Heffner apparently was in good health and spirits at 4 o'clock, when he was seen by other gardeners on the grounds. About an hour later his dead body was found near a hydrant. He had been watering some plants and seemingly had dropped dead just after turning off the water. A search of his clothing and of his room proved that he had not been robbed. About $70 in cash was found on his person and in his room, where, with other gardeners, he had been "batching."

The man had been ailing for some time. Only a short time before his death he remarked to a companion that he did not care whether he lived or died. He had been in Redondo about six months, coming from Denver. Nothing is known here of his relatives.

VETERANS MANY LEAVE HOME.

UNDER THE NEW PENSION LAW THEY FEEL INDEPENDENT.

With Fifteen or Twenty Dollars Per Month Assured They Feel Confident in Securing Honorary Discharges and Facing the World Again—Pass by "Soft" Drinks in "Dry" Canteen.

SOLDIERS' HOME, March 30.—It is not unusual for veterans, after receiving their quarterly pension in March of each year, to flock forth in quest of employment throughout the State, and many have, as usual, taken furloughs; but to absolutely dissever their connection with the home in great bodies, as shown in general orders No. 9, just published, is remarkable. It is learned, however, that the list comprises quite a number who are at or are nearing the 70 and 75-years age limit, which under the recent act of Congress assures them a pension of $15 and $20 a month. With this income, and with frugal habits, they expect to support themselves in independence outside the home.

Following are the names of these veterans, who "upon their own application and representation that they are able to support themselves outside the home," are honorably discharged: Daniel Allen, Curtis R. Armstrong, James P. Barker, Dominick Barnholtzer, Seth W. Beals, George Bell, C. D. Bidgood, Olli S. Brewer, Joseph Burnham, W. T. Burton, D. Callaghan, Robert Campbell, Tallas F. Carraway, J. Chapman, M. L. Cleveland, Harmon Cook, Owen Creason, J. M. Decker, Dominick Donahay, Amasa S. Fanning, G. A. Gillett, F. A. Goodwin, Fred Gunter, Jeptha Hart, J. S. Hunter, N. P. Jacques, Cornelius Kelly, Edmund Latour, J. C. Lawson, J. H. Livingston, Milton McGrew, James F. McKenny, Alex P. Minnick Edwin W. Moffit, P. H. Montgomery P. J. O'Boyle, J. R. Patterson, James P. M. Rainbow, C. D. Reeder, J. V. Singleton, E. D. W. Shekell, H. R. Soxman, O. P. Spencer, Rudolph Stotsberg, John Strevey, A. R. Stuart, S. P. Weatherman, Thomas Weaver, Frederick Willie.

PASS BY "SOFT" DRINKS.

Immediately after the taking effect of the act of Congress forbidding further sale of beer in the home canteen, the management of this branch established a lunch counter with arrangements for "soft" drinks in that establishment, in the hope of inducing veterans to remain in camp and be good. It was of no use, however. The old boys gave the place the cold stare and passed it by. Where the daily receipts formerly averaged $110 to $125, the average during the past month has been less than $10 per day. So the officers of the home concluded to abandon the "temperance canteen," as the boys had named it.

The canteen adjoins the home store and restaurant, and receipts in the latter place show a marked depreciation. This is accounted for by the fact that on pension and other pay days veteran patrons of the canteen were in the habit on being paid, of first laying in supplies of tobacco in quantities and of purchasing many articles in the furnishing goods line before turning their attention to beverages. Now need for the latter takes them to town and their trade is lost to the home store.

HOME BRIEFS.

The Easter exercises in the Soldiers' Home Chapel are to include an excellent programme of music. The chapel is profusely decorated under the direction of Mrs. O. H. La Grange.

POMONA MAY VOTE AGAIN.

City Not Discouraged by Failure of Bond Issue to Carry—Mrs. Cathcart Dead.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

POMONA, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Believing that the $35,000 bonds for a new City Hall, which were voted upon at Thursday's election, were defeated because the amount proposed was deemed insufficient for the present needs of Pomona, by many voters here, a committee composed of leading local business men discussed with the Board of City Trustees, this afternoon, the proposition of calling an election to vote on a $60,000 issue. It is believed that bonds for this amount would be voted, as a creditable and commodious municipal building is considered one of the city's necessities.

PIONEER DIES.

The funeral of Mrs. Robert Cathcart, who died of heart failure at her home on San Antonio avenue yesterday, will be held at the family home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. H. L. Badger officiating. Deceased came here in 1876 and the old Cathcart ranch on San Antonio avenue has long been a land mark.

Mrs. Anna Dreher-Dudderar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Dreher of this city, is in Northern California on a tour of official visitation. Mrs. Dudderar is grand worthy matron of the Eastern Star in this State.

CITRUS MEN HAPPY.

Citrus fruit growers in this locality are jubilant over prospects for good markets henceforth. Lemons are in demand as well as oranges and there is also a good inquiry for all citrus groves for sale.

Charles Lathrop, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Lathrop, who has been spending some time recuperating his strength in Arizona, has returned and is much improved.

FARMERS HEAR LECTURER.

Monrovia-Duarte Club Enjoys Talk on Raising Poultry—High School Wins Debate.

MONROVIA, March 30.—Yesterday was one of the most successful days in the history of the Monrovia-Duarte Farmers' Club. The attraction of the meeting, which was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Jacobs on Violet avenue, was the presence of Mrs. O. H. Burbridge. The meeting opened with a solo by Miss Margaret Scarborough and a piano selection by Miss Blanch Guthrie, after which Mrs. Burbridge was introduced, and talked on the successful breeding and raising of poultry.

MONROVIA WINS DEBATE.

Monrovia was the winner in the joint debate last evening at the Ivy schoolhouse with Sierra Madre. The High School auditorium was filled with citizens and class spirit ran high. Sierra Madre was represented by Fred Hatfield and Harold Costello, and Monrovia by Lewis Black and Robert Bultmann. At the conclusion of the debate the judges were unanimously in favor of Monrovia, and awarded the first undivided honors to Lewis Black.

CURRENT EVENTS DISCUSSED.

Current-event day at the Saturday Afternoon Club drew out a good attendance. Dr. Eleanor Seymour delivered a very helpful address along the lines suggested by Prof. Leslie on "Educational Day." Next Saturday the annual election of officers will be held.

Postoffice Inspector Wilson has been in Monrovia, looking over the affairs of the local office, and he put his "O.K." on the record of Postmaster Anson.

MONROVIA NOTES.

W. A. Clark and family, who have been spending the winter here, take their departure Monday for their home in Minneapolis.

The marriage of Miss Hazel Wilby to Frank Barnes of Maricopa, Ariz., is announced. Both bride and groom are the children of pioneer residents of Monrovia. They will make their home here during the summer.

It is possible that Trustee Holloway will tender his resignation as a member of the Board of Trustees at the meeting Monday evening. He is chairman of the board. The Trustees will appoint a successor until the vacancy can be filled by election.

Mrs. F. M. Pottenger entertained the P.E.O. of Monrovia and adjacent territory yesterday afternoon. Twenty-four were present. These officers were elected: President, Mrs. F. M. Pottenger; vice-president, Mrs. Caroline Rader; recording secretary, Miss Kate Spence; treasurer, Mrs. C. C. Bowerman; guard, Mrs. Kirk Lawrence; journalist, Mrs. Lawrence Wheeler; pianist, Mrs. Mabel Squires; baby member, Mrs. Pearl Thornton.

Chairman A. M. Johnson announces that all the trees and shrubbery for the adornment of the city park have been subscribed by individuals and clubs of Monrovia. Landscape Gardener Hosp has about completed his work, and in all probability next Saturday will be "Arbor Day" for Monrovia.

Misses Ida Shrode and Leora Smith delightfully entertained the members of the senior class at the Shrode home at Duarte this evening. The Monrovia guests chartered a big hay rack for the trip.

SANTA MONICA NOTES.

SANTA MONICA, March 30.—The Los Angeles-Pacific Electric has commenced the work of broad-gauging its tracks through this city. The start was made at Front street and the track gangs are working southward along Trolleyway. Ties are being distributed along the route through Ocean Park and Venice. These are of hard wood and have just arived on a Russian steamer from Japan.

Mrs. A. E. Jackson is visiting for several days with friends in Pasadena.

Mrs. J. Q. Adams of Chicago is here for a brief visit.

Miss Honor Sweet spent the week at her home, having come over from Shorb, where she is attending school.

The City Park Commission is continuing the permanent improvement of Linda Vista Park northward to the mouth of the cañon. This park is the narow strip lying between the electric tracks on Ocean avenue and the bluff overlooking the sea. When the city expanded a few months ago another long stretch was added to the park. This is to be protected by a rustic fence.

EXPLOSION SCARES VENICE.

VENICE, March 30.—The explosion of a gasoline stove in the Hargrave shoe shop on Trolleyway, near Windward avenue, gave Venice a scare this evening. There was so much smoke that it looked for a time as if the big roller skating rink was doomed, but the fire department was prmopt in responding to the alarm and worked with such effect that the total damage will not exceed $500. The greater part of this falls upon the T. V. Cooney plumbing shop which adjoins the shoe shop.

The Venice of America Band is arranging a little concert tour. Hollywood, Pasadena and near-by cities will be visited.

The recently-organized Business Men's Association of Ocean Park has changed its name to the Business Men's Association of Venice and has entered upon a career of usefulness to the beach. R. A. Myers is chairman of the board of directors, and S. E. Huff is president of the organization.

MORE SETTLERS THERE.

Going Into Perris Valley and Establishing Permanent Homes.

RRIS, March 30.—Perris Valley looked prettier than it does to- and the prospects for the future seemed brighter. For several the crops have been good and prospects for another good season excellent. The acreage sown to this season is perhaps not so as usual, owing to the steady but the grain that is sown, not of a very rank growth, is looking well, and a few warm days will make a wonderful change.

It is not, however, the grain crop alone that gives hope and encouragement to the people of the valley. There are other conditions here that lead on toward prosperity. Many new settlers are coming into the valley and establishing permanent homes; indeed, the real estate records show more sales of property here in the past six months than during the past fifteen years. Some property which two years ago sold at $10 per acre has since sold at $40 per acre.

With the new settlers and the new capital and energy that they bring with them, come more wells and pumping plants, and more fields of alfalfa, which insure stability to the wealth and prosperity of a community. Perris is at last waking up from a long sleep.

PERRIS POINTS.

J. H. Woodford, who recently bought the Harford alfalfa ranch, has just completed the installation of a fine 32-horse-power gasoline engine with a No. 7 centrifugal pump, in place of the steam plant formerly in use. He now pumps 120 inches of water instead of seventy-five, as before, and at a much less cost.

Dr. J. W. Reese, for a number of years a resident of Perris, has shown his faith in this country by recently making a number of investments here. Although already the owner of several fine ranches here, he has recently added to his holdings by the purchase of another ranch of 320 acres south of town, which he will develop into a hog and cattle ranch, also two houses and lots in town, and a number of vacant town lots.

Charles E. Gyger and Miss Ada Nelson, both of this place, were quietly united in marriage at Riverside last week by Rev. O. N. Glim, pastor of the Lutheran Church, much to the surprise of their many friends here. Mr. Gyger was the first Santa Fé agent at this place but of recent years has devoted his time to real estate.

ELSINORE.

ELSINORE, March 30.—A. Mojonier of Santa Ana, who, with his wife, has spent some time at the Hotel Bundy, has bought of J. B. Mullen two fifty-foot lots, with improvements of one three-room house, on Prospect street. The consideration was $600.

H. A. Varble of the Press of Riverside, is here this week, taking a dozen or so pictures of Elsinore and vicinity for use in illustrating a special number of that paper.

Donald Clayton has been called to Elsinore by the serious illness of his mother, Mrs. John Clayton.

H. H. Hunt has returned from a trip to the northern part of the State.

Orville Jackson of Los Angeles is here visiting his mother.

George Peck of Pasadena is visiting his father, Capt. L. B. Beck.

Among arrivals at the Lakeview are: Mrs. J. R. Hubbard, Hollywood; J. S. Heath and wife, South Pasadena; J. B. Harvey and wife, Pasadena; C. B. Covert, San Diego; Dr. H. Hill, Miss Edith Hill, Redlands; E. H. Grant, A. M. Ellis, Joseph C. Moffet, Los Angeles.

Among Bundy Hot Springs arrivals are: R. W. Thomas, F. W. Thompson, Los Angeles; J. C. Wilson, San Bernardino; Frank M. Wilson, Salt Lake City; Mrs. Charles R. Rowett, Long Beach; Mrs. H. C. Benedict, Mrs. H. M. Oltar, Auroe, Ill.

A. E. Stiles has returned from Long Beach. He is planting a large tract of land in Warm Spring Valley to eucalyptus trees.

Feeling Against Japanese and Celestials Running High in Vicinity of Crackerjack—Mine Owners Insist on Law and Order—Many Arrests Probable—Woman is Held Up.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN BERNARDINO, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch] Sheriff Ralphs and Under Sheriff McNabb left tonight for the Crackerjack mining district, armed with warrants for the arrest of W. E. Beck, A. J. Wilson, John Rogers, and twenty-three others, whose names are given as John Doe. All are charged with disturbing the peace of Mrs. Susan Dun, a restaurant keeper.

Back of the charge lies a exciting series of encounters, which resulted finally in the flight from Crackerjack of several Chinese cooks, one of whom was in Mrs. Dun's employ, the Mongolians being threatened with death should they ever return.

Anti-Japanese and Chinese feeling has been running high in a neighboring mining camp, and Mrs. Dun was warned by messenger to dispense with her Chinese cook. She sent back word that she was able to run her own business.

Twelve men, heavily armed, rode up to her restaurant. She met them rifle in hand and determination flashing from her eyes. Cowed by her show of fight, the raiders rode home, but returned several days later, augmented to twenty-six members, each armed.

As they approached the restaurant discharge of firearms was begun. Lee Chung met them at the door, his employer beside him, and he capitulated before superior numbers.

Given an hour to leave camp, the cook employed himself in packing up. As he fled a warning volley was fired into the air.

Crackerjack mine owners sympathize with Mrs. Dunn, and resent the interference of outside miners. They sent Constable W. A. Cates here to swear to a complaint and bring the Sheriff. The Sheriff will return next week with twenty-six prisoners probably.

KILLED BY TRAIN.

Frank Darrell was run down and instantly killed by a Salt Lake train near Glascow station, on the desert, yesterday. He was a track-walker, and had left Otis on a railroad bicycle to make his last inspection trip, expecting to resign today, and go to Los Angeles, where he was to open a barber shop. He was warned that a train was due, and the train was then in sight. He declared he could take care of himself, and started down the line. The engineer vainly attempted to stop the train. Darrell's skull was crushed, his right leg cut off and every bone in his body was broken. The Coroner held an inquest this morning. The verdict was that death was caused by the victim's carelessness.

UPLAND.

UPLAND, March 30.—This town has been chosen as division headquarters for the Sunset Telephone Company, for the territory comprising the towns of Ontario, Pomona, Chino, Etiwanda, Cucamonga and Upland. Pomona was formerly headquarters, but owing to the fact that this is a more central location, the change was deemed advisable. H. Hansen, who has been "trouble shooter" for the company here for some months, has received a deserved promotion, and is now wire chief of the division.

Ernest Richmond, the lad, who was detected in the act of breaking and entering the shack at the Seventh-street Japanese camp, some weeks ago, pleaded guilty before the judge at San Bernardino, Monday, and is now held there, awaiting sentence, or a dismissal of the case against him.

Cashier Huntington of the First National Bank has purchased a lot on Euclid avenue, just south of Tenth street, and will build a handsome two-story residence thereon.

Up to this date the O. K. Exchange has shipped a total of 675 cars of fruit.

Dr. Van Wormer has sold his former property, on East Ninth street, to J. A. Haury, and the doctor has let the contract for a new two-story house, to be built of stone, in the new east side subdivision.

J. A. and E. H. Haury, brothers, have formed a partnership to engage in the general merchandise business.

SAILOR IS DROWNED.

VENTURA, March 30.—Fred Berges, a sailor of the steamer Tamalpais, was drowned from that vessel at Hueneme Wednesday, while the boat was discharging a cargo of lumber for use in the new board walk and wharf at Ormond Beach. In a stiff southwesterly wind the vessel broke her breast line and was about to change her moorings. At the same time a boat put out from her to bring her captain on board. There were three men in the boat, one of whom was Berges. There was but one pair of oars. One of the oars broke, and the boat was at the mercy of the waters. It turned turtle and the occupants were thrown into the water. After a severe struggle two of the men reached the shore, but the third, Berges, was drowned. He was a native of Norway and 40 years of age. The body has not yet been recovered.

Banker Donlon of Oxnard says that the report that the Oxnard factory would not operate this season is erroneous.

SEARCHLIGHT CELEBRATION.

Railroad Day Fixed for April 13—New Freight Tariff Booms Business.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SEARCHLIGHT (Nev.) March 29.—Railroad day for Searchlight, celebrating the completion of the Barnwell branch of the Santa Fé and the running of the excursion train from Los Angeles, has been definitely fixed for April 13. The main track is completed and only some work on the Y and general trimming up remains to be done. The Mine Operators' Association will take a prominent part in arranging for entertainment of visitors and will devote the greater part of the day to showing the visitors the mines. The Searchlight Mining and Milling Company has offered to serve luncheon at its mine. The programme of the day is to wind up with a big banquet. It is thought that a tent suitable to accommodate 500 people will be required. With electric arc lights, tables decorated with specimens of ore and the different green growths of the desert, and with the Searchlight orchestra stationed behind a bank of native palms, the affair is bound to be a great and novel success.

Agent Bailey of the Santa Fé road has received the new tariff of freight rates that will go into effect in a few days when that road begins regular operations to and from this point. It only refers to the additional charge over the present rate to Barnwell, from which point, twenty-six miles distant, the new branch has just been completed to Searchlight. The new ton rate on flour, grain and hay is $1.50, plus Barnwell rate, as against $8 before. New rate on coal, lumber and oil is $1. Ore, which formerly was $4, is now to be $1. It is the agent's opinion that the decreased freight rates will result in developing this town and its tributary country in a remarkable degree, and the most immediate effect will be in ore shipments, as a number of mines have been holding back their ore on the dumps awaiting the completion of the road, and many others have kept back the output of their mines awaiting the certainty of cheaper transportation.

MINING NOTES.

W. W. Dunbar, attorney of this place, by the merest scratch luck recently located a valuable prospect in the new copper district in the Santa Maria Mountains, ninety miles south of Needles. An old man had abandoned it, as many others have abandoned similar properties, by reason of the country's isolation and lack of transportation, but while in Oregon he heard of the revival of the district and sent a party down to relocate. His party arrived on the ground only to find Dunbar laying on the last stones of his final monument. With Mr. Dunbar is associated Frank Wardlaw, cashier of Searchlight Bank and Trust Company.

The El Dorado Mining and Milling Company, in cross-cutting at a depth of 200 feet, found a fine three-foot ledge, passed that a few feet and is now working in another. This bears out the surface indications of three or more parallel veins, which promise to merge into one large ore body at depth. The property adjoins the Silver Legion, which already has a dump estimated at 1000 tons of an average value of $40 to the ton. The shipping charge from that district to Needles smelter has been about $40, but with the completion of the Santa Fé to this point, this will be reduced about one-half.

Senator Henry E. Carter of the Searchlight Mining and Milling Company, and his associates, President George I. Meyers and Vice-President H. C. Lichtenberger, were in consultation here this week with reference to improvements at the mine. Probably the most important addition will be a steam hoist, which will supplant the gasoline engine now in use. The company has two seventy-horse-power boilers, with which to generate power not only for the hoist, but for other purposes. A Cameron sinking pump, having a capacity of 200 gallons per minute, will be installed. This all means that the company is making preparations to do extensive development, principally sinking. Changes are to be made in the cyanide plant and in many other respects will the general efficiency and capacity of the entire plant be added to and improved. This property operates a ten-stamp mill and is ranked as the second or third best producer in this district.

The Parallel mine, on the flat just west of town, has cut into a fine body of broken ledge matter in cross-cutting from the 100-foot level of a new shaft, situate 600 feet north of the old workings. This new ore was encountered first about four feet below the surface and has maintained an average value of better than $20 to the ton in gold.

At the Santa Barbara, the most westerly active property on the flat, and just beyond the Wyoming-Searchlight, all is bustle and activity. Superintendent Taylor recently returned from the Coast, where he secured a fifteen-horse-power hoist, and other paraphernalia, preparatory to extensive development. The hoist is now on the ground, and the gallows frame erected, so that the new order of work will start up most any day. When work was stopped a few weeks ago, incident to installing the new machinery, the cross-cut from the 100-foot level was in ledge matter, the best of which assayed over $100.

Some time ago a number of prominent men of Needles, Cal., sent a prospector by the name of Smith into the Eldorado mining district on a grub stake. He secured a group of claims north of the Techticup, and just south of the Vanina and Howe property. The minor work has shown such favodable results that a company has been formed to thoroughly exploit it, known as the Bardwell Gold Mining Company. Walter Bardell is the president, and a Mr. Butler, head of the Needles Mercantile and Trust Company, is vice-president.

The local ice business has been sold to the Searchlight Ice and Cold Storage Company, and by this change the Murphy Water, Ice and Light Company of Needles will supply Searchlight with ice through the local company. The ice-making plans of the Searchlight Development Company will, for the present, be used solely for refrigerating purposes, and this part has been more than doubled in capacity. The demands on the local plant have lately grown so rapidly as to make imperative, at least as a temporary expedient, this coöperation with Needles plant.

The Big Six Company, on the flat, has struck water at a depth of 198 feet, and Superintendent Wilson has called a meeting to decide either on installation of pumps or lateral development.

Agent G. A. Bailey has been ordered to prepare to move to Searchlight. He has been notified to check out of Barnwell today, the 29th, and to report here tomorrow ready for business.

STAGNATION AT PANAMA EXISTS.

BUSINESS MEN ASK CONGRESS FOR RELIEF.

Fruits Expected from Building the Canal Prove to Be of Dead Sea Variety—Uncle Sam's Commissary Stores Play Havoc With Trade of Local Merchants.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PANAMA, March 22.—When Secretary Taft reaches the isthmus on his present trip he will be presented with a memorial by the business men of Panama. In this memorial he will be asked to recommend to the Congress of the United States a measure that will provide for the payment to the republic of Panama, beginning next year, the $250,000 annuity fixed in the canal treaty, to begin in 1912. Their reasons for such a request will be that the commissaries established by the United States are crippling the commerce of the country to such an extent that the merchants cannot live, and that if the Panama government can commence drawing the $250,000 annuity, the present 10 per cent. ad valorem duty will be taken off, thus enabling the independent stores to meet the competition of the United States. There is no question that the business of the cities of Panama and Colon is stagnated. The fruits of increased business expected, by reason of the advent of the canal, have turned into the Dead Sea variety. Good sanitation, nicely paved streets and a bountiful supply of water do not bring returns in dollars and cents, say the merchants, and they are crying for relief.

Lengthy discussions are going on in the columns of the local daily press over the right or wrong of the Tivoli Hotel—United States property—in taking transient guests. One paper advocates the sale of the gambling privilege by the government, with a corresponding decrease in the import charges, as a partial solution of the difficulty. The commissary stores of the commission deal in practically everything, perfumery, plated ware, wearing apparel, and, in fact, a general department store line. All of this, amounting to nearly $500,000 a month, comes into the country free of duty and with special freight rates on the government owned ships. A comparative list of prices does not show that in every commodity the canal commissaries are a whit lower priced than the general stores, but the system of issuing coupon books to employés, together with free transportation for their purchases from the commissary to their home station, is the attractive feature of buying from Uncle Sam.

Probably the hardest blow struck the commerce of Panama and Colon was when the general feeding order was issued by the canal authorities. The laborers formerly bought their food supply from the small local dealers along the line of the canal, who in turn bought from the wholesaler at Colon and Panama. The feeding order practically wiped out an annual commerce of $5,400,000, and has left the merchants with heavy stocks on hand and money outstanding, much of which is slow of collection if not doubtful.

According to reports which come to the isthmus Secretary Taft is not inclined to be as liberal with the Panamanians as in the earlier days of their being, as a nation. He will not, it is said, hear to the closing of the Hotel Tivoli to transient trade, as it can be shown him that having a place to stop is attracting hundreds of visitors to the isthmus who would never come under the former inadequate hotel facilities. It is an open question, however, if Secretary Taft can successfully defend the special privileges in freight rates which the commissaries enjoy, and which, together with immunity from import duties, free water, free lights, no rent and the coupon system, enables them to practically shut out competition for the trade of the canal workers.

There is no devisable system that can prevent people other than canal employés from getting their supplies from the canal commissaries, and the Panamanians argue that in the bargain entered into when signing the canal treaty, though not especally expressed, they are entitled to the natural increase in business following so huge an enterprise. This they feel they are not getting, and they hope to explain matters so that Secretary Taft will see them partly from a Panama standpoint.

PUTS GUN IN GAME.

BAKERSFIELD, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] H. G. Morrow, of Oakland, right of way agent for Standard Oil Company, and deputy sheriff of Alameda county, was today arrested and fined $50 for gun work in a poker game here last night. Morrow, a prominent agent for the Standard Oil Company has been engaged for the past two months in securing right of way for the new McKittrick pipe line. Yesterday he finished his work, recorded his deeds and started on a spree.

At a late hour he entered a poker game, and finding he had an inferior hand, drew a revolver and started raking in his opponents chips at the same time. Other players sprang at him, and in the fight a gun was discharged twice without resulting in an accident. Morrow left the saloon and was not found until this afternoon, when a warrant was being sworn against him, he was brought before a justice of the peace and fined $50. Morrow offered heavy bribes to local papers to maintain secrecy concerning the affair, but his tenders were refused.

Foul Odor of Indigestion, Smoking, Eating or Drinking Stopped at Once with Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Trial Package to Prove It Sent Free.

Bilious breathers, onion eaters, indigestion victims, cabbage consumers, smokers, drinkers and those with gas on the stomach are in a class all by themselves, distinguished by a powerful bad breath.

They all breathe, and as they breathe, they whiff out an odor which makes those standing near turn their heads away in digust. The pitiable part of it is that these victims do not realize what a sickening thing a bad, offensive breath is to others.

Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of gases and odors. It absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will put a stop to your bad, offensive breath, and to your belchings, whatever the cause or source, because the charcoal quickly absorbs all noxious, unnatural odors and gases.

If you suffer from indigestion and belch gas as a result, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will absorb all the gas and make you stop belching.

If on getting up in the morning you have such a bad, bilious breath that you can almost smell it yourself, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will get rid of it for you quickly.

If you have been smoking or chewing, or have been eating onions or other odorous things, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath pure and sweet.

Charcoal is also the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood—every particle of poison and impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified. You will feel clean inside.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart & Co., 93 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

RECEIVE THEIR TROPHIES.

Winners in Interscholastic Field Meet Honored in Assembly Room at U.S.C.

Winners in the interscholastic field meet, which was held yesterday on Bovard field, received their trophies last evening in the assembly room of the University of Southern California. In addition to awarding the prizes a varied programme was carried out, and college and high-school students attended in such numbers that even standing room was at a premium.

The entertainment was given under the auspices of the U.S.C. faculty and began with a reception to visiting athletes and students at 7 o'clock. The Reception Committee consisted of Mrs. Lucy Best, dean of women; Misses Gertrude Mallory, Maud Wilson, Hazel Cook, and Messrs. R. E. Shulz, Kester Soule, Edwin Cooper and Walter Bridwell.

Later, in the assembly hall, musical selections were given by Miss Pauline Fredenburg, Miss Larkey and Walter Bridwell, and a few athletic "stunts" were performed by students.

The stein for the best all-around athlete was presented to Munn of the Oakland team. Don Goodwin received the trophies for the Los Angeles High School, and was almost loaded down with gifts. In addition to his individual badge, he carried away a banner given the relay winner, a banner for the winning team of the meet, and a large cup which has been won by this school now the third successive year.

A farce, "The Mouse Trap," was next presented by a number of students in the department of oratory. The cast, included Misses Maud Dawson, Lulu Abbott, Alberta Shartle, Lillian Pressman, Hazel Dell and Edwin Cooper.

PASADENA WINS DEBATE.

Crown City High School Orators Defeat Los Angeles Boys on Cuban Question.

Cuba will be annexed to the United States, if the question can be settled by a high school debate, and it was settled this way last night in a debate at the Woman's Clubhouse on Figueroa street between the Pasadena High School and the Los Angeles High School. The contest was one of the regularly scheduled events in the Southern California Debating League, which includes a dozen high schools in this end of the State.

A large and enthusiastic audience was present and the interest was keen, for the reason that the winner of the debate would have the chance to meet the Anaheim High School for the debating championship of the South.

The representatives of Pasadena were Frank Russell and Mortimer Hall, and of Los Angeles, Gordon Boller and Cecil Phillips. Pasadena had the affirmative side of the question. The judges were Prof. Colcord of Pomona, Judge Hutton of this city and Principal Clayton of the Long Beach High School. Pasadena was given 51 1-3 points, as against 48 2-3 for Los Angeles High.

During the time the judges were deliberating a short musical programme was given, and after the decision was announced there were refreshments and dancing.

FEAST AT MASONIC TEMPLE.

Past Matrons and Patrons of Order of Eastern Star Tendered Banquet. Interesting Speeches.

At the Masonic Temple last evening, a banquet was tendered to the Past Matrons and Patrons of the order of the Eastern Star of Los Angeles county. One hundred and fifty men and women who are prominent in Masonic and Eastern Star circles were present.

Dr. J. C. LeMasters was toastmaster. He first introduced Mrs. Abbie Krebs of San Francisco, Past Grand Matron of California, who responded to the toast, "Our Grand Patron;" Msr. Rontzahn responded to, "Our Masonic Home;" Miss Cora Hickman to "Our friends;" C. C. Logan, to "Eastertide;" Mrs. Anna C. Lyman to "The Order of the Eastern Star." Other speakers were Miss Alla Mitchell, Hon. C. C. Pierce, Mrs. Rosa Burns, E. R. Frazier and B. B. Cartwright.

A permanent organization of the past and present matrons of the Eastern Star was perfected. The officers are: President, J. C. LeMasters; Vice-President, Mrs. C. A. Rontzahn; Secretary, Miss Ella Mitchell, and Treasurer, Mrs. C. C. Pierce.

MEET OF HIGH SCHOOLS.

Oakland High School's track team will meet the team of the Los Angeles High School Thursday afternoon on Bovard field. As these are the teams which made the highest scores in the interscholastic meet yesterday in this city, an interesting contest will likely result. Oakland men meanwhile will spend a few days seeing the sights of Los Angeles and its environs.

TEMPLARS' LINE OF MARCH.

Prior to going to Temple Auditorium this afternoon to listen to an Easter sermon by Dr. Burdette, the line of march will be over the following route, starting from Masonic Temple, on Hill street, at 2 o'clock: Hill to Fourth, Fourth to Broadway, Broadway to First, First to Spring, Spring to Fifth, thence to Temple Auditorium.

BURGLARS STEAL GUN.

F. C. Donavan of No. 821 South Hope street reported to the police last night that burglars had stolen a revolver and several pieces of jewelry. The police found a knife in the screen, which the robbers cut, and this may serve as a clew.

Astonishing.
It's astonishing what profitable results are achieved by a very small expenditure for a "want" advertisement in The Times. The desire for anything can be gratified by the aid of a Times' "Liner," and at so small an expense that it isn't worth talking about. Convince yourself by a trial.

The Drama---Players, Playhouses, Gossip of the Stage.

TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

They're so scarce—real works of art—that you must take your hat off when one goes by.

This is only a vaudeville sketch by Mathew White, Jr., Also it is cursed with the name—"Stop, Look and Listen,' which would almost "queer" Hamlet

But the girl in it ——!

Her name is May Tully. She is more than an actress; somethinfg delicate and rare; a woman satirist; a vivisectionist of her own kind, of actorines.

Passing a little prologue, the Orpheum stage is set for a depot at the metropolis of "Sisquaw," one of those typical little 2x4 flag stations.

In an extremely ornate scarlet stage gown, draggling along a heavy suit case, and half dead with fatigue, comes May Tully. She's the stranded actress. Busted up company! Two hundred miles from New York! No ticket! She's "beating it" along the ties back to Broadway.

The sound of a little squeaky voice reciting "Sheridan's Ride" makes her stop. At the edge of the platform is littly Sally Green, in her nice little newly-ironed lawn dress and her little suit case. She is running away from home to be an actress. She heard about Mrs. Leslie Carter rehearsing a new part while waiting for a late train. So she's doing it, too.

"And Sheridan twen-ty miles away," says her little-girl voice.

"Make it twenty-three, my dear," says the voice behind her.

Oh Joy! Oh Joy! For Miss Sallie Green. Here is a read actorine in a red dress.

She comes creeping up and begs to be told all about Broadway. She tells with big eyes all about her "ambitions."

"I'm going on the stage," she says timidly.

"I've already went, says the actress mockingly.

The actress sits down on a trunk with a sigh, and takes out a cigarette case. "The Last of the Egyptians," she says, ruefully, throwing the box away.

"Is ambition the only thing that is taking you from the tall and uncut?" demands the worldly-wise one.

Miss Sallie Green wriggles around in her little white lawn dress. "We'll," she confesses, "there was an actor came to Sisquaw ——"

"Yeh, I suspected it."

"He said he would make an actress out of me if I would come to New York. He said if I would just come to New York the rest would be easy.'

"Huh, Huh! You'd be easy," said the actress sardonically.

Miss Sallie didn't like the tone of the woman in red; something about it didn't sound flattering. "Well, I guess I wouldn't be green as you think," she sputtered.

The actress blew out a meditative long wreath of smoke, and said drily, "No, I guess it would be indigo blue most of the time for yours."

"Jerry will be awfully sorry if I go on the stage?" said Miss Sallie pensively.

"Jerry will not be alone in his sorrow," retorted the actress.

Little Miss Innocent creeps a little near—a really touching picture. "What is it like to be an actress?" she says very softly.

"Hall bedroom,' says the actress briefly.

Little Miss Innocent draws back puzzled. "I—I don't think I understand."

The actress throws down her half-smoked cigarette. "Oh," she says mockingly. "Take from an actress her diamonds; take her country home; take her touring car; but don't take from her the 7x4 hall bedroom—three flights up."

Sallie Green looks at her puzzled. "But you wear such beau-tiful clothes," she says furtively, contrasting her own little lawn dress with the scarlet gown.

"Huh, huh," says the actress. "I happened to have this stage dress on when the constable seized my trunks."

"I know a piece from 'Romeo and Juliet' to say to the managers," confided the little country girl. "Would you say that one; or say one from 'Macbeth" or one from 'Hamlet?' "

"I hate to tell you what I think."

"Maybe I might recite all three," suggests the country maiden eagerly.

"Well—you might, if you're a good dodger."

Little Miss Green, in her anxiety to show she knows all about the stage, opens her suit case to get out the picture of Mrs. Leslie Carter, and all the contents tumble out in a rumpled heap."

"Oh, dear, oh dear," gurgles the actress in satirical delight, helping her pick up the things. "Here is Juliet's toothbrush. Here is Ophelia's little brush and comb. and here [she shrieks with laughter as a little white nighty unfolds itself] is Lady Macbeth's nightgown."

Sallie Green snatches the nighty away and looks so hurt that the woman in scarlet gently puts an arm around her shoulders.

"My dear little girl, you don't want to go to New York; leave the Great White Way alone. Stay in the tall and uncut timber."

The actress turns wearily away—cynical, good-hearted woman who has been burned in the flame. "You stay here and marry Jerry. Stay away from New York. If you go, you never can come back. Oh, I don't mean there will be anybody to hold you. But you will never be satisfied here again.

"The Big Town calls to you like a siren. It's the vampire of the nation. It takes you when you are young and hopeful and turns you away discouraged and broken. In New York every one comes with a toy balloon, eager to soar, and the man next you is always trying to puncture your balloon. New York, is the city of shattered dreams."

"Why, why! Isn't it fun to be an actress," wails little Sallie Green.

"Fun! Fun!" Oh, the heart-break that May Tully gets into that one word. She drags herself back to the trunk and buries her face in her hands, her big tawdry cheap-plumed hat nodding and shaking with her sobs.

"Why you are crying," falters little Sallie Green in a shocked voice.

"No I am laughing," sobs the actress. "I was just thinking how darn funny it is to go round the managers' offices day after day and have them tell you 'nothing doing.' It is such fun to get an engagement at last with some cheap company and have it bust up 200 miles from Broadway and have to beat it back along the ties."

The faith of little Miss Sallie Green begins to shake. "Do you know ALL about New York?" she falters.

"My dear haven't I ridden on the rubber-neck wagon?" The actress brushes the tears away and is her old sarcastic self again.

"Let's see if you really can act," she says cruelly. "We will imagine a situation that will probably be yours. You have left Sisquaw for ever and gone to New York and married this actor. (Miss Green's eyes begin to gleam,) You have been married about two years and he comes in to tell you coolly that he is tired of you and is going to leave. Now you act it."

Here occurs one of the touches of really delicate art. "We will call the man—Robert," says the actress as though she were hesitating over a name. Yet something—a delicate suggestion—makes you know that some man named Robert has acted a part in her real life drama; that he had something to do with the sobs of the scarlet girl on the trunk.

Little Miss Sallie Green wets her lips, smoothes her little white dress and begins, primly, "Robert, I have always loved you."

"Well, gee, get in some waterworks," protests the actress indignantly.

Sallie looks around, half frightened and tries again, "Please do not leave me, Robert. We, we have always had a good time."

"Not a bit like it," says the actress emphatically. "You sit down on that trunk and watch me."

And something makes you know in the piteous lines that follow that the actress is telling a story out of her bitterness. And the little girl in the white lawn on the trunk, weeping into her handerchief, seems to know it, too.

It is the old story of a deserted woman doing the most uesless thing in the world—begging a man, grown cold, to warm his love again. A wonderful drama in the space of three or four minutes.

"Stop; you shan't leave this room until you hear what I have to say.' She reminds him how she came to New York, just as little Sallie Green is going. Their life together. All her hopes turned to ashes.

It ends with a woman in scarlet, groveling in abandon of utter misery on the floor, her gawdy dress shaking with great heart-torn sobs—a woman deserted and scorned—the wreck of a toy balloon.

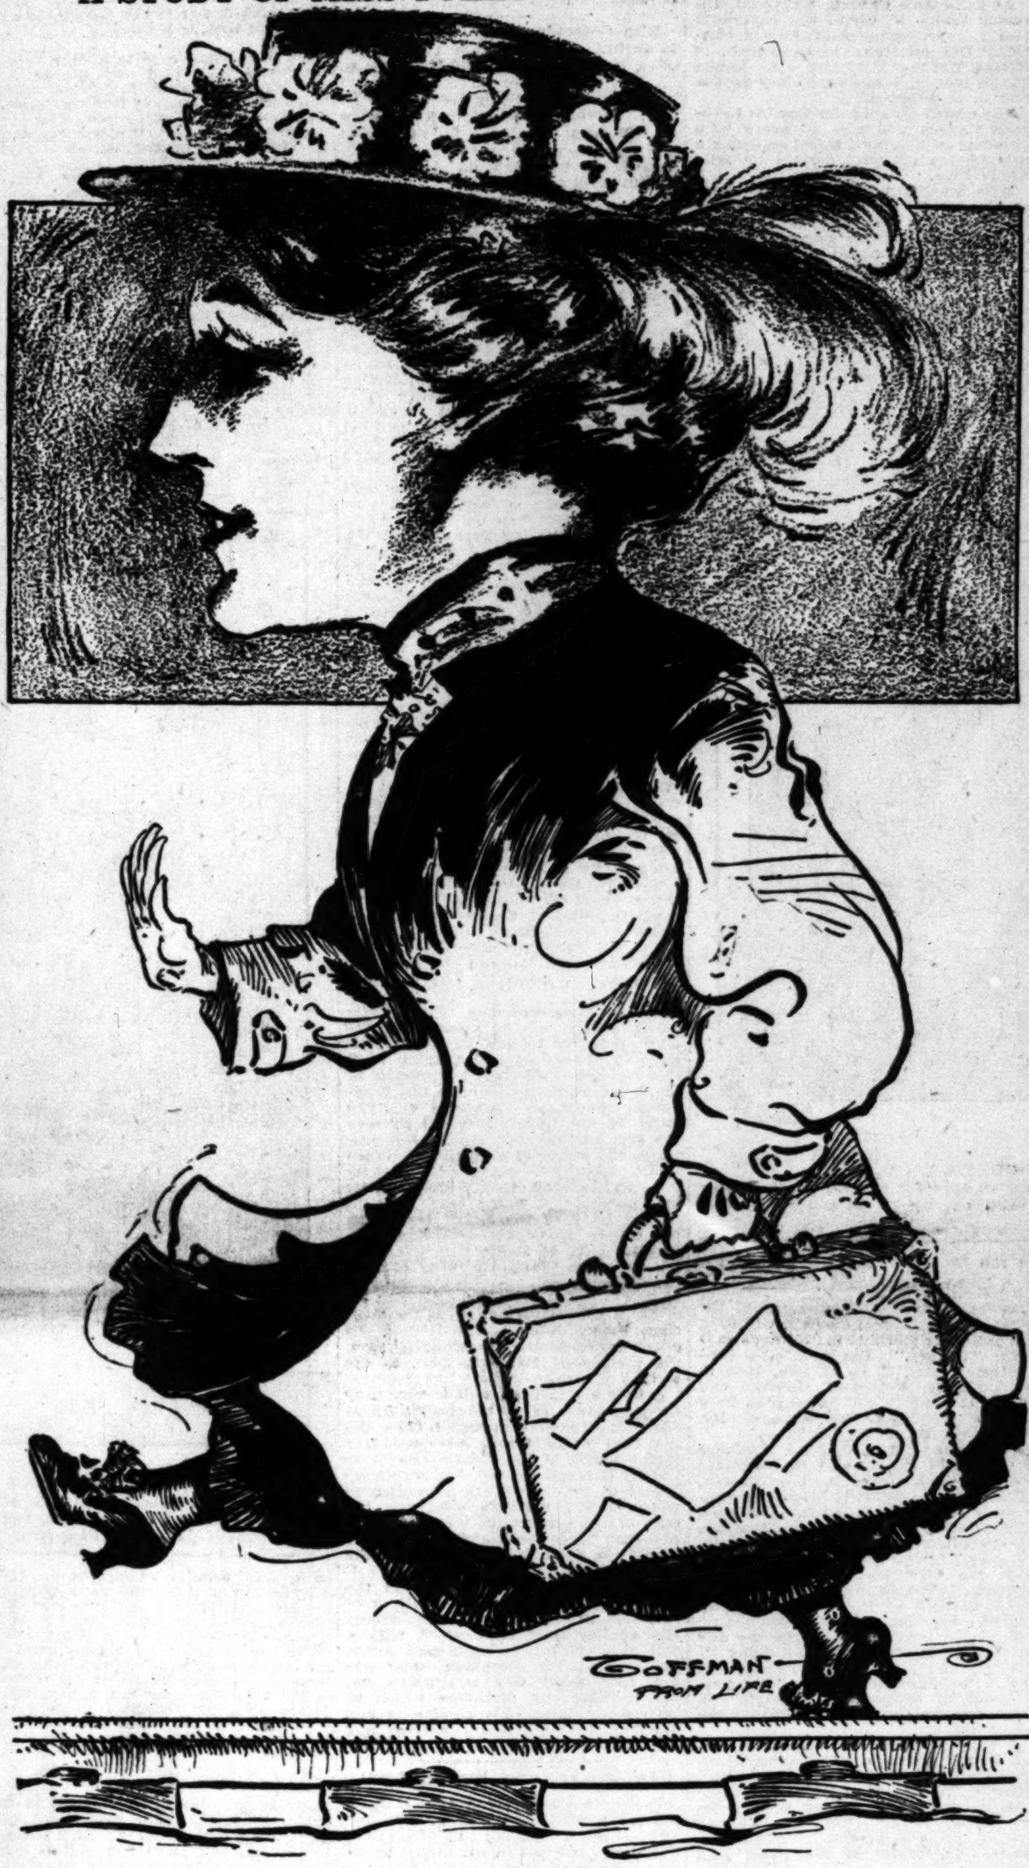
"There," she says practically, scrambling to her feet and brushing the dust off her red dress, "That's the way to hand it out to 'em."

The end of the play has in it one of the swift touches of satire that would fall so flat in less skillful hands.

"I don't want to go to New York," sobs little Sallie Green, throwing herself into Jerry's arms as he comes stalking dejectedly into the station. "You can have my ticket."

The actress grabs up the green ticket with a little screech of joy. "Gee! Me for Broadway!"

A STUDY OF MISS TULLY BY ARTIST COFFMAN.



May Tully, a bit of vital reality, who triumphs by honest self-expression.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

William Gillette's farce, "Because She Loved Him So," will be played this week by the Belasco stock company. The new character comedian of the Belasco, John Daly Murphy, will make his first appearance tomorrow night.

The play has been previously seen here. The efforts of the aged married couple to show their daughter the folly of quarreling with her young husband by simulating a bitter quarrel between themselves gives the dramatist many chances for ludicrous scenes, especially as the old people actually become serious in their make-believe fight, and for the first time in thirty years of married life find themselves saying unkind words to each other.

"Candida" will follow "Because She Loved Him So," with Richard Vivian in the Arnold Daly part.

"Parsifal" will continue at the Auditorium for the present week.

Dr. Pachmann's new play, "Under the Bear Flag," will commence its second week at the Burbank this afternoon.

The Uessems, who lead the Orpheum programme this week, are a pair of young European acrobats said to be very unusual performers in their line Bert Howard will appear with Leona Bland, in a musical sketch entitled, "Strange Boy." Raymond Finley and Lottie Burke present a scene that may be witnessed in almost any vaudeville theater after the Monday rehearsal with the orchestra. Sharp Brothers are singers who make a specialty of the songs of the South.

The holdovers are May Tully and her company, Bert Levy in his new pictorial act, the musical Olviottis and Johnny Johns, monologist.

A new vaudeville bill of interest will be presented at the People's Theater, on Main street, this week. Under Mr. Flournoy's management a variety of attractions have done much to popularize the house.

The Ellefords will return to the Grand Operahouse today for a week's engagement, presenting a story of love and romance in Wall street, entitled "The Plunger."

Dramagraphs.

A bill was introduced into the Illinois Legislature on March 12 seeking to prevent owners and managers of theaters from discriminating against any theatrical company in favor of another.

Anton Rubinstein's opera, "Damon," which was formerly so popular, has been resuscitated by the Dresden Opera. At its recent performance it met with a very warm reception, notwithstanding its outspoken anti-Wagnerian tendencies.

Fritzi Scheff has been seriously ill with peritonitis, following an attack of ptomaine poisoning, for the past week. For several days her life was in danger, but her physicians report her condition as much improved. She will not be able to appear again this season.

The London Lyceum, Sir Henry Irving's old theater, will be reopened on Easter Monday with a new romantic drama by Walter Howard, called "Her Love Against the World." The manager is Ernest Carpenter, who has theaters at Brighton and Bristol.

"Paris and New York," a three-act comedy by Francis de Croisset and Emanuel Arene, with Réjane in the principal role, was produced successfully in the Theater Réjane in Paris on March 16. The play deals with an American girl who barters her money for a French title.

Contracts have been signed with Rose Coghlan whereby she will open in the title role in "Mrs. Warren's Profession,' at the Willis-Wood Theater, Kansas City, on Easter Monday night. A company of well-known players has been engaged for her support. Miss Coghlan's tour will include all the cities of the Middle West and will extend to the Coast.

Virginia Harned has begun rehearsals of Dinchard's dramatization of "Anna Karenina," which was presented in Paris a few weeks ago. E. H. Sothern secured the American rights to the French version for Miss Harned. The Italian rights to the drama have been taken by Duse. Miss Harned will make her first appearance in the play about the middle of April at one of the Shubert New York theaters.

William Faversham, in Baltimore last week, effectively quieted a boxful of talkative auditors at Ford's Theater. Their conversation interfered with the play, and Mr. Faversham, unable to stand it any longer, made a speech at the close of the second act, in which he thanked the gallery boys for showing better breeding than the better dressed men on the first floor. The box was empty when the next act began.

Mrs. Leslie Carter has decided to resume her theatrical career without the direction of any manager except herself. She has engaged William Gray as her business representative, secured Du Barry from David Belasco, engaged a company and expects to make her oft postponed opening at Norfolk, Va., on April 1. Louis Myill is in charge of rehearsals and Charles Stevenson will be leading man. The route arranged extends to San Francisco and the tour will not end until July. Zaza, as well as Du Barry, will be used in the West.

Arturo Vigna, who has been conducting French and Italian operas at the Metropolitan Opera House for the last four years, has resigned, one year before the expiration of his contract. Mr. Conried accepted the resignation Wednesday. M. Bovy and Alfred Hertz, conductors, have been reengaged for next season. As announced exclusively in Musical America last week, negotiations are under way to engage Toscanini, the great Italian conductor, and Mr. Vigna's resignation at this time is viewed as having some bearing on these negotiations.

Joseph Hart last week signed a contract by which he obtained from Ned Wayburn the latter's interest in the Wayburn acts known as "The Futurity Winner," "The Dancing Daisies," "The Rain Dears" and "The Phantom Phlyers." Wayburn owned a one-fourth interest in the company known as Ned Wayburn's Attractions (Ind.) This Mr. Hart has taken over, and in conjunction with Wayburn's former partners, Louis Werba, Henry J. Goldsmith and Jean Schwartz, will continue to book the various acts. With the acts already under Hart's control and the new ones just added, Mr. Hart will have nineteen big turns to look after. He expects to add several more before next season.

Francis King Harte of Florence, Italy, administrator of the estate of Bret Harte, has taken steps, through his attorney, Louis Steckler, in an action to enjoin the presentation of "Salomy Jane," Paul Armstrong's dramatization of Bret Harte's story, "Salomy Jane's Kiss." Mr. Harte claims that he has never received the amount agreed upon between himself and Liebler & Co. for the rights of the story, and he objects to the introduction into the drama of two characters, Col. Starbottle and Yuba Bill, which appear in other stories by Bret Harte. Liebler & Co. claim that they have forwarded money to a London firm of attorneys and hold receipts for it. They also claim that the characters objected to are not from Bret Harte's stories, but are creations of the dramatist, but bearing names of Bret Harte's characters.

As might have been expected—no new journal is complete without one—the first number of the London Nation contains a jeremaid upon the condition of the stage. Most of it is mere rhetoric, but the writer hits upon one notorious evil when he says that "the salaries paid to the players are quite out of proportion to their talents. The laws of supply and demand do not fit the case, for abnormal influences are at work in London, and the players are the merest pawns in a game of monopoly. The speculators in a big way of theatrical business trade on the worship of actors and actresses. The highest bidder secures their services, and keeps them out of the hands of competitors. There are cases of quite mediocre players being paid a retaining salary which a colonial governor might envy. When the supply seems to be running short these speculators do not look about them for new talent, but strenuously endeavor to manufacture reputations. It is a foolish game and cannot last long, for the first manager who has artistic perceptions and knows good acting when he sees it may gradually build up a theater which will become a center of fine acting. He might have a hard struggle to convince the present worshipers of well-advertised players that there are other gods, but in the end he would conquer."

"The Great Conspiracy," the romantic melodrama which Madeleine Lucette Ryley has made out of the French of Pierre Berton, has just been produced at the Duke of York's theater in London, and seems to consist chiefly of pretty cheap theatrical intrigue. The interest centers in the efforts of the Emperor Napoleon to extract from the heroine, Jeanne Crisenoy, the truth about her missing husband, a conspirator, reported dead, but shrewdly suspected of being alive. John Hare and Irene Vanbrugh play the leading characters. Mr. Walkley writes in the Times: "Mr. Hare gets his chance of playing Napoleon, and makes the most of it. The scene of alternate bullying and finessing in the endeavor to extract the truth from Jeanne shows him at his best, easy, polished, abounding in 'the fine shades.' For the rest a slyly amorous, dryly sarcastic, wiry, neat and dapper Napoleon—in appearance and manner just what Napoleon would no doubt have been had he happened to resemble John Hare. Miss Irene Vanbrugh, as Jeanne, has some good scenes of mingled terror, coquetry and fun. Her most characteristic moment is that in which, having taken a pinch from the Emperor's snuffbox (supposed to be poisoned,) she bursts into an indignant tirade at being suspected of criminal conspiracy, and finds her sonorous periods interrupted by irresistible fits of sneezing."

The proprietors of some five hundred nickel theaters in Greater New York are in a very uneasy frame of mind just now on account of a concerted action on the part of the police, fire and health departments looking to the closing up of these places, most of which are located in stores. The form of entertainment consists of motion pictures and illustrated songs, and in a well-populated neighborhood, where a dozen or more performances can be given every day, the "theaters" are very profitable. A conference was held last week between the heads of the three city departments, and several prominent theatrical managers, and the question of doing away with the small fry was thoroughly discussed. It was announced that the fire department had received many complaints against the places on the ground that they were very unsafe, in most cases a small door in the front being the only means of egress during possible panics, which are liable to happen at any time owing to the inflammable nature of the films used in the picture machines, and which frequently cause disastrous fires. The Health Commissioner said that the places were a menace on account of the lack of ventilation, as they must be kept in darkness, in order that the pictures may be effective. On the part of the police department it was stated that the resorts were frequented by "cadets" and other youths of depraved instincts, who are not interested in helping the cause of morality. The theatrical managers interested in the discussion were on hand to advocate the extinction of the "theaters," as it seemed unfair that these places could remain open in violation of the laws made to govern theater buildings, when real managers are put to enormous expense in complying with the law. Another meeting will be held this week, when it is expected that some means will be arranged for the eradication of the alleged evil.

The Musical World.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

Ernest Douglas, choirmaster of St. Paul's, and organist there, has been invited to the Jamestown Exposition, to play as official organist during the month of October.

The honor to Mr. Douglas only brings to mind again the many tokens of appreciation which have been showered upon local organists during the past year or two.

The director of music for the entire exposition at Jamestown is no other than Sidney Lloyd Wrightson, who achieved celebrity in the Venice music two years ago, and who owns residence property here. Since his departure from this city Mr. Wrightson has devoted himself to teaching and directing in Washington.

Mr. Sessions, who returned last year from success in Paris, has offered some splendid music in his weekly recitals, and has been one of the favored few invited to play upon the great instrument in Carnegie Hall, Pittsburgh.

Alfred A. Butler, erstwhile companion of Mr. Sessions in his work here, has been achieving great triumphs in New York and other cities.

Morton F. Mason, who has been identified with the local symphony orchestra and church music in Pasadena for many years, is now being recognized as one of the foremost composers in the western part of this country.

Bruce Gordon Kingsley, master of the splendid organ in the Auditorium, is an artist of celebrity and ability. His one recital this winter was an unusual treat to lovers of keyboard classics. Why is Mr. Kingsley not heard again?

Easter Music.

Easter time, like Christmastide, brings forth the best that is in choirs and choir directors. An unusually good list of today's church offerings has come to the attention of The Times musical department.

At Immanuel Presbyetrian Church, the Easter celebration will be marked by special musical features at both morning and evening services. The solo quartette and chorus, under the direction of Harry R. Baker, will be assisted by Violinist Natorp Blumenfeld, and Louis Appy, 'cellist. Portions of Sir John Stainer's cantata, "The Daughter of Jairus," will be given with string accompaniment.

At the Church of the Sacred Heart Haydn's "Imperial" mass will be sung at 10:30 o'clock. The choir will be assisted by an orchestra under Harley Hamilton's direction. The soloists are Miss Mary Merrick, Miss Crystal Waters, M. J. Pauly and Anthony Schwamm. The directress is Miss Mary L. O'Donoughue.

This evening, at the First United Presbyterian Church, the quartette, with assistance, will give the larger part of Mendelssohn's "Elijah." A fine Easter programme of general numbers has been arranged for the morning service. Theodore J. Irwin is organist here, and Mrs. Maude Nichols Lyon is the directress.

At St. John's Church, Episcopal, Director Waldo F. Chase has compleetd two full programmes of Easter classics. His quartette is composed of Misses Edytha Marchant and Louise Nixon Hill, and Messrs. LeRoy Jepson and C. B. Petersen.

The vested choir of the English Lutheran Church will also be heard in a diversity of numbers, a feature being a solo at the morning service by Miss Annie Row.

Miss Marchant, who not only sings at St. John's, but also has charge of the music at the English Lutheran Church, has had the general supervision of the programme at the Church of the Epiphany, and has prepared a festival service for the children, to be given this evening.

Harry Clifford Lott, director at the First Congregational Church, will offer his choir this morning in Setwart's cantata, "Victory." His quartette, consisting of Mrs. C. G. Stivers, Mrs. C. E. Richards, Frederick Gunster and Mr. Lott himself, will be assisted by a number of well-known singers. Mr. Skelle will be at the organ.

At Christ Church, John Douglas Walker will direct, and Mr. Sessions will be at the organ. A new offertroy, "The Lord is King," by Frederick Stevenson, will be sung for the first time. The offertory is dedicated to this choir. In the evening the Stevenson cantata, "Easter Eve and Morn," will be sung.

At the First Christian Church the cantata, "Messiah Victorious," will be sung tonight by a choir of twenty voices, under Mr. Dupuy's direction.

A varied programme marks the day at Temple Baptist Church, holding its services in the Auditorium, and at night, in addition to the regular programme of music, Mr. Kingsley will offer the overture to "Rienzi," on the great organ.

A programme of strictly Easter music will be given at the Young Women's Christian Association, this afternoon. Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has a good programme of special music. The Los Angeles Fellowship will hold a musical celebration of Easter at Blanchard Hall this morning.

Matters of News.

As previously announced, Miss Carroll McComas, whistler, will be heard in concert at Simpson Auditorium next Friday evening.

Miss McComas will be assisted by Mr. Sessions, at the piano; by Mr. Opid, 'cellist; Mr. Lott, baritone, and Mr. Mead, flutist.

It may be safely declared that no such extraordinary whistling programme has ever been offered in this city. Here is the list of numbers with which Miss McComas will try—and doubtless prove—her talents: "Voce di primavera," Strauss; Serenata, Op. 15, Moszkowski; Nightingale polka, Mollenhauer; nocturne, op. 9, No. 2, Chopin; "L'Ete," Chaminade; cavatina, Raff; elegie, Massenet; serenade, Foote; berceuse, from "Jocelyn;" "Thou Brilliant Bird," David's "Pearl of Brazil."

Miss Gertrude Cohen will be heard in recital at the Belasco Theater one week from next Wednesday afternoon.

Of interest to music lovers will be Mrs. Bertha Hirsch-Baruch's lecture on "Modern Judaism," in which she will consider racial melodies. The lecture is to be given on April 10 at Gamut Auditorium.

Vessella will offer an excellent programme of classical music at Long Beach today, Mme. Adaberto and Orlinto Lombardi being his soloists.

Take American's Opera.

Karl Schmidt, well-known 'cello soloist, formerly with the Thomas Orchestra and now general kappelmeister for Henry W. Savage, has had a grand opera accepted for production at the Royal Opera in Berlin. Mr. Schmidt's composition is a work in three acts and a prologue entitled "The Lady of the Lake," with the libretto founded on Sir Walter Scott's poem of the same title.

Dr. Karl Muck, director of the Berlin Royal Opera Orchestra, and now temporary director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, recently notified Mr. Schmidt that his opera will probably have a production in Berlin next season. Both Dr. Muck and Mr. Schmidt date their first work as an orchestra conductor to the theater in Zurich over twenty years ago, Dr. Muck preceding Mr. Schmidt as second conductor in Zurich for five years.

Mr. Schmidt came to America seventeen years ago to follow Victor Herbert as 'cellist with the Theodore Thomas Orchestra, and was later conductor with the Emma Juch Opera Company. Twelve years ago he founded the Philharmonic Society in Louisville and remained as its musical director until he came to New York to accept the position last year with Henry W. Savage.

Mr. Schmidt finished his opera "The Lady of the Lake" while he resided in Louisville, the German libretto being the work of F. Werth, a well-known western writer of German verse, then editor of the German paper in Louisville. The English libretto is the work of Wallace T. Hughes, an editorial writer on the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Walter Damrosch has the overture of "The Lady of the Lake," and the New York Symphony Orchestra will have the honor of first playing it in this country, following the premier of the opera in Berlin. Unlike the Wagnerian operas, the overture of "The Lady of the Lake" does not precede the first curtain, but follows the prologue, the action of which is continued in the descriptive music of the overture, which leads directly into the first act.

"The Lady of the Lake" is written for twelve principals and a chorus. Fitzjames V. of Scotland is the leading tenor role and Roderick Dhu is the leading baritone. Lord James of Douglas, father of Ellen, the heroine of Sir Walter Scott's story, is the principal basso. Ellen is the leading soprano prima-donna role and Margaret, the mother of Roderick Dhu, is the leading contralto part.

A long and tedious wait is necessary for a production at the Berlin Royal Opera, as may be gathered from the fact that Mr. Schmidt's work has been in the hands of the directors for four years. Immediately on his return to Germany, Dr. Muck will send definite word to Mr. Schmidt regarding the time of the production, and the latter will then leave for Germany to superintend the preliminary details and the staging.

Karl Schmidt was educated in the gymnasium at Schwerin, which corresponds to the American university. His studies were interrupted with a call to service in the German army. He secured his discharge after one year spent in the German artillery, but the training and discipline which he underwent during his service is still apparent in his military bearing and appearance.—[Musical America.

GERTRUDE COHEN.
This talented young pianist, who has studied here for several years, achieving magnificent technical mastery, will shortly go abroad for further study.

JOHN DALY MURPHY.
Mr. Murphy, who comes from the Grand Operahouse stock company of Chicago, will make his first appearance with the Belasco forces this week. He is a character actor of wide reputation, and will assume with this company many of the roles in which the public has seen Mr. Barnum.

LANDSCAPES BY BEN BROWN.

Benjamin Chambers Brown is holding his annual exhibition of paintings at the Bentz gallery in Pasadena. There are thirty-two canvasses in all. The most of these were seen at the autumn exhibition which Mr. Brown held in Blanchard Hall, but he also shows five or six fine landscapes which have been painted since then.

The work of Mr. Brown is already so well known to all who love the sane and good in art that further words about these excellent pictures from his brush seem almost superfluous. However, I cannot refrain from mentioning the names of a few of the later landscapes—"Winds of Spring," splendidly free in its handling of grays, and full of the spirit and movement of springtime; "Green Hills and White," showing the dazzling contrasts of our Southern California winters; "Golden Poppies Near the Sierras," a large study of these native flowers which is as beautiful as it is unhackneyed; "After the Rain—Evening," a virile study whose color is most admirable; and "The Valley of Peace," a canvas that is big in every artistic way.

We know that when Ben Brown invites us to see some of his pictures we shall not be disappointed. He is a craftsman as well as an artist. It is very seldom indeed that a poor piece of workmanship is allowed to leave his easel. He is also a student, growing in strength and sureness of touch from year to year.

Life's Journey.

We travel an unknown pathway,
  Led by an unseen hand.
The future is veiled from knowledge;
  The past none understand;
But all around, in weakness and woe,
  Are souls who need what we can bestow.

Oh, give of your hope and courage
  To the spirits that shrink and quail,
And steady the faltering footsteps
  Of feet that are ready to fall.
Give love, unstinted, in joy or pain,
  For we never shall pass this way again.
—[Judith Wells.

John M. Gamble, who is one of the best-known of San Francisco's landscape painters, has been visiting Elmer Wachtel for the last few weeks. He has made a number of sketches around Los Angeles. One of his finished pictures has just been forwarded to the coming exhibition of the Sequoia Club at San Francisco. Mr. Gamble saved about a dozen of his pictures from the late fire, but every one of them has been sold long ago. The people of California cannot live without pictures. We are an outdoor race, and as our culture grows we demand that our walls shall hold the painters' interpretations of our favorite landscape bits.

Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

On Huntingdon's "Miranda."

The storm hath blown thee a lover, sweet,
And laid him kneeling at thy feet.
But—guerdon rich for favor rare!
The wind hath all thy holy hair
To kiss and to sing through and to flare
Like torch-flames in the passionate air,
  About thee, O Miranda.

Eyes in a blaze, eyes in a daze,
Bold with love, cold with amaze,
Chaste-thrilling eyes, fast-filling eyes,
With daintiest tears of love's surprise,
Ye draw my soul unto your blue
As warm skies draw the exhaling dew,
  Divine eyes of Miranda.

And if I were yon stolid stone
Thy tender arm doth lean upon,
Thy touch would turn me to a heart,
And I would palpitate and start,
Content, when thou wert gone, to be
A dumb rock by the lonesome sea,
  Forever, O Miranda.

Marines by Donovan.

John M. Donovan, who comes from the East, and later from Santa Barbara, and who is sojourning in Los Angeles for a few months, is holding his first exhibition of marines at Nicholson's gallery in Pasadena for two weeks. There are twenty pictures in all, many of which have been painted far out at sea. Mr. Donovan, who has been an amateur sailor on the Great Lakes ever since he was a boy, confesses that his happiest hours have been spent in the small sailboat that he owned and sailed himself. He loves to speed and his ambition is to paint it in its splendid might and magnitude, far away from sail or shore. Such a task is not easy, for the ocean, big in bulk as it is, has a hundred phases that are as delicately elusive as the mists of a desert mirage.

"Over the huge and huddling sea,

Mr. Donovan was born in Hamilton, Ont., and came to the United States in his boyhood. He has always known and loved the water. He has studied drawing, like every other artist, in the usual schools, both here and in Paris. But in painting he has had no instructor, preferring to follow his own bent in his own way. He knew that the Academie Julian could give him no particular information about how to paint the Atlantic and the Pacific—so he went straight to the oceans themselves—and the result, though he is only at the beginning of his art career, shows that he was right.

Not that his canvases, good as some of them are, can in any sense be called remarkable, for they are not that. They are often rather deficient in color, and their handling is sometimes without freedom and proficiency. Mr. Donovan should increase his palette, and so make his escape from a rather cold and restricted color scheme. Yet, when all is said, his genuine passion for the sea makes itself felt in every stroke of his brush, and there are times when he expresses himself with convincing ease and facility. He is bound to develop, it seems to me, into a marine painter of power.

Of the twenty pictures shown on this occasion, "Close-hauled for Home," a natty and handsome brig in mid-ocean, her sails bellying in a spanking breeze, is the largest and most ambitious. It is fresh and full of spirit and movement, and Mr. Donovan shows us that he knows how to draw his ships with accuracy in every detail. "A Wind That Follows Fast" is especially crisp and free in its technique. It is juicier in color than some of the others. "An Irish Headland" shows a beautiful and iridescent sky. "The White Squall," painted off the coast of Santa Barbara, is a fine transcript of a peculiar phase of the ocean. A flock of seagulls fly screaming before the storm like winged messengers of evil omen. "French Fishermen," excellent in color, shows a fishing smack in the trough of the sea off Bercke Plage on the coast of France.

The picture entitled "The Irish Channel" was liked and commented on by Admiral McCalla when it was shown in Santa Barbara. The advancing mists, shapeless and menacing, are portents of a wild and tempestuous night. "The Gull," a lonely bird almost unseen in "The desert and illimitable air," surrounded by a vast expanse of gray sea, reminds one irresistibly of Bryant's poem. We feel that Mr. Donovan's waterfowl, though lone wandering
"At that far height, the cold, thin atmosphere," is under the protection of a mighty love and will surely not be lost.

Mr. Donovan has painted several night scenes, "Reflections of the Night" and "A Channel Moonlight, Santa Barbara," with excellent results. This artist's further development in his chosen field will be watched with close interest by all who care for what is absolutely sincere and unaffected in painting.

JOHN M. DONOVAN.

ART NOTES.

William Morris, a San Francisco picture dealer, has brought a collection of sixty pictures to the Reynolds gallery, No. 222 South Broadway. Among these are some remarkably fine canvases by Rosa Bonheur, Alexander Harrison, Josef Israels, and others. He has also three good pictures from the brush of our own Frank P. Sauerwen—"The Corn Festival," "The Scout," and a crisp, colored little bit, only a few inches square, "At the Pool."

Two promised exhibitions at the gallery of the Fine Arts Association, Blanchard Hall, are pictures by William Keith and William Lees Judson. Both of them will be held in April.

The Painters' Club held its usual monthly meeting at the Art Students' League on Saturday evening. The club's April exhibition of pictures will open early this week.

The Arts and Crafts met on Monday evening of the past week, to discuss plans for their coming exhibition, which will be held in the near future.

Emily Rutherford, formerly in Blanchard Hall, has removed her studio of wood carving to the Arts and Crafts. Joseph Greenbaum's life classes for young women will now occupy the Blanchard studio every day in the week, instead of only part of the time, as heretofore.

William Wendt made a flying visit from Laguna Cañon to Los Angeles during the past week. The rains broke in upon his sketching. However, he went back on Thursday, taking his friend, Hanson Puthuff, with him. They will remain away for about a month.

So much interest has been excited by the exhibition of Leonard Lester's landscapes, held at Gould's, that it has been decided to keep the gallery open to the public for one week longer. Those who have not seen these charming canvases should not fail to take advantage of a last opportunity.

William Wendt's California landscapes, now being shown in O'Brien's gallery in Chicago, is exciting a great deal of enthusiastic interest among Chicago art lovers and critics. The papers speak of them in terms of the highest praise. Some of the canvases are said to resemble, and equal, the work of Homer Martin.

No word has as yet come from the exhibitions of the recent California landscapes of Elmer Wachtel and Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel, which opened in Thurber's and Anderson's galleries, Chicago, this week. Yet when the returns come in from the eastern press notices, there can be no doubt that they will be flatteringly favorable. Los Angeles can show no stronger or better workers in landscapes than these two wedded painters.

Three Los Angeles artists are showing their pictures during the same week in Chicago. What a commentary on the growth of art on the Pacific Coast, and on the eastern appreciation of California's wonderfully beautiful landscape. Let us try to be modest—though the effort is mighty difficult.

Katherine M. Ball of San Francisco gave a most interesting series of talks on Japanese art at Cumnock Hall last week. Miss Ball, who is an enthusiast in her special field, spoke from a full mind and heart, showing, in the course of her lectures, hundreds of exquisite prints. She is a fluent and convincing advocate.

The indefatigable Fine Arts League—all honor to its splendidly courageous members!—has just printed and started to distribute a neat little booklet of its bylaws. The art instinct is afoot—now let it work! Mark the words of a prophet—we shall soon have an art gallery of beauty housing a hundred masterpieces of painting. The Fine Arts League has said it, and the league is an institution to be relied on. It costs only $2 a year to belong. Every man, woman and child in Los Angeles can

Mrs. John Harlan of No. 1515 Wilton Place entertained most charmingly [illegible] afternoon with a box party at the Mason for her women friends. Following the party, luncheon was served at the Alexandria, and here a wreath of pink tulle and pink and white roses decked the center of the round table, while pink-shaded candelabra shed a soft glow. Tiny hand-painted baskets adorned with flowers and filled with bon-bons marked the places. Guests were Mmes. J. M. White, George Crenshaw, Joseph P. Wilson, S. L. Bower, Hay, Davenport, R. R. Smith, D. L. Thomas, R. Whomes, and Misses Ella Slauson, Eula Smith and Ethel Leaville.

Mrs. Bartram Honored.

Mrs. Ellsworth Bartram was the honored guest at a charming affair given yesterday by the Los Angeles Alliance of the Delta Delta fraternity. Mrs. Bartram was formerly president of the Alliance and since her marriage a little over a year ago, has been residing with her husband, Dr. Bartram, in Kentucky. Dr. and Mrs. Bartram, with their baby daughter, recently returned here to make their home, and her many friends have been busy welcoming her. She was formerly Miss Georgia Suber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. K. Suber of Orange street, and is now visiting her parents.

Brownson House Benefit.

Everything is in readiness for the Brownson House benefit to be given tomorrow evening at the Gamut Club building. All the living pictures are in readiness, and the sketches are uncommonly fine. Miss Gertrude Workman, the presiding genius of it all, is busy as a bee. In the middle of the week three of her leading artists failed her. For a minute her courage waned, but only a minute, and then she went ahead as brightly as ever. She secured more artists and everything looks particularly bright.

P.E.O. Reception.

One of the most brilliant affairs given in Monrovia during the week was the reception tendered the P.E.O. yesterday afternoon at the La Vista Grande Hotel. Miss Nina C. Edmiston of No. 1028 West Thirty-sixth street, Los Angeles, who is spending the winter at the La Vista Grande, was the hostess, and she invited Chapter M. of Monrovia to meet Chapter C of Los Angeles, of which she is a member. The dining-room and parlors were profusely decorated, mustard being used to advantage in the color scheme, and place cards were composed of fluffy yellow chickens in new Easter hats. A delicious luncheon was served to the guests and following this the ladies were obliged to make their own Easter hats from materials furnished. This furnished much amusement, and some of the designs were very striking. Miss Edmiston was assisted by her sisters, Miss Ella and Miss Jessie Edmiston. Those present from Los Angeles were Mmes. Pottinger, Squires, Bowerman, Wheeler, Shrode, Lawrence, Rader, Thornton, Anson, Ward, Davis, Graham, Fixen, Cheshire, Barry, Tyrrell Sexton, Hutchins, Williams, Whittington, Stabler, Shrader, Gwynn, Doyle, Brown, Booth, Hicks, Crist, and Misses Spencer, Ward, Smith, Lillian Smith, Ballard, Mary Ballard, Benson Clark, Ehret, Hawk, Hoose, Ida Morrison, Edith Morrison, Noble, Dr. Mary Noble, and Miss Quick.

Doran Tea.

Mrs. Daniel Innes and her daughter Mrs. Willard J. Doran of No. 1194 West Twenty-seventh street, have issued cards for a tea to be given on Tuesday afternoon for a company of their women friends.

Mrs. Gibbon's Good News.

The many friends of Mrs. T. E. Gibbon will be glad to learn that her father, who has been so seriously ill, is now out of danger. It will be remembered that Mrs. Gibbon was suddenly called East last year to see her sister, who was stricken very ill, and who died. She had not been home very long until she was again called to Little Rock, Ark., by the illness of her father. It will be welcome news to her friends to know he is so much better.

Mrs. Baldwin Entertains.

Mrs. Nellie Baldwin, president of Columbia Circle Ladies of the G.A.R., entertained the Ladies' Aid Society of the circle on Wednesday with an all day meeting and dinner given at her home at No. 2632 East Third street. Twenty-nine of the members were present and many articles were made for the benefit of G.A.R. veterans and their families. In the afternoon an address on nursery topics was made by Miss Clara Weaver.

Mrs. Baldwin is president of Columbia circle which is the largest in the Department of California and Nevada. There are three circles in this city, the others being Union Circle and Lawton Circle. The department will hold an annual convention at Santa Barbara, April 10, 11 and 12, and the circles from here will send twenty-five delegates, of which eleven will represent Columbia circle.

Mrs. Baldwin, who will head her delegation as its president, is a great favorite with the old soldiers, who call her "Nellie." For nine years she was the "Goddess of Liberty" of the Soldiers' Home, and she is at present color bearer for the veterans' fife and drum corps which will accompany the special train to Santa Barbara next week. Mrs. Baldwin is the wife of Engineer Wright Baldwin of the Santa Fé, whose prompt action in stopping his train on the arroyo bridge recently, saved the lives of two young women who were attempting to cross on foot.

Honor Howisons.

Mrs. George Beck of No. 2361 West Twenty-first street was hostess on Thursday at a very charming five hundred party given as a compliment to Mrs. Hugh Howison and her daughter, Miss Irene Howison, of Chicago, who are guests of the Lyman Craigs. The home was beautifully decoratd in white and pink roses and ferns, and in the dining-room carnations were artistically utilized. Handsome prizes were awarded, the first falling to Mrs. Garretson, and the second to Mrs. Craig. Dainty refreshments were served and later Miss Howison gave vocal solos, Mrs. Howison accompanying. Mrs. Garretson gave a humorous monologue. Besides the guest of honor those present were: Mmes. Lyman Craig, H. H. Rone, Lewis A. Curtin, L. A. Garretson, Russell B. Hallett, Eugene R. Hallett, Edward Hall, A. Parker and Reid of Pasadena.

Woodheads in Rome.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Woodhead, who with their family of four daughters are on a tour around the world, are spending Easter week in Rome. They write of delightful times in Japan, Ceylon, Egypt and Palestine, having traveled through the Holy Land from the extreme southern boundary to the north. They are expected home in Los Angeles early in the summer.

Mrs. Grover Entertains.

Mrs. Sidney Lee Grover of South Burlington avenue was hostess on Thursday afternoon at a prettily appointed Easter five hundred party.

Easter lilies, violets and purple hyacinths were used in decorating the rooms, and they were canopied with asparagus ferns and smilax. Score cards were decorated with fluffy chicks held by lavender and white ribbons. The first prize, a handsome cut glass perfume bottle, was won by Mrs. Sutch; the second, a Japanese teapot, to Mrs. Jordan, and the third, a fancy book, to Miss Howell.

Guests for the afternoon included: Mmes. J. E. Crandall, W. P. Story, George W. Jordan, Emma Greenleaf, Sarah J. Smith, George H. McGinnis, Perry B. Slocum, W. E. Pritchard, W. H. Sutch and Misses Marie Higgins, Ellen M. Howell and Hortense Jones. Later a dainty collation was served by Reynolds.

For Miss Dyas.

Miss Clyde Dyas, the pretty St. Louis belle, who is here visiting Mrs. Cline, was honored on Friday evening with a pretty dinner given at Hotel Alexandria by Mrs. Leah J. Seeley of South Figueroa street.

Mrs. Whiting Entertains.

Mrs. Perry Whiting entertained the officers of the Loyalty Chapter O.E.S., with a charmingly appointed luncheon at the Jonathan Club on Wednesday, the 27th inst., followed by a theater party at the Auditorium. Guests were Mmes. William Meade, M. Meader, O. Schmidt, B. Verrieck, A. Smith, Richard Thompson, J. Barry, Sawtelle, H. Ward, N. Pattillo, L. Farley, Fred Pierce, C. W. Pierce, S. Maas, M. Brown, J. Beal, Miss Margaret Chapman.

For Miss Burnham.

Mrs. J. Wesley Sprague of Harvard boulevard entertained most charmingly yesterday afternoon at her home on Harvard boulevard in compliment to Miss Pearl Burnham, whose marriage to George Tuttle is to take place on April 15.

Miss Burnham is a charming girl and has spent much of her time abroad and studying music in Berlin. Mr. Tuttle is a Yale man and a civil engineer well up in his profession.

The Sprague home was beautifully decorated for the function, and in the living-room great bunches of yellow mustard contrasted pleasingly with the deep green walls. The balcony leading into the garden was hung with baskets of flowers and the summer houses without were decorated in Japanese fashion. Here Miss Eloise Hartsell in a quaint Japanese costume served tea. Miss Inez Chapman served punch from a bower of greens, and an orchestra discoursed sweet music from the balcony. Miss Rose Cook poured chocolate in the dining-room, and here the table was particularly pretty. On a mirror set on rare lace was a smoked glass bowl filled with delicate Maman Cochet roses and ferns.

Assisting the hostess in receiving were: Mrs. C. P. Libby of Chicago, aunt of the guest of honor, who is here to attend the wedding, and Miss Louise Otis and Miss Partk.

Baggs Have Been Feted.

Dr. and Mrs. Perry Bagg, who have been the guests of Judge and Mrs. J. D. Bicknell, corner West Seventh and Bixel streets, who are Mrs. Bagg's parents, have been very delightfully entertained during their stay here. The home was beautifully decorated, and a large company of relatives and friends from the Temple Baptist Church were present to do honor to the sunny couple, whose snows of fifty-six years of married life, rest lightly upon their shoulders. Dr. Burdette, too, was there, and presented in behalf of his parishioners, a charming old-fashioned amethyst brooch to Mrs. Shimmin and a golden watch fob to the groom. Lovely Easter Dinner.

Miss Helen Mathewson of the Hershey Arms entertained last evening with an exquisite Easter dinner given as a compliment to her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brode, who were recently married. The table was set near the door opening into the conservatory, where a fountain plays and the birds sing. In the center of the table was a miniature fountain edged with yellow daffodils and soft ferns. Yellow lights shone on the falling water, and in the fountain swam perhaps a dozen downy ducklings—real ones they were, too. Butterfly bows of yellow satin ribbon and yellow shaded candelabra of crystal further enhanced the charm of the effect. Places were marked with empty eggshells filled with Dresden bunnies. Other dainty Easter souvenirs were at each place. The ices were served in the form of yellow chicks resting in sugar nests.

Brilliant California Girl.

Los Angeles may well be proud of Miss Adele Lauth, who has just returned from four years spent in Berlin.

Miss Lauth is a native Californian and Angeleño, and besides being a perfect type of the striking and stunning beauty, which California sunshine can produce, she is blessed with a splendid, keen intellect.

Her beauty is the proud Gibsonesque style. Tall and statuesque she is, and with wondrous soft golden hair, clear blue eyes and peach-bloom skin.

She is a daughter of Mrs. A. Lauth, and not so very long ago her engagement was announced to a handsome young Englishman, but her music is at present taking so much of her attention that she has decided not to become a bride just yet.

Her achievements in Berlin have been unusual for an American girl. She has been a pupil of Godowsky, the great teacher, and has been one of the chosen few to be taken on summer outings with the master. Miss Lauth has just finished arranging a group of the "Songs of Rameau" from sixteenth-century French music. In this she worked in conjunction with Godowsky, who had transposed this same music for the piano, and she made it suitable for songs. These songs are soon to be sung in concert given by Electra Gestra, a distinguished singer. Her two best pupils, Mlle. De Foe and Miss Williamson, a Chicago girl, are to present them. Already Berlin papers have made fine criticisms of these. Miss Lauth has also composed music to go with Yvette Guilbert's readings, now used by that clever Frenchwoman. This clever girl is now engaged in arranging some Spanish songs of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

While touring Spain Miss Lauth sus-

OUT-OF-TOWN SOCIETY

Pasadena.

THE last week before Easter has been brightened by few functions of importance, the largest event being the reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Marcus A. Hall, Wednesday evening at their home on North Marengo avenue in celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding day. The floral decorations upon this occasion were more elaborate than are often seen in Pasadena. American Beauty roses were used in profusion and a conspicuous feature of the decoration was a hedge of calla lilies which seemed to be growing before the corner reserved for the orchestra. The drawing room was bower-like with asparagus plumosa, rose vines and ferns; white carnations and pink roses added to the pretty effect. The color scheme in both library and dining-room was pink and green and hundreds of sweet pea blossoms, Duchess and La France roses were used to make it more effective.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall were assisted in receiving their guests by their daughter, Mrs. Charles F. Martin, and her husband, and Mr. and Mrs. Kenyon Warren. Mrs. Hall wore an exquisite gown of white net over taffeta, with garniture of lace; Mrs. Martin wore pink net, and Mrs. Warren was handsomely gowned in white crepe de chine, with trimmings of d'Alencon lace. Others assisting were Mrs. Alice Roberts, Miss Mary Rosendale, Misses Roberts, Boyd, Emma Rosendale and Turpin. There were 200 guests present during the evening and many beautiful gifts in silver were presented upon this auspicious occasion.

Miss Lucy Eaton gave a large progressive euchre party Wednesday afternoon at Hotel Green, when tables were arranged for forty-eight players. The decorations, in yellow and green, were particularly effective in the Moorish room where the furnishings are in dull green and gold. In the Turkish room a stringed orchestra furnished music during the games. The prizes were won by Mrs. E. B. Hoamer, Mrs. W. E. Grattan, Mrs. J. D. Beyle and Miss Frances Brown. After the games refreshments were served at the card tables.

Mrs. William Douglas Turner entertained a few friends at her home on North Marengo avenue Monday afternoon with readings, selections being taken from the stories of Grace McGowan Cooke. Refreshments were served later. Those present were Mesdames L. I. Cowgill of San Francisco, H. I. Stuart, Fred Harris, W. Leithead, Howard Fish, G. A. Gibbs, Benjamin Page, H. G. Bennett, J. J. Bleecker, Misses Blakeslee and Carter.

The Misses Hinds gave a delightful Salmagundi party Monday evening at their home on South Euclid avenue, complimentary to Mrs. Charles Bull and Miss Bull, who are guests of Mrs. Edward J. Sheehan. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Tedford, Mr. and Mrs. Luther G. Newby, Dr. and Mrs. L. C. Deming, Misses Angie Holmes, Louise Austin, Florence Squire, Messrs. Holt, Doty, Booge, Cristy, Brooks and Sam Hinds.

Miss Anne Whitmore gave a dance Wednesday evening at her home on West Colorado street, complimentary to Mr. and Mrs. Newton Leithead of Seattle, who were formerly residents of Pasadena. The great living room, which was used as a ball room, was beautifully decorated with Lady Banksia rose vines. Music was furnished by an orchestra and refreshments were served. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Groenendyke, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Leithead, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Claypool, Misses Blossom, Nevin, Stimson, Cushing, Cotton, Randall, Messrs. Small, Webster, Coates, Perry, Mattison, Stimson and Dr. McKellar.

Col. and Mrs. W. J. Hogan gave one of the most elaborate dinners of the week at Hotel Maryland Thursday evening. Covers were laid for thirty-five. The table was ornamented with masses of pink and white bloom and about the room palms and Easter lilies were used in profusion. The place cards were quaint little pink umbrellas for the women and character sketches of the guests for the men. Pink boxes of bon bons were given as favors.

Mrs. William Wilson Leithead gave a large reception Wednesday afternoon in honor of her guest, Mrs. Lewis L. Cowgill of San Francisco, and Mrs. Newton Leithead of Seattle. Mrs. Robert D. Hopkins, with the hostess and guests of honor, made up the receiving party. Mrs. William Leithead wore a handsome empire gown of white brocaded satin and pearl ornaments; Mrs. Newton Leithead wore pink chiffon with garniture of Duchess lace; Mrs. Hopkins's gown was of white chiffon and her ornaments diamonds. The unbonneted women assisting were Mesdames F. R. Harris, H. I. Stuart, I. H. Stratton, Archibald Morris, Chadwick, Misses Burns, Conger, Wood, Lutz and Harris. The flowers used in decoration were purple and white fleur de lis, acacia, Japanese primroses and quantities of Lady Banksia roses.

Miss Blanche Witherell gave a delightful five hundred party Friday afternoon at her home on South Los Robles avenue, about thirty of her young friends being present.

One of the prettiest parties of the week was the baby party given by Mrs. Kenyon Warren at her home on North Orange Grove avenue in honor of her little daughter, Bernice, who has attained the age of 3 years. It was a party of elders as well as little folks for all the mothers were present. Those who assisted were Misses Shibley, Bryan, Creiger and Cote and there were thirty mothers and more children present. Birthday candles, birthday surprises, and a delicious supper filled in the afternoon pleasantly for all.

The coming week promises to be the gayest Easter week Pasadena has known in many years. Monday a large progressive euchre party at Hotel Green will usher in the gaiety. The hostesses will be Mrs. G. G. Green, Mrs. J. H. Holmes and Mrs. W. E. Grattan Tuesday, Mrs. John W. Hugus entertains with a bridge party, and Mrs. C. F. Cristy gives a small five hundred party. Thursday, Mesdames Henry Newby, H. C. Holt and Orcella Hines give a large reception, Mrs. G. G. Guyer entertains with a bridge party, and Mrs. Collin Stewart gives a large bridge luncheon at Hotel Maryland. Saturday evening the members of the Valley Hunt Club will have their annual dinner at Hotel Wentworth and several smaller functions are scheduled.

The monthly fashion sheets of the Ladies' Home Journal Patterns is really a fashion periodical worthy of a place in every home. With cover in colors, modern art-work, and many helpful suggestions to the home dressmaker, this little fashion periodical—the Monthly Style Book—has become greatly prized by our store friends. While we have received a good supply for this month, we advise every one to call at our pattern counter and get a copy without delay and thus avoid disappointment. Remember, this monthly Style Book is free to our store friends.

GOSSIP OF THE FOREIGN STAGE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 11.—With the exception of Mr. Sutro's piece, to be given tonight, every first night this week was more or less American, two of the playwrights having come from home—Madeleine Lucette Ryley and Gladys Unger—two of the plays having been "presented" by Frohman, and Seymour Hicks having borrowed a good many of the ideas from his play, as usual, from the United States.

The first night at the Duke of York's Theater enabled us to see John Hare as Napoleon, in Mrs. Ryley's adaptation from the French of Pierre Berton's "The Great Conspiracy," with the vivacious and quick-witted Irene Vanbrugh as the wife of one of the conspirators, and afterward as the wife of one of the Little Corporal's aids-de-camp. A wonderful company had been gathered for this play, including at least four actors, Aubrey Smith and Henry Ainley, besides Hare and Miss Vanbrugh, who are of star rank. It was produced, too, by Dion Boucicault, the best of all "producers" in England. No money or pains had been spared on scenery, on costumes or on salaries for minor members of the company; yet an ungrateful gallery did not altogether succeed in restraining itself from "boos."

The trouble was that "The Great Conspiracy" started out as fine, strong drama, garnished with comedy, and ended up in mild comedy, with the drama mostly evaporated. The first act was uncommonly good. It took place in an inn where the Royalist conspirators hatched their plot, and ended in an explosion vainly intended to blow Napoleon into kingdom come. It was an explosion worth going miles to see and hear—a triumph of stage ingenuity. The inn was wrecked uterly, and the dust and smell of gunpowder were almost too realistic. The chief plotter against Napoleon was the Marquis de Taillemont, husband of a charming young wife. The Marquis was supposed to have been killed by his own bomb, but his

Millinery, Gowns, Garments for Fashionable Women

Monday finds a fashion show here of surpassing beauty. Last week's gorgeous opening displays have been augmented by late arrivals and goods that were held in reserve. Brilliant as was last Monday's showing, one still more brilliant is promised for tomorrow. No similar exhibition of spring modes has ever been seen in Los Angeles.

Distinctive and exclusive fashions in millinery, gowns and garments predominate. There is everywhere that mark of elegance which elicited such enthusiastic praise from visitors at our opening. It is a showing that no particular woman should fail to see.

In many instances price changes greatly favor after-Easter buyers. Several elaborate show pieces, purchased specially for the opening have served their purpose and must now be sold. Tomorrow will be the day of all days to choose. At no future time will there be the same opportunity for satisfactory selection. Not again this season will so splendid styles be offered.

ROOSEVELT'S NEXT BIG JOB.

What After the End of His Present Term?

Men of Affairs Interested in the Question.

Big Majority in Favor of His Re-election.

As the popular ballot progresses, the more certain does it become that the people of the United States are practically unanimous as to the exact thing that Theodore Roosevelt should do at the end of his present term as President.

With all corners of the country heard from, and still more to come, the great majority of those who have voted declare that he must succeed himself.

As an alternative, many of them suggest that he take charge of the digging of the Panama Canal; that he have a seat in the United States Senate, or that he do many other things for which his talents fit him.

The one insistent call, though, is for another term.

Thousands of answers have been received to the query first suggested by the Philadelphia North American and propounded through The Times to the people of Los Angeles and the great Southwest.

A great variety of suggestions have been made as to what the President should do. Most of them are earnest, showing that the voters are thinking seriously of the matter, although the Presidential election still is nineteen months in the future. Very few persons treat the question with levity.

BACK TO THE CHAIR.

"Back to the President's chair" is the tenor of nine out of ten of the replies to the all-consuming query. The prevailing sentiment is that the President should have still more time—at least four years more—to complete the work that he has begun and which he has carried forward with such vigor.

In this section, as in all other portions of the country, the expressions are the same. In Philadelphia, in New York, in Boston, in Portland, Me.; Providence, Pittsburgh, Washington, St. Paul, Topeka, Omaha, Denver, Memphis and in Seattle the same interest is shown in the future career of the President, leading newspapers of those cities recording the votes as The Times is doing for this section.

An indication of the widespread interest in the question is afforded by a letter from a number of young boys in Los Angeles, and printed in this symposium. Too young to vote, they remark that they know how their fathers feel, and their fathers are for another term.

ANOTHER CINCINNATUS?

One of the novel suggestions of a Southern Californian is that the President take to farming. Twice was Cincinnatus called from the plow, he recalls, and he thinks Theodore Roosevelt could be found and brought back from the farm at any time the nation might require his services.

Another proposal is that he become the editor of a great national newspaper. Our own Mayor Harper follows a somewhat similar idea by suggesting that the President conduct another "Commoner," similar to that which Bryan launched for the purpose of letting off surplus steam. But this is looked upon as a cunning attempt by the Democratic Mayor to steal some thunder for the Nebraskan, who so far has not expressed himself as in favor of a third term for President Roosevelt.

It is plain from all the replies received that the people look upon the Presidency and Theodore Roosevelt as one and inseparable. One contributor laughs at the objections to a third term. He points to the example set by Mexico, where President Diaz has retained the reins of office term after term.

The point is made over and over that should President Roosevelt be re-elected, it will not be for a third term. He has been nominated but once for the Presidency, and the opinion of many is that his incumbency of the unexpired term of President McKinley does not count as a first term.

SEND YOUR VOTE.

The Times desires your vote on the question of what to do with Roosevelt. The symposium will be concluded next Sunday. Please mail a brief expression of your views, not over 60 words in length, addressing "Roosevelt Editor, The Times, Los Angeles."

Some of the interviews and letters furnished to The Times are as follows:

"IF HE STIFFENS NECK."

"If President Roosevelt will not accept another nomination, he should dig the Panama Canal," said Rev. Robert McIntyre, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Los Angeles. "As a matter of fact, he should be forced to retain the executive chair; that is, he should be prevailed upon to take it, for it may be a little harsh to say that he should be forced to do anything against his will.

"But if he sets his foot down and stiffens his neck against another term, he by all means should be secured to construct the big canal, for he has done more in a short time for that important project than any other man. He has the vigor, the knowledge, the ability and the resourcefulness needed for the successful prosecution of that big enterprise. If he simply will not be President again, it is to be hoped he can be induced to 'dig the ditch.'"

LET HIM DECIDE.

"I am opposed to a third term for the President," said Superior Judge Walter Bordwell. "What Theodore Roosevelt should do at the close of his present administration is a matter that should be left entirely with him. He will find his level, you may be sure of that. I think he would prefer to have his own way about it; to be left to make his own choice. He has said he would not be a candidate again. His wishes should be respected."

MUST NOT TAKE "NO."

"We must not take 'no' for an answer," said Gilbert S. Wright, of the real estate firm of Wright & Callender. "President Roosevelt has not been elected the second time and there is absolutely no reason for this talk of a third term. He must, by all means, accept the nomination, which should be made by acclamation.

"He has begun a great work, and he must finish it. In another four years he can accomplish this and place the country on such a sound financial and commercial foundation that there need be no future fear of any further trouble.

"By that time he will have cemented labor and capital so solidly and amicably together that there will be no further disagreements.

"President Roosevelt can continue prosperity and commercial activity, defeat Bryan, and do more to command the honor and good will accorded us by all nations."

CHAIN HIM TO CHAIR.

"What shall President Roosevelt do when his term ends?" repeated Arthur Letts, proprietor of the Broadway Department Store. "Why, I hope his term never will end. I do not want to see the day when he is not President. He should be secured to his chair in the White House with a chain so thick and a padlock so strong that he never could get away. It would be nothing short of a crime if we were to permit him to step out of office when he is in the midst of the most important work ever undertaken by a President of the United States."

NO THIRD-TERM LAW.

"President Roosevelt, should be our next President," said R. J. Waters, president of the Citizens' National Bank. "He has made only a beginning of the work he has set out to do. He should have an opportunity to complete it, even if he has said he does not want this opportunity. I believe that he will heed the call of the people and that he will accept another nomination. He has served but one full term.

"It is idle to talk of barring him from office again on the assumption that he will be taking the place for a third term. Besides, there is no law against a third term. No argument has been furnished to prove that a man of Theodore Roosevelt's age and measure could lose by experience in the executive chair. It would be a great mistake for the country to set him aside in the height of his vigor just because, by reëlecting him, some moss-grown precedent may be violated."

"PRETTY GOOD PRESIDENT."

"I really do not see why President Roosevelt should not run again," remarked Mayor Harper bravely, for he is a Democrat and is generally supposed to favor the nomination of Bryan.

"He has made a pretty good President," continued the Mayor, fingering a batch of newspaper clippings on the brilliant achievements of the present Democratic city executive.

"Yes, he has made a pretty good President," repeated the Mayor, glancing at an old copy of the "Commoner," published by William Jennings Bryan.

"I haven't anything against President Roosevelt," he said, trying to think up something for the executive to do in the event that he would not accept a renomination.

"Say," he exclaimed with a happy inspiration, "why couldn't he start another 'Commoner?'"

DRUM MAJOR OF ARMY.

Rev. Robert J. Burdette, pastor of Temple Baptist Church, thinks the President should continue to wield the "big stick." He has been too busy to study out a vocation for Mr. Roosevelt, however.

"Off hand," he said last night, "I should suggest that the President be made drum major of the United States

HARRIMAN ON RAILROAD PROBLEM.

He Talks of Wall Street, of Government Regulation and of Public Confidence—A Close Character Study of the Man and His Ambitions in the Traction World.

BY FREDERICK BOYD STEVENSON

"FOR the first time that I can remember I have had my photograph taken. The photographer has just left here."

Harriman smiled as he said this to me the other afternoon, in his office at No. 120 Broadway, New York. He sat up straight in his chair at his desk, and looked quizzically through his double-glassed spectacles.

"I have been told within the last few days," he continued, "that I am talking too much. But, do you know—"

His face was serious now.

"Do you know I believe that one of the great causes of the bad feeling—and bad feeling there unquestionably is—between the railroads and the public is the fact that the railroads have maintained a secretive policy. And it is this secretive policy that has created a distrust on the part of the people. This distrust has grown as the railroads have grown; it has resulted in the present agitation—an agitation that marks a climax in the career of every railroad in the United States."

"And how do you view this agitation?" I asked.

He shifted well back in his chair.

"At first," he said, decidedly, "I thought it would result in great harm to the railroads."

He stopped for a minute, and I asked:

"Now what is your opinion?"

"I think it will result in good," he said, frankly. "You understand what I mean? It will bring out points about the railroads that were never before brought out, so that the people could understand them. The agitation I refer to is the interstate commerce investigation, and through this medium concrete facts will be made plain to all. The public will be educated on many points concerning the operation and maintenance of railroads."

"What will this education of the public result in?"

"It will result in a closer feeling between the management of the railroads and the people of the country. It is the beginning of a mutual bond of sympathy, a mutual understanding and a desire to unite for common good. I am thoroughly convinced it is for the best interests of all—for the railroads, the government and the people—to coöperate—that is not exactly the word I want."

He tapped his pencil on the desk. His black eyes snapped behind the double glasses.

"Coördinate," he jerked out. "That's it. The railroads, the government, the people must coördinate. There must be common action, mutual interest. Do I make it plain to you? Is it clear?"

He was laying it off like a primer lesson. Each word was spoken vehemently, earnestly, with the enthusiasm of a pedagogue impressed with the primordial idea of indelibly inculcating upon the mind of his pupil this a b c of the railroads. Here was a new Harriman; not Harriman, the silent; not Harriman, the autocrat of the railroads; not the Harriman whom the cartoonists have pictured to us as a busy spider weaving a web for the most foolish of flies that venture in the purlieus of the Wall-street parlor; not the Harriman who they tell us has marched in cold blood over the wrecks of fortunes to the colossal fortune climaxing his own progress. Here, indeed, was a new Harriman, with new teachings. Will he be a new Harriman with new methods?

"You see," he went on, "we have been working somewhat in the dark—the railroads and the people. We have been at cross purposes. Why, take it on the street, for instance: I have known newspapers to come out with sensational news about stocks and print sensational stories when there was not a scintilla of truth to back them up. Now, the other day, when I was in Washington, the newspapers published that I was buying Reading for the purpose of getting control of it, when, I pledge you my word, I had no such thought in my mind. I didn't even know the price of Reading. Now, all such things as that have only helped to widen the breach between the railroads and the people."

"But haven't the railroads done things that they ought not to have done?" I asked.

He turned in his chair and looked squarely at me.

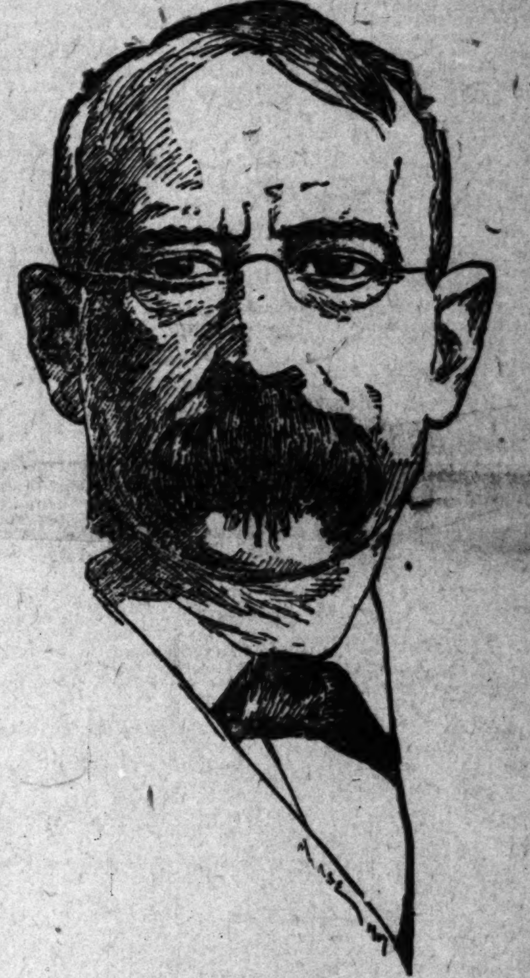
"I am not trying to excuse or defend anybody," he said. "I know the shortcomings of the railroads as well as any man. Many of the difficulties of the past will be obviated in the future by taking the people into our confidence. The people must all remember that the railroads have done great good to the country. I shall not say that the railroads alone have built up the country, for without the great manufacturing interests and the great industries there would be no traffic, and without traffic there would be no need for railroads. On the other hand, there could be no [illegible] without railroads, and again without traffic there could be no manufacturing interests and no industries. It is a very easy matter, you know, for people to get the idea that a railroad is making millions, when ofttimes the road is losing money. A railroad in running through a new country, for instance, must build up its business before it can hope to pay dividends, and building up business means building up the country. One on the outside cannot realize the expense of building such a road, of equipping it, of improving it. We put $250,000,000 into the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific systems. I took hold of the Union Pacific when it was just coming out of bankruptcy and the Southern Pacific when it was just going in. Enormous amounts of capital are required to put the railroads in a position to do business, and if the capitalists who invest this money get 6 per cent. on their investments they are doing well."

"But the railroad of today is a very prosperous proposition, is it not?"

He smiled, perhaps a trifle cynically, as he said:

"It depends upon how it is managed. A few years ago the railroads were struggling to secure traffic. Now they are trying to secure facilities to handle the traffic. You know how we are tied up in Manhattan. We can't get the room. It is simply impossible. It isn't there. It is the same in all places. Now here is where coöperation might come in. Instead of having this traffic pile up; instead of congesting freight cars, some of the freight might be unloaded and put in warehouses, and thus keep the tracks clearer. But that's another question—that deals with the railroad of tomorrow. We are talking of the railroad of today."

"And in that connection there is the rate question that many of the States are fighting."



E. H. HARRIMAN.

"Yes, there is the rate question. There are many things in connection with this question that are not taken into consideration by those who are seeking to lower the rates of railroads. If we compare our roads with European roads, we shall find that the wages paid here are about 50 per cent. higher than on the other side. We shall also find there are shorter hours of labor here than in Europe. We shall also find higher prices for material here than in Europe; yet, on an average, the cost of transportation in the United States is about 25 per cent. lower than it is in European countries. I think when we have taken the public into our confidence, and when we all understand these things, there will be a unity of action that will redound to the benefit of us all. That is why I preach coöperation."

"In speaking of this coöperation—this coördination—you referred a short time ago to the part the government should play in this reciprocal arrangement. Does that bring up the idea of government ownership?"

"No; I do not believe in government ownership," he said, quickly. "That is impractical—utterly impractical. Let the government start in to build railroads, and no Congressman will vote for a new road in another Congressman's territory unless he, too, is to have a road in his territory. Government ownership——? Oh, that is out of the question entirely."

"And governmental control?"

"No; not governmental control, but governmental regulation. Now that is feasible; that is reasonable. I believe that a conservative governmental regulation of the railroads would result in good for all."

"Coupled with the idea of coöperation on the part of the people?"

"Certainly."

"In this connection," I said, "you, of course, know how anxious the small investor is to obtain 4 per cent. government bonds, and how difficult it is for him to obtain them. Now, suppose this small investor were made to feel that a railroad investment was safe for him, would not that result in coöperation with you on the part of the people?"

"Undoubtedly, under those circumstances. But you must remember this——"

He leaned forward on the desk. The gleam of action was in his eye.

"You must remember this," he said, "your small investor with, say two or three thousand, is hurrying off as fast as he can go to Wall street to speculate and get rich quick, if he can, like—well, like some others."

"But, still, there is the idea of stock-jobbing," I insisted.

"Yes, that is so," he said thoughtfully. "And the majority of the people have the idea that the railroad magnates shift these stocks to suit themselves some times."

"There is a good deal of misinformation about that," he said. "There are a great many stories told about important railroad managers speculating in stocks. But many of these stories have their foundation in the imagination. To be sure, there are times when men in my position must go on the market to protect their holdings, but as for speculating in stocks as a business—that is not so. Men like me who are building up great railway systems, whose minds are concentrated on such a project, who have that one idea in view, have neither the time nor the inclination to go into stock-jobbing raids, that would use up their energies and capital. It would be a physical impossibility. It would be a mental impossibility."

"Can you think of a Utopia where Wall street would be eliminated in great railroad building?" I ventured.

He laughed softly. It was almost a chuckle.

"Where there are railroads there will be stocks," he said, soothingly. "And where there are stocks there will be a Wall street."

"It is one of the inevitable parts of our system, then?"

"Yes."

But he added quickly.

"We haven't a ticker in the Union Pacific office."

"That pertains to today. What of tomorrow?" I reminded him.

"The railroad of tomorrow is a problem," he said. "We must first look at its physical possibilities. It is only a question of time when the six foot or the five foot and a half gauge must come. I know I have opposition to this, but it is one of the things of the future. With a greater gauge of course we get greater capacities. There are only three ways in which an engine can gain more power: it must be lengthened, broadened, or made higher, and it cannot grow on our present gauge of four feet eight. Now, if we increase our car capacity, we simply increase the dead weight to be drawn by our engines. But if the change in gauge is far away, the next best thing for increasing the traction power is electricity. There would be a saving on the fuel proposition, whereas at present we use up fuel to carry our fuel. In time the general electrification of the railroads will be a necessity. In the meantime, the railroads are developing their facilities as rapidly as they can. The future road will be one of double tracks, four tracks, sidings and spur tracks. Then every precaution must be taken to eliminate accidents. Every tried safety device must be used. Now it will cost money—a great deal of money—to equip the railroad of the future in the manner I have outlined. I think I have already told you what we have put into the Union Pacific system in the last six years. In carrying on the work we have laid 7500 miles of new track, and replaced altogether about 15,000 miles of track. That indicates what is needed in the railway of today. Now, the railroad of tomorrow needs much more than that. We must have more roads; we must open up new territories, and these new roads must be equipped with all modern appliances. It is for all these reasons that I am anxious to take the public into the confidence of the railroad managements. I want the people to understand intelligently the new problems that are coming up in connection with the railroad of the future. I want them to understand its possibilities. Then we can all work together on the development of these possibilities."

As he talked of this railroad of the future his tone became serious. The whole interest of the man seemed bound up in the project. Here was Harriman chatting freely on a subject that was evidently close to his heart. Here was a man whose chief characteristic was taciturnity; at most, terseness. No man on the street, with the possible exception of Ryan, is feared and hated as Harriman is feared and hated. Of the big railway magnates he is the least known by the general public. He can pass by unnoticed in almost any large crowd. Until within the last few days he never knowingly talked to a newspaper man, and seldom talked about his business except to a very few intimate associates. Yet here is this man who controls railroads which aggregate three thousand million dollars in capital talking today

ROOSEVELT'S NEXT JOB.

Army. He would continue to lead the procession, as he always has led it, and he could carry the big stick in a most conspicuous and imposing manner.

"I never have thought of Theodore Roosevelt as anything but President of the United States. I cannot conceive of a higher or a better place for him. If he will not be President again, or dig the canal or be Senator or anything else, can't we have him as a President emeritus?"

GO TO SENATE.

Dr. Walter Lindley is of the opinion that the President, in view of his expressed intentions, would stultify himself by accepting another nomination.

"I think he should go to the United States Senate," said the doctor. "That would be a dignified place for him, and in such a position his forceful qualities would count. I think the Senate needs men of his stamp."

NOT HIS THIRD TERM.

CHARLES CHANDLER, Orange, one of Sherman's "bummers:" Should Theodore Roosevelt receive the nomination for President at the next national Republican convention, it would be only for his second term. Nothing will be heard but Roosevelt, in my opinion. We need him as much as we needed Abraham Lincoln.

GEORGE O. RENNER, Pasadena: Theodore Roosevelt has begun a great work and should be the one to finish it.

W. E. WHEELER, Los Angeles, a Civil War veteran: I hope President Roosevelt may be renominated. We need him as a trust buster, and the worst trust is the labor trust.

NEAL SORENSON, Alhambra: Roosevelt must be reëlected in 1908. We have none that can take his place.

LEW W. BEAN, Edendale: Renomination of President Roosevelt seems to be the unanimous demand. Who knows our nation's requirements better than he?

R. B. RASMUSSEN, Los Angeles: Why not forget the man and remember the soldier? As such, Theodore Roosevelt dare not disobey orders when the sovereign people direct him to serve another term of four years as Commander-in-Chief of the nation.

MUST ACCEPT THE CALL.

PAUL C. P. RITTER, Los Angeles: Theodore Roosevelt must accept the call to continue as our President for four years more. He is a fighter for good moral government. The country cannot afford to lose him.

E. W. DUVAL, Ventura: I prefer to see President Roosevelt remain in office to carry out the great reforms he has begun. No other living person has the courage, pure manhood and ability to follow in his footsteps. Otherwise, he should dig our big canal.

G. IRWIN ROYCE, M. D., Pasadena: Two terms is enough. If our beloved President should adhere to his resolution to refuse another nomination, we would feel like carrying him across the country on our shoulders. Should he yield to the importunities of the politicians, we would consider it a refutation of his recognized honesty. He is our idol, but——.

JOHN HUNT, Ventura: President Roosevelt is not all thunder and no lightning. He should have another term.

A. A. JAMESON, Ocean Park: There is no field or career other than the Presidency sufficiently wide for Theodore Roosevelt with his ability, breadth of mind, experience, influence and forceful energy.

STANLEY BRUCE, Los Angeles: President Roosevelt is the one we must elect in 1908. He has undertaken things which no other man can finish.

RAILROADERS MISTAKEN.

B. F. BEAN, Los Angeles: Railroad managers are shortsighted in opposing the renomination of President Roosevelt. They may want him very much, some day. If the people want him for another term, he should accept.

FRANCIS N. BURNS, Sawtelle: Let well enough alone. President Roosevelt is slowly but surely carrying out a real "square deal" for rich and poor alike. If he will not run again, he should be elected president of one of the big insurance companies.

JAMES BOWLES, Los Angeles: My first vote was for John C. Fremont. I voted once for Roosevelt, and I want to vote for him again. The prosecution of grafters and trusts started by him must be continued. No other man is so capable or so trustworthy.

T. N. BROTHARD, Lakeside: It is poor business to sidetrack a man like Roosevelt on a canal job, or in the Senate. If a man could be found with his integrity, enthusiasm and tremendous personality, that man should be nominated for the Presidency. If not, we should help reëlect "the man."

PETER C. PETERS, Colton: President Roosevelt has undertaken many things which only he, with his wisdom and grit, can carry out. He should be reëlected.

W. H. ELY, Bakersfield: The right man in the right place. I believe Theodore Roosevelt should be reëlected to complete the many works he has on hand.

SENATE AS ALTERNATIVE.

C. C. ELKINS, Fillmore: Theodore Roosevelt should succeed himself as President. Hens' teeth would almost represent the number of men who would so fearlessly, actively and aggressively work for the generalization of the "square deal." If he refuses, then he should go to the Senate, where he would checkmate more or less of the obstructive methods and legalized robbery carried on there.

FRED KEAGY, Long Beach: We need the "big stick" at the head of this government until the big corporations and grafters have a decided change of heart. Who knows how long we shall have to wait for another wielder of the club?

J. B. DRIESBACH, Los Angeles: The President should stand by his repeated assertion that he will not be a candidate for reëlection. Place him at the head of the Panama Canal Commission with unhampered power and the nation will have the right man in the right place.

E. W. GILBERT, Los Angeles: Theodore Roosevelt should be our next President. He is the only man that the majority of the Republican party can be united upon. No other candidate can defeat him.

J. H. M'NEIL, Los Angeles: It will be a crime if President Roosevelt refuses to run again. It would be as reasonable to retire a popular railroad president when his work is planned but not fully executed.

EDWIN LUPTON, Los Angeles: Another term for President Roosevelt is imperative. If this cannot be, create the office of "National Peace Judge" and give him the place, the duties to consist of arbitrator in all large industrial troubles between capital and labor.

GEORGE A. SKINNER, Long Beach: It is bad politics for Foraker or any other Republican besides President Roosevelt to offer himself at this time as a candidate. If any one but Theodore Roosevelt is placed in the field, the "common people" will rush to the Democratic candidate on the belief that the monied interests have caused President Roosevelt's retirement.

JOSEPH SMITH REYNOLDS, Santa Barbara: The country wants another four years of President Roosevelt's administration as a sick man wants the best doctor obtainable. The Roosevelt tonic aids healthful prosperity and stimulates individual, State and national energy.

H. C. HUBBARD, San Fernando: President Roosevelt should again take his place at the head of the nation. He is the only man able to effect reforms absolutely necessary for the welfare of the country.

JOHN L. DRYER, M.D., Santa Ana: Assuming that President Roosevelt will not accept a renomination, he will, as a private citizen, stand for the highest ideals. Should he, after his term of office, make a tour of the nation, he will be hailed as the ambassador for universal peace and arbitration.

CHARLES O. F. YOUNGSTROM, San Fernando: First give Theodore Roosevelt the Panama Canal to dig. He is the only man who has the energy and backbone to see the job through. If it is too small for him, make him "monarch" of the Philippines. He is the only man for that place. No third term. Lots of good men for President since he has set the pace.

Must "Finish" the Trusts.

LOS ANGELES, March 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am decidedly in favor of nominating President Roosevelt for another term, which will really be his second nomination. We want him to finish up the trusts of whatever character and especially the labor trust, the most cruel and intolerant of them all, as it is generally practiced.

J. E. WOOD.

Smash the Nonsense.

LOS ANGELES, March 28.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Who could or would take up and finish the work President Roosevelt has begun? If the people are wise they will take no stock in the shouting of the politician and baffled boodler about the "danger of a third term." Smash that nonsense, and keep this wonderful man where he is.

A. E. LEA.

Keep Him There.

LOS ANGELES, March 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Conditions agitating this country at the time of Theodore Roosevelt's elevation to the Presidency were such as confronted none of his predecessors. I believe he is the one man fitted to control them. This can be done only by retaining him in the Executive chair. When the people demand that, he cannot refuse to allow himself to be their champion. He must be induced to complete the work he has so well begun.

F. P. NOBLE.

Make Him an Editor.

LOS ANGELES, March 28.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Our country needs a sound public sentiment to overcome the evils now bred by greed and immorality. The masses must be uplifted to a high plane of thought and conduct. Alongside existing influences this can be achieved by establishing a powerful, non-commercial, ethical journal, with means donated by patriotic citizens. velt.

HENRY GREENEBAUM, of Chicago.

He Has Just Started.

LOS ANGELES, March 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The best we can do with Theodore Roosevelt is to favor his renomination, because he has just started to intelligently perform his Presidential duties and he can, better than any other citizen, accomplish the largest undertaking this country has ever attempted, viz.: the Panama Canal, and because he is intelligent, powerful and honest.

CARLO MARCHETTI.

Must Finish His Work.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] President Roosevelt is less a party man than the country's man. The thinking, conservative, patriotic members of all parties should unite in demanding that he yield his inclination, determination and obligation, if such exists, and finish his work, arduous though it be.

E. A. CONGDON.

Why Not a Third Term?

PASADENA, March 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] If Roosevelt is the most useful man to be had as his successor, why should he not be elected a second or third or even a fourth time? Are the interests of the great body of people to be jeopardized for no greater reason than to afford other men a chance to get into the Presidency?

J. A. WACHOB.

Sure He Will Yield.

LONG BEACH, March 28.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Let us induce President Roosevelt to accept another term. Having a good start, he will accomplish more in four years than any new President can in eight.

W. H. REIDER.

Good Democrat's Idea.

LOS ANGELES, March 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Let Roosevelt alone. When he retires from his office, let him take care of himself. If the public has use for an ex-President, it will call him. He would doubtless make a good manager of the Panama Canal, if allowed to be the chief. He would make a good Senator or Congressman.

I am a pretty good Democrat, but if Roosevelt's services are to be employed publicly, I want him to have a fair show, and do not want to see him in a subordinate position.

DANIEL M. HAMMACK.

Might Go to Farming.

SANTA PAULA, March 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] President Roosevelt may feel stronger in the work accomplished than the effort would justify in attempting to accomplish more. Let him select his desired vocation. I might suggest that he go farming. Cincinnatus was twice called from the plow, and Theodore Roosevelt could be found, if occasion demanded.

C. L. VARNER.

Country Needs Him.

SAN FERNANDO, March 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] As a Republican and citizen of this great country, I hope to see President Roosevelt renominated by the national convention to succeed himself, to give him an opportunity to fully carry out his ideas in compelling people to obey the laws.

JOHN BURR.

Boys Are for Him.

LOS ANGELES, March 29.—[To the Editor of The Times:] We are a bunch of Boyle Heights boys, too young to vote, but not too small to show how our fathers vote, and that is for Theodore Roosevelt to be our next President.

Man of Destiny.

PASADENA, March 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] All fair means that can be brought to bear upon President Roosevelt to induce him to serve the people of this republic a second term should be made use of. It is as certain that he has been raised up to battle with all the evils that beset this generation in its rapid and conscienceless race for gain and plunder at any cost, as it was that Abraham Lincoln was raised up for the emergency he had to meet.

G. ROSCOE THOMAS.

Overseer of Railroads.

LOS ANGELES, March 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Our worthy President Roosevelt should have a new job created for him, viz.: "Grand overseer of railroads in the United States, also of Interstate Commerce;" allow the railroad or trust companies to issue no new stocks or bonds, unless by his approval. In that position he will do the most good for the general public.

ALBERT L. WALTER.

Better Now Than Ever.

RIVERSIDE, March 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] If given four additional years President Roosevelt would be better able to meet the momentous questions of the day than any new man. My second choice would be to give him charge of the Panama Canal. His energy, untiring zeal, fearless honesty, and broad, far-reaching knowledge, fully equip him for that position.

W. W. DEAVER.

Third Term on Canal.

SAN DIEGO, March 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Elect Theodore Roosevelt for another term. This "third-term" howl is all nonsense. Our sister republic of Mexico finds it highly satisfactory and extremely prosperous to elect its President to the seventh or eighth term. If not that, then appoint him general manager of the construction of the Panama Canal. If that should not be done, appoint him general supervisor of railroads and coal mining and other national interests.

H. VANDERVOORT.

Dig Ditch, Run Again.

VENTURA, March 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] After his term as President expires, Theodore Roosevelt should go to Panama and superintend the digging of the canal. He can accomplish more as general manager on the ground, than he could as President in Washington. He would push the work and there would be no graft. After the canal is finished, there will be an almost irresistible call for him to serve another term as President, should he refuse to run again. He can end his days in the United States Senate.

FRANK NEWBY.

Solve Labor Problem.

SUNNY SLOPE, March 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The labor problem is today the greatest problem confronting the American people; the greatest menace to human liberty and free government. I would assign to Theodore Roosevelt the solution of the problem.

CARLYLE CHANNING DAVIS.

Senate an Alternative.

SANTA BARBARA, March 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] At the present state of affairs, Roosevelt should be reëlected, but intervening time may change the political atmosphere. Except very strong reasons call then for appeal to Roosevelt to allow his name for renomination, his former emphatically-expressed wish should be respected independent of other reasons against third term. In that case no better place for ex-President Roosevelt than the Senate.

EMIL M. BAUMBACH.

Senator for Life.

TUCSON, (Ariz.) March 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Enact the necessary legislation to make all past (living) Presidents life Senators, with a President's salary. Their counsel and experience would be invaluable in foreign, and domestic, diplomatic and commercial relations, the Panama Canal, reclamation of arid lands, improvement of inland waters, and insular possessions, and the great industrial problems of the day. They would be eligible to represent this country in peace congresses of the world.

LYMAN BRIDGES.

Will Find His Level.

PASADENA, March 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] To call this Roosevelt's first term is a quibble which Roosevelt himself forestalled when he announced that "under no circumstances" would he again be a candidate. His wisdom in that announcement smothers his fool friends who would drag him down from the high place he has won near George Washington. There is plenty of good Presidential timber. Roosevelt has always found a useful place and will in 1909, either as a Senator or in some more strenuous position.

C. C. CASE of the old 8th Maine.

Duty to Serve Again.

SAWTELLE, March 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The President is in duty bound to accept another term. If he will not, then he ought to be sent to the Senate. Our Congress would be better off without the Senate. As there is no way of getting rid of it, the next best thing is to send Roosevelt there with his big stick.

LEANDER McDONALD.

Senator-at-Large.

LOS ANGELES, March 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Roosevelt is unquestionably the greatest man in the politics of the world today, but to allow himself to be President for what would practically be his third term would be the most unwise thing he ever did. Senator at large for a definite term would be the greatest honor the American people could bestow upon him.

ALFRED A. DOVE.

Fremonter's Hope.

PASADENA, March 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I cast my first vote for President in 1856 for John C. Fremont, and have voted for every Republican President since. I hope I may live to vote for President Roosevelt in 1908, for the country needs him another term.

H. VAN NUYS.

Mathematical Puzzle.

RIVERSIDE, March 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The Presidential question seems to be one of mathematics. "Third term" is something like when the present century began, or how old is Ann. Might settle it by referendum next fall or spring. I have voted for every Republican candidate for President, except Fremont, only once for Roosevelt, am unanimous for second term. It's no time to trade horses, or seemingly to reduce the Commander-in-Chief to private, when the fight is on, and he winning victory after victory. Rather sound the charge.

JOHN McFARLAND.

Would Lead in Senate.

RIVERSIDE, March 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Having gone squarely on record that he will not accept another term, President Roosevelt should stick to it. Should he be persuaded to accept another term, it would condemn him as a "trimmer," before the expiration of the term. He should be elected to the Senate from his State, and not as a special life termer.

FRANCIS CUTTLE.

Democrat's Tribute.

KINGMAN (Ariz.) March 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am a lifelong Democrat, but an American first, I think for the best interest of the American nation, President Roosevelt should succeed himself as President of the United States.

J. D. JORDAN.

Must Not Bury Him.

LOS ANGELES, March 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Let us not bury the President by putting him into the Panama Canal. There are plenty of men to dig ditches. Do not put him in the Cabinet or give him an Ambassadorship. He is not a diplomat nor a routine official. He must be connected with the legislation of the country, either have the veto power or the privilege to vote as a Senator. By all honorable means induce him to serve another term as President. Failing in that, get him into the Senate where his strong personality, rugged honesty, love of a "square deal" and disregard for superstitious precedents would neutralize that silly and effete dignity that now attaches to that stolid body.

A. E. HASTINGS.

Department of Peace.

LOS ANGELES, March 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Theodore Roosevelt, Secretary of the Department of Peace, United States, a department in the Cabinet to be created by our government for the purpose of promoting universal peace, international and national arbitration.

With such a department in the Cabinet and Theodore Roosevelt as the first secretary, it would not be long ere the entire human race had heard the American eagle sing the glad tidings, "Peace on Earth and Good Will Toward Man." A long step would have been taken toward universal peace.

FRED KROGLUND.

SUMMARY.

THIRD TERM VOTE GROWS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) March 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The second week of the Roosevelt poll shows an increase rather than a decrease of the percentage of third term suggestions. The total vote for the second week was much larger than than that of the first. The total vote for two weeks was 6010 of which 67 per cent. is for a third term. The vote for the principal classifications to date is as follows: Another term, 4026; the United States Senate, 750; Panama Canal Supervisor, 694; educational work, 130; head of railroad commission, 120; retirement, 92; Cabinet position, 55; peace commissioner, 50; advisory office to be created, 40. The canvass will be closed next week.

OUR EXPORTS OF MANUFACTURES.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

The United States has reached third rank as an exporter of its own manufactures. The record is:

	Exports per Year.
United Kingdom	$1,400,000,000
Germany	1,000,000,000
United States	700,000,000
France	500,000,000

In the ten years, 1895 to 1905, the record of percentage increases in exported manufactures is:

	Increase Per Cent.
United States	198
Germany	75
United Kingdom	40
France	25

Census figures of the total annual output of our factories are:

1850	$ 1,000,000,000
1860	2,000,000,000
1870	4,000,000,000
1890	9,300,000,000
1900	13,000,000,000
1905 (larger industries only	14,666,000,000

Those last figures graphically portray the growth of the industrial history of the United States for the past fifty-six years.

According to a monograph on the subject of exported manufactures, just issued by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor, our exports of manufactures (now $700,000,000 a year,) have doubled in value in a single decade. Not only is this so, but the share which manufactures form of our total exports is also steadily increasing. In 1880 that share was 15 per cent.; in 1890, 21 per cent.; in 1900, 35 per cent., and in 1906, 40 per cent.

In view of the fact that our rapid increase in population compels an increasing use of food products and raw materials, the large increase above shown in the annual output of our factories, and consequently of the surplus available for export, is economically gratifying. Thus the trend of population to the manufacturing centers is not a subject of entire regret. To bring about this large increase in manufacturing outputs there has necessarily been a corresponding, or even greater, extension of manufacturing facilities, to the benefit of all other lines of American effort.

While manufactures rose from 21 per cent. of our total exports in 1890 to 40 per cent. in 1906, foodstuffs exported fell from 42 per cent. to 31 per cent.

Note the rise in our exports of manufactures since 1820:

1820	$ 8,000,000
1850	23,000,000
1860	48,500,000
1870	70,000,000
1880	122,000,000
1890	179,000,000
1900	485,000,000
1906	700,000,000

A glance at the figures shows the large increases each tenth year, especially in the past sixteen years. Thus, says the bureau, the growth of manufactures in the sixteen years since 1890 has practically been three times as great as that of the entire seventy years prior to 1890.

THOUGHT AND WORK.

I'm not what people say I am, I'm not a lazy man;
I simply do my work upon a scientific plan.
I let my head save hand and foot, I bring my brain in play;
And still I am a lazy chap, so all my neighbors say.
But I don't care, I let 'em talk, and keep about my work;
That is, I keep my brain hitched up and never let it shirk.

Each morn when I get out of bed I sit right down and think;
I think how this and that should go before I eat or drink.
I think up some good, easy way to do this thing and that,
And after thinking hard a spell I have it right down pat,
Instead of delving into it and working hard all day,
I simplify it fiftyfold by thinking out a way.

And, best of all, sometimes I find by thinking long and deep
There's many jobs that once I thought were pretty middling steep,
I do not need to do at all which I'd have gone and done
Had I not sat and thought 'em out before they were begun.
And that's the way I find it now, the more I sit and think
The less hard work I have to do to get my food and drink.

So if you see me sitting here beneath this tree each day,
And my good wife is washing clothes not very far away,
Pray don't misjudge for I shall be lost deep in thought to see
How she can get those washings out with less of drudgery.
I'm not what people say I am, I'm not a lazy man;
I simply get through life upon a scientific plan.

MINES AND MINING.

BULLFROG MINES SHOW GOOD ORE.

NOT AFFECTED BY THE LABOR DISTURBANCES.

Condensed Reports of Operations in the Principal Mines and Prospects of the District Show Active Development and Encouraging Results All Along the Line.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) March 28.—Bullfrog is one of the great districts of Nevada which has not yet felt the baneful influence of the Industrial Workers of the World upon its mineral production. Following is a concise statement of what is going on at several of its mines and prospects.

Amethyst—In the drift that is being driven from the 100-foot station of the 200-foot shaft has been tapped a breast of ore that runs $183.50 gold the ton.

Banner—Main ledge is 30 to 60 feet wide and yields average assays of from $15 to $28 per ton. Big double compartment shaft being sunk.

Belle—At a depth of thirty feet an average sample of the vein's footwall goes $12.50 per ton, while picked ore runs as high as $2500. The ledge varies in width from twenty to fifty feet, and is being explored by means of a shaft; down now about sixty feet.

Black Spar—Drifts have run to the four points of the compass on the 200-foot level. Two veins, yielding milling values, have been unearthed.

Bullfrog Mining—A recent test revealed average gold contents in a large quantity of dirt removed from the main workings to be $185 to the ton.

Francis—Average assays at bottom of main shaft, which is nearing a depth of fifty feet, run $28 gold per ton.

Gibraltar—Shipments of rich ore are regular. The product comes from the lower workings where a ledge sixty feet wide gives values ranging from $100 to $1000 per ton. Four other veins are being explored.

Diamond—Drifts at depths of 45, 80, 100, 200 and 410 feet from the incline shaft follow a vein which gives up milling values everywhere, with an occasional sprinkling of shipping ore.

Gold Bar—A system of crosscuts is being carried out on the 150 level. Water is being developed for milling purposes, the present flow being about 1000 gallons per hour.

Gold Bullfrog—The old board of directors was reëlected at the recent meeting in Los Angeles. This meeting decided upon the immediate erection of a standard mill and 60-tons cyanide plant.

Golden Sceptre—A crosscut from the 300-foot station in the main shaft, at a distance of 620 feet out, with a vertical depth of better than 500 feet, has cut a big body of sulphide ore that breaks at $12 the ton. This crosscut will tap the Hobo ledge at a point that will afford at least 1300 feet of backs. Both the Hobo and Eclipse leads were encountered by the 682-foot main tunnel. This is the deepest working in Bullfrog district, and the discovery of sulphides that far below the grass roots is evidence of the permanency of Bullfrog values.

Homestake—High grade milling ore fills the face of the 55-foot crosscut on the 400 level. The same sort of dirt is uncovered in the 150-foot drift on the footwall. On the 300 level the 46-foot ledge broke clean across at $22, and a sampling of eighteen feet on the 400 went upwards of $50 per ton.

Homestake Ex. — Several mineral-bearing stringers have been cut by the 400-foot crosscut tunnel which is aiming for the main ledge, estimated to lie about 100 feet forward.

Indian Springs—A mineral showing similar to that in the Shoshone appears in the main shaft.

Mayflower—Operations in the Starlight shaft have been discontinued, the ore to be lifted through the combination shaft, where a new hoist has been installed. The original Mayflower shaft is expected to cut the ledge in the near future and the crosscut on the 300 level is nearing the rich zone.

Montgomery Shoshone—For more than 300 feet the north drift on the 300-foot level at the Polaris has been in a fine grade of ore, running from $30 to $50 per ton. The face is now in a full breast that will ship at big profit without sorting. Rails are being laid on the railroad spur to the mine, whose completion will expedite regular shipments and the building of the big mill. Two tanks, each of a capacity of 100,000 gallons, are ready for the reception of the water supply that will be piped for use at the mill. Six to eight feet of ore, uncovered on the 400 level at the Shoshone, is good for $20 the ton.

Nugget—A winze is sinking on the Victor ledge from the end of the twenty-five-foot drift on the Sunrise claim. The five-foot lead pans gold everywhere. At another point there is a thirty-foot tunnel all in good ore.

Plutus—Two shafts are dropping in milling ore. With the arrival of an ordered hoist depth will be added.

Valley View—Values have been disclosed on three veins. Sinking is to begin at once on the west vein, which varies in width from twenty to twenty-five feet.

Victor—From the main tunnel drifts are following in both directions a twenty-one-foot ledge of all milling ore. The shaft is being sunk for the 100-foot level.

Vista Grande—Two shifts are working in the 185-foot tunnel, in which was encountered a three-foot vein.

West Extension—The past few weeks have brought to light a mammoth body of fine ore. At a recent meeting of directors $50,000 was raised for further development.

Ziegler—The management is working two shifts on the tunnel at the Pearl Hart claim. This bore is in 140 feet and has passed through a thirty-foot ledge of manganese quartz, which assays around $10 and upon which a drift has started. At a distance of 100 feet this drift will be in the ore at a vertical depth of 150 feet.

NEVADA CAMPS.

What Is Being Done in Manhattan and Fairview Prospects.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) March 28.—Up to this time no camp in Nevada outside of Goldfield, with the exception of Tonopah, has been affected by the local labor war. What is being accomplished in the mines of Manhattan and Fairview is here given in condensed form.

MANHATTAN.

Alliance—Group of claims east of Consolidated, recently purchased by National Exploration Company of Nevada. Extensive development outlined.

Crater—Seven claims in the southern section of the district recently acquired by Philadelphia capitalists. Full equipment of machinery ordered. Vein traceable for distance of 2000 feet.

Earl—May soon be consolidated with the Consolidated and Union No. 2. Such action will prevent pending litigation.

Hindocraft—Progress being made in contract tunnel to go 500 feet. Some ore exposed.

Manhattan Mining—Main shaft on Annie Laurie claim sinking rapidly. At depth exceeding 300 feet there is a six-foot vein of ore that all pays from a milling standpoint, and much of it is within the shipping class.

Mustang—At depth of 210 feet was tapped a ledge of ore which, in spots, gives returns as high as $2000 per ton. Cross-cut revealed a width of about three feet of rich ore.

Otero—Three feet of shipping ore.

Rambler—High-grade copper ore unearthed at a depth of eighty feet.

Stray Dog—At a depth slight in excess of 200 feet, shipping dirt has been exhumed in the main shaft.

FAIRVIEW.

Aztec—Joins Fairview Eagle on the east and is in line for continuation of vein system of Pyramids and Smith Syndicate, which adjoins it on the south. Shaft sinking and already in stringers of ore.

Condor—Breast of 140-foot tunnel is in ore that shows fair values.

Eagle—Exploring vein by east drift at 200-foot level. Vast bodies of shipable rock uncovered. Eagle is an adjoining neighbor of Nevada Hills and bids fair to become its equal in production.

Eagle's Nest—Adjoins Fairview Eagle. Has rich ore at slight depth.

Golden Boulder—Excellent values in tunnel level, but developments retarded by internal dissensions.

Ida—Effort making for the opening of the sulphide zone.

Lena—Owned by prominent Coloradoans, who have $30,000 in the treasury for development purposes.

Nevada Fairview—Two winzes dropping in solid ore and values increasing with depth.

Nevada Hills—Stoping upon a large scale has been decided upon. That Nevada Hills is a great mine has been proved, and the most serious problem of the owners is that of transportation. Nevada Hills adjoins Fairview Eagle.

Red Rock—Active developments under way.

Reliance—Proceeds of stock sales being spent on the ground.

Seymour Fraction—Full force at work. Hoisting plant coming. Deep shaft starts in fair values.

NEWBERRY DISTRICT.

Good Prospects in Many Claims in the New Nevada Mining Camp.

The Newberry district is located seventeen miles south of Searchlight, Nev.

The Empire mine is preparing to begin active operations the first of April.

Thomas J. Fry and Earnest G. Locke have let a contract to R. M. Kellogg to drive the tunnel of the Constellation group.

The Thurman property, owned by the Lloyds, has had a mill run of five tons, which gave an average value of $45.

Earle & Howe have a camp just one mile west of the Thurman mine, and have encountered $48 ore. One-half a mile south, Conners has run a tunnel 200 feet, and has ore running $50 per ton. The ledge is ten feet wide, but one of the walls has not been reached.

The Williams property, located about half way between Conners and the Howe & Earle property, is opened up to a depth of 50 feet, which exposes a ledge 15 feet wide.

The Red Bird group has a 5-foot ledge, assaying as high as $180.

The Walsh group of five claims, just south of Thurman mine, shows free gold on three of the claims.

One-half mile south of Thurman is located the Jumper mine, showing free gold as high as $40.

One-half mile south of the Jumper is Thurman's second strike, showing $21.

McGraw has started development work on his property, which bids fair to be one of the good producers.

The Real Thing and the Christmas Gift groups have struck good ore.

Adjoining the Constellation, on the south, is the Yuman property, which has a tunnel in 75 feet, showing high-grade ore.

The Taurman, Jumper, Old Roman, Nevada Constellation are all on the same strike, and all are most promising properties.

The Big Onion, owned by a colored man, shows high values in gold and silver. The owner has been offered $30,000 for his property.

Good values have been found wherever intelligence was used in development work, and yet the camp has not been thoroughly prospected.

BISBEE CAMP REMAINS OPEN.

ATTEMPT TO UNIONIZE DISTRICT AN UTTER FAILURE.

Wages Advanced, Business Confidence Restored and New Men Coming in—Defeated Totemites List the Camp as "Unfair" and Order Unionists to Keep Away.

BISBEE (Ariz.) March 30.—With the raise in wages to a minimum of $4 a day for miners, the old spirit of confidence has returned to Bisbee and the Warren mining district. Fears excited by the efforts of the Western Federation to unionize the camp seem to have wholly subsided, and credit has been reëstablished on the former basis. Many new men are coming in, drawn by the better wages, and within a very short time it is expected that all the mines in the district will be working with full force on every shift. The Western Federation is reported to have just listed Bisbee as "unfair," and ordered members of its organization to keep away from the camp. This would indicate that the federation has absolutely given up its fight, and that the question of unionism would no longer vex the camp. Despite the labor trouble, and the fact that several shafts have been shut down during the month, it is believed that the March production of the Copper Queen and Calumet smelters will be the largest in their history.

The Shattuck-Arizona and the Denn-Arizona companies have combined in an agreement to erect a joint smelter at Douglas, probably about the size of the Calumet plant. A committee representing the companies lately visited the Old Dominion smelter at Globe, which is considered the model smelter plant of the Southwest, and it is probable that they will model their new reduction works upon the same lines. It is expected that Arthur Howell, formerly superintendent of the Old Dominion, will be in charge of the new works. The Shattuck now is shipping about 300 tons of ore a day to the Copper Queen smelter. The Denn has developed good-sized bodies of ore and last Friday night broke into a new body on the 1100-foot level, carrying ruby copper and copper glance.

CANANEA.

After a long period of inactivity, much is doing around the mines of the Democrata Company at Cananea. A second furnace has been ordered for the smelting plant, with capacity for 250 tons. The present 100-ton furnace is now turning out fifteen tons of matte. The mine is almost surrounded by the properties of the Greene Consolidated, and the smelter plant is practically set into a niche in the immense body of oxide and carbonate ore. The mine has been worked for many years in a small way, and has been considered one of the best properties in the Cananea region.

The Charles Butters Company has contracted to treat with cynanide the tailings dump of the Colorado-Creston Mining Company at La Colorado. The tailings will be run through the Grand Central mill at Minas Prietas.

SMELTERS AT PRESCOTT.

Mystery of Gold Deposits on Rich Hill Being Investigated by Colorado Miners.

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) March 30.—The most important mining event of the year in Yavapai county was the "blowing in" of the Humboldt smelter in Big Bug district, south of Prescott. There appears a prospect that this benefit is to be doubled, if the plans submitted to the citizens of Prescott shall be carried out.

J. W. Boyleau of Detroit, Mich., has submitted to the City Council of Prescott a proposition for a ninety-nine-year lease upon eighty-eight acres of the city ranch on Granite Creek, in consideration of which he promises to begin within six months the erection of a $500,000 smelter, the plant to be in operation within a year. It is expected that the plant will be enlarged in three years to a capacity at least equal to that of any other smelter in the Southwest. The smelter is to be equipped for the handling of every class of ore, including the most refractory sulphide and zinc ores. The plant will be about two miles from the center of the city and readily reached by a short extension of the trolley line past Whipple Barracks.

THE MYSTERY OF RICH HILL.

Since 1863, there has been interminable argument concerning the source of the gold found on the summit of Rich Hill in Southern Yavapai county. This deposit was accidentally discovered by the Pauline Weaver party, the first American explorers of Central Arizona. Gold in nuggets and in coarse dust was scattered all over the surface of a small depression on the top of the mountain, which slopes away abruptly to the plain, thousands of feet below. Geologists have endeavored to show that the mountain once was much higher and that within it was contained a quartz ledge, and that the gold, heavier than the country rock, remained, while the lighter material was washed or blown away and disintegrated. In the immediate vicinity are a number of low-grade gold ledges, and near by, though at a much lower level, are the Congress, Octave and Planet-Saturn mines. The mother ledge, from which the Rich Hill nuggets came, has never been found. A company of Colorado miners has been formed lately to exploit the ground that the Weaver party worked. The miners are proceeding upon the theory that the nuggets came from below and that the mother ledge will be found by sinking. They have penetrated a bed of volcanic ash and are understood to have struck a ledge with a well-defined footwall. If they succeed in their quest, they will have demonstrated anew that Arizona is a land where the unexpected usually happens around mines.

MINING NOTES.

A fifty-ton Lane mill is to be installed by the Arizona Chief Gold Mines Company in Eureka district, forty-five miles northwest of Hillside Station. The water supply will have to be raised from Burro Creek with a lift of 800 feet.

A Lane mill also is to be placed before long upon the Glorioso mine, thirty miles west of Congress and twenty miles north of Wenden in the Harcuvar Mountains. President L. J. Court of the Glorioso company has lately interested ample eastern capital in the property. He has just returned to the mine to start development work anew. The claims are considered among the richest in that district. The ore has high average values in gold and is showing up well also in copper, as depth is attained.

In the tunnel of the Ingersoll mine in the Bradshaw Mountains, at a depth of 450 feet has been found a new pay streak that runs very high in silver. The tunnel is on the old Tuscumbia ledge, renowned in the early history of local mining.

A seven-inch pay streak, carrying gold values of $45 to the ton and about 7 per cent. copper, has been found on the Copper Nugget mine on the Lynx Creek divide. The ore has been found in a winze, sunk from the end of a tunnel 300 feet in length.

A company of Phoenix capitalists, headed by I. T. Hosey, has purchased the Neiman & Crosby group of gold mines in Santa Maria district.

CLAIMS IN LITIGATION.

Byron Erkenbrecher of Los Angeles was a late visitor to Prescott, to institute legal proceedings against the estate of Caius C. Bragg for the possession of a large interest in twenty patented mining claims, several ranches and valuable water rights located in and around Peeple's Valley, twenty miles from Prescott. John H. Hise, a Los Angeles mining engineer, is associated with Erkenbrecher in the case. They say they have paid Bragg several thousand dollars for an option upon the property in dispute, but that Bragg attempted to show a forfeiture had been worked at the expiration of the time limit upon the options.

SALES IN ARIZONA.

Several Groups of Mines Change Hands at Good Prices—Christmas Camp's Progress.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 30.—The Woodbury claims in the Superstition Mountains, north of Florence, have been sold for $100,000. There are twenty claims, though of comparatively shallow development. The assays of the ore have run as high as 21 per cent. copper and seventy ounces in silver. The Woodbury brothers also have bonded for $25,000 a group of claims adjoining the Silver Queen mine in Rogers district, Pinal county.

The personal property on the surface of the Angel mine, fifteen miles from Wickenburg, has been sold by the Sheriff of Maricopa county, under a judgment claim in the District Court. The sale realized not enough to satisfy the judgment, and it is understood that a levy has been made upon the mining ground for the deficiency. The sale was made by Sheriff Hayden, March 18. An interesting feature was that only two days before a carload of eastern stockholders in the Angel Consolidated Company, led by George E. Sanders, had visited the property, with a view toward the authorization of further development work, and even the installation of a reduction plant—this despite the fact that the claims had been relocated on the first of the year by Phoenix men, antagonistic to Sanders, the relocations being for the purpose of protecting judgments secured against the management and property.

It is said that an offer of $1,000,000 has been refused for the Ironwood-Arizona group of mines in the Harqua Hala district, a property opened only to the depth of 150 feet. The mines are fifteen miles west of Salome in the Harqua Hala Mountains, and were bought only a few months ago for a comparatively small sum by an eastern company. Since that time a fine body of high-grade sulphide copper has been found.

The United Arizona Copper Company, a new Kansas City corporation, has purchased the Mahoney group of mines in the Black Rock district, near Wickenburg. The mine has been developed to a depth of 150 feet, with about 1000 feet of drifting, showing a continuous ore body, carrying good values in copper, silver and gold.

From Commonwealth, Cochise county, comes a story that John Pearce, the original owner of the Commonwealth, has struck the mother lode of the once famous property on adjoining claims. The strike was made only twenty feet below the surface. Silver ore assaying seventeen ounces to the ton has been found. The new ground has been put in the hands of a corporation styled the Pearce Development Company, headed by B. F. Kaufman, a Michigan capitalist. The directors are all Arizonans, viz., M. D. Scribner, A. H. Emanuel, John Henninger and John Pearce.

The mining camp of Christmas, in the southern part of Gila county, is making rapid advance, now claiming a population of over 1000. The company is building a narrow-gauge railroad for a distance of about three miles to better its transportation facilities, freight now being received by wagon from Winkelman, at the end of the Phoenix and Eastern Railroad. The company is operating a 200-ton water jacket furnace, which is producing about 500,000 pounds of copper matte per month. The company has purchased another furnace, giving a total capacity of about 600 tons a day. Several sulphide ore bodies have been blocked out and it is probable that all the necessary fluxing ores will soon be developed. At present the matte is being shipped for final reduction to the Humboldt smelter.

Thomas Thomas, a Montana miner, has been appointed superintendent of the United Verde mine, succeeding William McDermott, lately made general manager of the Twin Buttes mine near Tucson.

COPPER PRODUCTION.

Old Dominion Turns Out Large Quantity of Metal and Expects to Declare Dividend in June.

GLOBE (Ariz.) March 30.—Four furnaces are being operated on the Old Dominion, turning out 3,000,000 pounds of converter copper a month, making a showing from which it is expected a quarterly dividend of $1 a share will be declared in June. A fifth furnace will be operated in June and a sixth will be installed soon thereafter. The Arizona Commercial has been making shipments of sixty tons of sulphides a day to the Old Dominion smelter. The Old Dominion cross-cut on the fourteenth level is now about seventy-five feet long, with a stope thirty feet wide in sulphide ore that will average 25 per cent. A large amount of this ore will be run through the smelter in April, and is expected to materially increase the output.

The Old Dominion Company has made announcement that, after April 1, the minimum wage for miners will be $4 per day, the same scale lately announced by the mining companies at Bisbee. As at Bisbee, this scale will continue in effect as long as copper remains at its present high price. All other laborers than miners will receive an advance of about 25 cents per day. The change is not as abrupt as it has been at Bisbee, for $4 a day has been paid for some time in many of the mines in the outlying sections of Globe district.

Prof. James Douglas, president of the Phelps-Dodge corporation, is now on his annual trip of inspection of the southwestern properties of the company. He has visited Globe and has inspected the new strike in the Old Dominion. He stated that the Old Dominion reduction works were by no means complete and that improvements and extensions would be continued indefinitely. At Morenci the Phelps-Dodge Company is building a new converter plant to take the place of old and ineffective apparatus that has been in use for many years, wherein the matte from the furnace was conducted to the converters by means of troughs instead of by crane buckets.

YUMA COUNTY.

Mayhew Makes Another Sale of Mines to Los Angeles Operators.

YUMA (Ariz.) March 30.—Felix Mayhew, who lately sold a valuable group near Kofa, Yuma county, has made a second sale to the Ready Money Mining Company of Los Angeles, represented by C. F. Hall. Mayhew is to receive $100,000 for the group just sold which is one he has owned for three years. The purchasing company already owns a number of claims in the same vicinity.

An offer of $25,000 has been refused for property lately located by William and Lynn Despain in the Plumosa mining district, though there is no development on the property deeper than ten feet. The owners are confident that they have one of the richest mines in Arizona. In the same district have been made a large number of locations on a well-defined ledge about fifteen feet wide, from which a number of Yuma men are expecting to realize immense riches.

John Gondolfo of Yuma, has secured from the Mexican government a concession embracing a large number of mining claims near Tenejas Altas, a short distance south of the international line. Gold and copper have been found on the property in immense quantities, but the water question is a most serious one, and must be settled before the mines become of particular value.

BIG COPPER DEAL.

Lewisohns Pay a Million in Cash for Inspiration Mines Near Globe.

GLOBE (Ariz.) March 30.—One of the largest mining deals ever made in Arizona was the purchase of the Inspiration mines near Globe by the General Development Company of New York. It is stated that the stockholders of the Inspiration Company will receive something over $1,000,000 in cash and $2,000,000 more in the stock of the new corporation. The purchasing corporation is controlled by the Lewisohn Brothers of New York, one of the most powerful firms of copper factors in the world. The Inspiration property comprises twenty mining claims and a concentrating mill. A small lawsuit has arisen out of the sale, Charles E. Taylor of Globe having filed suit against the Inspiration Company to quiet title to several outside mining claims, which are understood to have been included in the deal.

For a consideration of $285,000, the first payment to be made May 1, Samuel W. Osgood, representing Chicago capital, has bought two groups of claims, near the Arizona Commercial. The sellers are Dr. T. Shields Collins, Thomas Doyle, Antonio Trojanovich and Mrs. Emma J. Warner. The mines have been under development for a dozen years or more, on one claim there being a shaft 175 feet deep.

For several years the well-known Black Warrior property, near Globe, has been idle, owing to quarrels among the stockholders, and to the failure of an elaborate reduction works that had been installed at an expense of about $500,000. Some prospecting has been kept up, however, on the property, and it is understood that a new vein has been encountered in the lowest tunnel, at a distance from its mouth of 1000 feet, that averages 10 per cent. in copper. The main deposit of the Black Warrior is of immense size and of low grade. The new vein is reported to be forty feet in width.

Several of the Globe mines have been shut down for short periods lately on account of the lack of fuel oil. An ample supply is on the road, but it is understood the scores of cars of oil billed for Globe have been confiscated by the Southern Pacific in order to keep its system running. The Old Dominion still has oil on hand, but the supply is decreasing rapidly.

About ninety tons a day of silicious ore are being shipped by the Arizona Commercial Company to the smelters at Douglas, where it is used for converter linings. The Commercial now has hundreds of feet of workings in excellent ore, and its production will be increased materially on the completion of its private railroad to the Black Hawk claims.

The Cananea-Arizona Consolidated Company, which lately acquired the Collins-Doyle and Trojanovich groups, will have a capitalization of $5,000,000.

The shaft of the Arizona National Company on Pinto Creek is now down 155 feet, and has penetrated about seventy-five feet of ore, averaging 4 per cent. copper.

Sulphide ore of good grade has been struck at a depth of only 190 feet in the main shaft of the Globe Mining Company.

SEARCHLIGHT.

Quartette Declares Regular Dividend, Quarry of Building Stone Opened Near Railway.

SEARCHLIGHT, (Nev.) March 28.—The directors of the Quartette Mining Company have declared the usual bi-monthly dividend of one and one-half per cent., amounting to $15,000, payable March 30, to stockholders of record of March 20. This carries with it a payment of $15,000 on contingent rights on treasury stock, making a total payment of $185,000 and requiring but one more payment of $15,000 to cancel the entire amount, $200,000. After that is paid, all earnings will be available for dividends.

The Fortuna mine at Eldorado Cañon reports 550 feet of underground work and $25,000 of ore in sacks taken in the course of development. After three months of development, a large force will be put on to take out ore, which will amount to at least $20,000 per month.

In starting a new shaft on the Honest Miner claim of the Black Hawk Consolidated, at the cañon, at a depth of nine feet, a good body of ore has been struck that averages $160 to the ton. On the strength of previous development, a ten-stamp mill will be installed.

Of far-reaching importance to this community is the discovery of a large deposit of fine building stone, eleven miles out of Searchlight, and adjoining the right of way of the Santa Fe Railroad. It covers 1000 acres, is a dull white in color, resembles sandstone, but is a silicate, feathers well in quarrying and permits of blocks ten feet square. The locaters are F. L. Madison and R. P. Hall. It promises to work a revolution in building in this vicinity. Stone will cost little, if any, more than frame construction.

M. H. Desmond, banker of Highland, Cal., is receiving bids for a two-story building opposite the Searchlight Hotel. Near this E. C. Clapp, druggist of Covina, will build; and Woods, the shoe man of San Bernardino, is to build for a branch store.

The Barnwell branch of the Santa Fé Railroad has reached this point, but some switches remain to be put in, and the officials have not yet announced the opening day, a special feature of which will be an excursion from Los Angeles.

On Friday was given the first exhibition of water throwing under gravity pressure from the city reservoir, for fire purposes. Two streams with three-inch hose and one-inch nozzle, attached to separate hydrants, were thrown 100 feet high. There are two hose stations conveniently located and hydrants throughout the central district, and fire fighting facilities are now considered first class.

Blue Ridge Group.

Trains are now running from Goldfield to Springdale and will, within ten days, be running into Beatty. This means through travel by rail from Los Angeles to the principal mining camps in Nevada. Of the many mining properties in the Bullfrog district, in the immediate vicinity of the new town of Springdale, none are attracting more attention than the Blue Ridge group, controlled by Los Angeles people, with offices in the Chamber of Commerce. This property shows a ledge twenty-four feet wide, in which there are said to be a number of parallel stringers of very rich ore. Preparations are now under way for the sinking of the main working shaft in the center of the ledge.

PACIFIC COAST SODA CO.

Soda—A New and Wonderful Natur
Product, Richer in Profit than Bora
Join Us in the Development of a Fortune.

The fifty million pounds of sodas—soda ash, caustic soda, sal soda, bleaching powders, cooking soda, soda hyposulphite, washing compounds, Glauber salts, etc., which is sold to the trade of this coast each year, pays tremendous tribute to the railways, as every ounce of it is brought from far distant Eastern points. The Pacific Coast Soda Co. will change this condition. We have the only deposits of crude soda in the world—of proven purity and exhaustless extent.

In this natural supply of crude material Nature has partially completed the manufacturing process—all other soda manufacturers have to use artificial or chemical processes to produce their product. These crude deposits run from 50 to 90 per cent. pure and cost us only the digging, which, with our own special methods of treatment, enable us to sell at Eastern prices and more than double our money; but we will get some of this freight difference also. In addition to the above eight products we will have about twenty-nine biproducts of chemically pure chemicals.

These soda deposits are a well known phenomenon of Nature, as old as the hills; but only now have rail facilities made their development possible. It is a product of greater range than borax, and if, with the awkward and cumbersome "Twenty Mule Team" transportation, Borax Smith could take some forty-eight million dollars in profit out of his enterprise, what may be the extent of the fortune awaiting us in soda with the steam cars to freight our crude material? The new Tonopah-Tidewater Railroad parallels our soda lake deposit for miles. We offer you the opportunity of joining this high-class industrial enterprise at the opening price.

An allotment of preferred shares at 80c (par value one dollar) has been placed on the market, and they present the opportunity of sharing in one of the most fascinating and profitable industries in the commercial world.

The trade-mark below—Cala-Soda—distinguishes this California soda from other brands. It will become noted for its purity, and to you as an investor and shareholder will become a symbol of profit.

See the process of making pure soda out of the crude material as it comes from the natural and exhaustless Deposits. Exhibition Every Day Free. Write or call for valuable literature on this wonderful product.

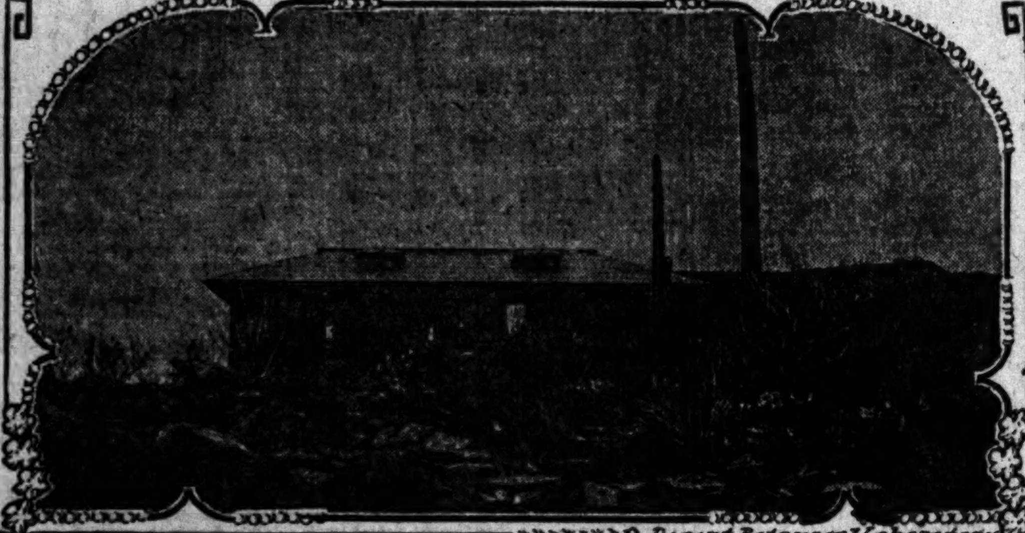
Studying Desert Plant Life.

INTERESTING INVESTIGATIONS AT CARNEGIE DESERT LABORATORY—HOMES IN ARID LANDS.

By G. Gordon Copp.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

A REPORT, recently completed, of the department of botanical research of the Carnegie Institution, Washington, D. C., of which department Dr. Daniel Trembley MacDougal is director, contains much of interest to those who have the real benefit of the West at heart, and more that is of vital interest to those engaged in the work of converting the vast expanse of arid land into fertile home sites for the crowded, even overcrowded, residents of the populous East. Dr. MacDougal has made a specialty of the study of the natural vegetable products of the arid lands and the conditions under which they thrive in most places, endure in others, and refuse to be entirely eradicated in more than the most limited areas of such desert lands. In other words the arid lands support an immense and varied flora, much of the desert affords fair, often abundant feed for cattle, and is the chosen home of countless birds, game and otherwise, and an equal abundance of wild animal life. In a few instances, rare enough to be of especial interest to the scientist, a tract absolutely devoid of plant life is discovered. It is fair to presume that in the increase of knowledge of such conditions, the character of plants which best endure them, the manner in which plants adapt themselves to such surroundings, the character of the soil, degrees of temperature and amounts of moisture obtainable by them, lies the solution of very many of the problems which beset the improver of such lands and vitally affect the settler who has every reason to expect to profit by the efforts of those engaged in the complicated task of controlling the water supply. That mistakes should be made and new difficulties present themselves is not to be wondered at.



Desert Botanical Laboratory Carnegie Institution, Tucson, Ariz.

Less is known about the desert, its products and possibilities than of any other known character of land. The intense heat, the difficulty of transportation and travel in the arid wastes, and, above all, the scarcity of water, have presented almost insurmountable obstacles to the explorer and botanist. It was to afford a local base of inquiry and a repository of material and data collected often at far distant points that the desert laboratory at Tucson, Ariz., was established. With a comparatively small corps of scientists directly engaged, a surprising amount has been accomplished during the four years since the laboratory was established.

The report calls attention to the fact that "it seems fairly apparent that the greater portion of the more pronounced arid areas in North America have been in submersion during comparatively recent geological periods, and consequently that the highly-specialized flora which now inhabits such regions is of fairly recent origin.

It is apparent that the movement and behavior of such plants in the occupation of new areas might be of great value, and the Salton basin, in Southern California, offers opportunities of this character. This basin is an irregular, oblong depression, with an area of 2000 square miles, and extends from the angle formed by the San Jacinto Mountains and the San Bernardino foothills to a point across the international boundary line between the United States and Mexico, and is cut off from the Gulf of California by the alluvial deposits in the delta of the Colorado River. The lowest point is 287 feet below the level of the sea. Although it is believed to have been the site of a lake until comparatively recent times, it has been empty since historic time, although the floor waters of the Rio Colorado have been diverted several times during the last century to the extent of flowing into the basin and forming a small lake.

As the settlers in Imperial Valley know to their cost, flood waters of the Colorado River, aided in their destructive course by engineering operations connected with irrigating the valley, have run into the basin and have formed a lake with an area of 400 or more square miles. Fortunately, Dr. MacDougal, and Mr. Frederick V. Coville of the United States Bureau of Agriculture, explored the basin in 1903, and secured considerable data concerning the vegetation therein and photographs illustrative of its character and surroundings. Submersion having entirely destroyed this vegetation, the gradual recession and final disappearance of the lake under the combined effects of evaporation and seepage since the influx of water, has been stopped, will afford remarkable apportunity to observe the reclothing of the expanse with vegetation, which, it is thought, will retain its desert character. An examination of the effect of the advancing water line upon the vegetation of the contiguous desert was made by Dr. MacDougal and Godfrey Sykes last spring and summer, and Prof. and Mrs. V. M. Spaulding, also began some observations near the shore at Mecca, Cal., early in October, at the maximum height of the water.

ALTERATIONS POSSIBLE.

"It is known that the color, time of bloom, habit, structure of the root and shoot, general aspect of plants and their economic value may be greatly altered by cultures at different altitudes, but no systematic tests have been made to determine to what factors in the climates concerned these differences are due." This sounds highly technical, and the casual reader's first thought is that it is important only to the scientist. He has only to remember that so simple a matter as excluding the light from plants under cultivation, improves the quality of celery and rhubarb, and that certain fruits which develop well on sandy irrigated mesas may not do half as well in the valley farms, perhaps not more than forty to fifty feet below the mesa, to realize how much the farmer may be benefited by the results of such experiments.

To pursue these investigations small plantations have been established at varying distances and elevations, by the desert laboratory officials and horticulturists, and botanical gardens located at widely divergent points have coöperated in the distribution of plants not only from one elevation and comparatively near locality to another, but from one country to another. Among other places such experimental stations have been located in the valley of the Santa Cruz River, and at an elevation of 8000 feet on a spur of the Santa Catalina Mountains.

Sweeping changes occur in the structure and habit of the Roripa Americana (American water cress,) transplanted in sundry localities differing widely in their conditions from those of the plant's native habitat, Lake Champlain, where it was found by Dr. MacDougal in 1902, growing in three feet of water.

DISTRIBUTION.

These plantations have also given opportunity for a comprehensive study of the ever interesting problems of the distribution of plants. Such study has been carried on by Prof. V. M. Spaulding, with the additional facilities afforded by a topographical survey which has been completed and a geological survey, now in progress under the direction of the geological department of the University of Arizona.

Mrs. E. S. Spaulding, devoting her attention to succulents, the typical vegetation of the arid lands, reports that changes in shape and volume of the saguaro (cereus giganteus) or giant cactus are controlled not only by water content, but in minor degree, by temperature and illumination.

Dr. B. E. Livingston has been conducting a series of experiments for the ultimate purpose of determining in a comprehensive way, the entire water relations of desert vegetation. Such study involves investigation of the relations of plants to soil, moisture, conditions of the soil and air, and above all the varying abilities of plants to retain the moisture so laboriously obtained or controlled in arid localities. A study of transpiration in plants, a vital factor in this connection, shows that much difference exists among separate forms as to physicological regulation of transpiration.

Meantime Prof. F. E. Lloyd has been making an equally exhaustive study of the action of the stomata, those little mouths that prevail in the leaves of plants and open and close to absorb such elements of the air as aid in the digestion of the food gathered by the roots. He has found that little, if any, movement occurs in darkness and persistent retention from the light results in starvation of certain cells. The stomata has much to do with the escape of moisture from the plant, but contrary to the generally accepted belief, Prof. Lloyd is convinced that these little openings do not govern the escape of moisture, but that the same amount of moisture escapes through these tiny breathing places when they are partially closed, as when fully open. This singular fact seems to afford the most important reason yet discovered for nature's action in reducing the foliage of many desert plants, where the retention of moisture during long periods of almost total absence of moisture from air and soil is vitally essential to their well being.

THE CACTI.

Such elimination of foliage is most apparent in the cacti which are practically reduced to variously formed stems bearing only the most rudimentary remnants of leaf organs, which are generally discarded very early in the life of the younger plants and the newest growth of older cacti.

Among the many activities at the desert laboratory at Tucson a comprehensive examination of the water-storage functions of the plants of arid regions has been begun by Dr. MacDougal.

The adaptions for accumulating and holding a reserve supply of water occur in all parts of the root and shoot of various species of seed plants, and Dr. MacDougal considers that so far as a general survey of American deserts has been made, indications are that storage organs and storage plants are most abundant in regions in which the scant rainfall comes within a limited period in the year, while the remainder of the year is lacking in sensible precipitation. In situations where the precipitation is very slight, at any time, and in which the total is small, very few plants are found with well developed storage organs.

Ibervillea sonorae (guarequi) develops a storage organ at the base of the stem, which is furnished with a heavy outer covering which resists evaporation to a remarkable degree. The immense vegetable reservoir out of all proportion to the scant stems and foliage it develops, lies in the burning sands, only partially concealed, and looks with its gray covering more like a great boulder than a living vegetable organ. Dormant all the long, hot dry season, during the brief season of rainfall, it rapidly develops stems and foliage, and as hastily perfects its blossoms and fruit. Some of these plants, collected and placed on the dry shelf of a museum case in 1902, have, at the approach of the rainy season in its native home, renewed their growth each year since. Thin stems and foliage appear, run the brief gamut of their yearly resurrection, and die down again. Thus the plant has made five years' annual growth at the expense of water stored up in October, 1901, and the big reservoir shows no appreciable change. To all outward appearance the plant may continue its growth for a decade.

Exploration of the better known deserts of North America has proved so valuable in results, while indirectly inciting like researches, that it was decided to extend the work to less known areas.

IN NEVADA.

In accordance with this plan, a visit was made by Dr. MacDougal to the sagebrush deserts of Northern Nevada, to the dry and saline regions in the vicinity of Great Salt Lake, Utah, and to the great bolson of Las Vegas in Southern Nevada, in which districts the annual precipitation does not exceed ten inches. The vegetation in these regions was found to prevail in plants fitted rather for making most economical used of moisture than the storing of it up against the necessities of the dryer periods.

August and September was spent in exploration in the vicinity of Laredo, Tex.; Saltillo, Mexico City and in the region southward from Tehuacan to Mitla. The Tehuacan desert was found to contain an abundance of plants with organs especially adapted for the storage of moisture. Among such plants were numerous massive cacti, several species of which attain greater bulk than the giant cactus of Arizona. Three species of beaucarnea were found in which the storage capacity was very highly developed. It was estimated that one species had the ability to store up from a ton to a ton and a half of water for use during the long dry periods.

Dr. J. N. Rose, assistant curator of botany in the Smithsonian Institution, coöperated in these later explorations. A large amount of living material was collected for the desert laboratory, and a carload of succulents was shipped to New York to be used by Dr. Rose and by Dr. N. L. Britton, director-in-chief of the New York Botanical Garden, in their investigation of the cactus and kindred plants.

In addition to the multiple duties involved in the directorship of the Carnegie Desert Laboratory at Tucson, Ariz., Dr. MacDougal has continued a series of investigations begun in the New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York City, in 1902, upon the development of new species of plants directly from parent plants, a development deemed impossible under the Darwinian theory that it required generations of time and an infinite number of minor changes, for anything in nature to attain the dignity and assume the qualifications of a new species.

He not only found that plants frequently develop new species among their direct offspring, but that innoculation of the ovaries of parents plants frequently causes them to produce totally new species of plants among their immediate and numerous offspring. Also that such singular changing plants prove themselves to be new species by developing offspring which retain the characteristics of the parent plants.

ON MT. WILSON.

Among the indirect labors of the Tucson laboratory attachés, Godfrey Sykes was detailed to the solar observatory on Mount Wilson, from July 1, 1906, until the close of the year. During that time he constructed a roadway from the vicinity of Pasadena to the summit of the mountain, an elevation of nearly 5000 feet, an engineering problem which presented many difficulties, which were successfully overcome.

At present the grounds available for experimental work about the desert laboratory comprise 860 acres, immediately to the westward of the city of Tucson. Tumamoc hill rises to a height of about 800 feet, and the laboratory building occupies a convenient shoulder of the hill about midway to the top. It is reached by a somewhat uneven mountain road, which is to be replaced by a better one. During the past year the capacity of the building was nearly doubled, and the improvements include a small glass house for experiments upon living plants. The building now includes fourteen rooms, all especially adapted for the varied scientific purposes for which they were planned. Among the other activities of the past busy year, it was found necessary to reorganize the entire water system, and it is believed that an adequate supply is now provided not only for all ordinary uses of the laboratory, but also for protection from fire.

ORGANIZED ROBBERY.

A RESULT FROM UNIONIZED CONDITIONS OF A TRADE.

No Recognition of Moral Obligations to Give an Employer Fair Service in Consideration for the Exorbitant Wages Demanded—Fines Imposed on Employers.

There is nothing more important at the present time in every community than the organization of employers of free labor, that each may be prepared to resist the demands of labor organizations that will otherwise make industrial conditions so onerous that development will have to stop.

The importance of such organization was remarked upon by William Collison, the general secretary and manager of the National Free Labor Association of Great Britain during his visit to this country a few months ago. In an article he contributed to the Free Labor Press of London, he said: "The general demand for labor, and lack of organized free labor, tend to place the individual American employer in the hands of the trade-union 'grafters,' who levy blackmail upon him, and if he does not comply with their demands, strike his works, boycott his manufactured goods, and put him out of business." How well he voiced the situation is proved by some recent events, which show that the union organizations are no respecters of persons or conditions, but are determined to dictate conditions to those who give them employment and who seek to build up the communities in which they live.

EXPENSIVE BRICK-LAYING.

Rev. Brother Xenophon, priest in charge of St. Vincent Orphanage, Marin county, Cal., having planned the erection of a new brick edifice on the asylum premises, secured the services of four brick masons to lay the walls of the new building.

The wages of each laborer were fixed at $8 per diem. It is generally understood that a fair day's work at brick-laying, as fixed by the Bricklayers' Union is 1400 brick for each man. The reverend father, on measuring the first day's work, found that the four men had laid a total of 1800 brick, or 450 per man, at a cost of nearly 2 cents per brick. Rather than bankrupt the treasury, he decided to suspend building operations altogether.

Such laziness on the part of employés could never exist under other conditions than trade-unionism, which seems to develop an intense moral blindness. No better evidence than this could be found of the entire lack of respect unionism develops for the rights of employers. The building on which they were put to work was connected with a most worthy charity, and would never become the means of personal profit to any one. The necessity of discontinuing the work forces a hardship upon innocent orphans, and prevents the very workmen, who would have done the work, from enjoying the revenue that would have been theirs had they been content with reasonable wages, and for which, under free labor conditions, they would have done a reasonable day's work.

Some other examples showing the injurious effect of unionism upon a community are contained in a letter received in this city from a resident of Butte, Mont., a community that that has allowed unionism to get the upper hand. The writer says:

FINES LEVIED BY UNIONS.

"A few weeks ago a merchant of Butte received notice to call at the headquarters of the Clerks' Union, and on going to this room he was told by the august tribunal of this union that he was fined $100, the offense being that he had kept his store open on Christmas Eve twenty minutes beyond the time when the doors must close, 10 o'clock. When the officer of the union called to collect the fine he was tendered a check, which he declined to accept, and he also refused to sign a receipt; furthermore, he would not take the money in the presence of witnesses. You are doubtless aware that in the methods of the "road agents" or the "night hold-up artists" checks are not in high favor, and vouchers are not usually signed.

"The Bricklayers' Union is one of the most offensive of all we have to deal with. There are some good men in the union, who deprecate the violent proceedings which take place in the meetings of the union, and such men do not attend, preferring to keep out of the hospital, and so the union is run by a band of ruffians. One of our citizens had a concrete foundation recently put in, and because he did not employ a foreman at $7 a day (this foreman designated, selected, approved, indorsed and ratified by the union,) he was fined $100, but the collector announced to the victim that his fine had been considerately reduced to $42. A protest or a refusal to pay would have meant that the building over his foundation could not have been constructed, as the union members would refuse to work on it. Here, again, a check in payment of the fine was refused. The sufferer could hardly be expected to keep posted on all the rules of all the unions, and even if he had been aware of this rule, namely, that a $7 foreman must be employed, it is, of course, doubtful if he would have felt that he had to comply with it.

"Another citizen had a simple bricklayer's job which required three days. After the job was finished he was fined $25 because he had not employed a foreman at $7 a day to supervise the labor of this bricklayer.

"It is reported that another contractor here was fined $30 for some offense against union rules, and when he offered a check and it was refused, he had to go out and get the cash. He was gone so long that they fined him an additional $50 for the time he was away. I believe they admit that the reason they will not sign a voucher or take a check is that they do not propose to furnish evidence on which a suit could be brought against them for extortion. Of course, they must be entirely within the law if they are unwilling to be subject to the law!"

New Wrinkles in Clothes

AREN'T these "the stylish duds?" I was looking for "New Wrinkles"—and I got 'em.

A week ago—when my suit was new—it looked as well as the best.

But yesterday the weather was damp.

Fine sight—ain't I?

My clothier says, "Nothing doing!"

So—I went across the street and saw some Kaufman Garments—$15.00 to $18.00—guaranteed.

Guaranteed for—up-to-date fabric patterns—up-to-the-minute, design—cut—fit—finish and shape permanence.

This "exclusive pattern" talk of some clothes-makers is—just talk and nothing more.

All clothes-makers buy from the same mills. And all weavers make up the same patterns in different grades of fabric the same season.

But the Kaufmans use a special shrinking process.

Every bolt of cloth that comes to the great Kaufman Tailoring Establishment is treated with what is known as The Kaufman "Pre-Shrinking" Process, which takes every bit of the "shrink tendency" out of the fabric before it is made up into Kaufman Garments.

That is why Kaufman Garments—at $15.00 to $18.00—always hold their shape.

That is why wearers of Kaufman Garments always look well—are always "stylishly" dressed.

Kaufman Garments wear better because Pre-Shrunk fabrics do not "wrinkle," "chafe" nor "get thin" in odd corners.

But only the Kaufmans can give you this assurance.

Kaufman Garments $15. to $18.

So—low-priced or high-priced—you get the same fabric effects—checks, stripes, or plain goods—no matter what you pay for your clothes.

As for designs—cut, fit and finish—these are all after the same fashion plates each season.

And all clothes-makers give you the same styles.

But "shape permanence" is quite another matter—because all wool will shrink.

And unless this "shrink tendency" can be overcome somewhere between the sheep's back and your back, why, it will surely show up in your clothes and make trouble.

Clothes made from fabrics that are not thoroughly shrunk in advance are sure to "wrinkle"—or "pucker"—or "hump"—or "bulge"—or "draw in"—on the very first damp day.

It is "up to the clothes-makers" to shrink the fabrics.

They do their best, but "their best" isn't always very good, and—sometimes—it is pretty poor—as in case of the clothes I have on.

The Kaufman "Pre-Shrinking" Process is owned and controlled by the Kaufmans and they will not allow its use outside their own big tailoring establishment.

Of course shrinkage means loss to the Kaufmans, but they want your trade, so are content with small profit, and give you for $15.00 and $18.00 as nobby fabric patterns and fine original style as other clothes-makers give—and then—the shape permanence which others cannot give—no matter how much they charge.

Why should you pay $35.00 or more for uncertain shape in clothes, when you get shape certainty for less money? Our prices range from $10 to $25. Most people can be suited in Kaufman Garments $15 to $18.

"The Well Dressed Man in 1907" shown in the new Kaufman Style Book. Ask Kaufman Dealers for it—or write to Chas. Kaufman & Bros., Chicago.

If you would look well dressed—in clothes that hold their shape—save your pocketbook—and gain the approval of your own sound good sense—the mark to look for is—

WORKERS WHO WHEEL AND WHAT THEY GAIN

Legions of Riders Who Are True to the Bicycle.

Bicycle riders who have been getting into the game again, and who are wondering why they have delayed so long about it, are apt to have a feeling of self-consciousness until they gradually realize that literally hundreds of thousands of riders have never given up the wheel at all. It puts a rather different perspective on bicycling, when they come to know that there were half a million wheels made in the United States in 1906, and that every manufacturer who was forehanded enough to provide for material, expects to increase his output fifty per cent. this year.

These figures, large as they are, will bear close analysis and their correctness is unquestioned. Manufacturers who are short on essential bicycle parts at this writing are already predicting a famine in the wheel market, and the country has not heard that sort of a statement before in a good many years. One eastern manufacturer, whose sales are largely made direct to riders, has given out the statement that he has more orders on his books January 1st, 1907, than he ever had before—and his records include the so-called fad years.

The recent general revival of wheeling is simply another proof of the old adage that you can't keep a good thing down. When the fickle public turned its back on the wheel as a pure fad, the bicycle makers trimmed their sails to meet the changed conditions, and for half a dozen years were content to put out their product for utilitarian purposes. It seemed that no sooner had bottom been touched in the wheel business than the reaction began. It was very slow at first; very gradual, but the bicycle had so many good points, that its growth has continued year by year, until at the present time the manufacturers are facing conditions akin to those of ten years ago, just preceding the immense sales of the middle 90's.

And in these ten years those who have never given up the wheel have had plenty of reason for self-congratulation. The steady rider has been the companion who gave up his wheel [illegible] of breath while he himself has kept in good health as a rule, has enjoyed better digestion [illegible] and can stand more fatigue, than the average man of his years.

And if this condition is of importance in the case of men riders, it is still more vital as far as women riders are concerned. Nothing before or since [illegible] womankind, who are virtually barred from the countless forms of athletic sport by which young men prepare themselves for the hard, exhaustive, money-making years.

By the way, have you ever stopped to think what a money maker the wheel is itself, to the average salaried worker? Except in the smallest communities, every business man or woman, every clerk and every laborer is directly taxed ten cents a day by the traction companies. Every man or woman who wishes to eat the noon meal at home must pay an additional ten cents every working day for the privilege of doing so. And in the course of a year that means, in round numbers, $60 at least. Add to this the necessary daily trips, the countless [illegible] ordinarily used, and the figures will be expanded materially. Then place in the opposite column the tangible gain which comes from the possession of a free means of transportation that is also unequaled for sport and pleasure; take into account the delightful Sunday runs, and all through the summer and autumn the pleasant trips in the cool of the evening and the many excursions out into the country. All these things mean health; there is a distinct gain in health, an improvement in digestion, as well as a comfortable saving of money in your pocket.

Is it any wonder there is a revival in favor of the bicycle?

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

As a result in the increase in receipts of eggs since the weather cleared, the market was weaker again yesterday. The official price of local ranch eggs lowered 2 cents, to 20 cents per dozen. Receipts were far above the average, arrivals for the day being 1045 cases. It was very evident during the call that demand was lacking for even small quantities of stock at the former quotation. The drop in the price was as predicted by the majority of dealers on Friday. Some of the jobbers have been of the opinion that the old prices would be maintained until after Easter, with the strong demand it was causing, and to these the decline of yesterday and the day before was somewhat of a surprise.

The butter market is showing signs of weakness, and declines are expected at any time. A heavy shipment of Coast butter arrived yesterday by steamer from the north.

The fruit market offers little change. Lemons are more active on account of the warmer weather. Strawberries are in fair demand at 6@12 per basket.

Potatoes showed considerable strength yesterday; the market in San Francisco is decidedly strong, and higher prices are offered there than here. Local potato jobbers are taking advantage of the northern conditions, and are shipping surplus stocks to that market. Colorados were offered at 1.90 and Minnesotas at 1.70 on 'change yesterday, but no sales were made on potatoes.

Vegetables sold briskly at unchanged prices. Large fish was plentiful. It was the last day of the lobster season.

Barley is in good supply. Grain is lower here than in San Frnacisco. Milling wheat is scarce, and in good demand. Barley will be firmer throughout the State before the new crop comes in. Eastern corn arriving here is damaged from overheating, and has upset the corn market.

Sales on 'change: Ten cases of local ranch eggs; 50 boxes of 4-tier Bellefleur apples; 25 boxes of fancy Ganos apples; 20 sacks of fancy northern Australian brown onions; 25 boxes of fancy rhubarb.

The receipts of produce as reported for yesterday's exchange were as follows: Eggs, 1045 cases; butter, 47,101 lbs.; cheese, 236 lbs.; potatoes, 517 sacks; onions, none; beans, 27 sacks; sweet potatoes, none.

OIL STOCKS ONLY EXCHANGE TRADERS.

ACTIVITY among the local stocks was not quite so pronounced Saturday on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. Trading was confined entirely to the oil list, at prices which had a tendency to soften.

Union Oil was the leader, 60 shares changing hands at prices ranging down from 212 to 210, the lowest this stock has sold at since its recent sharp rise. The total cash valuation of the stock sold was $16,818.75. The close was weak at 209.25@210.25. The bid was down 2½ points as compared with that ruling Friday. No reason for the slump in this gilt-edged security is advanced, except that a stockholder controlling several hundred shares is realizing because of money stringency in other operations, and is letting his holdings go in large blocks, thus breaking the market. Well-informed brokers are buying all offered on the local floor and report considerable trade in the offices.

Olinda Land was sluggish, the only sale being 300 shares at 19¼. The close was at 19⅝@20. Globe Oil was neglected, closing with a weak bid of 11 and offering at 12½. Central Oil was wanted at 1.13½ and offered at 1.15½, but no trading was reported. Mexican Petroleum was weaker on the bid, dropping back to Thursday's low level at 1.30½@1.34½, with no trading.

Associated Oil seemed to be in fair demand, but the supply at the buyers' prices seemed to be scant. Only ten shares changed hands at 40.25. The close was at 40.25@41, both quotations showing fractional advances.

Columbia Oil was firm at Friday's level. Sales amounted to but 200 shares at 81. The bidding for the security was sharp by inside buyers, but failed to shake any loose. The stock was quoted at the close at 80⅝@83½. Rice Ranch was not handled, but was bid for at 2.85 and offered at 3.05, while stock was offered at $3.00, seller thirty days, with no bidding under those conditions.

Home preferred was offered at 65 and bid for at 62, among the miscellaneous securities, yesterday. No sales resulted. A block of fifty shares was offered at similar prices, with high bid at 63. Common was at levels at which it has rested all week. The close was at 22@26. Pasadena Home was wanted at 34, and offered at 35. The bid was 2 up, as compared with Friday's quotations. Title Insurance and Trust closed with an advance of 5 points showing in the bid, at 155@185. United States Long Distance closed 50@53, with no sales.

Considerable activity was shown among the bonds, but none sold, and prices, as a rule, show a slight decline. Bank stocks were inactive, advances and declines balancing each other. No trading was recorded.

MINING CALL DULL.

Little real trading was carried on during the mining call. Stocks were sluggish, and showed a strong tendency to slip downward. Sales were made at weak prices. Consolidated Mines was a leader at 1¾, 13,000 shares changing hands at that price. Johnnie Consolidated was sold at 10¼. Searchlight M. and M. traded at 87. California Hills ranged down from 5⅛ to 4½ on sales of 2000 shares. Eldorado Cañon continues firm at 3. Searchlight Parallel sold at 5¼. The remainder of the list shows little change.

TOTAL TRADING OF WEEK.

Transactions on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange during the week for the call on the general securities, oil stocks, bank stocks, bonds and the miscellaneous securities, totaled $86,432.75, representing the valuation of 38,433 shares of stock and one bond. A comparison of quotations at the beginning and the end of the week show a few sharp changes, but the majority of the list has not fluctuated to any great extent.

In point of valuation of stock handled on the exchange, the leader is Union Oil, 253 shares of which changed hands at a gross valuation of $52,873. The prices per share ranging from high at 214.50 to low at 210.

Columbia Oil was the leader for number of shares handled, a total of 20,200 shares selling at a valuation of $13,152 the range of prices being from 82 1-4 to 80 1-2.

Associated Oil shows with a total of 160 shares and a valuation at $6335. The range was from 39 up to 40.50. Olinda Land was traded in to the extent of 8300 shares, totalling $1657. One thousand shares of Rice Ranch sold for $3000. Globe was handled to a total of 4000, reaching a valuation of only $470. Mexican Petroleum ranged from 1.30 1-2 to 1.37 1-2, buyer ninety, reaching a valuation of $6000. Five shares of Western Union show up at $1525.

Trading among the miscellaneous stocks was confined to but two, Home common sold to a small total of 10 shares, having a valuation of $260. Five shares of U. S. Long Distance sold at $250.

The bonds are represented in the list with a transaction of one Home first mortgage bond at $910.

CALIFORNIA ORANGES STILL BRING BIG PRICE.

LOS ANGELES, March 30.—Orange prices are way up, and the end is not yet. The auctions are doing finely, and fruit delivered is bringing figures that mean a good profit to the shipper. Dealers are apparently awake to the fact that oranges are to be scarce, and that the demand is to continue good. Fruit is arriving in fine condition under ice, but some of the fruit shipped at the time of the last Santa Fé washout is badly decayed, and is, of course, bringing poor prices. This fruit will be all used up shortly, and the growers can then start in with a clean slate. On the whole, the situation is encouraging. The fact that dealers are only buying enough for actual demands shows that consumers want a good orange and are willing to pay for it.

The Tulare county dealers struck the right keynote this year when they held their navels for the late markets. While the car shortage and small size of the fruit looked bad for the northern growers, it was really the means of bringing them lots of extra money. If cars had been plentiful, and the fruit full sized, it would have been shipped long ago, but hundreds of cars were allowed to stay on the trees, and in consequence fit right in with the extra large navels from the south, bringing from $2.25 to $2.50, f.o.b. Seedlings from north of the Tehachepi have also done well, and the demand is good.

The northern shippers, however, must not expect this game to work every year, as it was only the size of the fruit that carried the deal through. If they should try the scheme with large sizes—and Tulare country fruit usually runs large—they will find a different State of affairs.

The question of cars is still a troublesome one. The past week has seen the hardest fight for cars in the history of the business. This may be relieved next week, as the Southern Pacific lines from the north, by way of the valley, are now open, and there are many empty refrigerators piled up in the north that will doubtless be rushed southward.

Orders are very plentiful and f.o.b. prices have advanced very materially since last week. These quotations are for fruit from the best districts, that is, first-class in every particular and of standard sizes: Extra fancy, $2.40; fancy, $2.25; extra choice, $2.10; choice, $1.90; standard, $1.75.

GENERAL EASTERN MARKET.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, March 30.—The wheat market today ruled firm and higher throughout. The depressing factor at the opening was liberal receipts in the Northwest. A rally on the day took place on reports of "bug" damage from the Southwest. As the session advanced the reports increased, and the market continued to gain in strength until the close. May opened at 75½@75¾, sold between 75½ and 76½, and closed at the high point, ¾@⅞ higher. The corn market displayed considerable strength today, but largely in sympathy with the wheat. The announcement upon the board that navigation will shortly open also caused strength in the market, it being expected that many large orders for shipment will be placed as soon as it is known that boats are actually passing through the Straits of Mackinaw. The close was firm. May opened a shade lower at 45¾, sold between 45¾ and 46⅛, and closed at 46⅛. The oat market was fairly steady all day with a fair amount of trade. More selling pressure was exerted upon the more distant months, but no declines followed. May opened at 42@42⅛, sold between 42⅜ and 43, and closed at 42⅞@43. Provisions opened firm on a strong hog market. Packers were good, buying early in the day, but later a portion of the advance was lost on realizing by local longs. May pork and lard were 5c higher, and ribs 2½@5 up at the close.

BRITISH BARMAIDS AROUSED.

Angry Because of an Attempt in the Commons to Put Them Out of Business.

The thousands of women of all ages, who under the name of barmaids, tend a large proportion of the saloon and restaurant bars in England, are angrily excited at the prospect of their occupation being compulsorily closed to women, says a London dispatch to the Baltimore American.

A bill has been introduced in the House of Commons with the object of making the tending of bars illegal for all women except publicans' wives and daughters, and empowering the authorities to refuse a license unless men only are employed.

Although under the bill existing barmaids may, if they wish, continue their occupation until they die, they foresee that the proposed measure, if it becomes a law, will gradually oust them, as the saloon-keepers will inevitably employ men for the purpose of keeping on good terms with the licensing authorities.

The wrath of the barmaids for the moment is chiefly centered on Home Secretary Gladstone, who, replying to an abolition deputation, headed by the bishop of Southwark, condemned the employment of women in bars.

The barmaids propose to send a deputation to Mr. Gladstone forthwith to tell him what they think of him. Their arguments are that they are superior to men behind the bar, that they are better able to keep obstreperous customers in order, and that the best bars conducted here are those which women control. They also contend that the liquor trade cannot do without them. They point triumphantly to one of the most famous saloons on the Strand, which lately displaced barmaids and substituted men, and which lost so much custom that it gladly reëngaged the women.

GREAT NITRE BEDS.

whole of Death Valley the de- of no mineral will be watched with greater interest on the part of scientific men than that of the working if the nitre beds. These great deposits are extensively distributed through Funeral Range and other parts of that abnormally heated country, but their inaccessibility to transportation has completely precluded their development in the past.

SODA, A BIG THING.

Another of the more important industries that this railroad will be the means of making possible is that of the development of the natural soda beds of California, that so much has been said and written about. The immediate deposit that will be directly developed is that of Soda Lake, which extends for many miles along the margins of Soda Lake Mountains, at the very entrance of Death Valley, and which is paralleled almost the entire way by the new railroad. No mineral deposit of the western country has been more completely isolated than this, and few have received more attention on the part of scientific men.

The analysis of the natural soda existing in this lake has been shown by Dr. Chatard and Prof. Laird Stadler, of the University of Southern California, to average about 45 per cent. sulphate and carbonate of soda, with a small percentage of sodium chloride. It has been universally contended that with proper railway facilities it would not require many years for the natural soda fields of California to become an important factor in controlling, or at least depressing, the alkali industry of the United States.

Nestled close to Soda Mountain, about midway between the center of the lake, is the abandoned adobe rooms of the old government fort, that has known so much life and frivolity in the days that have gone. Once the settlement rang with the boisterous spirit of early western swag. The polished rifles in the hands of the sturdy soldiers inspired the timid. A dozen adobe houses graced the spot. A huge lookout tower was stationed at the brow of the hill. The artillery occupied the eastern part of the inclosure. A huge stone wall protected the settlement from invasion; but all is changed, and is now hushed in eternal stillness. The old Spanish trail on which the fort served as a relay station long ago suffered abandonment. The stage coach, with its vociferous driver, no longer passes that way. The traveler, tourist and man of leisure years ago selected another route, and the crumbled rooms of the ancient building only remain to tell the story of the long ago.

Buildings have tottered and fallen, but the vast soda beds remain as ever, a ghostly sheet of white on a starless night. To them time has brought no changes. Who can look out upon this great plains of natural soda, extending far beyond the confines of the binoculars, without experiencing a profound admiration of the immense cycle of time that ensued during this wonderful transformation. Soda, soda, nothing but soda. For miles you travel, and yet it is soda. Standing upon the ruins of this crumbled fort on a summer evening, the passing rays of light reflect on the soda, giving the appearance of an immense lake of water; but all is illusion.

You no doubt have property, both real and personal, and whether of small value or of great value, when you die it will all pass to others either by operation of law or in accordance with the terms of your Will. If you have not made a Will, the court will appoint an administrator of your estate or the Public Administrator will take charge of it. Your Will is the most important document you will ever sign or execute. Where are you to keep such an important paper? Surely not in your home, where it may be stolen or destroyed.

THE SOUTHERN TRUST COMPANY has burglar and fire proof vaults in which it files such documents and gives receipts therefor, without charge, and will hold your Will subject to your order during your life, and upon your death will deliver it to your heirs or legal representatives. Our attorneys will advise with you, and if desired will prepare your Will.

The charges of THE SOUTHERN TRUST COMPANY for acting as your executor, like the charges of any other executor, are fixed by law.

If you are at all concerned regarding responsibility, we can only say that THE SOUTHERN TRUST COMPANY has over five hundred stockholders, and among them the very wealthiest men in California. The officers and directors are all well-known citizens of this community.

The subscribed Capital Stock of the Bank is $2,000,000, of which $1,000,000 has been paid in, in gold coin. The Bank has a Surplus of over $170,000. Under the State law, a deposit of $100,000 must be made with the State Treasurer as additional security for acting in the capacity of administrator, executor, etc.

Do not forget that THE SOUTHERN TRUST COMPANY does a general commercial and savings bank business; that it pays interest at the rate of two per cent. (2%) on balances of $1,000 or over, subject to check, thus giving the depositor all the advantages that he can possibly receive from a regular commercial bank, and in addition two per cent. (2%) interest on his balances. The bank also pays three per cent. (3%) interest on three months term certificates, and four per cent. (4%) interest on six months term certificates.

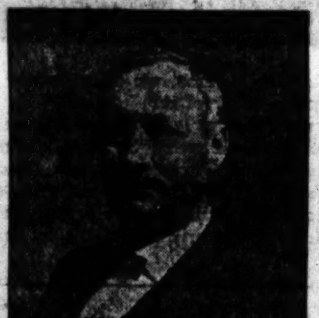
CURED OF CATARRH



MR. EDWARD RYBURN,
214 E. 16th St. Phone B4364.

Mr. Ryburn says: "I have been bothered for a long time with a distressing catarrhal trouble of the nose and throat, complicated with bronchitis and heart trouble, causing me a great deal of distress, especially at night, when I was often unable to sleep, owing to the necessity of clearing my throat every few minutes. None of the remedies I tried seemed to give me the slightest relief until I consulted with the specialists of the LOS ANGELES MEDICAL INSTITUTE, when I quickly found that the small sum I invested with the doctors WAS THE BEST INVESTMENT I EVER MADE, for my trouble is all gone and I AM CURED, and certainly take pleasure in recommending these men. They are specialists of ability and I consider them the leaders in these lines in Los Angeles. THEY CURED ME." Mr. Ryburn lives at 214 East Sixteenth street, and any one can see him there that wishes to verify his statement.

UNCLE SAM'S WORK ENDLESS.

RECLAMATION SERVICE MAKES PROUD SHOWING.

Spends Million a Month in Labors on Surface—Under Earth and in Air—Statistics Indicate Surprising Accomplishment of Force of Ten Thousand Men—Interesting Details.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 25.—A summation of the work of the Reclamation Service to January 1 shows that it has dug 1267 miles of canals, or nearly the distance from Washington to Omaha. Some of these canals carry whole rivers, like the Truckee River in Nevada and the North Platte in Wyoming. these tunnels excavated are forty-seven in number, and have an aggregate length of nine and one-half miles.

The service has erected 94 large structures, including the great dams in Nevada and Minidoka dam in Idaho, 80 feet high and 650 feet long. It has completed 670 headworks, flumes, etc. It has built 376 miles of wagon road in mountainous country and into heretofore inaccessible regions. It has erected and put in operation 727 miles of telephones. Its own cement mill has manufactured 70,000 barrels of cement, and the purchased amount is 312,000 barrels. Its own sawmills have cut 3,036,000 feet of lumber, and 6,540,000 feet have been purchased.

The surveying parties of the service have completed topographic surveys covering 10,970 square miles, an area greater than the combined areas of Massachusetts and Rhode Island. The transit lines had a length of 18,900 linear miles, while the level lines run amount to 24,218 miles, or nearly sufficient to go around the earth.

The diamond drillings for dam sites and canals amount to 47,515 feet, or more than 9 miles. Today the service owns and has at work 1154 horses and mules. It operates nine locomotives, 223 cars and 23 miles of railroad, 39 stationary engines and 27 steam engines. It has constructed and is operating five electric light plants.

This work has been carried on with the following force: Classified service, 380, including Washington office; laborers employed directly by the government, 3500; laborers employed by contractors, 6100, or a total of all forces of 10,000. The expenditures now total nearly $1,000,000 per month.

The government of California passes the Anti-Trust Bill, which is the final death stroke to the Los Angeles Furniture Trust and all similar combinations.

Victory for Brent's! We accept the glory of the situation. Our success is deserved. The satisfaction, however, is purely sentimental, for Brent's had already won a complete business victory by the sheer strength of superior facilities, lower prices, better goods, and more up-to-date methods.

ODDEST OF ALL EASTERS.

Queer Customs of Russians in Far-Away Sitka.

Big Clean-up Marks Dawn of Resurrection Morn.

More Like a Carnival Than Religious Rite.

BY GERTRUDE SPIERS RADER.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

The quaintest and most ceremonious Eastertide in all the length and breadth of our land will be celebrated up in its northwest corner, at Sitka, Alaska, the cathedral town of the Russian Greek church. The Russian Easter has been celebrated there for more than a century. Although Sitka recently lost its prestige as the capital city of the district, it still remains headquarters for all things Russian.

The Russian church uses the old-style calendar and their Easter Sunday comes two weeks later than ours. The celebration is in part a religious ceremony, but in greater part a social function. It lasts three days, not including the Good Friday service, which, with them, has an observance and a significance apart from the real Easter celebration.

Sitka has one long curving main street, laid out along the shore of the bay, extending for about a mile, past the mission grounds, out to Totem Pole Park. On this beach road are most of the houses occupied by the American residents, the Russians having literally sold their front yards and moved to the rear. A whole series of little lanes lead from the beach road to these hidden-away homes. Back of this the narrow streets run in any direction.

Along these paths through the green mossy flower-grown swamps are situated the low log houses of Russian town. Most of them have been weatherboarded over since the days of sawmills, but they are gray and weatherbeaten to a degree that delights visiting artists. Many roofs are moss-covered and boards which lead to the doors are slimy with ooze from the swamp.

Some of the houses still have the massive doors and quaint brass doorknobs of the ancient days. Sometimes there is a samovar of hammered brass and a big mahogany dapenport known in Sitka parlance as a Russian sofa. One occasionally finds quaint brass candlesticks of Russian make, and old olive willow ware which was brought over by the Hudson Bay Company.

RUSSIAN TOWN SPOTLESS.

All Russian town is now in the throes of house cleaning. Last week was dressmaking time and the small Sophias, and Sachas and Nacas went to school with their heads bobbing earnestly together, discussing their new red, white, green, pink or blue communion gowns. Shoes are always bought just before Easter, and such a squeaking as there is up and down the streets!

It is quite in order to have shabby wall paper all winter. Every one knows you are waiting for Easter to repaper and it would really be a sacrilege to buy new curtains at any other time. So, in Russian town the fences groan with the disgorged contents of the small rooms, windows stare uncurtained, clothes lines sag with carpets.

Rows of coal-oil cans are set up to hold the torches which will illuminate the outdoor processional at the midnight mass. The samovars are polished, the old Russian cups and saucers are brought out, the family ikon is cleaned, the little red lamp hanging in front of it is filled with oil, and the floating taper is renewed, all fresh for Easter.

COOKING THE DAINTIES.

After the dressmaking and the house cleaning comes the cooking of the good things, for every family keeps a table spread, and literally open house for three days. The principal dainty is a small pie filled with veal or chicken, chopped fine, seasoned with herbs and moistened with oil or butter. Sometimes it is filled with rice and raisins, or sago and egg.

Another tempting dish is a glorified sort of chicken jelly in a fancy mold. It is compounded of gelatine, canned chicken, cut in dice, hard-boiled eggs, olives, capers, little sweet peppers and slices of lemon. It looks so fine, set out on the best platter and garnished with parsley, that you almost hate to be the first to pass up your plate for a slice.

On every table are found various sized loaves of Easter bread, wonderfully frosted in white with multi-colored candies sprinkled all over them. Some loaves are built up tower-like after the manner of a wedding cake, and used for table decoration till the last feast day. Small loaves are sometimes provided to be given away to American guests.

Caviar appears compounded with lemon and onion juice; also sardines and oil, cheese of various sorts, and cake of the real American variety. The drinkables are as many and varied as the eatables. Tea, the samovar-brewed, is served with lemon and a dash of rum.

COLORED EGGS AND A BATH.

The coloring of a basket of Easter eggs ends the preparation, for the celebration, except that the Russian bath-house also has its busy day. It is primitive enough to delight the most simple of the "simple-lifers."

The little room is scoured with sand till its bare wooden floor, walls and benches are as white as a well-kept cooking table. The furnace, filled with hot stones, occupies one corner, a high wooden bunk is built up just under the ceiling, a barrel of water stands near the furnace. With a big tin dipper, you dash water on the stones till there is as much steam as you can stand. After your bath, you improvise a shower with a pan of cold water and a bigger tin dipper, and if you go in for the whole thing Russian, you must rub down with a piece of frazzled-out rope. There is no attendant and patrons provide everything but the rope. Bunches of this hang on the wall, free to all comers.

CHURCH FULL OF WONDERS.

The Russian Greek Church at Sitka is plain in its architectural lines, but its appointments are said to be the richest in all America. The building is in the form of a Greek cross, surmounted by a dome. The eastern arm, occupied by the altar, is separated from the nave by a partition covered with ikons. The doors between the altar and the nave are known as the royal gates. In each gate are set three ikons representing scenes from the life of Christ. These are so heavily overlaid with silver repousse work that the weight of each gate is over fifty pounds.

The nave occupies the space under the dome, and the main arm of the church extending to the west. It has massive white columns, perfectly plain, seats; the audience stands throughout the long services.

In the left hand chapel, known as the Chapel of Our Lady of Kassan, hangs one of the great madonnas of the world. The artist is unknown and the period to which it belongs has never been ascertained. Its existence has become known to a few collectors and various offers ranging from $10,000 to $30,000 have been made for it.

A CHARMING MADONNA.

most life size. It is painted on canvas, but has a smooth soft appearance and a delicate tone which leads many to say that it is done on ivory. It is overlaid with pure gold repousse work of most elaborate design. Appertures are left for faces and hands as is the case with all ikons. The chief charm of the picture is the face of the Madonna. It is so different from the well-known types of the Italian school. It was presented to the Sitka church in its little chapel for many years, hidden from the knowledge of the world, and there it will remain years after its fame has gone abroad.

A whole row of canvasses, many of them black with age, hang on the walls below the dome. These came originally from the Royal Academy at St. Petersburg. One beautiful little picture known as "The Annunciation" was recently found in a garret of the church by an artist who visited Sitka. It was so covered with dust as to be unrecognizable. When the grime was cleared away and the canvas restored, he found to his surprise, that he had discovered a masterpiece. It hangs now in a prominent place at the left of the large entrance.

One of the famous ikons is a life-size one of the Archangel Michael. This canvas is overlaid with silver.

The picture was formerly in the possession of the St. Petersburg church and hung in one of the royal chapels. In the early days of the colony, when Sitka was known as Nova Archangleskу, it was presented to this church. It was sent over on the colony ship. The Neva, which made the long voyage in safety, only to be wrecked on a reef of rocks just at the entrance of Sitka harbor. Among the wreckage cast ashore was this wonderful ikon.

MAGNIFICENT ROBES.

The robes worn by the bishop and priests are magnificent. Each holy day must have its special robes. Some of the most splendid are worn only on Trinity Sunday, and for the Easter celebrations each service has a different set of robes. All are woven of silk interspersed with threads of real gold and silver. In some the heavy brocaded designs are wrought entirely of heavy gold threads. When, after years of use, the robes become worn, they are burned and the precious metals recovered. The newly-appointed Bishop of Alaska, who came to Sitka three years ago, brought with him a set of magnificent robes, presented to him on the eve of his departure by Czar Nicholas.

The eucharistical embroideries are done in gold thread and rich green velvet. The figures, which are symbolic, are in some designs so heavily embroidered that they are a half-inch in thickness.

There are also carved ivories, so fine as to be almost like laces, and jeweled crosses of great value. One of the service books has a medallion of the Virgin set with large diamonds.

THE SERVICE PROPER.

The Easter service proper begins at midnight on Saturday. The cannon at the marine barracks booms out the signal that it is just 12 o'clock. The church chimes peal out their joyful message and the long procession of priests and schoolboys sets out on its slow march from the school to the church. Within the church is packed a large audience, including Indians, Russians and almost the entire American population.

Brazen censers burn before each ikon, the tall candelabra are aflame and the huge wax candles, wreathed with vines, shed a soft light. Each devotee holds an unlighted candle. There is an air of hushed solemnity. The chimes die away. The outer door opens, the priest crosses the threshold, and suddenly the stillness is broken by a song, the beautiful music of the Easter mass chanted by boyish voices. The music rises and swells as the processional advances, the boys file into the choir loft, the priests disappear behind the altar and a moment later the royal gates are thrown open and priests and acolytes clad in their ceremonial robes, bearing crosses and banners and symbolic emblems, reappear. The music rises to a perfect paean of praise, and is still. The priest, swinging the brazen censer, advances and blesses the people. The choir boys chant the response. The worshipers, their canthe Russian Easter is ushered in with an almost Oriental splendor.

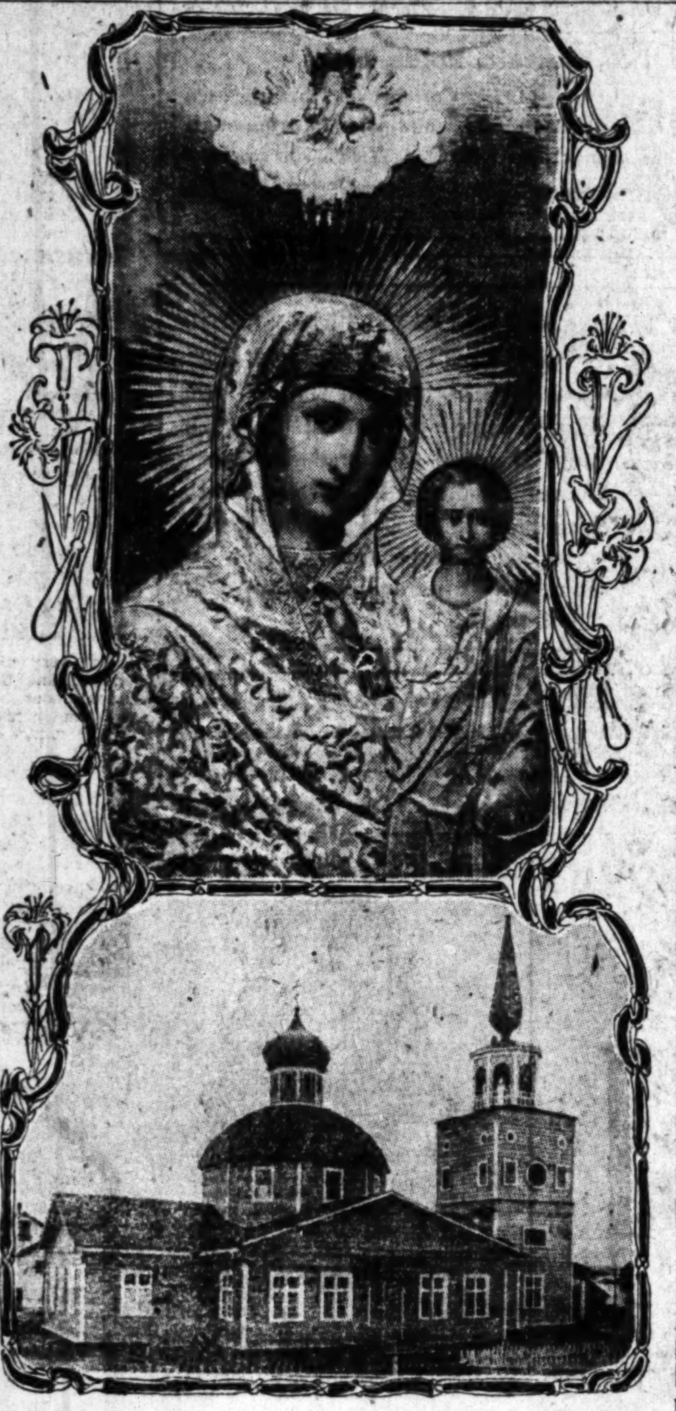
CONTINUES FOR HOURS.

The service goes on for hours. At one time the whole congregation files out into the dark street and circles three times around the church, led by the priests and choir boys. There are quiet moments when the tinkling of the censer in the priest's hand is the only sound heard. Sometimes a single voice takes up the chant, but throughout the whole services, repeated over and over, rings out the sound of that first wondrous chant, the Russian words for "Christ is risen; Christ is risen."

The rest of the celebration is more like a carnival than a religious observance. The whole town goes calling and visiting for the next three days. On Sunday the men go, on Monday the women, on Tuesday the priests, and on all three days the schoolmistress, who is expected to make the rounds among the pupils and admire the new carpets and wall paper.

Sunday is the great day. The American officials go about in groups, from door to door, promoting good fellowship and testing the hospitality of the Russian tables. Each one who starts out takes one Easter egg. On entering a house and greeting the hostess, he is led to a table laden with goodies.

At the close of the feast, a basket of Easter eggs is passed and the caller solemnly puts in one egg and takes out another. The eggs are pretty well mixed in the course of the three days.



Old Greco-Russian church at Sitka, and the famous thirty-thousand-dollar painting of Our Lady of Kassan which it is to hold forever. This is a rare picture of the Byzantine type, artist unknown.

A Little Money Will Do a Lot For You If It Is Treated Right

United States Granite Pressed Brick Stock Will Pay Enormous Dividends

We are rapidly reaching the dividend-making stage. Our new factory at Sixteenth and Alameda streets is well under way. Go down and see it. Satisfy yourself that this is no mere paper enterprise. The more you investigate every phase of it the more pleased we are.

Get busy. Don't wait. The day our plant starts up the stock will soar. It is going up now. It has advanced 60 per cent. in four months. It will soon go to par—$10 a share.

We will make the best pressed brick in the world in one day's time, against three weeks by ordinary methods. The cost will be much smaller. We can sell at prices that cannot be met and still make an enormous profit.

Our stockholders will profit in proportion. Our capitalization is small---only 25,000 shares. We present the greatest money making opportunity ever laid before the people of Southern California. You will never forgive yourself if you do not take advantage of it.

GREAT MARBLE DEPOSITS.

PRACTICALLY ALL COLORS AND ALL QUALITIES.

Quarries Promise to Have Important Bearing Upon the Production of Building Marble for the Western Part of the Continent—Sufficient Deposits for Generations.

Immense bodies of marble, not one or two but a full score of different colors in large quantities, and many more shades and colors in smaller amounts, are found in San Bernardino county, out on the desert. Time and again the State Mining Bureau has noticed these deposits, but they have remained untouched except in a small way as at Colton.

The Cadiz Marble and Mining Company, a Los Angeles corporation, has acquired forty claims at Cadiz on the Santa Fé, 240 miles east of this city. Here are found all varieties of the finest marble. The colors range from the purest black to the purest white, with all intermediate colors. There is red marble, blue marble—light and dark blue—all tints and shades. There is the shell marble, the black marble that bears on its beautiful surface the figures of many sea shells, giving it a most beautiful appearance, and the black with showings of gold. It is said that this last is found only in one other place, namely, along the banks of the Nile. There is the Persian gray marble, the white onyx, all specimens hard to excel for fine appearance, some of each of which the owners have brought in and exhibit as coming from their lands.

The claims were located four years ago and the present owners have had them nearly two years. Sufficient development has been done to show that the supply is, the owners say, inexhaustible for generations to come, and their statements are backed by reports of Prof. Stephen Bowers, a geologist, from Tennessee, who examined them recently. There are quarries in Italy of world-wide fame that have been worked for centuries and no one can say how long those at Cadiz will last.

The marble is declared very strong and easily worked. Instead of tending to crumble as some does, it can be taken out in blocks of any size. The sawing and polishing can be handled with little difficulty and only a limited amount of machinery will be essential for operating.

Two miles west of Black Mountain, and six miles from Cadiz, is another large mountain of white marble, mentioned in Mr. Eaton's report. This, however, was not examined sufficiently for anything further than to be said about it. It is, however, between 400 and 500 feet in height and shows some fractures.

With the great amount of building going on in Los Angeles and in every city of Southern California, to say nothing of the rebuilding of San Francisco, or of the market in the East and possibly in time even abroad, it will this region the opening of the will mean. At present when a hotel or office building is here, marble must be abroad or brought from the heavy expense. LABOR-UNION EXCESSES.

NEW YORK VIEW OF SAN FRANCISCO'S CONDITION.

The City Being Literally Looted by the Exactions of Organized Labor. The Cost of New Buildings When ncreased Means Higher Rents for Years to Come.

[New York Post:] Ever since the re-ilding of San Francisco began, pres patches and private letters from that y have been burdened with com nts of the labor unions. These re however, have necessarily been gmentary and and inconclusive. The t comprehensive as well as the judicious article on the subject ch we have seen appears in the Francisco Argonaut of March 9.
re it is possible to get a clear sum y both of significant facts and un ying principles. As the case may remain the classic instance of la unionism run mad, we need offer apology for a somewhat extended view of the article.
 writer begins by defending the for an act which has been bit condemned—advancing the wage in spite of a pledge, made imme after the earthquake, to work
 the old scales:
We have felt that when the house
ner, the hotel keeper, the boarding landlady, the clothier, the gro and the baker were screwing up prices, it was not unreasonable the mechanic and the laborer to do same thing.
In other words, the increased cost of ng, which the unions did not fore when they made their pledge, has tified an increase in wages. In cer trades, say, plumbing, brickay and electrical work, the demands the laborers have been "clearly ex bitant;" but, on the whole, the wage emands "are perhaps not greater the circumstances justify."
The gravamen of the charges in the rgonaut relates chiefly to "narrow selfishness, a surly attitude to rd employers, a disposition to slight rk, and a spirit of indifference." For ample, carpetners decline to handle urfaced" lumber unless the surfacing s been done by union men at wages rresponding to those of San Francis
. Lumber can be surfaced most ickly and economically when run di ctly from the saw to a surfacing ma ine—and this, of course, at the mills, here wages are at a normal level. In e same way stone men will not ac pt stone which has been cut and essed at the quarries; the finishing ust practically all be done in the al yards. In both instances the ilder has to spend more time and ney. The unions follow a similar cy in regard to metal sash and door
ngs. There is but a small local put, "totally inadequate at every int," the quality is not of the best;
 "owing to emergency conditions,
e cost approximately 40 per cent."
ove that at which similar or better aterials, manufactured elsewhere, can laid down in San Francisco. Yet e unions will accept these sash and oor frames only when made by union bor "under the same conditions of ages and hours" as prevail in San rancisco. Furthermore, owing to rength in resisting earthquakes and economy of construction, concrete lls are coming into favor even for etentious buildings. Yet the masons first refused to "face" a concrete ll with an outer layer of brick un the concrete was "trowel work;"
at is, the concrete slowly spooned in the mould with a trowel rather than ured in from a hod or bucket. Not ntent with this unreasonable exac n, the brick masons have finally ched the point where they will not concrete walls under any condi
s; the masons will lay no brick ex pt where brick or stone is used ex sively.
To those petty regulations regard material the unions have added hers regarding membership. The Ar naut is informed that "the town is erally full of men skilled in the va ous building trades," who, in spite the great need, cannot get employ ent because of the silly rules of the nions. A skilled cement worker from nada is barred out because he is not citizen. It takes five years to become citizen, and that man "who brings San Francisco what she most s—brawn, skill, thrift"—must go to Canada or abandon his trade.
eed, the unions practically exclude San Francisco all foreign labor—at a moment when both the city d the State are in direst need of re hands to develop their resources.
ilders also assert that, in spite of travagant wages, they do not get service they did when wages were er by a third. Says one witness:
"Instead of doing what you want to do in the way you want it ne, instead of working diligently and ithfully, instead of taking a decent ide in their work, as in the old days, ree bricklayers out of five will slouch rough the day, soldier on you be re your eyes, and answer you rudely you offer them a suggestion, much re if you give them an order."
That is, the members of the union d a monopoly; and they show the me indifference and insolence which y condemn so savagely in capital c monopolies. They disregard all nciples of justice; they extort th penny in wages and give the least sible return.
San Francisco has thus shown us in all compass all the worst traits of or unions carried to their extreme logical development. We hold no ef for the capitalist and the em
yer. Their sins have often been ring and grievous. We merely wish oint out that human nature is much same in rich and poor, and that estrained power will turn the heads any men or any set of men. Your italist who obtains control of a olitical machine, debauches a Legis ture, makes a party his instrument or robbing the people, or conducts a ublic-service corporation with an eye ngle to his private welfare—this man e rightly denounce as an enemy of the epublic. When a labor union obtains olitical control of a city, as in San rancisco, and exploits the whole opulation for its selfish ends, it is qually deserving of censure. The la or unions are literally looting San rancisco. They are increasing the st of every house that is building, ising the rents for years to come,
ising the price of all commodities,
d laying the city under a heavy andicap in its competition with Los ngeles and Seattle for population and ade. Superhuman malignity and in lligence combined could not deal the y heavier blows than it receives from e stupidity and dishonesty of the ions.
We have lately, here in New York
d elsewhere, had our painful experi ces with corporations in politics;
d we have been taking extraordinary ecautions to free our parties from e shackles of capital. We have done ell; but in San Francisco we see writ rge a warning against the danger hich now besets us from Hearst and e other noisy demagogues of labor.
e shall gain nothing if, having cast t the devil of capital, we take unto urselves seven other spirits even more icked.

MAKING OF SALESMEN.

They Want to Be Careful Where They Start in Any Business and When to Change.

The man on the road is in business for himself, just as much as any stockholder in the firm he represents. His trade is distinctively his; his customers wait for his visits, buy on his recommendation and mail orders to trons follow him. His salary is based on the volume of business, as is the profit of any manufacturer or merchant. He is in business for himself without the investment of cash capital. Any young man who can sell goods can get into business for himself.

The newsboy, the clerk, or the farm boy must not wait for some manufacturer to send for him to fill a $5000 position. Such dilatory evidence is not a mark of salesmanship. Neither should must advance himself by a show of persistence for the place he wants. "After a few years' experience as a drug clerk, I wanted to try the road," says a writer in Success. "I applied to the head of a wholesale drug house, saying that I was willing to commence at any job and work up.

"'Where do you want to work up to?' asked the manager.

"'Well, sir, I want to go on the road.'

"'Then be careful where you begin to can to the place you want,' he said. 'Downstairs we have a man that began as a boy, over thirty years ago, washing bottles. He became such an expert bottle washer that we could not afford to advance him, because we did not know how we could replace him.'

"'Suppose,' said I, 'he had demanded a better place, on the ground of faithfulness to duty.'

"'But he did not, and there is where he probably failed to advance himself. he's good for now.'"

The foregoing narrative is true, which may account for its variation from some of the story-book episodes. A young man, to get on the road, must know where to draw the line in obedience, and when to quit washing bottles.

Every issue of smoke from every factory says: "We are making goods to be sold." Every boat and railroad engine says: "We are hauling goods thousands are calling: "We have goods to be sold." New inventions daily proclaim: "Improved goods to be sold." The masses are crying: "We want the goods that are to be sold." Then what? Why, there is always room for a medium between those who buy and those who sell. The firm, however, that employs a salesman must know that he is that medium, and he must be willing to prove that he is by going out for a week's trial without salary,

POLITICAL ECONOMY.

Municipal Ownership.

THE DANGERS OF MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP. By Robert P. Porter. The Century Company, New York.

Twenty-five years ago the Century Company published a series of articles by Dr. Albert Shaw on the rise of municipal trading in Great Britain. From the Century press has just issued a second volume telling of its decline and fall.

Robert P. Porter, director of the Eleventh United States Census, has pulled aside the curtain, overturned the stage settings and revealed the forces of municipal socialism in their true characters. The condition which he exposes is one that few States or communities will care to emulate.

By the time one has completed the first chapter of Mr. Porter's book the false complexion of public benevolence under which the process is pursued is rubbed off by the discovery that it means only a yet more bloated officialdom and a leaner populace.

For six years Mr. Porter has resided in Great Britain. During that time he has held a responsible position on the staff of the London Times. His editorial duties have required him to spend several weeks in each of the large cities of the United Kingdom. Fifteen years ago Mr. Porter visited these cities as a commissioner of the United States Census Bureau. His investigations include not only Great Britain, but the continents of Europe and Australia as well, and his history of the rise and decline of municipal trading is the most complete that has yet been written.

In a single sentence Mr. Porter epitomizes the situation in Great Britain: "If the industrial venture proves successful the profits are used to meet the deficits of some less fortunate ventures, and if unsuccessful the ratepayers pay the bill and there is an end to it."

The general case against municipal ownership Mr. Porter presents as follows:

"Matters of police, health and education concern all the rate-payers equally. Industrial and trading undertakings are not of equal concern, and the control of them can only justly be vested in those who provide the funds for carrying them on. In short, the primary duty of a local government board is to govern and not to trade, and to this proposition there should be no exception whatever.

"As a matter of fact, most of the advantages of commercial trading during the last few years have been excluded. Sound commercial firms in England pay no more for their capital. It has been demonstrated over and over again that a municipality can do the work no cheaper than, nor indeed so cheap, as private concerns. No one familiar with the facts will contend that a Town Council, constantly changing its membership, is a better board of management than the board of directors of a successful company. There is no proof that the consumer is specially benefited; the service under private ownership is equally good—in many cases it is far better and more up to date in the United States, and the relative cost, after considering differences in price of labor and raw material is less."

Mr. Porter devotes a chapter to conditions in Russia, showing that Tzardom has made greater progress in municipal and government ownership than has the government of any other country.

"There is no essential difference," comments Mr. Porter, "in the policy of universal expropriation initiated by Count Witte and continued by the ministers who have followed him and that of the British local bodies under the guise of Municipal Socialism—a policy which, as State ownership in Australia, has practically driven individual enterprise from the continent. In Russia millions have been spent in building up a vast fabric of state and municipal ownership, and naturally patronage is becoming the strongest pillar of irresponsible rule. The state of Russia has been truthfully characterized as a trading corporation first and an organ of government only as a subordinate function.

"The result in Russia as in England and Australia is the blight of individual effort and the poverty of the private traders who pay the taxes.

"If the municipal traders are sincere Russia must be their paradise and St. Petersburg and Moscow, not Glasgow and Spring Gardens, their ideals.

"No more subtle means of concentrating the wealth of the people and exterminating private industry and initiative could be hit upon than the policy established in Russia, which is all the more destructive in being practiced—as it is in Great Britain—to mislead taxpayers into the belief that it is philanthropic and progressive in spirit.

"Before Chicago citizens became exercised about who should run their street railways, and before London rate-payers were exasperated with their Council for its blind attempts to establish an elaborate ferry service on the Thames with little traffic to support it, in Russia everything had become municipalized.

"The attempts of Russia since the war with Japan to raise foreign loans reflect the internal financial condition of the country. Other countries, whether through war or other causes, which seek to put their fiscal machinery in order obtain all they require within their own borders. Russia has to seek the assistance of capitalists of other nations."

Mr. Porter quotes reports and statistics showing that Australia and New Zealand have followed the state and municipal ownership lure until they have run themselves so deeply into debt that it will take these countries at least a century to recover.

Among the references to Australasia is the reproduction of an editorial from the Sydney Bulletin. After severely criticizing the State policy the Bulletin makes the following remarks on the municipalities:

"The N. S. Wales Alderman has just as little idea of getting his town hall out of pawn as J. Carruthers has of getting his State out; and almost the greatest sinners of all are the suburban Mayors and Aldermen, who shouldn't exist at all and who shouldn't have any town halls to pawn. The suburbs owe £766,319 besides overdrafts and ruling out Marrickville and Ryde all that the whole thirty-eight of them put up last year in the way of sinking fund was £397. Ryde and Marrickville put up £1400 between them. This precious crowd paid nevertheless £24,041 in interest. Here and there a suburban council paid off an odd hundred or two, mostly because it was squeezed into it, or because a bailiff arrived and threatened to stay, but, as a rule, when the Councils paid £1 they borrowed £2.10s., so the situation got worse in place of better.

"The Sydney suburban Mayor's and Aldermans' idea of honest and decent finance can best be reckoned by the fact that, though thirty-nine of the suburban municipalities are in pawn (the fortieth is in pawn but only on an overdraft) no more than four of the whole shiftless, drifting crowd have sinking funds for the systematic repayment of their debts."

The recent financial history of West Australia is thus surveyed by the same journal:

"The State has had a royal time for about sixteen years, and that time shows signs of not lasting forever. In 1891 Westralia owed only £22 per head of a very small population; now it owes £38 per head of a much larger one. There have been some years when the amount borrowed equalled the amount raised by all forms of taxation. There were one or two gorgeous years when the amount borrowed, if it had been divided equally among the population, would have enabled every one to live in a humble but honest fashion without any work at all. In a handful of years Westralia exhausted all its borrowing powers and it has now to go very slow in loan matters. The railways in 1896, the summit of the boom, were alleged to yield 11½ per cent. profit—largely through charging repairs to loans; this was down to 4½ per cent. in 1899 and is now only about 3½ per cent. Westralia learned so thoroughly to have a good time that in 1898 it had a revenue of nearly £17 per inhabitant and spent nearly £20. Other States could live on a revenue of £6 to £8 per head and even scratch out a surplus; Westralia had got into such an Imperial frame of mind that it spent a revenue of £17 and had a deficit of over £500,000 on top thereof. Of course this incredible revenue could not last; the gold is fading and the loans are fading, the days of riotous eating and hilarious drinking, and the time when nobody's accounts were audited and nearly everybody helped himself, are passing away."

Mr. Porter comments that it is not possible to read these extracts from utterances of responsible statesmen and reliable newspapers without realizing that the huge burden of debt now holding down Australia is due to a deep-seated demoralization of public life. Financial chaos has been more or less rife for the last twenty years.

H. G. Reid, leader of the opposition in the New South Wales Parliament, recently asserted in a Parliamentary address that the present condition of demoralized finances will continue to exist while "the seat of a man in Parliament depends on how much money he can extract from the public treasury for carrying out works in his electorate in the most reckless and improvident fashion."

Referring to Australia, Mr. Porter adds:

"Here we have a large slice of the planet's surface, only a little less in area than the United States, within whose boundaries whole kingdoms could be packed, whose natural wealth and climatic conditions are unsurpassed, which could easily support a population of 100,000,000 souls, yet so little used and so nearly vacant, withal so rich and tempting, that, after 120 years of colonization, its population is no more than that of the London suburbs."

Then comes the striking allegation that:

"The domination of the Labor Party is clearly responsible for stopping the clock of progress in Australia. Socialism has created a national selfishness and exclusiveness which may be likened to the once-obstinate insularity of China."

The chapters devoted to municipal ownership in Great Britain reveal the condition of affairs set forth by a series of letters on municipal ownership written for The Times last fall by S. Fred Hogue.

A chapter is devoted to the London County Council which Mr. Porter designates as "the world's greatest spendthrift."

Mr. Porter makes use of the following table prepared by the London Municipal Society to illustrate the difference in cost of street lighting between the companies and municipal authorities in the boroughs of London:

	Mileage.	Cost per mile.
Bethnal Green, company	40	$ 670
Shoreditch, municipal	43	1,600
Deptford, company	51	379
Hammersmith, municipal	53	731
Greenwich, company	38	392
Fulham, municipal	51	925
Paddington, company	79	683
Hampstead, municipal	34	1,022
Lewisham, company	108	390
Battersea, municipal	114	790
Camberwell, company	139	450
Islington, municipal	114	1,223
Lambeth, company	178	425
St. Pancras, municipal	58	1,325
Wandsworth, company	176	539
Stepney, municipal	82	1,131

When one considers that the boroughs owning the municipal plants are bonded for hundreds of thousands of pounds capital investment, only to find that their lighting costs about double what it could be done for by private company, it is easy to understand why the bloom is fading from the municipal ownership peach in Great Britain.

City by city, Mr. Porter takes the great manufacturing and trading centers of Great Britain and shows that they have gained neither cheaper service nor lower taxes through municipal trading. A private company making a showing such as that of scores of these cities in trading ventures would promptly pass into the hands of a receiver.

In the preface Mr. Porter reveals the secret of some of the rose-tinted articles on municipal ownership that have appeared in American magazines. "The favorable impressions which some American writers have obtained of municipal trading in Great Britain," says Mr. Porter, "may be accounted for by the fact that—knowing little or nothing to the contrary—they are apt to be influenced by the persuasiveness of the local councillors and officials under whose chaperonage they visit municipal works, and whose glowing accounts of the undertakings tend to make ready converts. The case against the trading policy is less easily ascertained; but the taxpayer does not generally ventilate his objections, nor is he usually available for interviews, having his own affairs to attend to. Not so the municipal councillor or official, who is always on hand, forthrown on his own defense by the force of objections to the system—it is his paramount concern to justify his own works to all and sundry."

Mr. Porter gives the result of the November elections in London to illustrate the verdict of the people who pay the taxes on the fads of the municipal dreamers and schemers.

"The elections in November, 1906, resulted in a clean sweep of the Progressives (the ownership party,) and a remarkable accession of strength to the Moderates. There are some boroughs, once Progressive, in which hardly any members of the party have survived, and in which there is now only one party, the Moderates. All along the line the anti-ownership party are at the top and the Progressives at the bottom, though, indeed, the labor candidates are sometimes lowest of all. In 1903 there were fifteen boroughs in London in which the Progressives were in a majority; there are now two.

"The general totals show 939 municipal reformers (or anti-ownership party,) 2?2 Progressives (the defeated Socialists,) thirty-four labor and ninety-seven independent members. In the provincial towns there were also victories for the supporters of private enterprise, though the ownership defeat was less crushing than in London. But in Glasgow in thirteen contests nine labor candidates were hopelessly beaten, one labor magistrate lost his seat and only three labor men out of thirty-four candidates who went to the polls were returned."

Since the publication of Mr. Porter's book, the March elections have been held in London, resulting in another humiliating defeat for the municipal traders who have now lost entire control of the County Council. Committees are already at work investigating charges of graft. One councillor has committed suicide; two others are fugitives from justice. London appears to be on the threshold of graft exposures equal to those attendant on the labor-union régime in San Francisco.

To the honest student of municipal government, Mr. Porter's book should prove invaluable. Where statistics are used the source from which they are derived is given; and there is a conspicuous absence of the clap-trap and maudlin sentiment so prevalent in the propaganda of the municipal socialists.

FICTION.

A Gateway Classic.

CRANFORD. By Mrs. Gaskell. American Book Company, New York, Cincinnati and Chicago. (Price 40 cents.)

A good reprint of a classic is always welcome to the true booklover. He likes to see it and handle it, and to compare its points with those of the volume already on his shelves. He may not always care to buy it, but he hopes there are many who will.

"Cranford" is the latest volume of the Gateway Series, which are issued under the general editorship of no less a scholar than Henry Van Dyke. The Gateway classics are intended for high school use, and are excellently gotten up for this purpose. The print and paper are good, and the dark red cover is cheerfully agreeable to the eye. "Cranford" has Charles Elbert Rhodes, A.M., for its special editor. He gives a brief introductory sketch of Mrs. Gaskell's life, and an outline of the story and its characters sufficient to enable the student to enter into the spirit of the work. He gives definitions of unusual words at the bottom of the page—and very often of such usual words that his painstaking zeal strikes the man who is not a pedagogue as uncalled for. Doesn't Prof. Rhodes underrate the intelligence of his audience?

His "Special Note for Teacher" is also rather amusing. "I have not tried to correct the English," he begins (and one should hope not, indeed,) "in the numerous instances where the wrong pronoun is used and where such expressions as 'different to' are used, for it is best for the pupils to find these errors for themselves." He conscientiously adds: "While Mrs. Gaskell is sometimes careless in the use of pronouns, it is only just to her to say that most mistakes are in the dialogue, mostly in the sayings of Miss Matty, and may have been intentionally made to show that the Cranford people did not always use correct English." Could pedantry become more fatuous than this? Surely, much learning may be a dangerous thing! And doesn't Prof. Rhodes know that "different to" is the very correct English of England?

It is a matter of regret that Hugh Thomson's charming drawings, which are almost as classic as "Cranford" itself, are omitted from this popular edition. Such sympathetic interpretations, the acme of illustration, when once known and loved can hardly be dispensed with. They belong by right to every reader of Mrs. Gaskell's masterpiece.

History.

THE STORY OF THE OUTLAW. By Emerson Hough, author of "The Mississippi Bubble." Outing Publishing Company, New York. (Price $1.50 net.)

Emerson Hough, who wrote "The Story of the Cowboy," has given, in "The Story of the Outlaw," another interesting chapter to the student of American history. The book is a compactly-printed volume of 400 pages, and though it proves as fascinating reading as the most romantic fiction, it is really a sober narrative of well-authenticated facts. It is a careful study of the Western desperado—the "bad man" of the border, and also of the imitation desperado, the cheap "long hair" who was ambitious to be thought wild and woolly and hard to curry. Mr. Hough lived for twenty-five years on the very ground where the bloody scenes of his story were enacted, and he has collected evidence that is not to be disputed. If, now and again, his sympathies seem to lean a trifle to the side which is assuredly not virtue's, this lapse, which is hardly apparent, after all, is not to be wondered at—for the [illegible] had [illegible] was almost always [illegible] of splendid and indomitable [illegible]. Fortunately, however, he is [illegible] vanished from the border, [illegible] there is no more border [illegible] on the map of America—though he survives, and multiplies greatly, in our huge and congested cities.

The outlaw is a man who has gone back, by choice or circumstance, to primal savagery. He sprang into being on the frontier because of the absence of all laws except those he made for himself. He appears in our great cities because, though there are laws that hedge him everywhere, he knows that he can break each and every one of them with almost absolute impunity.

Mr. Hough's book pictures the bad man from his own point of view and from that of the good man. The author himself has obtained personal narratives from many of the desperadoes, and has gleaned others from reliable sources. His conclusion is that the bad man is not so black as he has been painted by his shivering enemies, and that he very often becomes quite white under the brush of advancing civilization. "Although it seems a strange thing to say," the author writes, "it is the truth that much of the old wildness of that border was a matter of general custom, one might almost say of habit. The surroundings were wild, and men got to running wild. When times changed, some of them also changed, and frequently showed that after all they could settle down to work and lead decent lives. Lawlessness is sometimes less a matter of temperament than of surroundings."

The book gives short biographies of many famous bad men—Billy the Kid, Jesse Evans, Joel Fowler, Tom O'Folliard, et al. Chapters are devoted to the exploits of Henry Plummer and Boone Helm, the one a man-killer without the bowels of mercy, the other even a cannibal! Mr. Hough tells of the vigilantes of California, and of the necessary work they did in '49, '51 and '53. He describes the death scenes all tragic, of noted desperadoes. He gives full accounts of the remarkable and bloody Lincoln county war and Stevens county war. In short, nothing is left unsaid that may help to give a vivid, but true and faithful picture of the times and the men. The book is well illustrated by John W. Norton, and with photographs.

NEW MAZAGINES.

Senator S. M. Cullom has contributed to the North American Review an authoritative article on the action of the Senate in "The Reed Smoot Decision."

The Jewelers' Circular, the leading trade journal of the jewelry business in the United States, has secured a correspondent in Los Angeles, and purposes to publish correspondence from this city every week hereafter.

The April issue of Wood Craft has articles on safety and industrial efficiency, adjustment of machine knives, veneers and the planing mill, machine woodworkers and woodworking machinery, laying out the proportions of columns, wood distillation, the strength packing boxes made of various woods, the essentials for smooth-cutting machines, the making of wood steering wheels for automobiles and power boats, the molding of gears, the veneer industry, and many others of lively interest to all workers in wood.

The Woman's Home Companion for April contains "Some Reminiscences of the Nation's Capital," by Edward Everett Hale; "Mrs. Sackett's Easter Bonnet," by Mary E. Wilkins Freeman; "The Arab Horse in Legend and Story," by Homer Davenport; "The Rose and the Revolutionists," by Temple Bailey; a poem, "A Pilot's Judgment Seat," by Thomas Nelson Page, etc. Mr. Page's poem is an epic of more than four hundred lines devoted to a description of the judgment scene as viewed by Pontius Pilate himself.

A. R. Pardington, writing in Harper's Weekly, makes a very attractive pen picture of a possible "Appian Way for the Motorist," on Long Island, where motor cars designed and built for speed and pleasure will be its sole travelers, and speed will be unrestricted.

Henry Van Dyke in Scribner's for April, describes the adventures of a persistent sportsman in pursuit of old "Silverhorns," a moose of colossal proportions. This is one of the stories in "Days Off," and it introduces an old Scotch engineer.

The opening article in Harper's magazine for April is Capt. Roald Amundsen's personal narrative of how he discovered the north magnetic pole, and how he sailed his little ship through the Northwest Passage from the waters of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific. It is a fascinating description of a voyage of permanent historical and scientific importance and the more fascinating through being told by Amundsen himself.

An interesting feature of the April number of Suburban Life is an article by Dr. George L. Meylan, physical director of Columbia University, on "A Revival of the Forgotten Art of Walking." Dr. Meylan deplores the rush of modern city life which has deprived the city dweller of one of the best forms of exercise, but he prophesies that a revival is sure to come.

Elizabeth Robin's new novel of the great North, "Come and Find Me," will begin serial publication in the April Century, and continue for some time. It is a story of a man who, havng once felt the spell of the North, is held by its magic through many wearisome years. Miss Robins has traveled and lived in Alaska, so she knows the spell of which she writes.

"Our Real War With Japan" is the title of the leading article in the current issue of Harper's Weekly. In it William Inglis, special correspondent in Japan for Harper's Weekly, forecasts the impending struggle for commercial dominance in the Orient, which will test to the utmost our resources and our ingenuity. His article will be read with particular interest, for it embodies the impressions of an acute and careful observer, made on the spot, and not inferred from hearsay and report.

One of the intensely interesting facts set forth by Henry Oldys in his "Music of Man and Bird," in the April number of Harper's Magazine, concerns an ancient Chinese hymn. This hymn, it seems, was sung in China "long before Pythagoras invented the diatonic scale," and the notes of the hymn are given in the article. "This piece of Chinese music," says Mr. Oldys, "which readily lends itself to very attractive harmonization, could be sung in our churches today without attracting attention as being noticeably different from modern music."

PEOPLE AND THINGS LITERARY.

Within three days of publication the first edition of John Oxenham's "The Long Road" was exhausted, and a second printing was necessary. The opinion seems to be general that the book is not only the best Mr. Oxenham has ever written, but that it is one of the important novels of the year.

Arrangements have been concluded by Klaw and Erlanger for the presentation, during the coming autumn, of a play founded upon Sir Gilbert Parker's great novel, "The Right of Way." The story has been dramatized by Eugene Presbrey, and he and Sir Gilbert Parker have signed a contract with the theatrical firm.

President Hadley of Yale has included in his new book, "Baccalaureate Addresses and Other Talks on Kindred Themes," a number of his recent talks to undergraduates, and others delivered at various times during the college year and dealing with the questions which a man must decide in choosing a career in life or courses in college for himself.

For a young man Gelett Burgess has lived in many places and done many things. He was born in Boston, was educated in the Boston public schools, and was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology with the degree of B.S. in the department of civil engineering. After college he went into the engineering department of the Southern Pacific Company in the field and in the main office at San Francisco. After three years of that sort of thing he took a year off for a [illegible] through France and Spain, and on his return became instructor in topographical drawing at the University of California. Then he went into furniture designing in San Francisco, and on the side edited The Lark, in which "The Purple Cow" made its first appearance. Since The Lark's untimely end he has devoted himself to the production of serious and nonsensical literature for magazines and books. In his latest book, "The White Cat," he has entered the field of psychological romance and made a story far out of the ordinary.

"The Higher Ministries of Recent English Poetry" is the title of a volume by Frank W. Gunsaulus to be issued from Revells. The book has grown out of the lectures that Dr. Gunsaulus has delivered with great appreciation to Chautauqua and other assemblies.

Such is its continuing popularity, and such attention does it continue to attract that the Harpers have just issued another edition of that remarkable book by H. G. Wells, entitled "The Future in America."

The new novel of Mrs. Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, "By the Light of the Soul," continues to be a marked success, and another large edition has just been found necessary.

Just as Henry Holt & Co. are taking over and bringing out the late David Dalzell Wells's dramatic story, "Parlous Times," they are having to send his famous humorous tale "Her Ladyship's Elephant," to press for the eighteenth time.

An important new volume by Max Nordau has just been issued by George W. Jacobs & Co. This book, which bears the title "On Art and Artists," gives a comprehensive view of modern art, tracing the line of evolution from the painters of the eighteenth century to the present time, with concrete examples of each period. In the preparation of this book Dr. Nordau is said to have surpassed all his previous work, even his deservedly noted "Degeneration."

Margaret Potter, whose brilliant novel of Russian life "The Princess," was published by the Harpers, is among the youngest of present-day novelists, although she already has a number of books to her credit. She was born in Chicago in 1881. Her parents were wealthy, and she was educated at a preparatory school in that city and later took post-graduate studies in philosophy, history, English literature, Latin and Greek, under private tutors. She was married in 1902 to John Donald Black, son of a man prominent in public life. Even before her marriage, however, she had distinguished herself as a novelist, her first work having appeared when she was only 16 years of age. The wide sweep of her novels is an amazing feature, especially for one so young. She has written of Chicago and of Babylon, of the present day and of the days of King John, of America and of Russia.

THEATRE PARE BEFORE ROYALTY.

AN EVENT OF THE SEASON IN THE GERMAN CAPITAL.

What Happens When Emperor William Attends a Play—"Husarenfieber" a Comedy Founded on an Actual Military Incident Presented Before the Royal Family and Court.

[The following account of the appearance of the German Imperial family at a theater in Berlin was written by Bernice Oberwinder (nee Bernice Roche) who, during the time that she resided in Los Angeles, was one of Herr Becker's most gifted pupils. She is now studying music in the German capital.—Ed. Times.]

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, March 10.—When a few days before the recent birthday of Emperor William, official announcement of Theatre Paré in Berlin was made, the announcement stating that by special command of His Imperial Majesty, "Husarenfieber" was to be played January 28 in the Royal Theater by the entire company of the comedy, there was a stir in official and social circles in the German capital.

For all theater-goers, for all strangers, a Theatre paré is an important event, because those who succeed in obtaining admission may see the Emperor and his suite more favorably than on any other occasion, unless they are of those happy mortals who are entitled to presentation at court.

Theatre paré takes place only three times in the season. This time it was in honor of His Majesty's birthday, which falls on the 27th of January. As the Kaiser had promised to attend the performance of the "Postillion of Lougjumeau" in the Royal Operahouse on the 27th, "Husarenfieber" was arranged for the following day. Theatre paré means, in the first place, that a large number of seats in the parquet and dress circle are disposed of to friends of the Kaiser, members of the court and diplomatic corps, which leaves very few seats for other people; and in the second place, it means, for ladies décolleté, for gentlemen full dress.

At 7:30 o'clock the Schauspielhaus, beautiful since its renovation, in colors of blue and gold, began rapidly to fill. Punctually at 8 o'clock the Intendent, Excellenz Von Hulsen, entered the imperial loge in court uniform and knocked three times with his staff. This was to signify that all present must remain standing. Their Majesties being about to appear. A hush came over the audience and all eyes turned toward the box that is only used on great and festive occasions. The Emperor entered, looking well and youthful, fresh and amiable, wearing the Uhlan uniform, and after saluting the audience took his seat in the middle of the front row. There he was, the man of whom it is said, "He rules all Europe," the man with the indomitable will, with the charming manners and fascinating personality, the man who wins everyone's heart. There he was, among his subjects, his friends, his comrades, and there was not one of them who would not go through fire and water for his "Kaiserlichen Herrn."

To the left of the Emperor sat the Empress in a salmon-colored satin robe, making an imposing appearance with her beautiful figure and snowy white hair. She wore a diadem and necklace of brilliants. To the right of the Emperor sat the Crown Princess Cecilie in a pale orange-colored gown, falling in loose folds and draped with exquisite lace. The Kaiser is particularly fond of his tall, slender daughter-in-law with the dark eyes and hair. Among the other members of the imperial family were present the Crown Prince, Prince and Princess Eitel-Friedrich, the latter handsome in light blue chiffon; Prince August Wilhelm, the fourth son of the Emperor, with his fiancée, Princess Alexandra Victoria, in white, and the Princess Feodora, sister of the Empress.

The Emperor and all with him enjoyed themselves immensely; they laughed, clapped their hands and even tramped with their feet. It was indeed a magnificent sight, the rich display of diamonds and other glittering jewels, the uniforms of the army and navy, the many orders and decorations, the ladies in robes of velvet and chiffon, embroidered tulle, white or pearl gray satin, in cherry-red silk, sometimes fraise color, light green or blue. America was also represented. Here could be seen what an inborn taste in regard to toilette the American woman as a rule possesses. A young New York heiress in a soft white eolienne gown, gracefully caught here and there with rare old lace, was especially admired. In spite of the crowded house the air remained pure and sweet to the end of the performance, a delicate perfume of lilac having pervaded the interior before the arrival of the guests. Although the imperial family was the chief attraction of the evening, the interest in the play was not diminished.

Husarenfieber, the run of the season, a comedy by Gustav Kadelburg, and Richard Skowronnek, had been and is still being played daily in the Lustspielhaus, one of the many excellent small theaters of Berlin. The company is good, some of the actors having attained renown, as Schonfeld, Paul, Georg Engels and Tilly Waldegg. The last mentioned is one of the German stage beauties, and now this whole company was for one evening to leave its own theater and to give its very best in the Royal Theater. As can be imagined, each member was determined to do his part in making the evening a pleasant one for his Imperial Lord. One naturally asks, why was this play not given in the Royal Theater from the beginning? The fact is, Husarenfieber owes its origin to a true incident. Through consideration to the Kaiser it was deemed wiser not to give it in his Royal Theater, and thus it was handed over to the Lustspielhaus. The plot of the play is the following:

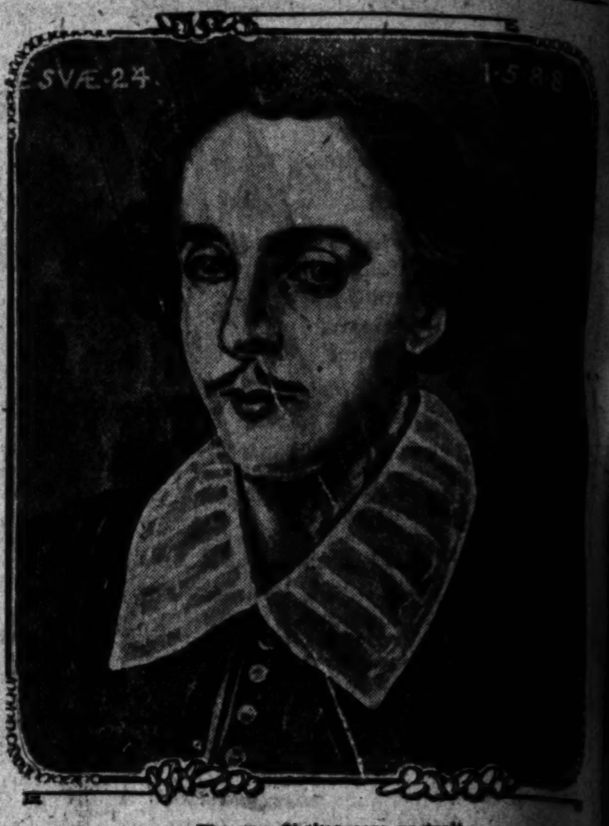
In a little God-forsaken town, near the Russian frontier is stationed a regiment of Hussars. They seem cut off from the rest of the civilized world. Some of them have already been there four years. In the opening scene there are three lieutenants bemoaning the stupidness of the place, while the fourth is dreaming of Berlin. He is awakened and is made to relate his dream, which he interrupts to kill flies. Another officer enters and reads them a notice in the paper as follows: "As the Kaiser was recently in Kirchhain, he asked one of the young girls how she liked it there. 'Your Majesty,' she had the courage to reply, 'it is all very well for our parents and for the elderly people, but we girls need dancers.' His Majesty promised he would see that a regiment be ordered to Kirchhain." (This is really true, only the name of the place is not Kirchhain, but Crefeld.) Suddenly they receive notice that the commander has ordered all the officers to assemble there and that he himself will appear immediately. A punch-bowl is brought in, sent by him in advance. Then comes the news, the regiment is ordered to Kirchhain. It is decided that the first one of them to get engaged in Kirchhain will be presented by the regiment with a silver punch-bowl. The act closes with the famous chair-ride, all singing: "Muss i denn, muss i denn zum Städtle hinaus," an old popular song.

BERNICE ROCHE OBERWINDER.

ALLLEGED PORTRAIT OF SHAKESPEARE FOUND.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 10.—Great interest has been aroused by the discovery of what may turn out to be the earliest known portrait of Shakespeare. For many years it hung among a collection of sporting prints in the bar parlor of the Bridgewater Arms, an inn in the village of Winston, near Darlington. No special value was attached to it until a stranger, who knew something about old pictures, chanced to see it. He noticed its strong resemblance to other supposed authentic portraits of Shakespeare, painted when he had reached a maturer age. He said that it might be a portrait of the immortal bard. In the mouth of rumor the "might be" became "was."



The new Shakespeare portrait.

M. H. Spielmann, the famous art critic, now engaged in preparing a volume on Shakespeare portraits, heard of it, and wrote to the Misses Ludgate—two maiden sisters who conduct the inn—asking them for a photograph of the portrait, and its history so far as they were acquainted with it. Mr. Spielmann, who is disposing of the claims of scores of alleged Shakespeare portraits, has not yet been able to devote that attention to the latest discovery necessary to determine whether or not it is a genuine portrait.

It represents a young man with budding mustache and a head of thick, dark, curly hair. He wears a crimson velvet slashed doublet and lace collar. The portrait, which measures 15¼x17½ inches, bears in white letters on the panel the inscription, "Ae Suae (aetatis suae,) 24 1588," and on the back are the letters, "W x S." Nowhere, however, is there an indication of the painter's name or initials.

The picture is in an excellent state of preservation, and the drawing is unusually good. The pose of the head is similar to that of what is known as the "Welcombe" portrait, owned by Sir George Trevelyan, and painted when Shakespeare was 46. In the conformation of the lower lip—an unusual type of lip—it is practically identical with the lower lip in the Droeshout portrait, and the "Ely House" portrait, now in possession of the [illegible] Trustees at Stratford.

"If it can be proved to be a Shakespeare," says Mr. Spielmann, "it is impossible to estimate its value. It would be worth £10,000 to buy it for the nation, but it is not unlikely that an American would offer [illegible] for it."

By Thomas W. Lawson

Owing to the fame of the author, through his magazine [illegible] financial questions, this book will undoubtedly be one of the [illegible] read novels of the year.

The story of a great and passionate love which endures through the sufferings brought on by money madness. The hero is a daring young broker who retrieves the fortunes of the family of a woman he loves, by the greatest "coup" in the history of the street. The fever of money madness and the curse of speculation runs throughout the story. This terrific conflict between character and money, with the shifting and glittering background of frenzied finance, makes a novel which would be absorbing to every man and woman were it by an unknown author.

Solution of the Millinery Question by Jarby's Encyclopedia—How Timbuctoo Fashions Came Into Sandburr, Iowa.

...ty-five wives!" exclaimed Mrs. "Don't you try to fool me with any nonsense about you ever having twenty-five wives."

"Yes, ma'am," said Eliph' Hewlitt, "Twenty-five; no more, no less; that being the custom of the country in which I was, as you can see by looking on page 745 of this work, which I am selling, giving, among other things, all the odd customs of the strange countries of the world, together with the flora and fauna of all continents, as well as the mysteries of the depths of the sea. And a terrible time I had with them twenty-five wives, too, the women of Timbuctoo being by nature easy to anger."

'Was you ever in Timbuctoo?" said Mrs. Billup. "I don't believe there is such a place."

"It's in Africa," explained Eliph' Hewlitt, "and this book on my knee tells all about it, as well as useful information on one thousand and one other subjects, comprising all the wisdom known to man, a most invaluable volume, as you may know when I tell you that the Bible and 'Jarby's Encyclopedia of Knowledge and Compendium of Literature, Science and Art' were the only two books I took with me when I went to be professor of universal knowledge at the University at Timbuctoo. This one book was all I needed, for it contains all; what isn't in it isn't worth knowing. I made my error when I began to teach them poor benighted savages religion. I began at the wrong season."

"I don't see what difference the season would make," said Mrs. Billup.

"I began along during Lent," said Eliph' Hewlitt, "and I had taken board and lodging with a man that had twenty-five wives and I told the ladies they had ought to give up something, but they wasn't the kind that would give up anything they cared for. I argued hard, but the only thing they would give up was their husband. They thought less of him than of anything they had, so they gave him up, and when twenty-five women unite to give up one man about all that man can do is to desert that family and go and look for another that hasn't got the giving-up habit; so he went.

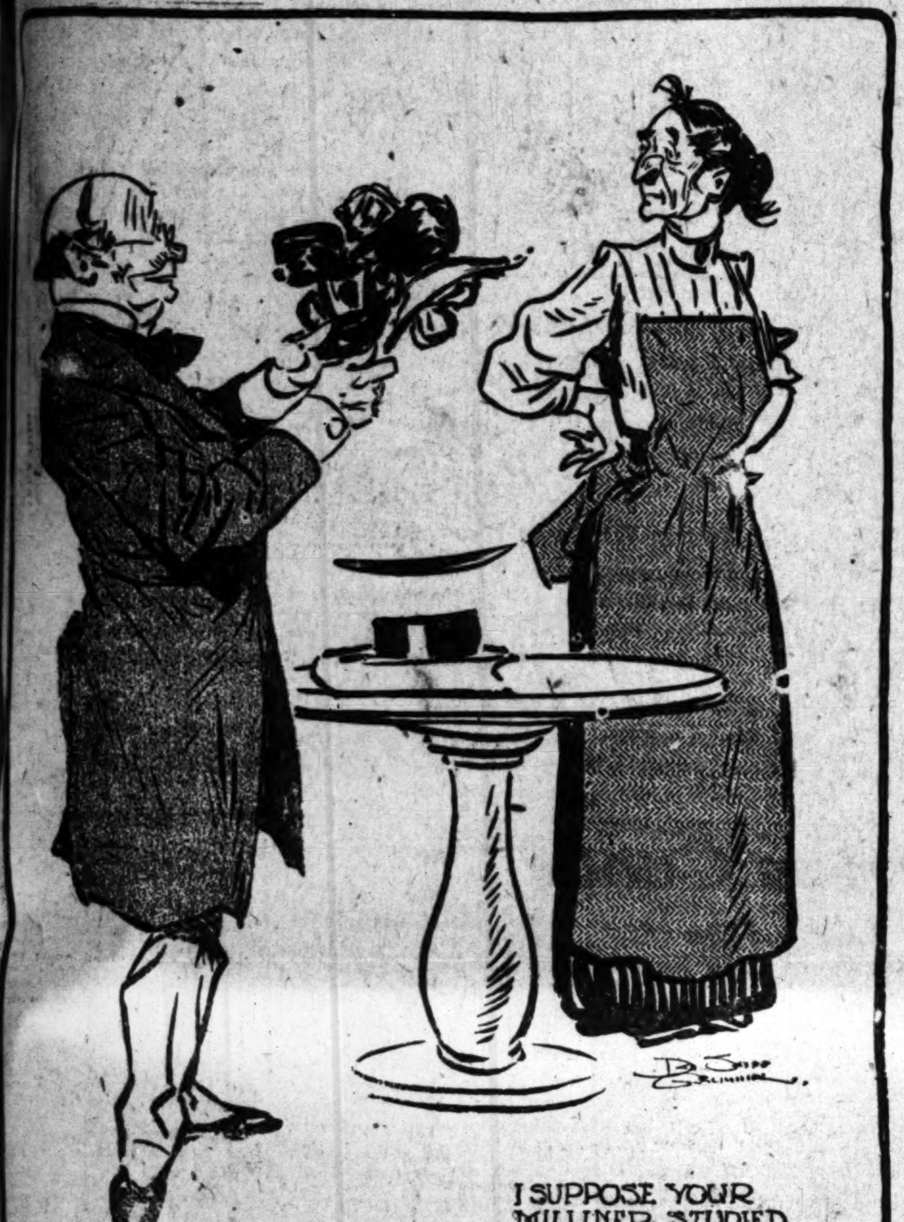
"My mistake was in telling them about Easter. You see, I had told them about the way ladies all got new hats at Easter and how the children had fancy-colored eggs on that day, and they sort of took to the idea, although they didn't rightly understand it. They was as simple as children, them wives was, and they would ask me if all women where I came from had new hats at Easter and did their husbands have to give them new hats, and I said I guessed the ladies got hats if they wanted them, and they always wanted them, so they always got them. And at that that whole lot of dark-brown wives gave up their husbands and clung to us. They took to the Easter hat idea and liked it, and said they would have Easter right there in Timbuctoo, with hats and colored eggs. That was all they was able to understand of the religion that I was trying to teach them—new hats and colored eggs at Easter. They wouldn't go any further into it. They said they liked that part so well they would stick right to that part, and that I need'nt mind the rest. They had a way of saying it that was part talk and part war-club exercises that made me think they meant it. So I began to make hats."

"You didn't make the hats, did you?" asked Mrs. Billup.

"Yes'm," said Eliph' Hewlitt. "I had to. Nobody in Timbuctoo had ever seen a lady's hat, and them wives wasn't in the habit of working, so I had to do it. I had a busy time. I trimmed hats every morning and hunted cassowary eggs every afternoon, the cassowary being the only bird in them parts that eggs could be got from fit to eat, and them wives insisted that all the children I had inherited from their recent husband, should have a dozen eggs apiece. That made 241 dozen. I had to go out into the desert to get them eggs, and when I had them all gathred and piled up it made a pile as big as this house. I was glad when I got them twenty-five hats all trimmed and them eggs all colored, I can tell you."

"I should think you would have been!" exclaimed Mrs. Billup.

"Yes'm," said Eliph' Hewlitt, "and I didn't get it all done until the night before Easter. I went to bed early that night and it made me proud to see them twenty-five hats all in a row, ready for my wives to wear the next morning. There was no two of them alike and all decorated with birds of paradise and tropical flowers; and calico and buckles I had made out of old tin cans. I was proud, but tired."



I SUPPOSE YOUR MILLINER STUDIED IN PARIS

"You well might be," Mrs. Billup assured him.

"And that night," said Eliph' Hewlitt, "the house burned down and every hat was burned. Not a hat was there left for any one of those wives of mine to wear the next day; but they took it real kindly. They said it didn't matter—that I could make some more and that they would postpone Easter one week for my especial benefit. Some women would have cried and fretted to lose their Easter hats that way, but they didn't. They just said: 'Put Easter off a week and make some more hats, and see that you are quick about it.' So I started in and made another lot."

"How did they look?" asked Mrs. Billup.

"Lovely," said Eliph' Hewlitt. "They were all big hats, like that one you have, although not so artistic, and they were the only hats in Timbuctoo; so the other women were awfully jealous. My wives were awfully pleased. I was glad to see how pleased they were, but I was sorry enough for it afterward."

"Did it make trouble with the other women?" asked Mrs. Billup.

"No'm," said Eliph' Hewlitt, "not that, but my wives liked Easter so well that they told me they were going to have it every Sunday, and that until further notice I would have twenty-five new Easter hats ready every Sunday morning. It wasn't a proper life for a university professor but I had to do it. It was a strain on my health to create twenty-five hats and gather 241 dozen cassowary eggs every week. I should have broken down if I hadn't had this priceless volume with me, giving on page 561, the Guide to Health, so that I was able to cure myself when I felt sick, and on page 864, the 'Five Hundred Ennobling Thoughts from the World's Greatest Authors,' to cheer me when depressed. I got so I could trim hats with my hands, while my eyes were reading the 'Lives of All the World's Great Men,' from Adam to Roosevelt, page 437, with the dying words of them that is dead. New dying words added as fast as they die. In fact, there is nothing known to man that is not in its pages, and the price, neatly bound in cloth, only $5, $1 down and $1 a month until paid."

"How long did you have Easter every week?" asked Mrs. Billup.

"It's $7.50 if you prefer the leather binding," said Eliph' Hewlitt. "And I kept that Easter business up for eight years before I was able to get away. That is fifty-two Easters a year, and eight years and twenty-five hats an Easter, a sum easily reckoned by the use of the Ready Reckoner, or Short Cuts in Arithmetic, on page 34, which gives quick methods of working all sums, saving the price of the book in that way alone in less than a year, the answer being 5200 hats, no two alike. It was many years before I was able to look upon an Easter hat without tears for my lost time, and to this day I cannot see a cassowary egg with any pleasure. A picture of the cassowary bird is shown on page 752 of this volume, the other illustrations including the steel engraving of President Roosevelt and the allegorical frontispece in three colors. This," he said, handing the book to Mrs. Billup, "is the picture of the cassowary bird."

"And how did you ever get away from them twenty-five wives?" asked Mrs. Billup.

"On page 265 we find the map of Africa, showing the location of Timbuctoo, as well as all mountains, rivers, lakes, et cetery," said Eliph' Hewlitt. "And the way I got away was that they gave me up one Lent just after a missionary came who happened to have a magazine with some pictures of the kind of hats that was the style that year. It seems that the hats I had just made for them was a year old in style, so they gave me up and told me to go, and I went. That shows the difference between them savage wives and the civilized."

"Yes," said Mrs. Billup. "Civilized folks don't give up husbands that easy."

"I wasn't thinking of that," said Eliph' Hewlitt. "I was thinking that if a man had been furnishing a civilized wife with last year's style hats for Easter he wouldn't be able to go away if he wanted to, after she got through with him."

"Well," said Mrs. Billup, "you can't expect much of poor ignorant savages. You say you sell this book for $1 down. That ain't much."

The Isle of Man.

AN APPRECIATION OF ITS CHARMS, WRITTEN BY A MANXMAN.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

In the middle of the Irish Sea lies a little island which has an importance far beyond its size. It is known the world over as the Isle of Man. The Manxman is as ubiquitous as the proverbial Scot, and carries with him to the end of the earth a passionate love for the old home. And no wonder. Within the narrow compass of thirty miles by twelve is packed as much material beauty as anywhere on God's earth. It is dominated by Snaefell—the snow mountain—which lifts its domed head over 2000 feet into the air. From its summit on a clear day can be easily traced the coast lines of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales. Less conspicuous heights there are, each with a grandeur all its own, green with grass and shoots of succulent heather in the spring, and purple in the autumn.

To many people, natives and visitors alike, the real beauty spots of Manxland must be sought for in the glens. We give our Irish friends a hearty welcome, for are you not our kin? Indeed, geologists tell us that in late geologic times Manxland was part of Ireland, and from it we get our Irish elks, skeletons of which have been dug up from our peat deposits. But we must haste from the tumult of Douglas to understand something of the magic of Mona.

Did ever so small a spot of earth hold so much of beauty in the heart of it? The sparkling air sings in the air as we journey by leisurely electric car toward the heights where Snaefell looks down on neighboring hills. We travel by a tumbling sapphire sea, the sweeping curve of coast indented with bays and creeks running up to scattered hamlets which hang like birds' nests between the hills; by warm, dewy glens deep in bracken and foxglove and cushag; by shadowy belts of pines stretching green and cool; by flowering fields where the gorse clambers flamboyantly among gray old dikes; clouds of heather and many-colored mosses drift along the uplands; the harebells are blurs of azure in the grass.

The white ribbons of roads winding up and winding down, are flushed with color from hedgerows of honeysuckle and of fucnsia over whose brilliant drooping tassels the lark sings its aria. Come we to Groudle, to Garwick, to Ballaglass, to Laxey, a little white hill town sloping steeply to the sea. Palm trees grow in the open, and the roadside stations, with their wooden chalets and thatched kiosks, have an air as of Switzerland. And so we wind, up and up the mountain path to Snaefell, where, if the day be clear, are vast spaces of landscape unrolled to view—villages in the plains brimmed with sunshine, stretched out like a map before us, a far-off shimmer of the sea with hurrying sails like the wings of birds, an area of tranquil valleys and hills in an atmosphere of wind-blown silence.

There are numerous folds in the mountains and also ravines running down to the sea, which no lover of nature can overlook. The streams which dance through them, making melody as they run, are fringed with ferns and wild flowers, and occasionally shaded with trees. There are fine stretches of land in both the north and the south of the island which are exceedingly fertile and bear abundant crops. The irregular fields of poorer soil, creeping up the hillsides, with their varied hues, form a pleasing feature of the landscape.

Nor can we forbear to mention the bold cliffs on both east and west of the island, from which the giant waves are flung back with terrific force. This rock scenery, culminating in Spanish Head, with its traditions of the Armada, and Bradda Head, with its conspicuous tower, is exceedingly grand. No visitor should miss the ride by electric car from Ramsey to Douglas and from Douglas to Port Soderick. But the best view of the island can only be obtained from outside. Let the visitor select a clear, calm day and sail around the island in one of the splendidly appointed boats of the Isle of Man Steam Packet Company, and we promise him an ever-varying panorama of grandeur and beauty. His mind will be stored with mental photographs of landscape and seascape which will live as long as himself and will never grow dim.

The larger streams of the island are well stocked with trout, and the disciple of Izaak Walton can ply the gentle art in any of these, practically without hindrance. Proprietors and farmers are exceedingly generous in this respect. Naturally, they expect that anglers will shut the gates they require to open, and have a tender regard for the fences. The public roads are kept in excellent order, so that driving is a continuous pleasure. The whole island is intersected with by-paths. These and the sod fences around the fields are begemmed with primroses and wild bluebells in spring, and in the autumn the blackberry bushes are laden with luscious fruit. Gorse blooms twice a year, and blooms in this favored land as perhaps nowhere else. Fucnsia hedges are the delight of the visitors, and several species of palm lift their fronds in air all the year through. All this points to a mild climate. The island is warmer in winter and cooler in summer than other parts of the kingdom in the same latitude. Snow seldom falls and very rarely falls more than a few hours, at least on the seaboard.

Is is any wonder that Manxland has become the playground of thousands of toilers and many hundreds of the leisure classes? Its inhabitants are largely cut off from the outside world during the winter months, there being a daily sailing to Liverpool and occasional sailings to Glasgow, Belfast, Dublin, Whitehaven and Silloth. But with the advent of the summer the island wakes from its winter sleep and by August the sea is churned by magnificent steamers, bringing their living freight to Douglas and Ramsey from all points of the compass. As a holiday and health resort it is decidedly gaining in popularity, and year by year an increasing number of visitors is landed on its shores.

What is the best time to visit the island? We should say in May, June, September and October. If people who can afford to come during these months, especially June and September, only tasted its charms, they would not come to be hustled in August. But, for August, be it said, that the behavior of the crowds in the public thoroughfares is exemplary. Indeed, at any season of the year, a holiday in the Isle of Man is both health-giving and educational. The antiquarian will find numerous traces of pre-historic man, his homes and implements of war and peace. He will find ancient churches, abbeys and castles.

In the time of holidaying the Isle of Man calls with many voices. Here are resources for all classes, for all temperaments, for all purses. Do you want quiet, there are remote and beautiful solitudes where you may drowse the day long, with the hills and the sea and the sun for company. Are you in search of gaiety, there are your favorite "stars" from the halls and theaters, with their best plays and turns; ballrooms in plenty where you may dance away some of your superabundant energies; with all the rank and file of seashore troubadors and comedians to make merry for you; excursions by sea and land, galas and picnics, golf and tennis, cycling and motoring; in fine, the attractions town and country and sea combined, that each may make holiday according to his will and opportunity.

Like all island folk and like all Celts, the Manx are highly patriotic. They are proud of their little corner of earth, proud of its beauty, and of its prosperity, which they seek to increase by liberal enterprise and diligent study of changing social conditions.

Another of their distinctive traits is a fine and exquisite courtesy, especially expressed toward women, and to the stranger within its gates. From the humble fisher to the Governor they are the apostles of a genial toleration, of a kindly character which adds to the hospitable charm of the island. Lord Raglan, who is, of course, the first Manxman during his Governorship, is heart and mind for the common weal. A. W. Moore, the Speaker of the House of Keys, author and politician, is one of the most versatile of living Manxmen. Deemster Moore, the grandson of a famous Manxman, is noted for his sound and fair judgement in island policy.

Alderman Goldsmith is one of the ablest speakers in the House of Keys. G. A. Ring, the Attorney General, is an eminent educationalist. T. P. Ellison, the secretary and manager of the Isle of Man Steam Packet Company, another gifted Manxman, has many of the personal characteristics of the American of the Southern States, frank ease of manner, vivacious expression, soft, dark eyes and pale complexion; and there is no better known personality in affairs than J. K. Broadbent, of the Manx Examiner, himself the descendent of the famous Cregeen, the compiler of the first Manx dictionary.

BITS OF VERSE.

At Dawn.

The sun has reached the western window, love;
'Twill soon be night.
And when the light of day comes once again
All will be right.
Good-by, old sun, and when you come again
At blessed dawn,
Think, sweetheart, think, a few short hours,
And sad night gone,
I'll be at rest, our child upon my breast.

The sun came through the casement wide at dawn
And shone upon
The pillows white, where lay the fair young wife.
The sad night gone,
The quiet chamber sweet with lily buds
Fresh plucked that morn,
And thus they left her at the break of day
The child newborn
Upon her breast, both evermore at rest.

The Thought of You.

The thought of you is as a morning rose,
Full-petalled, crowned with velvet mistiness;
Trail past it winds, in lingering caress,
The sun its friend—bees, dews, its dearest foes.
And I would be the sun, the wind, the dew,
If only for the wish of nearing you.

The thought of you is as a noonday sound
Of clear-toned trumpet, strong in wonderment,
That shakes the echoing crags of discontent
Into sweet fairy whisperings, music-bound.
And I would be the craggy hillsides, too,
Rent with eternal echoing tones of you.

The thought of you is as a star at eve,
Far-shining o'er the marge of some still lake;
Peace, perfect peace, must follow in the wake
Its tender glimmerings on the waters cleave;
And I would be the perfect lake at even If you, dear star, would make my heart your heaven.

When Shadows Fell.

I did not know nor understand
Until, when twilight shadows fell,
What meant the pressure of her hand.
Nor did I know how sweet the spell
When I, world-wearied, racked with pain,
Felt fingers weave about my brain.

Her songs—I dare not dream them hushed—
But yesterday I heard them sung.
Bleak the path where roses blushed,
And tender morning-glories hung.
I did not know her rainbow world
Until the shadows were unfurled.

I did not know the arching skies
Could be so dreary and defiled—
I did not know her tender eyes
Poured forth such sunlight when they smiled.
These things—her whims—so sweet to tell,
All came too late—when shadows fell.

A Villanelle of the Joy of Life.

Between the lights that gleam, the shades that fleet,
The stars and shadows of our mortal way,
Surely our little hour of life is sweet.

Sunlight wherein our labors to complete,
And twilight for our brooding dreams; we stray
Between the lights that gleam, the shades that fleet.

With each recurrent joyous morn we greet
A world new-made, to fashion as we may;
Surely our little hour of life is sweet.

Still we pass on with slowly lingering feet,
Glad in the glory of the long fair day,
Between the lights that gleam, the shades that fleet.

We feel the stir of larger pulses beat
Within the shelter of our fragile day;
Surely our little hour of life is sweet.

Into the dark we pass at length, to meet
We know not whom; but while we yet delay,
Between the lights that gleam, the shades that fleet,
Surely our little hour of life is sweet.

"After the ball is over"—Flight of the gay and the disconsolate from Ascot.

ASCOT MEET DIES IN MAD RIOT OF GREED.

Surging Crowds Try To "Make Good" Last Racing Day—Scenes of Soul Tragedy Where Satan Cries, "Heads I Win, Tails You Lose."

CIRCLING over Ascot Park yesterday was a flock of buzzards. But few paid attention to these scavengers of the air, interest was centered in the spoil gatherers under the grand stand.

It was the last day of the races.

It was the last day in which the touts, trailers and sports had a chance to "make good."

The horses were an incident—a means to an end.

Many as were the betting stands, thick as were the book makers, there was a surging crowd about each between every race. Every man was anxious to get rid of his money in the hope that it would return to him in doublefold or more.

There were tears of blood on more than one gold piece.

Brightly shone the warm California sun, the flowers bloomed in the well-kept grounds, in contrast glistened the snow-capped mountains sharp cut in their clearness. Matters of course to those whose pulses beat to the ring of hoofs under the wise.

"Dollars and cents. Dollars and cents." That was the rhythm running in time to the racers in the ears of thousands.

And some will ride in Pullmans, and some on box car tops, while brake-beam reservations a premium will bring. But eke within, above, below the story will be told—how Rostof took the money at fifteen odds to one, or La Gloria romped a winner and Hildebrand a record broke.

HEARTS BROKEN, TOO.

But records were not the only things broken yesterday. To those who follow the races it meant much; it meant the difference between the Pullman and the brake beam. Every dollar that many could beg, borrow or even steal was thrown into the maw behind the mask of this "Sport of Kings." Some of them won by a neck; some of them lost.

Toward New Orleans, Oakland, Seattle, the pilgrims of sport are straggling. The police of Los Angeles during the next ten days will be kept busy, for desperate men with the fever of gambling in their blood will seek for easier marks than "picking the ponies," just to "raise a stake."

For a time there had been hope among the plungers that the racing season at Ascot would be continued for an extra two weeks. But this hope was born of talk alone. The word went forth "straight" at the last that yesterday was the finish.

It was.

PREPARE FOR NEXT YEAR.

But next year? Some say there will be no more racing at Ascot ever again. They are reformers. What do they know about the racing game? Nothing.

Racing next year at Ascot? Why, certainly.

That is the word which was whispered yesterday at Ascot. It brought a happy smile to the face of many a sport.

"Next year! Ah, next year we'll beat the game, sure!"

Arrangements have been made to care for the buildings and racing gear at Ascot. The park will be kept up in every respect.

Hardly at any time during the racing season just closed has such a crowd gathered under the great roof of the grand stand at Ascot as put in an appearance there yesterday. And wonder of wonders, there were more women than men, or at least so it seemed.

THE PITY OF IT.

Women were everywhere; clustered in the boxes, in long rows on the seats, even standing in groups discussing "tips." Souls were bartered for "straight tips" yesterday.

There were gray-haired women whose eyes were bright with a feverish light. There were pale and painted women. There were wives present whose husbands were working hard in uptown offices. Mothers, too, were there with little children who played about the aisles or fearing, ran to mama's lap for comfort hardly given. Girls still in their teens, young women hopeful of life.

And nearly all staked money.

In and out, in and out, among the gay and thoughtless throng sidled "official messengers." Familiar young men. "Make your bets! Make your bets" and with quip and jest about the "good things" they gathered in the dollars in exchange for little yellow slips.

AT THE POST.

And then the horses ran. They are bunched, and it might be the opera for all the interest apparently taken. Men and women steel their nerves to win or lose like "dead game sports." A few cheeks were flushed, a few more hands are clenched that hold a yellow slip.

Ah, at the half they begin to straggle. One, then another drops out. Why don't they run? How long it seems before they get around.

They are in the stretch. Some of the jockeys are lashing their mounts, who with pulsing nostrils, outstretched necks and pounding hoofs, strive as though for life to reach the goal. In a rush they come.

By one impulse the thousands rise from their seats; they bend forward; no man, no woman remembers who they are. Forgotten are their masks. A cry arises, "Rostof wins." There is a surge forward like a human wave, yet no one moves away. Frantic women call to their favorites. One stout matron snaps her fingers; "Come on, Myrtle; come on Myrtle," she cries. "Oh, Lord; there goes the grocer bill."

THEN THE RECKONING.

It is all over. There is a rustling and shuffling of feet as the crowd sits and fumbles with the masks. Throughout the grand stand men rise and head for the stands underneath to cash their checks or to take another chance.

As a rule the men who lose show little emotion. They light another cigar or curse softly in a monotonous tone. With the women it is different. Cheeks are flushed or deathly white. Faces are radiant, old women laugh joyously; each winner explains how she got the tip. Rostof is greeted with a clapping of gloved hands as he comes to the judges' stand.

Others glare at those who laugh. How can they rejoice when others lose? Why did she bet on that "mean old thing," anyway? Still others have tied the strings of their masks. They even smile. Good Lord, some of them even smile—and the price they have paid.

But yesterday was the finish.

VARIETY OF FIENDS.

There are two kinds of race-horse fiends. One variety is the domestic bird—the sportive clerk who sneaks off during the afternoon and studies the dope book all the way out on the street car to see how he is going to win, and studies the dope book all the way home in the car to see how it happened that he lost.

The other kind is the bird of passage who follows the horse from one track to another. He despises the other variety as being unprofessional and he loses his money in a strictly professional style.

From the first day of the season, until the last flag drops, these last freaks are living an up-and-down existence. Some days they win and some days they lose. Lucky are the ones whose good luck comes at the end of the season. They ride out lolling among the plush cushions of the Overland Limited, acquiring germs and ideas of luxury.

During the night, they sometimes hear a curious tramping scuffling sound on the roof overhead. And they know some brother sport who picked a "dead one" during the last week has torn up a white ticket and is "beating it" to the next track.

TELL ANOTHER YARN.

To the sportive clerk it is merely a case of tapping the till and trying to make up the shortage out of his salary before it is found; telling the grocer another yarn about his sick grandmother and standing him off awhile longer.

One of those times nearly every sport has been one of those present on the Pullman roof thrashing his arms to keep warm. Every time the starting flag goes down and sends them "off" during these last weeks the patter of the hoofs sounds like the noise of feet overhead to the pikers.

George E. Tomlinson, whose happiness turned to wormwood in the wisdom born of knowledge.

OLD ROMANCE HER NEMESIS.

AFTER MANY YEARS HUSBAND DISILLUSIONIZED.

Tomlinsons Happy While Love Is Blind—Dead Past Resurrected and Trouble Begins—Now Come Developments of Greater Interest Than the First.

Fairy-story romance has certainly been the portion of Mrs. Sadie Tomlinson, whose heart-beats of woe and picture recently appeared in the Sunday Times. The story of her troubles was then told in which she appeared as a downtrodden, suffering woman, deserted by a brutal husband to the mercies of a cold and cruel world.

So far as the facts of the story given out they are true in part. Mrs. Tomlinson did get a divorce from George E. Tomlinson and soon afterward he did marry Miss Margaret Irwin, but in Indiana, not in Nevada.

Mr. and Mrs. Tomlinson are now guests at the Van Nuys Hotel in this city and the latest phase of the Tomlinson romance is greater than the first. But the recent developments indicate that Cupid is an unreliable rogue and often mixes things in a way not always satisfactory to all concerned.

In fact, Mrs. Sadie Tomlinson has had a number of romances, in Boston, Chicago and Omaha. Also she has had more than one divorce. But in Chicago such trifles are not taken seriously and it was there she first met Mr. Tomlinson.

That was when she was a Mrs. Hudson. But she had secured a divorce from Mr. Hudson on the ground that he already had a wife living. This was in April, 1889, before Judge Tuley. But later she returned to the Hudson home.

FASCINATED HIM.

Mrs. Sadie Tomlinson is a most charming and fascinating woman and she has a laugh that is a wonder, for in spite of her alleged forty-seven years it makes one think of "Sweet Sixteen." As the wife of George E. Tomlinson she was a good wife, but in an unfortunate moment it is claimed that her romantic past rose up and changed love to hatred, devotion to loathing and attention to dislike.

Mr. Tomlinson is 38 years old and looks younger and when he first met the woman who became his wife in 1894 he should have known enough to know better. But love is blind and although he had known her as the wife of Mr. Hudson, she told him such a tale of sorrow when he saw her again in 1894 that his heart went out to her in sympathy. From sympathy it was an easy jump to love.

She told him that she had gone East and secured a divorce from Hudson and a man always believes a woman he loves, otherwise he really couldn't love her. So they were married and the couple were as happy as the proverbial turtle doves.

Nearly five years later they came to Los Angeles and it was while Mr. Tomlinson was serving as a ticket agent in Pasadena that the first break took place. This was when a certain well-known railroad man seemed to recognize Mrs. Tomlinson when she was with her husband. Explanations were demanded and refused. Words passed which rankled and the Southern California home was broken up. Mr. Tomlinson went to Bisbee, Ariz., with his wife and there started to begin life over again.

Fortune smiled and after three years he departed for Chicago for a wider field of effort and with a comfortable fortune.

ROMANTIC NEMESIS.

For a time in the Windy City the couple lived together, but again something happened which led Mr. Tomlinson to systematically investigate the

TEACHERS IN DIRE DESPAIR.

Fail to Get Laws Improving Salary Situation.

Council Authority Is Needed to Effect Rise.

Tales of Hardship Told by the Schoolma'ams.

Los Angeles school teachers despair of an early improvement in the salary situation.

Failing to secure through the Legislature the law they desired, improving conditions, they hope now that the City Council may act for them.

Pitiful tales of saving and scrimping under the existing rate of remuneration are told by some of the teachers; numbers of them say that, to keep up appearances and to continue the improvement of their minds, they are obliged to go in debt each year.

Few of them, without paying their expenses by picking fruit or otherwise working, are able to afford an outing during the summer vacation.

It is declared that the janitors in many schools are paid more than the teachers.

Public school teachers of Los Angeles have just faced a great disappointment. Measures designed to improve their financial condition have failed to get legislative and executive approval, killing the hope of State relief for the teachers of Los Angeles for at least two more years.

The local Board of Education is anxious to increase the teachers' salaries, or at least to pay them for twelve months in a year instead of for ten, but it must have the authority of the City Council.

While our capable and efficient workers face another unpaid summer season, their fellow teachers in San Francisco are looking forward to a vacation on full pay.

The Los Angeles city charter provides that 20 cents on every $100 of public money may be paid into the school fund. Fourteen cents on the hundred is the highest that has ever been voted for this purpose. If the maximum were allowed it would do much to relieve the financial strain that the grade teachers were experiencing and which is depopulating the ranks most alarmingly.

City policemen, handling the drunk and disorderly, receive from $90 to $115 a month, twelve months in the year. The trained teacher who must spend years of preparation for her work, who gives eternal bent to the minds of the children under her care, who must cultivate mind and heart and soul and body, and spend her energies prodigally, is paid from $48 to $66 in the kindergarten, and from $62 to $82 a month in the grammar grades, for only ten months in the year.

She has a social position to keep up; she must dress neatly and appropriately—in short, she must keep up an appearance. Can she do it on the present salaries paid in the city?

ONE TEACHER'S STORY.

Here is the experience of one teacher who spent nine years of her youth working one-half of the time that she might study during the other half; who borrowed money to live on and to assist in the support of her mother while taking a Normal course.

She brought her mother to California and has supported her. They live in a modest manner. She does most of her own sewing, but that time, if she could afford it, ought to be spent in studying to improve herself, and in taking some pleasure. She has had to forego many coveted trips in the summer vacations, from which she might gain both pleasure and profit.

To keep abreast of the times, she has had to subscribe each year for certain magazines, to buy a few books, and attend lectures. Grand operas, theaters, and the like are luxuries to be indulged in rarely. Her home and school duties leave little time to visit the library for the purpose of study. These duties increase as her mother grows older, but her salary will not permit her to hire outside help.

Out of her salary of from $720 to $800 a year she has been able to save each year just enough money to pay expenses from the last of June, when school closes, to the middle of October, when the teachers receive their first month's salary. How much can she save for the time, not very far distant, when she will not be allowed to teach any longer? She has been teaching more than twenty years.

In Los Angeles, few girls do housework for less than $25 a month, with room and board besides. If they understand their work, they have many

WILL BURN OUR OIL.

Western Pacific, It Is Announced, Expects to Use It on Locomotives and Steamships.

The Western Pacific Company, it is announced, will use oil fuel not only for its locomotives on the Pacific end of the transcontinental run, but also for its ocean steamers which will ply between San Francisco and the Orient. The increased demand for oil that will be created will be enormous, not only on account of the actual consumption by these three or perhaps five ocean flyers, but on account of the great impetus to the use of liquid fuel by others who will have before them this further example of its successful use.

It will be necessary to establish stations in the Orient with huge storage tanks to insure a supply at both ends and tank steamers to convey it will have to be operated, notwithstanding that it has been shown that vessels can carry enough liquid fuel for journeys almost as long as the round trip under favorable circumstances. With the placing of a liquid supply in the Orient the use of this will be greatly encouraged.

Coalinga Operations.

The Skookum Oil Company, a new corporation of northern capitalists, has acquired eighty acres on the famous section 6 at Coalinga and will begin drilling as soon as the rig can be erected.

W. R. Guiberson, superintendent of the Associated at Coalinga, and associates, have acquired some eighty acres on this section and will drill at once. So far as the public knows the venture is an individual one, but the Associated may be interested.

The Associated has five rigs up on section 36 which adjoins No. 6, and buildings are also being erected for a permanent camp. It is expected that the new pumping station which is to be put in will be on this section.

The Shreeve Oil Company is cementing its well on section 6.

Rigs are being erected on this section as follows: W. M. Graham, one up and six others planned; Lucile, one up for well No. 2; Section Six Company, rig for one new well, No. 1 being down over 315 feet.

The Coalinga Enterprise is the name of a company recently organized by John A. Bunting and Capt. John F. Lucey on part of this section. It is distinct from the Coalinga Southern organized by the same people, already drilling on another part of this section.

NEAR FAMINE FROM FLOOD.

PEOPLE OF THE MUDDY RIVER VALLEY CUT OFF.

Roads Impassable, no Food Can Be Taken in, and the Larders Are Almost Bare—Many Families on Rations Between Here and Salt Lake.

Famine confronts the inhabitants of the Muddy River Valley and adjacent mining camps in Southeastern Nevada as a result of long-continued washouts on the Salt Lake Railroad. Moapa, half-way between Los Angeles and Salt Lake, has been gutted of all foodstuffs and grain. Warehouses are empty and the railroad is unable to rush long-overdue cars of merchandise to relieve a situation that has become serious.

Down the valley of the Muddy the towns of Overton, St. Joe and St. Thomas are practically isolated, cut from the world. Three hundred people have been compelled to go on rations, and all stock has been turned into the hills. Inhabitants at these points are unable to reach Moapa or haul supplies between the respective towns. Bridges have been swept away, and all roads are impassable. Families are pooling their larders, and restricting consumption to a bare sustenance, in order to tide over the famine.

At Gold Butte, Grand Gulch and Cedar Basin, miners and prospectors are all but starving. Were it not for rabbits and quail in abundance, it is highly probable that somebody's faithful burro would be sacrificed to the mulligan pot.

Harry Gentry, postmaster at St. Thomas, who has lived there thirty years, said to a Times reporter: "I have never known the Muddy and Virgin rivers to be as high and turbulent as this season. Thousands of acres of land have been flooded that was never flooded before. The damage to crops will exceed anything in any memory of this locality. The year has been exceptional for rainfall throughout all this desert region. It is puzzling and cannot be accounted for. As our rains have been coming from Southern California we are strongly inclined to believe that the Salton Sea is largely responsible for the floods."

BANKRUPT COUNTY, BAD ROADS.

The serious condition of the roads down the Muddy is partially due to the inability of Lincoln county to render assistance. The county is bankrupt, and its roads have been getting worse from year to year until many of them are now impassable. This condition is a handicap to the farmers, almost as serious as the floods. Acres of garden truck are rotting because the farmers are unable to convey their crops to the railroad. In all the valley there is not a side of bacon or a kernel of grain. No potatoes, beans, ham, rice or dried fruits are to be had at any price. But a few sacks of flour remains and stocks of canned

IS IT CANDY OR FLOWERS?

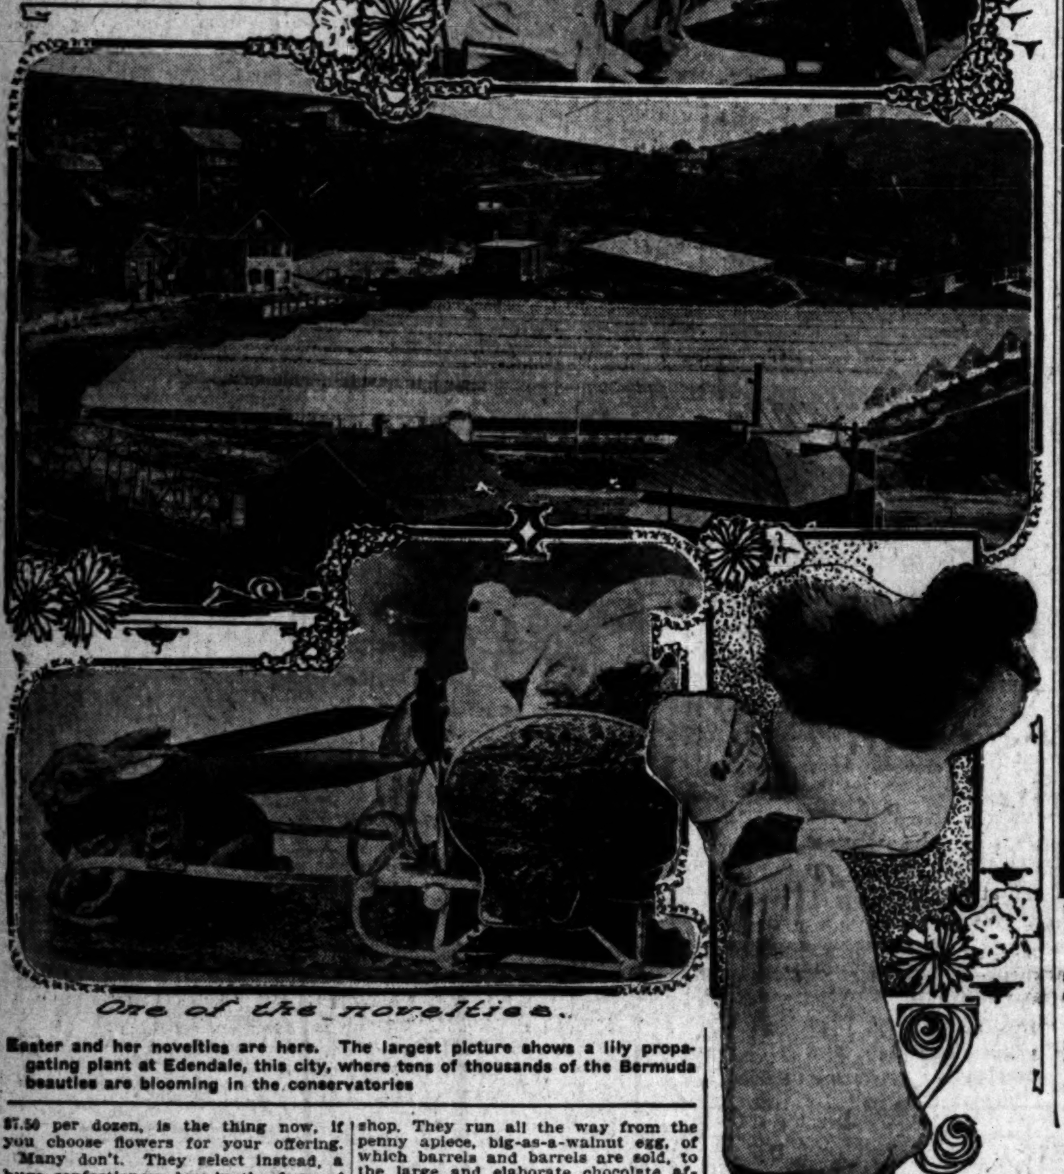
At All Events Easter Gifts Must Be Costly.

Extravagance Crowding Out Season's Spirit.

Fashion's Demands as Varied as Beautiful.

BY HENRIETTA B. FREEMAN.

The days when a simple Easter card, a bunch of violets, or a 3-cent candy egg filled the requirements of Easter remembrances are long past, my friend, and this holy holiday now rivals Christmas in expensive and elaborate gift making. A modest little present of a $35 basket of American Beauty roses, or a cluster of Easter lilies at $7.50 per dozen, is the thing now, if you choose flowers for your offering.



One of the novelties.
Hatched for the day.

Easter and her novelties are here. The largest picture shows a lily propagating plant at Edendale, this city, where tens of thousands of the Bermuda beauties are blooming in the conservatories

Many don't. They select instead, a huge confectionery box in the form of an egg, that has a ten-pound capacity for bonbons and comes at the modest price of $10. This is a sweet and slight reminder of Eastertide. You pay your money and take your choice, but you must certainly do the first if you would be in the swim. One florist yesterday was kept busy making up Easter baskets of roses. One contained a couple of dozen of glorious American Beauties at $15 per and tied with a $5 bow of ribbon. Another basket held $25 worth of choice blossoms, and there were any number of $10 orders waiting to be filled. "Little orders," these last were classed by the busy florists.

The swell thing for an Easter gift for your best girl this season is a bit of dainty Dresden china. For $75 you can get a very decent looking vase to hold your $15 roses. If your taste runs to rabbits, you can get a big, gilded Bunny in the shape of a confectionery box, and it will require a couple of pounds of chocolates to fill it, and the whole thing is dirt cheap at $4. At the pace we are going it will not be long before the habit of Easter gifts assumes as large proportions as that of Christmas. Like the custom of wedding and graduating gifts, it is growing upon us, and, with true American lavishness, we are rushing into a wild extravagance that bids fair to crowd out much of the sweet and tender spirit of Easter with a crude commercialism that is utterly out of keeping with the sacred anniversary.

Not a store in town now but plans definitely for its Easter trade. Whereas the florists and milliners hitherto held the balance of custom at Easter, conditions have changed and the entire mercantile world shares in the profits of Easter giving. A leading jewelry firm when questioned yesterday as to its share in Easter trade, admitted that there is a great demand for gifts, mostly limited to trifles, such as hatpins, belt buckles, portemonnaies, etc. Even the shoe shops now advertise special Easter shoes and slippers, and all the windows of the dry goods houses are filled with Easter attractions—Easter gowns, Easter coats, Easter lingerie and Easter ribbons galore.

BUNNIES VS. TEDDY BEARS.

The popular Teddy bears have had their day, and the craze is superseded by the Easter Bunny, as the shop windows abundantly testify. Beautiful brown or snow white bunnies lift their long ears and graceful heads above the discomfited Teddies. Los Angeles youngsters are ready to drop the bears for the bunnies these days. Made of the same soft, furry material, they come at practically the same price as did the Teddies—the larger ones at $4 and the smaller at less.

BAD DAY FOR DUCKS.

There is a chance for the Audubon Society to get busy right away, for, next to the flowers and bunnies, the most popular Easter fad is the cunning, fluffy chicks and ducklings, mounted on pen-wipers, or clustered in realistic nests. These downy darlings are slaughtered by the thousand in Japan, from whence they are shipped, to accommodate the Easter trade. Hatched out in incubators, the little things are chloroformed at their first chirp and then turned over to the taxidermist, who stuffs and mounts them. Some of them are mounted with uplifted wings, the dainty heads cocked as if singing Easter carols. One confectionery firm here estimates its Easter sale of these feathered innocents at $5000.

"We have sold 10,000 candy eggs this year," said the manager of a candy shop. They run all the way from the penny apiece, big-as-a-walnut egg, of which barrels and barrels are sold, to the large and elaborate chocolate affair, or the hand-painted, mirror-sided egg with gay and gaudy decorations of green and red.

The egg-shaped candy boxes are prime favorites this season and are monstrous affairs. Some of them measure fully two feet in diameter and hold ten pounds of candy. Nestled in the center of the peck or more of bonbons is a fluffy chick or duckling. The exterior of these boxes is decorated with all sorts of fantastic designs of rabbits. There are Brownie bunnies, gaily strumming musical instruments, and Alice in Wonderland rabbits standing erect on their hind legs and wearing dress suits as waiters, each bearing a huge platter of Easter eggs. A big head waiter rabbit is chastising an awkward bunny waiter, who has carelessly dropped his platter and smashed both it and the eggs all to pieces. The culprit is held by his long ears in the grasp of the infuriated boss.

Other boxes of more demure design are decorated with Easter maidens bearing Ascension lilies, the whole done in pale lavender tones. There are rosy cherubs, kicking their fat legs through the shell of candy or bisque eggs and there are charming jewel cases in the shape of eggs, with dainty white rabbits nestled among the soft meshes of the sachet puffs.

PICTURES AND POST-CARDS.

There is always a heavy demand for pictures at Easter time—ecclesiastical subjects, especially those dealing with the Crucifixion and Ascension. This year the favorite picture is that masterpiece of William Strutt's, "A Little Child Shall Lead Them." This beautiful production may be had in all styles, from the large $12 size to the 8x10 at 75 cents. "It is a curious thing," said a picture dealer, "but usually some one picture has the run, both at Christmas and Easter time. Last December we had an unprecedented call for the Madonnas and just now we can scarcely keep up with the demand for Strutt's subject. We have sold no less than 20,000 post-cards this Easter, too."

Now don't flatter yourself that you are going to get off respectably with a chicken and egg card at "two for five." The thing this year is in the shape of silk post-cards which come at 10 cents each. These are really exquisite works of art. Most of them represent religious subjects or the distinctly Easter flowers. Another novel style card comes in vivid coloring with the outlines of an egg, and a sure-enough "fur" rabbit crouched in one corner. Then there are place cards and score cards of all sorts, one firm making a specialty of these. The designs run mostly to rabbits and chicks, many of them being cut in their shape and then daintily decorated.

"How many Easter bonnets have we sold?" with a shrug of the shoulder and a cock of the head. The manager of a big millinery establishment threw up his hands in despair. "Heaven only knows. We won't till we run up our profits at the end of the month."

For the first time in her history Los Angeles is growing her own Easter lilies. Heretofore she has depended upon San Francisco for the Bermuda beauties which were shipped here in large quantities about Easter time. After the terrible disaster there last April, all lily orders were of necessity cancelled and Los Angeles florists set about planning to grow their own lilies. Last September thousands of bulbs were imported from Bermuda and Japan and planted in the conservatories of the Wright Floral Company at Edendale. These were four varieties, one of which reached perfection about Christmas time, when there is always a good demand for lilies. During the past ten days the gardeners at Edendale have been forcing the lilies forward under a pressure of 80 deg. night and day and the last three days of the week the temperature was raised to 110 deg., which is the limit that the plants can bear. The heat was so stifling that one could scarcely remain in the conservatories and under its influence the big buds grew and swelled and unfolded their petals so that no less than 12,000 pure Ascension lilies will nod their stately heads at the Edendale propagating plant before Easter dawns.

A CORNER ON LILIES.

"I have been in the floral business in Los Angeles for eleven years," remarked a prominent florist yesterday, "and this is the biggest Easter lily trade we have ever seen. Our sales of these flowers alone will approximate $3000 for Easter week. We have a corner on the Easter lily market this year sure." A single order sent out yesterday was for 400 potted lilies for which a check for $400 paid the price. The cut lilies run from $5 to $7.50 per dozen and the potted plants from $1 to $2.50 each. Even at this price, the dealers declare there is small profit in them. The bulbs are expensive, costing $75 and $80 per thousand delivered in New York. Add to this the shipping rate across the continent and the constant care for seven months together with the numbers of plants that die, for the lily is a very tender and sensitive plant, and only the most delicate handling can bring it to perfection.

Next in favor to the Bermuda lilies are the modest and lovely lilies of the valley, which sell this season at $1 a dozen—and it takes at least three dozen to make a respectable bunch. These lilies grow, not from the bulb, but from the "pip," in which form they are shipped here from Germany in cases of 2500, packed in moss. They are immediately put in cold storage till ready for planting. Unlike the Bermuda lilies of which no exact reckoning of the time of bloom can be made, the gardener knows that the lily of the valley will come to bloom in precisely twenty-one days from the "pip," so he sets his plants exactly three weeks before Easter and can depend upon his blossoms. Over 7000 of these dainty plants bloom in the Edendale conservatories this Easter.

American Beauty roses are also in high favor this year. An $85 order for roses and lilies was sent to El Paso yesterday to a lady who is planning an Easter party. Large shipments are being made now daily to all points in Arizona, to Southern California towns and to San Francisco, which was formerly the base of supply for the Coast.

The largest private order comes from Pasadena and consists solely of Easter lilies and lilies of the valley. The bill which accompanies the blossoms is $685. "That is the largest private order I ever received," said the florist modestly, "and I took it over the telephone in less than five minutes."

LOS ANGELES, MINING POINT.

Five Years Ago and Now; Great Change.

Tremendous Demand Here for the Machinery.

City's Name Indifferent as Promotion Center.

Los Angeles has grown as a mining center within the last five years to such an extent that there can be no comparison made with prevailing conditions now and then. Not only has it grown, but the possibilities for further growth are practically unlimited, as the mining territory tributary to this city has scarcely been opened.

There are several reasons for this growth as a mining center. The most important is the excellent location in relation to the newly-opened mining regions. "It is the logical shipping center for a larger mineral area than any one city in the United States" is the unqualified statement made by a prominent mining man here. It is the center of a vast region in which only the barest scratching of Mother Earth for minerals has been begun. Tonopah, Goldfield, Greenwater, all of Arizona, Northern Mexico and Lower California, great parts of Nevada, Southern Utah and all Southern California south of Tehachepi, is tributary to Los Angeles.

Orders from all parts of the above territories are received in Los Angeles daily. Orders for assaying, orders for supplies, machinery; in fact, this city is the center for the entire region when anything is needed.

Shipments of machinery by the local houses to the mining regions have increased enormously within the last three years. There was a time when a mining man inquiring for machinery was shown a catalogue, the dealer taking the order and sending to the East to have the appliance built and shipped to the buyer. Now a mining man inquiring for a hoist, gas engine or any other piece of mechanism, is taken into the salesroom and shown the completed machine on the floor, ready for immediate shipment. The demand is so great for high-class mining machinery that it is almost impossible for the local dealers to keep a supply on hand. One case may be cited. An extensive dealer in such supplies had twenty hoists on his salesroom floor one day last week; three days later a call came in for one and had to be turned down, as all had either been shipped or ordered.

The railroads, pushing into the mining regions from this city, namely, the Tonopah and Tidewater and the Las Vegas road, are doing great things to tie the regions more firmly to Los Angeles. Soon both will be in direct communication with the most important camps, and trade will necessarily follow.

Seven years ago Los Angeles was one of the deadest towns, when mining was mentioned, which could be found in the United States. Since then numbers of wealthy eastern men who were interested in the mining industry before they came, attracted by the matchless climate, have located here, transferring all their interests to this city, opening offices and operating exclusively from this point. It is a well-known fact that money for legitimate mining enterprises is more easily secured here than in the East, whereas it was just the reverse no longer than five years ago. There is a great amount of Los Angeles money invested in mines in the regions mentioned.

Within the last two years, since the remarkable development of Nevada, hundreds of mining men, who have succeeded in striking it rich through digging in the earth, have selected Los Angeles as a permanent home, have moved here with their families, built magnificent residences, and increased the wealth of the town by their presence. The climate is the attraction, as much as anything else, in these cases, as the very thought of being near to the ocean, after a long life on the sun-scorched deserts of Arizona, Nevada or Mexico, is enough inducement to a wealthy man to live here. The old saying of the miners of ten years ago of "Get money enough to go to 'Frisco," has been changed to "Make money enough to live in Los Angeles."

Only one thing Los Angeles has lacked, and that is the boom of a big "bonanza" camp. The bonanza camp, where all claims are merely prospects, the stock, which has been sold at low prices for development work, being bought by hundreds of men in moderate circumstances, is the thing which brings a huge mining interest. When these prospects have "made good" and the stocks jump to almost abnormal levels in valuation, thus bringing a great amount of ready money to every one interested, then interest in mining in that city is sure to continue, as people have faith in every new thing opened up. It was the "bonanza camp" boom of Goldfield, Tonopah and other camps in Nevada which made San Francisco the great center of mining stock activity it is today.

As a promotion center, Los Angeles has an indifferent name. Too many wild-cat propositions have been put out bearing the stamp of Los Angeles. Unscrupulous operators have "worked" the people to the limit, and as a consequence it has a dampening effect on many of the bona-fide propositions. But the crooks are being gradually weeded out.

FOR COMPETITIVE "EXAMS."

High Educational Authority Indorses Principles Carried Into Effect in Local Schools.

Dr. A. E. Winship, editor of the Journal of Education, and probably the highest authority in the country on the subject of a teacher's preparation and fitness for work, has sent the most ringing indorsement to Dr. E. C. Moore of the new arrangement of competitive examinations for teachers in Los Angeles.

"I have read your principles in the selection of teachers," says Dr. Winship in his letter, "and I am amazed at the noble stand your board has taken. It is absolutely ideal. I do not know anything that I would change in it. I shall shout its praises right royally."

The principles of which Dr. Winship speaks have been in force in Los Angeles only since the beginning of the school year, and have been the subject of much discussion on all sides. It is said to be the fairest and most impartial way of deciding on the relative merits of teachers, and the examination, contrary to the general understanding of the matter, is not to test the applicants in primary and grammar studies, but to discover the greatest fitness for the practical work of teaching from the ranks of those already certificated. The plan was worked out by Dr. Moore and indorsed by the Board of Education.

The department of history of the Johns Hopkins University, working in conjunction with the United States Department of Education, is publishing a series of books on the history of education in various States, and Dr. Moore has received a request from them to be the author of California's educational history.

Having the highest average of education of any State in the Union, California will naturally have much that is unique and interesting to place before the eyes of the world.

SILK GROWING; NEW COMPANY.

ONLY PLANT IN CALIFORNIA TO BE NEAR HERE.

Well-Known Men Take Interest in New Industry and Buy from Mrs. Williams of San Diego—Farm Already Started a Few Miles South of the City.

A company for silk culture has been organized in this city, and well-known men are connected with it. The silk culture and cocoon plant of Mrs. Carrie Williams, at San Diego, the only one in California, has been bought by the company, and Mrs. Williams will have immediate charge of the new farm. William D. Curtis is president; A. Bernstein, vice-president, and H. V. Carter, secretary. Among the others prominently connected with the enterprise are W. E. McVay, Niles Pease, J. E. Fishburn and A. Bernheim of this city, and George C. Roeding of Fresno. The company has secured about twenty acres of land a few miles south of Los Angeles, and mulberry trees are being planted. Other tracts will soon be acquired. Plans have been made for buildings, including an exhibition room and manufacturing establishment.

The mulberry trees now planted were supplied by Mr. Roeding of Fresno, and are of the Morus Albus and Morus Multicaulius varieties, said to be the best silk-producing trees known. The Albus is white, and the latter is a shade darker. Both varieties are said to be very prolific. The former is a native of China, the home of sericulture, and the latter is a native of the Philippines, being a graft of the Albu, or white. Other varieties will be planted later, as the farm is extended and the facilities for manufacturing increase.

In addition to the mature silkworms and eggs in cold storage bought with the plant of Mrs. Williams in San Diego, the company has purchased 900 mulberry trees from the estate of the late Dr. Dewitt Clinton Franklin, who maintained a plant in this city until his death a year or so ago. These are good producing trees, and from them the reeling of silk will at once be begun. The reeling will be by hand, until machinery has been installed. Three hundred trees are planted to the acre, at an average distance of twelve feet apart.

"Heretofore," said Mr. Dexter, "the difficulty in making sericulture a success has been the high price of labor, and, besides, there was the problem of reeling silk and making it marketable. We will overcome these difficulties by putting in machinery. This light industry opens the field for women, children, and aged men, who are not physically able to undertake harder work. Others, whose time is not fully occupied, can also make extra money in the business. Of course, it requires some experience, as does any other profitable business, but any one with ordinary judgment and industry will soon be able to make good wages.

WEDNESDAY MORNING'S NEXT.

The Wednesday Morning Club will meet Wednesday with Mrs. F. R. Willis, No. 154 North Johnston street. After the business meeting officers will be nominated. The regular programme will begin at 10:30 and will include song by Mrs. Mason T. Bundy of Hollywood, accompanied by Mrs. Siebertson; cornet solos, Mrs. John E. Yoakum, and other music. The rest of the morning will be devoted to readings from Whittier with "The Swan Song of Parson Avery," by Mrs. C. F. Fuller; selections from "Snowbound," by Mrs. W. C. Mushet; "The Reformer," by Mrs. Jennie O. Chambers. "Whittier, the Man," with extracts from "Margaret Smith's Journal," will be given by Miss Annie E. Pierce and Mrs. A. M. Foster will read "The Eternal Goodness." The current history class will meet Wednesday at 2 p.m. under the leadership of Mrs. A. M. Foster, at the residence of Mrs. F. E. Prior, No. 227 North Sichel street. Guests will be admitted at both meetings.

Not Only Pride and Pleasure But Profit Too

A Diamond stands alone as an investment and luxury combined. Fine Perfect Gems, the out-of-the-ordinary kind, the stones that are beyond criticism are very rare. Their scarcity, beauty and the strong demand have increased their value. The flawed and poorly colored diamonds would not have advanced in price at all except that in spite of their plentifulness they have to some extent been carried forward by the really fine Gems.

We do not handle any but absolutely Perfect Blue White and Extra White Diamonds. These pleasure and profit bringing Gems cost no more at this establishment than is frequently asked for the ordinary stones elsewhere.

Those whom Heney cannot clothe in stripes he will brand.

Easter morning in the land of lilies. Gloria in excelsis Deo!

Can it be true, as charged, that the ghouls at Colton were Americans?

Let us roll the stone away from our hearts. Let us rise and be better.

The money was so easy the wonder is that Ruef is only a mere millionaire.

A correspondent reports ripe peaches in Louisiana. We can put him down as one, all right.

Arthur Brisbane is the man behind the Hearst mud batteries. He thinks in a constant stench.

The thing to do is to confiscate Ruef's bank account, and give it to the honest and deserving poor.

Poppies on the uplands, the mocker's ringing song, and the blue skies over them the whole day long.

The age of miracles is still with us. Butte, Mont., has agreed on an industrial peace to last five years.

Doubtless Tobe Earl will explain to the grand jury that he has always believed in making a dollar work.

We are fully convinced that Mr. Burns could locate Charlie Ross if he thought it worth his while to do so.

What the railroads must do is to employ fewer men to juggle the stock market and more men to run trains.

It is all very well to make a book of rules for railroaders, but how are we to force the railroaders to obey them?

This the Day of the Promise. Here is the hope that we shall rise again. "In heaven we shall know our own."

San Francisco deserves credit for having a sufficient number of men left to make up an honest grand jury, anyway.

Now let E. Tobias also lift his pious gaze and spit out what he knows concerning the corruption of the public morals.

Perhaps "Doc" Haynes will contend that it was all in accordance with the most advanced theories of true Socialism.

This issue of The Times is larger and better than four ordinary books that sell for $1.50 each, and yet a dime pays for all.

We congratulate Wally Walsworth, Charlie Eggleston, and all those other Butte editors on their resumption of the tripod.

For each individual who believed the story of the Resurrection nineteen centuries ago there are a million who believe it now.

Everybody has a scheme to regulate the business of railroads, but nobody seems to know how to keep them from killing people.

In considering the lilies of the field let us thank God for our fair California of the south, where we have them always with us.

This morning the sun will dance, but tomorrow the ghost must walk. The man will be around with the bill for the Easter hats.

Heney and Burns are enjoying an unprecedented popularity. They have been invited to visit almost every city on the Pacific Coast.

Let us give serious thought to the theory of what an organized gang like Ruef's would do with a big thing like our Owens River project.

While the price of everything is going up, it is not believed that franchises will be any dearer in San Francisco for the next few years.

Bryan is now more than ever in favor of government ownership of railroads. That fellow will never be satisfied until he gets this country in trouble.

We will say, for the sake of argument, that there has been no big graft in Los Angeles. Then let us say that we will see to it that we'll keep it that way.

The trouble with that hole which Mayor Schmitz had constructed in the floor of his house was that it wasn't made so that he could crawl into it and pull it in after him.

"We were just picking up a little easy money," said Supervisor Kelly. And the briber-givers were just picking up a little easy business. They were all tarred with the same stick.

If Schmitz can succeed in ousting the San Francisco Supervisors on the ground of dishonesty in office then that old gag about Satan rebuking sin must be put away with the mummies.

The greatest influence in the world today is the gentle Wanderer of Galilee. The swords shall be beaten into plowshares and the deep-mouthed guns shall grow sleep with roses wreathed

TO NEWNESS OF LIFE.

Winter is gone, with its low, pale suns, lowering skies and falling rain. The trees are decked in fresh, bright foliage and studded with flowers of a thousand hues, replacing the boughs through which the harsh north winds all winter long sang a mournful dirge. The brown plains, where Death spread his pall, have given place to a new life in velvet sward, poppies bright as gold, and grass flowers blue as the depths of heaven. The morning breezes sing of a new life; the streams murmur of it; thrush and lark, linnet and the smallest insect of the field, all thrill the world with their carol of new life.

It is Easter day, and the trumpet call as potent as that of the resurrection angel sounds in all ears, "Arise from the dead"—to "newness of life."

We can all rise to newness of life. Not in some day in the distant future. The call is a present one, and the act is to be done now.

What heart has not its dead hopes, dead aspirations, dead resolves of yesterday, of last year, of years long gone, of youth, of childhood, buried in its deepest recesses? They need lie dead no longer. Today all may rise in newness of life, to new hopes, new aspirations, new resolves.

In the soul of each are dark depths where we have buried out of sight the skeletons of transgressions committed in days gone by. We have done with these things as Abraham did with the body of Sarah, procured a cave in which we have tried to bury our offenses out of our sight. We have put them as far as possible out of the sight of others. It is in vain. We know they are there. We know their deformity. The world knows more about them than we think. We have let temper, or envy, get the better of us. We have wounded the hearts that love us best. We have hurt the hands that minister to us most kindly, most efficiently and most frequently. We have caused tears to tremble in the eyes, yes, and fall bitterly from them, where the light of affection glows in spite of our undeserving.

The past is all dead. Not a day, not an hour, not a moment of it all can be recalled. Today let us hail the new day that has risen over the eastern hills and spread beauty and light broadcast over the land from pole to pole, from farthest east to farthest west. These spring days there is not a dark corner on the globe. Light ineffable and life abundant cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. Why not rise to newness of life and leave the dead past to bury its dead. Why not lift up our hearts in new determination, with firm resolves, to live the new life of a resurrected moral rectitude?

The heart full of dead hopes, the conscience full of deadly wrongs committed against some one near to us, some one dearest to us, against friend or neighbor, against associate or stranger, against our city or our country, is not in tune with the season and the day. Dead hopes in the heart make the morning sunlight less radiant, the flowers less fragrant, the song of the bird less melodious. The soul clogged with memories of past transgressions can feel no thrill from the newness of life that spreads in beauty and joy over hill and plain, from the Te Deum of the seas to the tremolo of the pines on the mountain top.

Let living joy take the place of dead hopes, and let the heart join in the melody, which is as universal as when the stars sang Gloria in Excelsis at creation's dawn. Shake off the shackles of old habits which bind the soul like cerements of the dead, and let our spirits sing the song of the redeemed from the dead, as the sons of God shout for joy this Easter day.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE MAGNATES.

The President has been urged by some of our great business leaders to state publicly in a set speech just what he has in mind in the way of future movements tending to the regulation of railroads by the government. After learning what was in the President's mind, these gentlemen believe that such a statement, setting forth in full the purposes of the President, will at once restore public confidence in railroad interests.

There are grave complications in this exceedingly important subject. The railroad people contend that the English common law is the law of this land of ours today as to common carriers. It has been found necessary by act of Congress to provide certain modifications in the application of the common law to the common carriers of our day. When this English law grew up—and it was a growth and never a formal act of any legislative body—the only highways in England were the King's highroads, and the only common carriers were the owners of horses and carts. The roads were public property. It was entirely competent for any one of sufficient means to get control of an old nag and a two-horse cart to go into the common-carrier business. The railroads of today, with their private rights of way and rails which no other common carrier can use, have erected a condition so radically different from that described above as to make the common law ridiculously inapplicable to the situation.

The railroads have acquired their rights of way, and very often the graded roadbed, the rails, and possipublic. In a way the American people are partners with the railroads in these railroad properties. They are almost like tenants in common in their interest on the property. The people know this, and there is an agitation which will not be allayed until the railroad management is brought into just conformity with public interests. The sooner the managers of railroads recognize this, the better it will be for themselves, as well as for the general public.

Mr. Carnegie, in a recent utterance, sounded the keynote with absolute accuracy when he said that if the railroad managers attempt to defy the President, they may see a President in the White House who will proceed against them in a vastly more radical and disagreeable way. And the railroad magnates are beginning to agree with Mr. Carnegie.

CRASHES AND THE SEPARATION OF DUTIES.

The fact brought out at the recent Coroner's inquest in Los Angeles and a matter of comment with Santa Fé employés, that conductors on the Overland Limited, as on outbound trains of other roads, are rushed to the limit during the time the train is going through yards and over city street crossings, collecting tickets before the first stop is reached, and that it is almost impossible for them to know anything of the movements of the train, is simply overwhelming evidence of the need for a complete separation of the duties of collecting tickets and fares from those of captain or superintendent of the train. The attention of the latter should be every minute fixed on the running of the train and its safe conduct should be his first, last and only duty. Had Conductor Humbel been able to have given his entire attention to the movements of his train on Saturday night of last week, had he been watching with a copy of his orders before him with nothing to think of but supplementing the vigilance of the engineer, is it likely that the train would have entered upon that fatal bridge? Or if other conductors had been similarly placed, would not many other accidents probably have been avoided?

What would be thought of a ship on which the captain was giving his time to collecting fares instead of attending to the navigation of his craft? Of course railroad managers may point to the universal custom of having conductors collect fares, but in answer one may also point to the almost universal system of wrecking trains and ask if it is not about time for a change.

The coöperation of lawmakers may be necessary to get the best discipline—the iron rule that seems to be necessary; but the above suggested reform is entirely within the hands of the railroad officials and it ought to receive careful consideration.

At present overland trains usually carry besides the conductor, two brakemen. If the duties of the conductor were confined to the operation of the train why could not one of these brakemen be dispensed with and a collector or train agent substituted? Thus there would not be the least additional expense, although no consideration of expense should be allowed to weigh against the protection of the public from the perils of travel.

EARL'S WORRY.

E. Tobias Earl, telephone company promoter, newspaper publisher, department store backer and millionaire, seems to be afflicted with distress of mind.

Earl has been summoned to San Francisco by subpoena from the District Attorney's office to testify before the grand jury with regard to the bribery charges in connection with the Home Telephone deal. A number of other Los Angeles citizens have been subpoenaed for the same purpose, but none of them seem to be worrying very much, except Earl.

Mr. Earl, who is, or has been, a heavy stockholder in the Home Telephone Company of Los Angeles, seeks, in his newspaper, the Express, to squeak out of a small and ignominious hole by averring that he is not now a stockholder in the Home Telephone Company of San Francisco. Sic "San Francisco." Sic "now."

It was as a stockholder in the Home Telephone Company of Los Angeles, supposed to know what use was made of the company's funds, that Mr. Earl was summoned before the grand jury in the bribery case. Whether Earl has had any guilty knowledge is for Heney and the grand jury to find out. The Times is not informed as to this latter question. The fact remains that Mr. Earl was summoned before the grand jury. Perhaps he is innocent, and perhaps not.

No member of The Times staff had anything to do with the telephone deal or has been subpoenaed before the grand jury. The reason why Earl attacks The Times in his sheet is understood by all newspaper readers. It is because The Times exposed, defeated and abolished a rotten fraud carried on by Earl in the last municipal campaign—a fake voting contest in which Earl and the Express elected Gates Mayor.

As to the present cause of controversy (the summoning of Dr. Haynes and Mr. Earl,) a statement of the facts is found in the Express (doubtless through inadvertence.)

The Express of last evening, after a bungling attempt to "forge" an Associated Press dispatch, permitted the following to get into its telegraph news on its first page. We clip:

"Special Agent Burns expects two important arrivals from Los Angeles today—Edwin T. Earl and Dr. John R. Haynes. 'If Mr. Earl and Dr. Haynes arrive in time,' said Burns, this morning, 'they will be examined before the grand jury this afternoon. If they do not, they will probably be called Monday.'"

The above, taken bodily from the Express, is substantially the statement of facts which appeared in The Times, and which made Earl fly into a fit of passion.

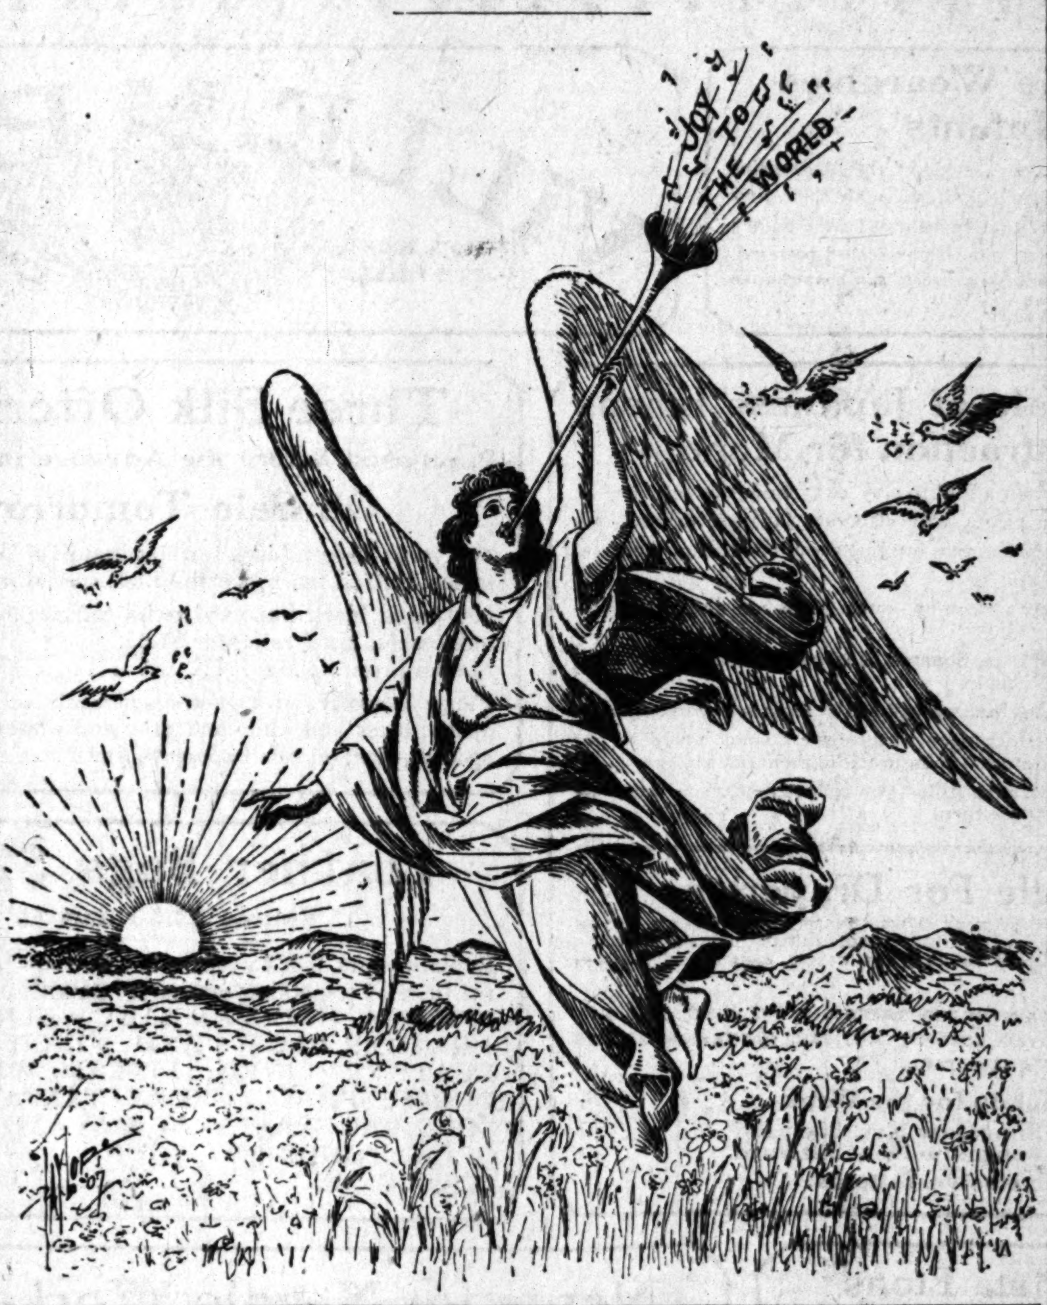
Editor Earl should discipline his subordinate editors and see that his editorial and news columns "jibe."

There are two little Italian children at the Sisters' Hospital grievously wounded, whose mother was killed in the Colton wreck. Poor wee strangers in a strange land, torn and bleeding. Here is work for you who love Christ this glad Easter morning.

The law regards the killing of one person by another as justifiable under certain circumstances. Let these young men and women who practice voice culture and the pianoforte in apartment houses remember this.

The world has become too small for

THE DAY.



CITY AND COUNTRY.

The Census Bureau has just made public the estimate of population in the United States. From this report it appears that our population today is just a trifle less than 84,000,000. This shows an increase since the census of 1900 of almost 8,000,000 souls. The population here spoken of is that of the United States proper, or continental United States. Including the insular possessions, our population numbers over 93,000,000.

During the year just closed the increase in population in continental United States was 1,367,915. It might have been expected that the figure would be larger. The immigration into the country accounts for over 1,000,000, and it seems scarcely correct that the increase in native population should have been so far short of 400,000.

Perhaps the most interesting part of this report is that referring to the growth of urban population. New York, and this probably means Greater New York, numbers considerably over 4,000,000 people, Chicago over 2,000,000, Philadelphia just short of 1,500,000, St. Louis nearly 650,000, and Boston a trifle over 600,000. Eighty-three cities, with a population of 50,000 or more last year, have a total population of just short of 20,000,000 people, which is an increase since 1904 of 2,766,863. If incorporated cities of 8000 inhabitants and more should be taken, the total urban population of the country would be very close to 30,000,000, and this would show a gain since the census year of nearly 4,000,000, or just short of 16 per cent.

There is probably no way of checking this increase in urban population. The growth of our manufacturing industries of various kinds necessitates the building up of numerous urban populations and the general increase of the population of all incorporated communities. The great railroad systems of the United States have their centers of activity in places of large population, and this again causes a continual growth in population in such places.

But impossible though it may be to check this natural congestion in urban communities, it is none the less a matter for regret. There are certain mental characteristics developed in city life which cannot be ordinarily made to grow in rural surroundings. On the contrary, there are other physical, mental and moral qualities which spring as naturally in human beings as the grass and the flowers on the sun-kissed plain under the influences of rural life. The city boy has a sharpness and quickness of intellect, a mental acumen which is more rarely found among country boys. But, on the contrary, the city-bred boy is much more likely to be hollow-chested, of flabby muscle, and anaemic habit than his fellow-boy raised among the sweet lanes and green fields of the country. As for the country boy, he grows up not only with broader shoulders and more erect mien, with redder blood and stronger sinews physically, but he is likely to be possessed of a much broader mental vision, and above all of a cleaner type of morality.

Go back to the first days of the republic and come down to the present time, and it is a matter of astonishment to observant readers and close students of sociology to find how few of the Americans of the highest type were city bred. Washington got his great stride of step and his terrific grasp of hand, not among the narrow sun-baked streets of the city, but among the woods, in the open plains, and along the streams all the way from the city of Washington to the site of Pittsburgh, then known as a far-western point. Jefferson knew nothing of city life until he was a man. Old Hickory's younger days were all spent among the blue-grass regions of fair Kentucky. McKinley, Foraker, Garfield, and nearly every Ohioan who has impressed his mark upon the historical pages of this country, were country-bred boys. The Harrisons were nearly all born in log cabins. Lincoln's giant frame and steel sinews were developed in splitting rails along the Ohio and doing hard rough work upon the barges of

One might go on multiplying instances, not only among the statesmen of the country, but in the army, in the navy, in the legal profession, in the church, among all the great captains of industry. They were all country-bred boys, born on a farm, raised on a farm, doing the hard work summer and winter of farm life. In stature there was not a pigmy among all these great men named above. Their mental grasp of things was as colossal as their frames, and when you have summed up all the charges of impropriety possible to be brought against their lives, you will find the sum total insignificant. You will find a hundred sterling, manly virtues where you will find one vice. Furthermore, the vices which did find lodgment in the big heads and big hearts of these men were not the unmanly and degrading vices that play havoc so often in the lives of city-bred speeders.

It will continue in the future as in the past. The country has given to the United States nineteen out of every twenty, if not more, of all the men who have made their mark in life, in any calling or career. The country will continue to do so.

THE JOY OF LIVING EVERY DAY IN LOS ANGELES.

There is joy in living in Los Angeles these bright spring days. Passing along the street there are no dull and doleful faces to be seen.

The car-rides into town from the suburbs in the mornings are delightful. All your fellow passengers are cheerful, so cheerful, in fact, that they forget to nag the conductor or motorman when the car does not stop exactly at the crossing.

Then, going home in the evening, who is cross because his car passes without stopping—not even standing room, or when he secures only standing room on the next car? What does it matter, anyhow? Flocks of cars we have—sometimes five each minute pass the corner of Spring and Fourth—and all crowded—are simply object lessons of the prosperity of Los Angeles. Better a busy day and a crowded car than a poor day and an empty car. The present condition is: Plenty of money to buy as many cars as can be run on the crowded downtown streets, and plenty of money to pay for riding on them (to say nothing of the hundreds, if not thousands, of automobiles.)

What more joyful sight is there than South Broadway on a pleasant afternoon? Ladies, bright ladies, beautiful ladies, by the hundreds out buying things they want, or think they want. All well dressed, well groomed and as pleasant looking as a bright, new gold piece fresh from Uncle Sam's mint.

Think of the many conveniences of our city—a bank at almost every downtown corner, and several in some blocks; several restaurants as fine as can be found in any city; nearly 60,000 telephones in use, about one to every four persons; office buildings, several of which are really palatial; street lighting finer than any other city in the country possesses; attractive parks and one under construction (Elysian) which is unique and will eventually eclipse in beauty any other park in America; a car service to a hundred places on the seashore, not equaled by the suburban car service of any city in the world; hotels which are unsurpassed anywhere; apartment houses built and building which are apartment houses, and not haphazard tenements; churches, nearly eight score of them; theaters running almost night and day at popular prices, and well attended at each performance; transcontinental lines to take you north, east and south, when you want to go away for a short time, be restless all the time you are away, and hurry back, as is usually the case; schools, fine schools, fine teachers and a fine system, though not enough of them (there never will be and never should be enough schools, unless we adopt a race-suicide, non-immigration policy;) and, but this must stop for want of space.

the joy of living in Los Angeles is a joy unspeakable. As George Eliot said: "Joy is the best of wine," and so it is—better even than the wines of California, excellent as they are. Living in the joy of Los Angeles we realize the force of Schiller's words:

"Joy is the mainspring in the whole round of universal nature; joy moves the wheels of the great timepiece of the world; she it is that loosens the flowers from their buds, suns from their firmaments, rolling spheres in distant space not seen by the glass of the astronomer."

Sunshine we have, flowers we have, fruits we have, profitable business and plenty of it we have, a lovely, thriving city we have—what more can we want than the joy of living in Los Angeles?

The DIAMOND
And the Easter Season

The Easter season ushers in a tide of lightheartedness in happy contrast to the somber days of Lent. Social functions are renewed, obligations are reciprocated, and many little tacit understandings and matrimonial engagements receive public announcement. It is a season of joyous gift-giving second only to the glad Christmastide.

As a token of lasting remembrance or of true affection the diamond is the richest and purest of gifts. Time cannot dim its luster nor human ingenuity duplicate its glow. The good diamond, like the true sentiment, cannot be successfully imitated.

This house carries the largest and finest assortment of diamonds west of Chicago. Your choice is unlimited in solitaire rings, finely mounted twin-stones, matched pairs, banquet, cluster, hoop, princess, and other unique and original designs in rings. All the pleasing and elegant combinations are here. Such an endless variety of loose and mounted goods do we display that every delicate and refined taste and fancy may be gratified at the very lowest New York prices. It will please us to show you our unexcelled array of precious stones.

The Lancer.

HOW MANY Police Commissions have started out with brass bands and fireworks — mostly verbal—to close up the haunts of vice, put an end to gambling and compel the publicans of Los Angeles to conduct their business in strict obedience to the law? And how many have persisted in the laudable purpose to enforce the laws as they find them? It is comparatively easy to compel respect for regulations governing the retail sale of liquor, provided the Police Commissioners do not care what the brewers want and can keep clear of traps set for them by those genial politicians and their political allies. The regulations are irksome to many good citizens, and the inducements to publicans to evade them are numerous; but it is possible to enforce them, and if good citizens do not approve the laws as applied to themselves, they have the privilege of frankly stating their objections and demanding modifications. They do not go about it that way, however. They prefer to be in favor of strict construction of the law for others, but want a little latitude for themselves, and that is why "saloon reform" is spasmodic. Those citizens who censure the police publicly for neglect of duty, and occasionally take a quiet nip during forbidden hours, are responsible for the difficulty encountered by Police Commissions in maintaining the rules.

Putting an absolute stop to gambling is not so easy, and I have no hesitation in predicting that the commission will not close up the games that are now running in Los Angeles. The police can suppress the saloon games and the bunco joints, but they cannot reach the poker games, roulette wheels and banking games conducted in more or less secluded apartments of first-class hotels for the convenience of gentlemen of sporting proclivities. The proprietors of hotels and swell restaurants are interested in the games and get a share of the profits in addition to rentals of the rooms. Games so conducted may not be offensive [illegible], as they are not open temptation to the general public, but they are none the less unlawful. It is difficult for the police to reach them without exceeding their authority and any one who thinks the public would be permitted to interfere with swell gambling if they could is entitled to another guess.

Of the other phase of sporadic reform, the less said the better. It is and always has been worse than farcical. The evil against which it is directed never has been mitigated by raids and never can be eradicated by the police. Its victims may be harried and harassed and blackmailed, as they are harried and blackmailed under the pretense of "regulation" in this town, but the evil persists. Tenderloin raids are grotesque exhibitions of futile hypocrisy when directed against any but the parasites of vice and the wretches who prey upon the miserable under pretense of selling "protection." If the Police Commission is going after the parasites, more power to the elbow that swings the club. If it is only making an exhibition of official "morality," what's the use?

Poisoning a Blessing.

We boast of our glorious climate here in Los Angeles, and we all know that it is one of our most valuable assets, yet we are doing our stupid worst to ruin it. The climate is changing, but Salton Sea has nothing to do with the change. When I use the term "climate," I do not restrict its application to temperature and relative humidity; I mean all atmospheric conditions affecting comfort and health.

The annual mean temperature has not changed; the rainfall is no more variable than it always has been; the proportion of cloudy to bright days remains about the same. But the air is no longer so pure, sweet and so healing as it was; we have been trying to poison it with smoke, dust and noxious gases, and made it irritating instead of healing to bronchial tubes and weak lungs.

Some degree of climatic deterioration, as a result of concentration of population in cities, is inevitable, but wholesale pollution of the air with products of imperfect combustion can be prevented. New York City, badly governed as it is supposed to be, does prevent such pollution, and therefore has the cleanest, brightest atmosphere of all the large cities of the United States. Here in Los Angeles we do not even try to preserve the climatic conditions which we have been advertising for twenty years as the foremost attraction of the region.

Go to the top of one of the tallest buildings in Los Angeles and look down upon the city. Innumerable stacks are belching vast volumes of black smoke into the air and a dull, semi-opaque stratum of smoke, dust and dirt hangs over the whole valley. Only the prevailing westerly breeze keeps us all from choking to death. When that fails and the air-currents move back upon the city from the east, the poisonous nature of the atmosphere advertises itself offensively to the nose.

It is stupid to endure unnecessary ills. The smoke nuisance is one of that sort. The howling, shrieking machinery of trolley cars is another, but it is localized and one can get away from it. I believe there is an official person supposed to abate smoke nuisances, but he does nothing of the sort, and it is stupid to tolerate him.

We are poisoning our climate, but happily we cannot ruin it irreparably. When we stop pouring smoke and foul gases into the air, nature will repair the damage we have done and restore to us the blessing we have thrown away carelessly.

New York Jargon.

I have asserted, and am always ready to maintain, that English is not the language now spoken by the tribes infesting the island of Manhattan. The speech of those rude people is an uncouth jargon, offensive to the ears of English-speaking persons and difficult to understand. Many English words occur in the gibberish of the Bowery and the vulgar dialect of Broadway, but most of them are either so perverted in meaning or so atrociously pronounced as to be unintelligible. The vocabulary of the islanders appears to be a sort of lingual "jack-pot," made up from the slang of all nations and enriched with choice selections from the "cant" of Cockney thieves and original inventions of native savages of the slums.

Lest it be thought that I exaggerate or speak in jest when I say that English is not the language of New York, permit me to call as a witness in support of my contention a distinguished authority, the editor of the New York Sun. In the course of a discussion of attempts to introduce a universal language the Sun says:

"Meanwhile, there should be efforts for the standardization of so-called English speech, the adoption of a common English in the States. In this State, in this town, for instance, there are strange dialects of something resembling English and pronunciations to make Dr. Murray stare and gasp. Pronunciation in the public schools in New York and New Jersey, and presumably in other States, is really directed and decided by the pupils, by an unconscious majority vote. Vulgarisms are multiplied. Pronunciation and intonation are harrowing. We put aside made-up language and ask: What sort of English are the public school children and graduates talking? Yes, and when you are about it: What sort of English do the public school teachers use or know, since they seem to permit without rebuke, perhaps without notice, the maimed, deformed and ear offending vulgar enunciation of their scholars? Poor old English language."

One of the islanders, a queer creature who calls himself "Raffles," is at large in Los Angeles, making strange sounds and writing in his jargon for one of the papers. I defy any one accustomed to reading and speaking only the King's English or plain United States to discover what the poor thing wants or talks about. Having passed some time among the Manhattan savages and heard much of their gibberish, I can make out that the creature is lost and begs to be captured and sent back to the lair of his tribe. I recommend study of his literary productions to any one who is curious concerning the jargon of New York.

WHAT'S SAID IN SAN FRANCISCO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 29.—Now that the reign of graft has collapsed and there is no longer A. Luef over us the clear sunshine of honesty reveals grafters and boodlers in full flight with a pack of outraged citizens in full pursuit. A customary salutation is "Good morning, I see that you are still out of jail." Government by the people, for the people and of the people has resumed business at the old stand and the surety companies are flooded with business from captains of industry and captains of graft. The little fellow at the St. Francis alone in his grief has taken to playing solitaire and has found a way to beat himself that even Napoleon overlooked.

The arm of the grand jury has extended from Manila to Ohio and from Nevada to Los Angeles, and there are still more counties to be heard from. No favorites have been played by the prosecution; the candidates for the penitentiary all started from the scratch; and the finish of the race bids fair to be close. As a rule the frenzied financiers have acted with urbanity, except a noisy corporation director named Drum, who assaulted a newspaper photographer who tried to snap him as he was leaving the grand jury room after telling all that he did not know about misguided officials and their relations with loose capital.

Now that the best laid plans of mice and men have gone wrong, many are trying to explain the reasons for it. It was such a splendid system of graft, elaborate in all its details and cunningly planned by a master mind, and well buttressed by a charter putting great power in the hands of the Mayor. Cynics say that the fall of Abraham was due to his moral inebriety and love of Trocadero French dinners.

Col. Herbert Choynski, the heavy dragoon, who so ably defended Fort Point from the Spanish fleet in 1398, is posing as a Columbus of graft sleuths inasmuch as months ago he publicly said that Ruef had bribed the Supervisors. In a Fillmore street chat last night he modestly refrained from claiming any reward for services rendered the public in denouncing official corruption, and in parting he assured me that in a republic there was a marked prejudice against corporations and the official who had a good word for them, whether rightfully or wrongfully, was always under suspicion. The colonel speaks by the card, having the proud distinction of routing Ruef from the attorneyship of the liquor dealers corporation and getting the job himself.

Social lions who hope to escape punishment for misdirected financial efforts can get no crumb of comfort from a statement made by Rudolph Spreckels as repeated to me by a man who heard it. The talk was on a theater party which Thornwell Mullaly, high official of the United Railways, has given to Mrs. Rudolph Spreckels and her two sisters. Spreckels was asked if he was willing to see his friends, Mullaly and Downey Harvey, suffer for any little weaknesses in the way of acquiring franchises, and he replied that no matter who they are, if they were guilty he would do his best to see that they were sent to the penitentiary.

The campaign against graft is waged relentlessly and already two useless officials have been deprived of their salaries, while the health authorities have arrested several restaurant men for not using screens to keep germs off the food. Learned scientists are examining the mud in the streets for bacteria, and the other day a dog bit a collector for the gas company.

The ingenious word manipulators who write resolutions for the local labor council, and see that they are adopted, have added to the gayety of nations by swatting the gangsters who were revered representatives of toil until exposed. The council under a formal resolution says that "it is a body organized and conducted for purely economic purposes, having no connection direct or implied with the Union Labor party, or any other political party or organization, and therefore being in no way responsible for the conduct or misconduct of any such party or organization." This is a case of just resentment, for in the short space of a year in office the gang has managed to get out of the ranks of the toilers and become capitalists.

While Senator Beveridge of Indiana and the Washington Star are roasting us for causing so much trouble over such a little thing as the Jap, we turn with pride to Pietro Varvaro, who, writing about us to a paper in Italy, says: "It seems as if from the picturesque country which surrounds San Francisco, the giant trees of the California forests are bowing their thick leaved tops, eternally green, sending a breath of new life to the rising city, where lives a population, not of men, but of Titans." Pietro evidently enjoyed our ravioli and red, and now that we are Titans we do not care even if the Mikado has turned off the Japanese current and caused us to have two weeks of rain, sleet and snow.

Kaiser's Adviser a Jew.

Direktor Ballin of the Hamburg-American line is classed as Emperor William's chief unofficial adviser; in fact, he assists the monarch oftener and more to the purpose by advice than do Prince Buelow and the responsible ministers. Yet Ballin is a Jew and rejoices in the fact. The Emperor attempted to make him a baron the other day, but the manager of the biggest steamship company in the world protested:

"And to that end I would have to change my faith?"

"Of course," replied the Kaiser. "I want you to recognize me not only as friend, but as Protestant pope of Germany."

"I would be delighted," said Ballin, "if it were not for the fact that I am a Jew by heart and conscience. I like my religion even as Your Majesty likes your own, and I will stick to it and a name without a handle."

Morphia Habit Increasing.

The morphia habit is declared to be increasing alarmingly in France and other European countries. Quoting some bad cases of morphia mania, M. Tailhade says that the son of a banker who was a victim has died in a wretched lodging after eight days of uninterrupted morphinization. He had squandered twenty fortunes.

More politicians are morphia maniacs than poets, says the writer. Gen. Boulanger was seen to inject morphine in a crisis in his career. Bismarck always made an injection before speaking in the Reichstag. Guy De Maupassant was a victim of morphia, as well as to ether and cocaine. Another morphia maniac was Alphonse Daudet, the novelist.

Guests Worth Half a Billion.

At a recent Rothschild wedding in Vienna, the relatives of the bridegroom represented a total capital of more than $500,000,000.

It was the marriage of the Hon. Charles Rothschild, younger son of Lord Rothschild, and Fraulein Rossika von Wertheimstein, daughter of one of the wealthiest Hungarians. The ceremony took place in the Josefstadt synagogue, which was built by the bride's uncle, and attracted such crowds that the police had to clear the street.

The bride's dress was of splendid white satin, with a deep lace flounce and a veil of costly lace and a court train.

Lord Roseberry's Health.

Lord Roseberry, the brilliant orator and once powerful statesman, has, like Joseph Chamberlain, completely broken down in health. During his premiership, (1904-5) he was the victim of insomnia, getting only about one hour's sleep each night, which was the real cause of the abrupt ending of his ministry. Since then he has led a secluded life and has been noted for his spasmodic, erratic and unaccountable actions. His present illness is said to be much more serious than the nervous breakdown which caused his resignation in 1895. Some people think it was partly brought on by his trying experience in the blizzard last Christmas, when his automobile was upset in the snow on a lonely Scotch road, and he had to tramp many miles at night to reach shelter.

THE PUBLIC.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Mayor will ask the City Council tomorrow to adopt an ordinance creating the position of "Billboard Inspector," at a salary of $150 per month.

The Council Finance Committee yesterday decided to recommend to the City Council that City Auditor Mushet be empowered to employ help to expert all the city's books, which have not been experted for the past six years.

New street flushers for the city have arrived and will be placed in operation this week. They will be operated both day and night. An additional force of street cleaners will be placed at work this week.

The Council Finance Committee yesterday decided that there should be no call for bridge bonds, but that the four necessary bridges must be built with appropriations from the general tax levy.

The dispute over territory between the cities of Long Beach and San Pedro is to be settled by a suit filed yesterday for trial in the Superior Court.

Ralph Rogers had no right to sell the furniture claimed by Mrs. Lynch, and Boyd cannot recover from her, Judge Hutton decided yesterday.

A suit for maintenance brought yesterday by Mrs. Angeline Williamson against her convict husband recalls the events which aroused the uncompromising of Alexander Williamson, and gained him two years in prison.

AT THE CITY HALL.

HIGH BILLBOARDS MUST GO DOWN.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR TO BE CREATED TOMORROW.

Art League Commends Mayor and Council for New Law—Finance Committee Recommends Experting City Book-keeping—Reform in Issuance of Railway Spur Franchises Proposed.

Tomorrow Mayor Harper will ask the City Council to create the position of "Inspector of Billboards," in order that there shall be a prompt enforcement of the new billboard ordinance. Mrs. Alice Kanst, one of the original anti-billboard agitators, and an official of the Civic Art League, has written to Mayor Harper, thanking him for his efforts on behalf of the movement, and urging that an immediate appointment of a billboard inspector be made.

The proposed ordinance, creating the new position, provides for a salary of $150 per month for the inspector.

The billboard ordinance, which was made an emergency order, and became a law upon its publication during the past week, provides that it shall be unlawful to erect or maintain any billboard more than eight feet in height or ten feet in length without first having obtained permission therefor from the Police Commission. The commission is prohibited from issuing permits for any signboard more than ten feet in height. Not more than three billboards can be maintained upon any one lot without consent from the Police Commission.

There is a provision in the ordinance which gives adjoining property owners an opportunity to block excessive sign placing, for the person desiring to erect billboards over the eight-foot limit must file a written application for such a permit, and the person or corporation making such application must give at least ten days' notice in writing to owners, occupants or agents of all property fronting on both sides of the street in the block where it is proposed to erect the billboard. The Police Commission must also fix a date for a public hearing of the application. The provisions of the ordinance do not affect the painting of signs on sides of buildings.

The city's license tax on billboards is to be one-fourth of a cent per square foot per quarter, or 1 cent a square foot per year. This will create a fund ample to pay salary of inspector and place a handsome amount in the city treasury.

TO EXPERT BOOKS.

OVERHAUL CITY'S ACCOUNTS.

After a lapse of six years the city's books are to be experted. Six years ago the grand jury ordered an investigation, and since that time, while there have been many questionable jugglings of the city's finances no outside expert has had the opportunity to show just what the books reveal.

Now, through the initiative of City Auditor Mushet, there is to be an overhauling of every set of books kept at the City Hall. This was decided upon at the meeting of the Finance Committee of the City Council yesterday.

City Auditor Mushet asked for additional help to expert the books of the street department, in accordance with the request of the retiring street superintendent, James Hanley, and he stated that as it was necessary to employ expert statisticians it would be timely to have all books of the various city departments investigated.

The Finance Committee decided to recommend to the City Council tomorrow that the City Auditor be empowered to employ the necessary assistance at an expense of not more than $300 per month, and that all the city's books be experted, including the accounts of the Owens River Aqueduct Bureau.

City Auditor Mushet estimates that it will require at least four months to complete the work.

Appraisement Commission.

A commission to determine the damages to property owners through the proposed opening and improvement of Sixteenth street, from Arlington to Normandie, was in session at the Council chamber yesterday.

Vacation Asked.

Property owners have petitioned for the vacation of a point of land at the intersection of Hoover street and Bonnie Brae street with Washington street. It is their intention to erect a building on adjoining property and they wish to obtain a frontage on Washington street.

Milk Inspectors' Expenses.

When the City Council provided for the appointment of six milk inspectors for the Health Department it thought it had done a pretty good thing in fixing their salaries at $110 a month respectively. But yesterday Health Officer Powers appeared before the Finance Committee and explained that the salaries would not be quite all that was asked. Some of these inspectors have to go as far as Fresno in their outside work, and the payment of railroad fares and other expenses would soon make a deep hole in a $110 salary. Powers asks that their expenses be paid. It was decided to recommend that the inspectors be allowed to file their expense bills for the first month, and then the Council would know whether it could afford the outlay.

City's Street Flushers.

The two new Murphy street flushers ordered by the Board of Public Works from St. Louis have arrived, and a machinist has come to place them in operation. A flusher for the city of Pasadena was sent in the same shipment. Street Superintendent Edwards expects to have the street flushers in operation by the latter part of this week, and plans to run them day and night. He expects to have both Spring street and Broadway in shape for flushing by the close of this week, as the storm drain construction is almost completed.

Owens River Expenditures.

The Board of Public Works has engaged W. N. Nelson to make a complete tabulation and statement of all the expenditures on the Owens River project from the inception of the work up to the first of last January. In view of the forthcoming election on the proposition to issue $23,000,000 bonds for the completion of the project, it is felt that all possible details of the expenditures already made should be laid before the public.

Auditors to Have More Help.

The Finance Committee will recommend to the City Council tomorrow that City Auditor Mushet be allowed an additional clerk at a salary of $100 per month, and that he be allowed to rearrange his working forces so as to create positions of first and second book-keepers, with salaries respectively of $125 and $100, instead of $100 each for two book-keepers without especial designations, as is now the case.

Bridges from General Fund.

Bridge building for the ensuing year must be carried on through funds from the general tax levy, if the City Council adopts the recommendation of the Finance Committee made yesterday. The Finance Committee is against the proposition to call any elections on proposed bridge bond issues, and at least four of the city bridges must be financed from the general levy. These are the Buena Vista street-Downey avenue viaduct, which is to cost the city $170,000; the Aroyo de las Posas bridge, to cost approximately $60,000; the Seventh-street bridge, to cost $50,000, and the East Main street bridge.

Passed the Council.

The Council committee of the whole, with Councilmen Blanchard, Healy, Dromgold, Wallace and Yonkin present, yesterday decided to pass to the Council without recommendation the preliminary ordinances for the proposed Owens River bond election. The ordinance will go before the Council tomorrow.

Spur Track Regulations.

City Attorney Hewitt is to prepare, on request of the Council committee of the whole, an ordinance regulating the procedure in applications for spur track franchises. The plan outlined is that the applicant must file a definite map of the proposed track location, and that with this must be filed a petition signed by at least a majority of the property owners on this frontage, asking for the granting of the franchise. The applicant must deposit funds sufficient to pay for the publishing of the ordinances and for posting notices of each parcel of property fronting on the proposed line, and such notices must be posted after the application has been made. Then the final determination of the whole matter shall be delayed at least one week after the filing of the application, in order to give property owners ample time to make protest if they so desire.

The City Beautiful.

The Outdoor Art League has asked the City Council to make an appropriation of $1000 for the employment of Charles Mulford Robinson of New York to formulate a general plan for the beautification of Los Angeles, the arrangement of its public buildings, statues, fountains, etc. The Finance Committee yesterday discussed the matter and referred it to the City Council without recommendation.

Euclid Heights Petition.

Property owners of Euclid Heights have filed a petition asking the City Council to change and reëstablish the grade of Fourth street, from Lorena street to Velasco street, in order to avoid an excessive cut. They also petition for the construction of a necessary storm drain in this street, and that the whole work be done under the provisions of the Vrooman Act.

Street Cleaning.

The extra force of street cleaners provided for by a recent ordinance of the City Council will be started to work tomorrow morning. Twenty additional teams will be placed on the city's streets in this work. Street Superintendent Edwards expects that the results from this additional service will be very marked. Yesterday the new road scrapers were kept at work on Pico and other streets, scraping the half-dried mud to the gutters, where it was collected and removed by teams. The city has purchased eight of the large-type graders, and will keep them almost constantly employed.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

SUES HUSBAND WHO IS CONVICT.

SENSATIONAL SHOOTING CASE IS RECALLED.

Wife Wants Maintenance from Williamson Who Is in Penitentiary for Shooting at Step-Son-in-Law, Van Arnam—Sixty-five Dollars a Month Asked from Estate.

Behind the formal complaint of Angeline Williamson, who is suing her convict husband for maintenance, looms the tragic figure of an angry old man who would rather go to State's prison than promise to curb what he believed to be his righteous wrath. He had shot three times at the step-son-in-law, Van Arnam, who, he declared, had entered into a conspiracy to swindle him.

"You'd better give me a good, long sentence, judge," Williamson cried unyieldingly, as he faced Judge Smith, after pleading guilty to assault with intent to commit murder. "I'll kill him when I get out." His dark blue eyes flashed fire from under the bushy white eyebrows.

The complaint avoids all mention of this and the related events, and simply states that the husband of the plaintiff in the present action is "serving a term in State prison for what amounts to a felony."

Mrs. Angeline Williamson asks an allowance of $65 per month from the estate of her husband. The complaint recites her needs, alleging that she has no income and no property except some furniture and a house and lot, valued at $3000, on which there is a mortgage of $1600. It is claimed that payments have to be made on the mortgage. The complaint further states that Mrs. Williamson has a daughter partly dependent upon her for support.

The daugher is not stated to be Mrs. Van Arnam, nor is there mention of the fact that it was over the property referred to that the trouble arose which resulted in Williamson being sent to the penitentiary.

Williamson has an income of $800 per year from an estate in Pennsylvania, and a pension of $144 per year. A few years ago he married a widow with a grown-up daughter. The daughter married Van Arnam. Van Arnam is soft-spoken and indirect in his ways. His rugged old stepfather-in-law did not like him. Williamson's story of the trouble was that he and Van Arnam agreed to purchase a house jointly, and deed it to their wives to own in common; that Van Arnam failed to pay his part, and then tried to secure the sale of Mrs. Williamson's interest in the property to him. To all of this the old man had consented, but suddenly getting the idea that he was being swindled, when a notary was brought to the house in the morning to get the deed signed he attempted the slaughter of Van Arnam.

Williamson was charged with insanity, but at the examination he convinced doctors and judge that he was sane. He was then arraigned on the criminal charge, pleaded guilty, and sentenced by Judge Smith, who made the following comment on the case:

"There is something strange here, and I don't like to send this man to the penitentiary; but if I don't, it seems, he will go and kill that man."

LONG BEACH SUED.

CONTEST OVER TERRITORY.

A suit against the city of Long Beach brought by the people of California on complaint of E. T. Scholler, yesterday was filed in the office of the County Clerk.

The purpose of the action is to restrain the municipality from exercising any control over territory lying between Long Beach and San Pedro, which is claimed to be a part of the city of Long Beach as a result of an annexation election held August 16, 1905. This election was held fourteen days before a similar election was held in the same disputed territory in connection with the city of San Pedro, annexing it to that municipality, but not until more than a month after the intention of San Pedro to hold such an election had been declared.

Partly on the ground that in attempting to annex the territory Long Beach had invaded the legal rights of San Pedro the present action is based, but not exclusively. The charge is made that there was no correct canvass of the vote in the disputed territory in regard to annexation to Long Beach. As claimed by the Long Beach officials, the vote in that election stood thus: In the city of Long Beach, out of 265 votes cast, 259 were in favor of the annexation; in the territory to be annexed, the total vote was 145, of which 73 favored annexation and 72 were opposed to it. In the alleged canvass all votes were counted, and the complaint alleges that four were counted illegally, having been improperly marked, one for annexation and three against it.

The San Pedro election, ignoring that which had been held by Long Beach, was held August 30, 1905, and resulted in the following vote: In the city of San Pedro, out of 244 votes cast, 240 favored annexation; in the territory to be annexed the vote was 58, of which 54 were in favor of annexation.

The present action to decide the true status of the territory in dispute is brought through N. S. Webb, Attorney-General.

GETS ANOTHER CHANCE.

WEAK MAN ESCAPES PRISON.

A man with a weak face, Roy Eddy by name, was brought into the Superior Court yesterday to receive sentence. He had pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary.

Judge Smith peered at him over the bench, with a sort of contemptuous pity.

"That man does not look like a burglar," he remarked. "Doesn't look like a man of very much consequence. What do you know about this case, Mr. North?"

C. C. McComas responded to the question addressed to Mr. North, giving a brief history of the case.

Claude Mathewson of the Sheriff's office had seen Eddy on Spring street, in company with another man, acting in a suspicious manner, and had followed him into a building. Eddy entered the office of Dr. Hastings, and the Deputy Sheriff watched. Presently Eddy came out with an old jack-knife and a small wrench. The modest thief was arrested instantly.

"What did you want those things for?" Judge Smith demanded of Eddy.

The culprit mumbled something unintelligibly.

"Mr. North, will you please interpret for this fellow?" requested the judge, still more impatiently.

He says he doesn't know, your honor. He was drunk."

"Hum! How long have you been here?"

"Two weeks. I came from Needles," answered the man, a little more distinctly. "I had $60 coming. I had been working out there."

"Is it still coming?"

"No, I spent it."

"Not coming, but gone," murmured Mr. McComas.

"This seems to be only the sort of man that drifts about, and not a burglar in the accepted sense. I think common sense demands that we give him another chance." Mr. McComas offered no abjection, and Eddy was placed on probation for four years, with orders to report monthly to Probation Officer Dodd.

"All right," mumbled the man, who had blundered weak-mindedly into the commission of technical burglary. "I'm much obliged to you."

COURT SCORES ROGERS.

MRS. LYNCH WINS CASE.

Ralph Rogers, whose lover-like business letters were read in court Friday, was scored by Judge Hutton in giving his decision yesterday in favor of the defendant in the case of C. S. Boyd against Anna Lynch.

The decision ignored a bill of sale to the lodging-house furniture involved in the suit, signed by Anna Wellpott before starting for Germany in 1903, in favor of Rogers. She had declared that she supposed, when signing it, that it was simply an order to enable the real estate dealer to collect the rents of the lodging-house in her absence. She tried to tell of threats uttered by Rogers to make her sign, but was not allowed to do so on the witness stand.

Evidence already introduced, including the letters to Miss Wellpott from the real estate man, showed that Miss Wellpott, now Mrs. Lynch, had owned a chief interest in the furniture, and the absence of any records of an accounting between her and Rogers which would give the latter the legal right to sell the property to Boyd decided Judge Hutton to recognize the claim of Mrs. Lynch as valid. He added, however, that this did not preclude Boyd from bringing other actions to reimburse himself for the money paid Rogers.

NEW FURNACE FOR NEEDLES.

SMELTER HAS TO ENLARGE TO HANDLE BUSINESS.

One Furnace Is for Lead and New Will Be for Copper Exclusively. Market for Nevada, Arizona and California Ores at Home—It Means Much to Los Angeles.

While there is so much heard of smelters to be put in at various points, the Arizona-Mexico Mining and Smelting Company is actually at work and carrying on a very prosperous business at Needles and is furnishing a market right in Southern California for ores of Arizona, Nevada and this State. Gold, silver, lead and copper are bought.

The second furnace has just been completed and will be used exclusively for copper. With the improvement in conditions three or four furnaces could easily be used, so great has been the increase in business. Manager Godshall says the year past has been very successful.

At present shipments are being received from Oakland, Mojave, Johannesburg, Ivanpah, Searchlight, Victorville, Los Angeles and Arizona points as far as Flagstaff and Phoenix. The completion of the Tonopah Tidewater railroad will bring down large amounts of ores from new properties that will find their way to Needles which will be easily the nearest smelting point.

The Arizona-Mexico Company has developed two of the largest lead shipping mines in Mojave county, the Banner and the Champion, and the Copper World, which is perhaps the largest shipper in San Bernardino county, is partly owned by the owners of the smelter.

The geographical location of Needles is ideal for smelting as it is in a district that allows selection to be made of ores peculiarly adapted for mixing. For example nearly all the Arizona ores are sulphides requiring roasting and carrying zinc and an excessive amount of silicon. On the other hand those of Nevada and California are free from zinc while frequently containing iron and lime gangue, so that by mixing what is practically a self-fluxing ore is obtained.

In handling the zinc ore, of which there is so large a quantity it is at present necessary to burn off the zinc and lose it in order to save the other values. With a zinc furnace these could be saved. As yet no steps have been taken towards installing one.

What the Needles plant means to Los Angeles is probably appreciated by very few persons in the city. While seemingly far away it is nearer to this city than any smelter yet beyond the paper stage. It is conveniently located for all Southern Nevada, and the miner who comes there with his ore instead of going to San Francisco or Salt Lake, will very likely visit Los Angeles for his supplies and recreation. While it is hoped that San Pedro will have a smelter in the near future it should not be forgotten that Needles already has one running for over a year very successfully and has fully passed the experimental stage.

Goldfield, Rhyolite and in fact all of the new camps of Nevada are as near to Needles as to any smelter, most, if not all, of them, nearer. In course of time it may be expected that much of their ore will come there. Every possible encouragement should be lent this company by Los Angeles business men. With proper encouragement the plant will enlarge and will build up a larger town at Needles tributary to Los Angeles.

SUGAR OUT OF CORN STALKS.

Alleged New Process to Be Tried Here.

Propose a Big Factory for Orange County.

California Peat Lands Are the Richest.

BY W. I. ALTER.

The manufacture of sugar from the ordinary Indian corn, or maize, with by-products of alcohol, cellulose, paper pulp and various other marketable substances, all at a fraction of present cost of production, is an industry which promises to have its inception in this section of Southern California.

The inventor of the process is Prof. Francis L. Stewart of Murraysville, Pa., and he is backed by a $50,000,000 corporation, known as the Maize Sugar and Cellulose Company, composed of Pittsburgh millionaires. George B. Snyder of Wilmerding, Pa., an associate of the inventor, has been for the past three weeks investigating this section of the country, making his headquarters with J. D. Flute at Long Beach.

Mr. Snyder is particularly enthused over the possibility of corn raising in the peatlands about Santa Ana, and is negotiating for the purchase of several thousand acres as a nucleus for the company, the object being to raise the corn under the supervision of expert chemists until such time as it is demonstrated to surrounding farmers that the crop will be stable and profitable.

SUGAR IN SOIL.

"There are various reasons why we seek California for our initial factory," said Mr. Snyder yesterday. "Statistics show that in Orange county the percentage contained in the juice of the cornstalk is 14.5, or almost 2 per cent. higher than that in corn raised in any other State, and the yield of trimmed stalks (which, by the way, is all we use in the manufacture of sugar,) is from twenty to twenty-five tons per acre, an increase of from one-fourth to one-half over that of any other section of the United States.

"But an even greater incentive in favor of California is the ready market for the by-products, especially the pulp for the manufacture of paper. The pulp can be supplied in unlimited quantities, and, in a sense being only a refuse of the sugar plant, its cost as paper stock will be only nominal. Experiments have proven that the quality of paper produced from the cornstalk pulp is far superior to that made from wood. The present freight charges on print paper from the eastern mills would be sufficient to cover the cost of manufacture."

Although Prof. Stewart is a chemist of almost national repute, his invention seemed so chimerical and his basis of profits had such a Col. Seller's tinge that it was long years before he succeeded in interesting men who commanded the large capital necessary for such an enterprise. He had a small exhibit at the St. Louis Exposition. It attracted the government experts and was awarded a gold medal. I. E. Gill, a Pittsburgh capitalist, recognised the possibilities—and then the financing of the project proved no bar, the delay until the past few months being on account of patents, which have all been secured satisfactorily.

NO STOCK FOR SALE.

"When you consider that there is over $150,000,000 worth of sugar imported into this country every year," continued Mr. Snyder, warming to the subject, "you can realize what a vast field there is for a process that will lessen the present cost of production one-half. I might tell you now that I have no stock for sale, that this is not a stock-jobbing company, and, so far as I know, there is none now, nor will there be any for sale—but I am anxious for the farmers of this section to realize the possibilities of mutual interest in the establishing of a factory.

"It has long been known that the corn stalk contained an appreciable quantity of sugar, but not enough to render its working profitable. Prof. Stewart discivered that the sugar contents can be greatly increased by taking the ear from the stalk at a certain period in its growth, causing the growing plant to produce as much sugar as the ordinary sugar cane. He further discovered that this treatment modifies the anatomical structure of the plant, greatly increasing the available quantity and improving the quality of its cellulose content. Moreover, in the subsequent treatment of the plant for the manufacture of sugar, the refuse (or fibrous matter left after the juice is extracted) is in the best possible condition for the manufacture of cellulose or paper pulp of high grade at a very low cost.

"While the cost of maize sugar of equal grade with that from the sugar cane and the beet is much less than from either of them, the pulp and cellulose from the stalk, and denatured alcohol or food products from the unripe grain, will have a market value exceeding that of sugar. This gives the maize a tremendous advantage over the cane or beet, neither of which furnish any by-products of considerable value."

BIG FACTORY.

In the Southern Califirnia field the company anticipates erecting a plant to at first treat 1000 tons of trimmed stalks per day. While the manufacturing processes are different, no special machinery will be required varying materially from the present sugar-making machinery as adapted to sugar cane, and which can be procured in the market on comparatively short notice. It is estimated that the proposed plant will cost about $350,000, or with the working capital required, represent an investment of $600,000. According to careful statistics gained through practical operations in a small plant at his Pennsylvania home, Prof. Stewart gives the following figures on a 1000-ton daily capacity factory, treating 100,000 tons of corn cane annually:

About 18,000,000 pounds of sugar, worth $750,000; 20,000,000 pounds of paper pulp, worth $550,000; 84,000 tons of stock food worth $400,000.

This stock food includes the leaves and the unripe ear taken from the stalk, but since these figures were compiled Prof. Stewart is satisfied that the estimate for stock food can be doubled by using the ear, leaves and cellulose products and residue after the crystallizable sugar and cellulose products have been extracted in the manufacture of denatured alcohol.

The deearing of the stalk and cutting before maturity guarantees at least two crops a year in this section. Basing on fifty tons trimmed stalks to the acre, a 100,000 ton annually capacity plant will require the planting of only 2000 acres. To supply the sugar needed to offset the $150,000,000 imports of sugar it will take 200 such plants as the one contemplated.

In the corn belt States the average profit for the corn crop to the farmer is less than $12, but the company is basing its estimates on paying the farmers $2 per ton for the stalks and as much more for the unripe grain. With California soil this will mean one of its most valuable agricultural products when once the maize sugar industry is established.

WHEN SCHWAB LAUGHED.

Man Visiting in Los Angeles Tells How He Nearly Caused Ruction Between Steel Magnates.

Niven McConnell, the steel expert from Pittsburgh, who has been a guest at the Alexandria for a week, was the means at one time of causing C. M. Schwab, one time president of the United States Steel Corporation, and Andrew Carnegie to come close to a temporary rupture of their friendship.

In speaking of this incident, McConnell said yesterday: "Those who have been in the directors' room of the Carnegie Steel Company have often noticed a picture holding the place of honor It is a life-size painting of a monkey. He is a short, stout and very comical animal. He is holding his sides and seemingly almost convulsed with laughter, if a monkey can laugh. Below is a line, 'Just laugh'—to Charles M. Schwab from Andrew Carnegie.' This picture was a gift to Mr. Schwab in honor of his only maxim when in a hard place. His maxim is 'Just Laugh.'

"It was in 1898 when Mr. Schwab was president of the Carnegie Steel Company and I was busy building furnaces for the company, that a decision had been reached to construct four fifty-ton open hearth steel furnaces. An appropriation of a little less than $100,000 was set aside, and I was told to go ahead. I had long desired to make radical changes in the existing type of furnace, and took this opportunity to do so.

"Steel billets were selling at about $12 a ton then, a very low price, but there was an upward turn to the market and they soared to $18. The company was using every ton of steel it could make and a rush order came to build the furnaces in record time. We did the work in a record period, but when we turned in the bill we had expended about $100,000 more than Mr. Schwab had set aside. Mr. Schwab passed the matter lightly, but not so with Mr. Carnegie. In those days $100,000 in the steel business meant more than $1,000,000 does now, and Mr. Carnegie was angry. He entered Mr. Schwab's office during a meeting of the directorate of the Carnegie company and asked an explanation of the increased $100,000. Mr. Schwab said that the money had been spent on the furnaces, but that Niven McConnell was the man who put the money into the furnaces. Mr. Schwab said that the first thing he knew of the matter was when a statement of the expenditures had been received bearing my name.

Mr. Carnegie did not relax one iota, but glared at Mr. Schwab.

" 'And what did you do about it?' he asked.

" 'I just laughed,' said Mr. Schwab. The answer appealed to Mr. Carnegie, and nothing more was said about it. Six months afterward while Mr. Carnegie was in Europe he came across this picture of a well-fed jocular animal laughing and holding his sides. He bought it and sent it to Mr. Schwab. The latter turned it over to the directors' room of the Carnegie Steel Company and it is still there."

Hollywood High Wins Debate at Auditorium—Ionian Society Presents Picture to School.

The Polytechnic High School and Hollywood High School held a debate in the "Poly" auditorium. The local school won with a score of 52 to 47. Before the speaking yells and class songs were given with spirit by the supporters of both schools. Miss Dora Gelding and Andre Gifford represented Polytechnic and Miss De Lorie and Ferguson, Hollywood.

The Ionian Society Friday afternoon installed these officers: Andre Gifford, president; Grace Breedlove, vice-president; Mamie Cliff, secretary, and William Beeman, Jack Clark, Arthur Cooner, John Craig and Grover Adams, critics.

Orville Howland, on behalf of the society, presented to the school a reproduction of the famous Michael Angelo statue of Moses. The society voted the money for this at a special meeting a week ago.

The school was delightfully surprised last week by receiving from the Ebell Club of this city one of Curtis's famous Indian pictures, entitled "A Vanishing Race." It was presented in acknowledgment of the support given by the Polytechnic High School to the Arts and Crafts exhibition recently held at the Ebell Club.

Cut Prices on Reliable Furniture at a Reliable Store

Cut Prices mean something here. We tolerate no juggling of figures---raising "values" for effect. Every price cut is on the square.

$6.50 Brass and Iron Bed $4.85

This is a splendid bed proposition. Keen observers say that at $6.50 it is a rare bargain, and you will certainly appreciate it at $4.85. Knobs and top cross rods are brass and body is made of heavy iron tubing. You have your choice of cream or green.

We Always Picture What We Advertise.

$9.50 Iron Crib $7.40

It is a full size, well constructed crib, made by a factory that makes nothing but first class cribs. It is full size. One side can be lowered. The color is cream. Isn't $2.10 worth saving?

Our Stock of Iron Beds and Cribs is the Best in the West

Let Us Do Your Upholstery Work

We will do it right, no matter how large or how small. We will make the price right, too. It isn't our aim to make profit for this department, but rather a friend for the store.

$7.50 Rocker $5.95

It is a very handsome rocker as is attested by the picture below. It is made entirely of quarter sawed oak and highly polished; or you can have it in mahogany finished birch if you prefer.

Your Choice of These Tables $2.95

The regular price of each one is $3.75. The one on the right may be had in either golden oak, weathered oak or mahogany finish. The one on the left may be had in either golden oak or mahogany finish. The designs are radically different but equally good.

We Can Save You Money on Carpets

Our carpet and rug department saves money for its customers every day—that's why we have built up such a splendid business—that's why it is to your advantage to buy your carpets and rugs here.

$6.00 Rocker $4.75

We will match this rocker against any $7.50 rocker in any store in the city—that's strong language, but it is justifiable. It is made of quarter sawed golden oak. The design tells its own story.

Special Clearance of Odd Pieces

This week we will devote considerable attention to the closing out of broken assortments and odd pieces in every department. This special clearance is made necessary by an unusually heavy spring trade. Prices will be reduced to an interesting point. See the windows.

STUDY SOCIOLOGY.

Sixty College Students on Annual Visit to Settlement Houses and Public Institutions.

The senior classes on sociology from the University of Southern California, Pomona College and Occidental College are making their annual visitations to public institutions in the special course conducted by Rev. Dana Bartlett, head of the Bethlehem Institutions.

There is an earnest body of sixty students this year, and the twenty-two from Pomona College are making Bethlehem Hotel at Vignes and Ducommun streets their headquarters.

The classes convened first on Friday evening in the parlors of Bethlehem, with Dr. George Sumner of Pomona College and Prof. Dennison of the University accompanying the students. Dr. Bartlett gave a general outline of the week's activities, and then the party visited the College Settlement on Alpine street.

Edgar Gordon, the new headworker at this institution, told the students of the settlement movement on the Chicago Commons, where he had had five years' experience, and Miss Bingham of the College Settlement gave a history of the local work. Mrs. O. S. Barnum gave an interesting account of the efforts to raise money for scholarships for working-children under fourteen years of age.

Yesterday morning at 9 o'clock the students, accompanied by their professors and Dr. Bartlett, visited the Hollenbeck Home for the Aged, and yesterday afternoon they called at the Soldiers' Home.

Last evening Miss Bessie Stoddard addressed the students at Bethlehem on "Social Conditions in the Eastern Cities," and Dr. Sumner spoke of social conditions in municipalities of New Zealand and Australia, where he has recently visited. Dr. Bartlett gave an address on "The Modern Civic Movement," and after the addresses the students visited the various newspaper offices and observed the work of making a daily paper.

This morning at 7 o'clock the party will attend services at St. Vibiana's Cathedral; at 9 o'clock they will attend the Russian "Passover" ceremonials at No. 218 Lafayette street, and at 11 o'clock they will go to the new Bethlehem Institution at Railroad and Main streets, where Dr. Bartlett will speak on "God's Education of Man."

The students will take dinner at the new Bethlehem Coffee Club, which will be the first regular meal served there. They also will hear an address by M. R. Searle of the Associated Charities on the work of that organization.

This afternoon they will visit the County Hospital at 3 o'clock, the Catholic orphanage on Boyle Heights at 5 o'clock, and this evening they will attend the various rescue missions of the city.

Tomorrow they plan to visit the City Jail, the police courts and the City Council, and then to make a trip to Whittier to inspect the State Reform School.

The programme of sociological studies with direct object lessons will continue for the entire week.

OTTARSON "EXPLAINS."

He Now Claims to Have Sold Properties to Both Todd and Murtha.

E. F. J. Ottarson, who sold U. S. G. Todd the properties upon which the Todd Copper Company was floated, but which were found to be the properties of a Pittsburgh corporation, has handed The Times a sworn statement bearing on his part in the transaction. He admits the transaction in substance, but claims that Mr. Rivers, the owner of the property, was a party to the matter and had verbally agreed to selling the property to Todd.

The affidavit then goes on to say that it was through his efforts that the deal with Mr. Murtha's people in the East was consummated, that he (Ottarson) has letters from Mr. Murtha showing this to be true and that furthermore Mr. Rivers conspired to beat him out of his commission. He further says that he had an option on some other claims from one J. B. Hocker, the connection of which with this transaction is not quite clear.

Just how he could have negotiated the sale of these properties to Pittsburgh people at the time he was aiding in floating a local stock company on the same is not explained.

ANNOUNCEMENT

WHEN we announce in behalf of those discriminating clothiers who represent us, that the season's fashions, authoritative and correct, are now on display, we feel a degree of security that comes only with the positive knowledge of being right.

Undoubtedly it would be presuming a great deal on our part were we to say—you can't get a perfect garment unless you get ours. And it wouldn't be altogether true. But we do say, and we are justified—wait until you have seen the styles and fabrics authorized by The House of Kuppenheimer before making your purchase, otherwise you will ignore a most important factor, largely the creative factor, in those things that go to make good form—good taste in men's fine clothes.

Clothing merchants, custom tailors and critical dressers everywhere, await with interest the model garments of The House of Kuppenheimer, recognizing in them a distinct note of style authority and a standard of merit.

Our tenure as makers of the finest garments for men covers a period considerably over a quarter of a century, and it has been a great satisfaction to know that our policy, our principles, during all this time, have been somewhat different from those of other manufacturers who have but recently awakened to those things that are essential to men's fine clothing. We have known them and applied them always.

It has been our creed to create and to make fashionable and dependable garments for men of discriminating taste. Each year's experience and determination have added something to our progress.

The present season's productions are the finest in this ascending scale of clothes excellence. The consummate thoroughness with which we have explored the possibilities of clothing development, is expressed conspicuously in the character of every garment we make.

The significance of these facts to men who appreciate clothes correctness, is this: The superiority of Kuppenheimer style and quality is such that no man, in justice to himself, should fail to inspect the Kuppenheimer garments before deciding the question of spring clothes.

In behalf of the exclusive representatives of The House of Kuppenheimer throughout the United States, we invite your inspection of the new spring styles.

THE NEW YORK 337-339 SOUTH BROADWAY

The Vogue of the Kimono Sleeve

ORMING a dividing line between this and last year's styles, the new Oriental sleeve is fashion's latest novelty.

The Japanese shoulder effect is gained in various ways. Instead of being puffed or gathered, sleeves are plainly mounted in the armhole and flare sharply to the bottom in bell-shaped fashion after the manner of the imported kimono. Again, it is seen with surplice or semi-cape effect, but all with the drooping shoulder; or there are the square straight sleeves that mark the simple mandarin coat.

There is quite a little difference, by the way, in the cut of the Japanese and Chinese kimono sleeves. The latter is built more on the lines of a coat with a wide, loose and somewhat square sleeve, while the former is a graceful combination of sleeve and drapery. Sometimes the model makers purchase the real Oriental kimonos and mandarin robes, take out the sleeves and set them in a waist of harmonizing color, using the rest of the material as banding for the skirt and blouse. Again, the real Oriental robes are draped into quaint and graceful short mandarin wraps with the seamless sleeve caught together on the inside of the arm.

Naturally, the kimono sleeve necessitates a fancy undersleeve, always of some soft clinging fabric, and generally much trimmed with lace, tucks or bandings. The wide oversleeves and draped armholes themselves are being trimmed in various ways, frequently with narrow velvet ribbon, even more often with the effective Oriental bandings and galloons, which are seen in such beautiful colors just now. Often, too, the material itself is braided or finished in rich hand embroideries.

The infinite variety of the kimono sleeve is admirably illustrated by today's models. The Japanese sleeve as adapted to pinafore effects shows the sleeve cut in one with the surplice drapery which crosses at the bust line. The enormous armhole is trimmed with broad bands of appliqué, which is also used in the yoke, and to end the undersleeves of chiffon that are held at the elbow with three rows of shirring.

The mandarin sleeve is a feature of the new Oriental looking coats, which are so much in favor just now for evening wear. The model shown is of heavy red flowered silk, with the square sleeves slashed and held inside with frogs and tassels. A band of Japanese embroidery borders the cloak, which is caught at the bust line by a frog and tassels.

The pelerine effect is strikingly shown in the elaborate jacket of black and white striped fancy English worsteds. The kimono sleeve is cut in one piece with the jacket, and divides sharply to show an undercoat sleeve of valenciennes lace and net, ending in a cuff of marquise lace with the figures marked by circular pieces of bright blue velvet appliqued underneath. This same marquise trimming is used as underneath arm pieces to join the front and back of the jacket, and forms a fitted yoke to outline the neck. The undersleeves have four valenciennes lace rosettes running their entire length to fill the opening of the cape-sleeve, and a pleating of the same lace trims the fronts of the jacket. The back of the jacket is square, and hangs to the waist line, like a huge sailor collar.

Very effective for any afternoon gowns in one of the diaphanous new cotton materials is the dainty black and white mousseline frock. The undersleeve is a puff of net, ending in a bias cuff of the mousseline and fastened with black velvet buttons. Half way up this puff and sewed on the net is a band of wide German valenciennes insertion, bound with bias stripes of the material. This gives fulness and holds out the kimono sleeves proper, which are also cut on the bias. A loose band of the insertion outlines the armhole around the top of the sleeve. A bias fold of the mousseline, piped in black, outlines the yoke, while broad bands of the insertion trim the blouse.

For an evening gown nothing could be more graceful than the true Chinese mandarin sleeve, shown in a pale yellow satin, trimmed with sequin covered lace. This sleeve is an oblong piece of satin, trimmed with bands of the sequined lace folded in two. The points fall to the hips, and are caught by rosettes of the satin, held with yellow cords. Underneath there is a puffed elbow sleeve of yellow net, edged with a full pleating to give an attractive fluffiness should the oversleeves slip up. The flower decorations are made from the yellow satin.

EACH AND ALL SOCIETY

CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK, PRESIDENT

"Get Your Armor Ready, Girls"

THREE months ago, almost to a day, girls, there appeared on this page my talk about the campaign of work we were planning for the new year. Don't you think that Easter is a good time to take account of stock and make a renewal of the efforts to which we pledged ourselves for Each and All?

As you may recollect, I gave a model at that time of the coupons and blanks for application for membership which I have had printed. By their aid I wished to keep count of the new members who were being brought in by our girls, and also to follow in detail the work the individual girls were doing in their daily life.

I wish I could say that there was such a demand for the coupons and blanks that the whole stock was exhausted at once and had to be renewed. But I regret to say that there are still a good many left, and that my experience with these has been a repetition of other experiences along similar lines. That is, that the good workers have sent promptly and repeatedly for the blanks, and have filled them out and sent them in, while many of the girls have taken no notice of the coupons at all.

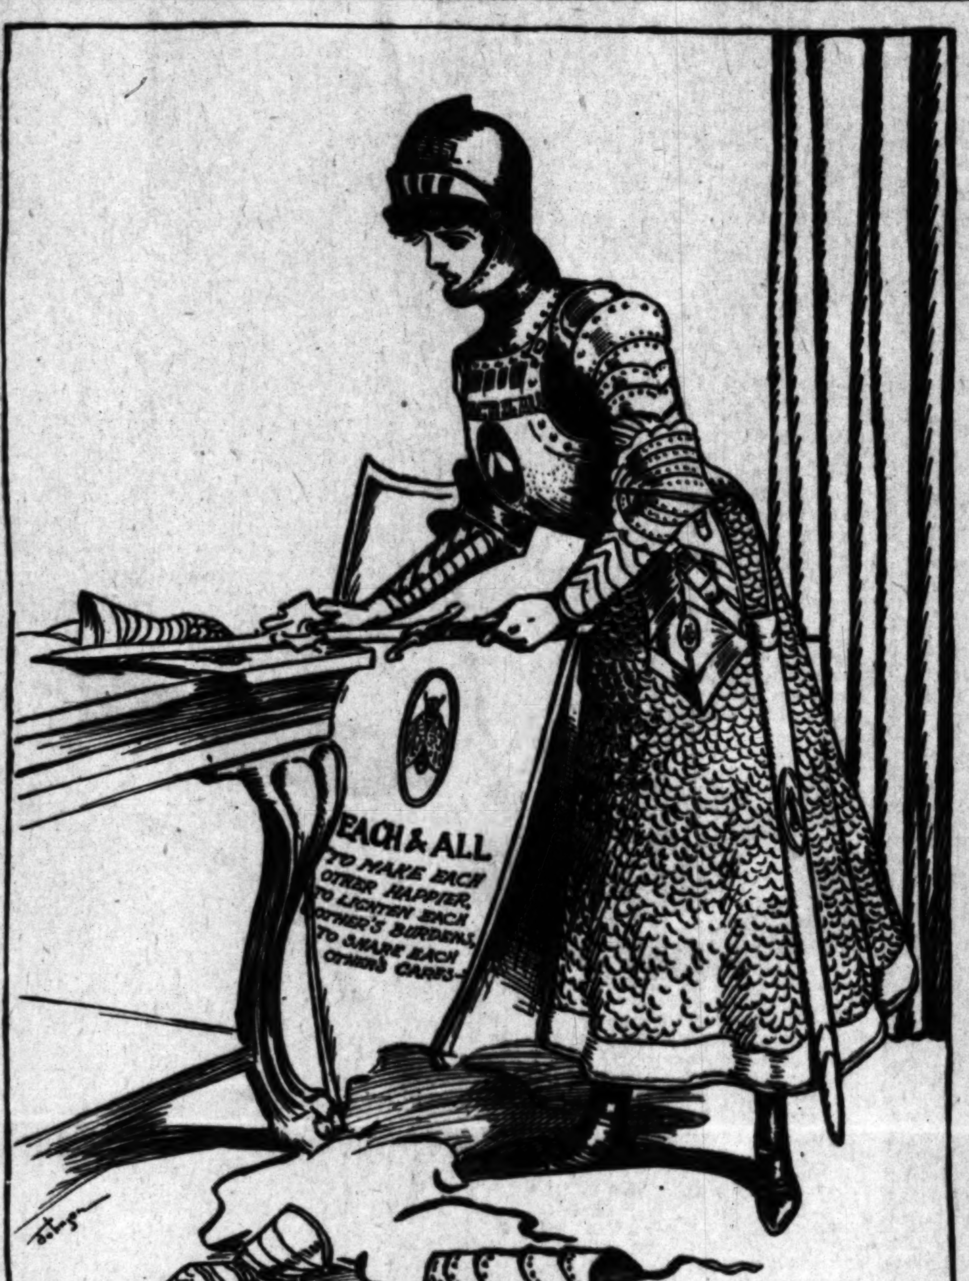
I have been wondering what is the reason for this. Of course, I could dismiss it by saying that the girls are not good workers—but some of them are. Certain of them wrote to me and told me that they did not like to "keep tab" on the amount of time they spent for Each and All, because it seemed too much like letting the right hand know of the good done by the left. Others said—and I know with entire truth—that they could not follow out in detail the time they gave to Each and All. So much of their thoughts were devoted to it, they planned so constantly for its advancement and benefit that they could not put down in mere hours and minutes the space they supplied to the work.

MAKE YOUR PLANS KNOWN

For such excuses as these I have respect, although even with these members I would be glad to know the outline of the work they are doing, even if they could not give me time details. But what is to be said of the big number who take no notice at all of the offer of the coupons? I have thought, perhaps, that some of them did not understand what I meant and had the impression that they were only to cut out the coupon printed in the paper, fill it out and send it to me. If I did not put the matter clearly enough before, I apologize, and repeat my remarks now in more distinct fashion. I have a stock of coupons with blanks for the name and address of the member and a space which she can fill in with the work she has done for Each and All and the amount of time she has spent in doing it. These I will send by mail to any one who will write to me stating the number she wishes, either of these or the blank applications for membership.

The advantages of the first form of coupon are for me more than for the girls, and the advantages of the second are more for the girls than for me. Let me explain. The first coupons when filled out help me to keep in touch with the work the girls are doing, and enable me to know—largely for my own satisfaction—how much time is being given to the work of our big society. I illustrated this in the New Year Talk of which I spoke by saying that if each of the 12,000 members gave ten minutes' work daily, we would have an astonishing number of days' work done within a year. Think what it would mean to say that some one member would give every moment of her time for a whole year to work for the society. Well, by each member giving her proportion of ten minutes daily, we could achieve far more than that.

Also, if the girls would fill out the coupons and send them to me, it would be a simple matter for me to compute the work being given to each branch of our work and to know where more help was needed, or to ascertain in which quarter we had all the service required right there. Better still than that it would be to me to know that a big number of girls had pledged themselves to contribute a fixed amount of their time weekly to Each and All.



EACH & ALL
TO MAKE EACH OTHER HAPPIER, TO LIGHTEN EACH OTHER'S BURDENS, TO SHARE EACH OTHER'S CARES.
Fohgen

The advantages of the second coupon are, as I have said, more for the girls than for me. There are two special benefits. One is that when a girl's name is entered on the card in the space given both for the name and the address she is more likely to be written down correctly in the office, and more likely, also, to receive her membership card promptly and correctly than if her name is sent in somewhere in a letter, where it may be overlooked or deciphered wrong. The other helpfulness of the blank is for the girl who turns in the name of a new member. She finds it far easier and simpler to fill out a blank than to write a letter inclosing the name and explaining who has sent it. Of course, I am helped, too, by having the names sent in the more businesslike manner, although I am so glad to get names that I would take them in any way they were sent!

I must say, in justice to a large proportion of the members, that there have been many requests for the membership applications, and the same girls sent back for them again and again. For the coupons giving the account of work done there has been less call, and still fewer of the coupons sent have been filled in and returned. Those received have been extremely comforting to me, however. When a girl writes that she has made a flannel nightgown for a sick neighbor as her share of Each and All work; when another tells me that she has sat up with a friend who was nursing an ailing baby and has relieved the tired mother of some of the care weighing upon her; when another tells me that, so far from restraining herself to any ten minutes a day, she has given a whole afternoon to writing letters for a woman who could not do it for herself, and that she has also sent magazines to the shut-in members, you may guess how it gladdens my heart. But I don't know that anything pleased me better than the record of one girl who wrote: "Spent an hour washing windows, so that mother could rest." That showed me that Each and All was being carried into the home, where it is needed more than anywhere else.

Now that you know the use of both of these coupons to simplify and aid in the work of Each and All, I hope you will be more eager to send for them and to take a fresh hold upon the work they both encourage.

THE TRUE EASTER SPIRIT

Does this sound as if it had very little to do with Easter? I don't know about that. For my own part, I think it has a good deal. As I said last week, this is the time for new beginnings. The long cold winter is at an end. It is getting to be the season when it is easier to go about and do things than it was three months ago. The summer break-up is still a long way ahead, and there is a chance to do a great deal between now and then. To those of us who connect Easter with the rising again of life there is an especial fitness in a new start at this season.

More than that, it is a time when we have examples of growth and fresh beauty of effort and purpose all about us. In the spring a young man's fancy may turn lightly to thoughts of love, but in this springing time for all life I think it is the experience of most of us that we feel a longing to undertake new enterprises, to make fresh starts, to try again and make better old things. We furbish up our pursuits and our occupations as we do our last year's garments, and endeavor to give them something of the freshness and beauty of the season. Let us do this with our Each and All work. We who know all that Each and All stands for do not think we could give a lovelier Easter present to a friend than a membership card in Each and All, and the right to feel that she belongs to this big, helpful organization which grows bigger and more helpful with each day.

We began the third year of our life as a society in February. Can't we all get to work and see what we can do to make Each and All twice its present size and usefulness by the time it enters its fourth year? That would be an Easter resolve worth making, and would bring happiness to the girls who come in, the girls who bring them in and to the woman who is happy enough to be at the head of Each and All. Who will send for her coupons and send with the request the pledge she makes at Easter to do more and better work for Each and All than ever before?

Christine Terhune Herrick

P. S.—Every mail brings a host of letters asking one or the other (or both) of these two questions: "How shall I address your letter?" or "How can I get a badge?"

Address all letters to me, in care of the paper in which you see our page, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope if you wish a personal answer.

For the badge—send 50 cents in stamps, registered letter or money order, made payable to me, and addressed to me in care of this newspaper.

WHAT THE VARIOUS WORKERS ARE DOING AND THINKING

HERE are two more letters that have come from girls who hold decided views on the question as to whether or not women should work to earn money after marriage.

She Approves of Working After Marriage

Shall a girl work after marriage? Why not? If a young man on a small salary truly loves a young girl, also a breadwinner, why can they not be united in marriage and co-operate toward the same end? I will cite my own case, for instance. Twenty-two years of age, a graduate nurse, supporting my mother. Rent, groceries, doctors, etc., meant a constant expenditure. And the young man tried to save, but hotels, amusements, etc., ate into the small salary. So we argued, Why put aside happiness and the best years of our youth for people's opinion? Oh! I have heard reams of advice. They say, "She is throwing herself away on him; he cannot support her." But we concluded "they" did not count. So, to the surprise and horror of our friends, we married. Now each has something to work and save for. And the result? Behold the lot on which, in a year's time, is to stand the house, where mother shall have her cozy corner all her own and a garden, a place for the chickens, and plenty of room for the younger fry, which we hope to add! No more poked-up housekeeping rooms; no more neighbors forever commenting on our affairs; for we have room enough to be free.

We have each other when a cessation of labor permits; we have no time to keep our troubles warm and nourish them into mountains; we are ridiculously healthy; and, above all, we have found that money will not buy love, joy nor happiness, but that the secret of happiness is, "Laugh the barriers down; sing and do not frown." I did not mean to "poetize." We think the world a wonderfully nice place, though we cannot eat any of our holiday dinners together this year. But we are grateful, hopeful, cheerful and helpful, living up to Each and All.

I wish somebody, or bodies, would write to me and send me the names of many postcard exchangers.

E. A. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

A Different Opinion

I was reading "E. S. H.'s" letter, and I think that a married woman's place is in her home, and not at work. Of course, if her husband is sick or disabled in any way, I think it is proper for her to go to work; otherwise, I think a man's love is not what it ought to be if he expects his wife to work. If he is earning a small salary, why not wait to be married and let both save? I think that would be a better plan.

I would like to have a cushion of Each and All colors if any of our members will make it. I would gladly pay any reasonable price.

Clover would be suitable for our society flower.

CHARLOTTE M. B. (Philadelphia, Pa.).

Here are two diametrically opposed opinions. We have had other letters on this subject, but would be glad to hear further from the girls about it.

Another Clover for the Bees' Flower

What is there more beautiful than a field of clover, with the bees flying here and there in the summertime? I don't know any one here who belongs to Each and All, but I help all who may call on me. "Whatsoever my hand findeth to do" is my motto. Will some member please give me some ideas of making drawn-work? I would like to exchange blocks for an Each and All quilt.

HELPING HAND (Mansfield, Mass.)

Why don't you bring in more members and start a chapter in Mansfield? We ought to have one there. Another advocate for the clover as a club flower.

How About the Columbine?

I have not heard if anybody suggested the wild columbine for a club flower. When I see the dear little flower high up among the rocks where no other pretty flower is seen, and then, after a while, may see some way down along the river banks, it suggests to me just what our society is trying to do—send brightness to the highest and lowest—and it tries to get together the wild and ignorant with the cultured.

E. G. (Allentown, Pa.).

These are good arguments in favor of the columbine. What do you think of them? It does not show our club colors, however, nor, I think, is it fragrant enough to attract the bees.

Where Are the Bee Badges?

About wearing the pin. I invariably wear mine on the front of my coat or waist—not just for show, although I certainly am not ashamed of it; but if some other member should see it, we could compare notes, etc.

It seems strange to me that I have never run across another member—and I am in Boston twice and sometimes oftener every week! I am almost afraid I will appear ill bred because I gaze so eagerly at every one who enters a car!

HOPE (Wellesley Hills, Mass.).

The same complaint has been heard so often! Hundreds and hundreds of girls wear those pins, I know. Let us hear from those who have seen and recognized them.

A Love for Reading and Sewing

I am only too willing to help any of the members of Each and All as much as I can. I love reading, and spend as much time with my books as I can. Sewing is also one of my chief pleasures, and at present I am doing some embroidery work.

M. C. G. (Atlantic City, N. J.).

Certainly these interests should command pleasant correspondents.

Report From the Invalid Help Chapter

This is my monthly report. Magazines, books, short stories cut from newspapers and magazines, copies of poems, postcards, both leather and paper, and cheery letters have been sent to the invalids. One helper sent a lovely collar to one of our invalid girls for a birthday gift. My new set of helpers, especially, are all that could be required. They are such a comfort to me, for they seem to be only too glad to follow out my every wish and suggestion.

I love the work dearly. I am in love with my invalids, and am almost as fond of my helpers. You have no idea how much good Each and All has done me, and I feel I can never work hard enough for the club to compensate for the blessing it is to me. It has broadened my sympathies, made me happier, and increased my faith in human nature. It has taught me to love God and my neighbor more (for one cannot love her neighbor without loving the great Father of all), and has done for me what whole worlds of sermons could never have done, for our glorious society is a living, breathing sermon.

E. P. D. (Aspinwall, Pa., Chairman Invalid Help Chapter).

I wish all our chairmen sent in such regular, prompt and satisfactory reports. This chairman is an illustration of the good won by service for others, and it gives me pleasure to print what she has written. I hope it may help many.

Members Wanted for the Animal Aids

A Corresponding Branch of the Animal Aids has recently been organized for the purpose of spreading as widely as possible a humane interest in animals. This has proved a great success, and members from all parts of the United States, and one from Canada have responded to the call. The dues of this branch consist of at least one good deed to animals each month, a description of which is written to the chairman of the local chapter, who reads it at the regular monthly meeting. Copies of the "minutes" of these meetings are sent to the members of the Corresponding Branch, and a record is kept of all the good deeds done for the year. During the month of November these enthusiastic workers sent in reports covering the rescue from a painful death of one young kitten, a small chicken and a cat; and from lives of cruelty, two dogs. This report, while appearing somewhat grotesque to some, represents real work and the hearty endeavor of kind hearts. Members are earnestly solicited for the Corresponding Branch and for the local Chapter of the Animal Aids.

DIXIE (Chairman the Animal Aids, Philadelphia, Pa.).

Another report I am delighted to print. May it bring new members.

Will Exchange Music for Sewing

I can be of some help to the lovers of music, as I have been playing for the last twelve years. I am very fond of music, and would do what I could for any member; also I would exchange postal cards. If some of the members would care to give me a few instructions in regard to sewing, I would like very much to learn how and make my own waists, etc. I would gladly accept this in return for my knowledge of music.

ALICE (Philadelphia, Pa.).

In our Philadelphia branch there will surely be some one who would like to exchange her skill in sewing for help with music.

She is Lonely on a Ranch

I would like to exchange sofa pillow tops and patterns in the new stencil work.

If any Eastern girls would like to have some of my short stories on the beauties of California, I would like to send them to any one. Although born in the East, I have spent all my life but one year in the Golden State, and, as I am proud of it, I would like Eastern girls to know of its beauties.

I live on a ranch sixteen miles from Los Angeles, and, as there is no one of my age around here, and no other children in the family, I am at times very lonely. I do all kinds of shadow and solid embroidery, and I make some very pretty pillow tops. I would like to exchange postals with any Eastern girls.

R. E. W. (Norwalk, Cal.).

The attractions this letter holds out are enough to insure the writer correspondents who will save her from loneliness for some time to come.

An Offer to Travelers

If there are any of the Each and All girls who are contemplating a trip to this part of the country, I would be very glad to have them write me, if they wish to know anything about conditions here, and I will endeavor to answer them to the best of my ability.

I came here late last summer from the East, and I know I was very anxious to learn everything I could about this section before I arrived. There are many little points which one does not take into consideration when making a trip across the continent, and, as I am a working girl (stenographer), perhaps my experience has been a little broader than that of the girls who come out here and "stay at home."

GERTRUDE M. H. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

A timely and a kindly offer. This is the season of year when many turn their faces toward a sunny land—and only those who have taken the trans-continental trip can appreciate how much knowledge and experience may do to make it easier.

"My Hobby is Girls"

I often see mention of girls wanting work, such as hemstitching, lacemaking, etc. Will you kindly give my address to girls seeking such? I have a hobby—girls. Big ones, little ones, brown-eyed ones and blue-eyed—all find a separate corner in my heart.

DIGNITY (Los Angeles, Cal.).

This is a hobby of my own, and I sympathize with "Dignity." She is the kind of friend with whom girls would like to correspond.

Send Your Magazines to the Hospitals

I see so many offers of papers and magazines that I wonder if the girls have thought how much they would be appreciated in the hospitals and orphanages. I know from experience how welcome books and magazines are when one is convalescing and alone in the hospital, with visitors permitted only once or twice a week at certain hours of the day. Last week I visited a lady in our hospital who came from out of town, and she seemed to appreciate greatly the book I left with her. I think the spirit of the Each and All girls is delightful, and wish I could do more to help.

DAISY (Concord, N. H.).

This suggestion fitly follows the preceding letter. We well folk have no idea of the monotony of hospital days. When we cannot cheer the sufferers by visits or letters, we may at least spare time to send reading matter.

Some Attractive Wares

I am making boas of wool which look like ostrich feathers and are very warm. They are two yards long for $2.50 each and postage extra. I could make them longer, if desired, for 30 cents for every quarter of a yard, and will furnish them in any color. The cream are beautiful and they clean well. I am also painting sachet envelopes, poinsettia, poppies and peppers at 25 cents each.

M. M. B. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

These articles all sound as if they were attractive, and I can speak by knowledge of the pretty sachets.

THE ADVENT OF SPRING

While winter glazed the meadow brook
And stilled its silver tune,
And crystal fringes on the boughs
Unmelted hung at noon,
A bird—a brown and sober bird—
Upon a leafless spray,
Fluffed out his little throat and sang
Despite the chilly day.

Deep down beneath the oak tree's roots
The sleeping violet heard,
Within its nest of withered moss
The wild arbutus stirred.
Hope thrilled the frozen wood again
With dreams of shower and sun,
A sound wind blew across the snow,
And lo! was spring begun.

MAY IRVING.

From One of Our Shut-Ins

I am 19 years of age, and have been in the hospital a year. My hands and feet are deformed so that I am not able to walk. I have no parents and no sisters, so I am very lonely at times.

A. R. (Reading, Pa.).

Here is a subject for the friendly offices of the Invalid Help girls. I hope I may soon have many requests for the name of this member by those who wish to cheer her loneliness.

More Pretty Things

I can make fancy bedroom slippers, as well as pretty sofa cushions, of ribbon, aprons, fancy silk bags for holding fans and little catch-alls.

M. McC. (Philadelphia, Pa.).

More pretty handiwork. Who will send for the address of this member and order her work?

For the Children of the Poor

What I want to do for the club is to make the spot where I live a little sweeter and better—to start songs instead of complainings, etc. I would like to exchange postals with California girls.

Girls, may I suggest an idea? Doubtless you have all heard of Mont Lawn-on-the-Hudson. Well, I propose that we form an "Outing Fund," and send as many children as we can there from the slums of New York city and Philadelphia. It only takes $3 for one child, and it can stay there ten days for that amount. And if we can have it, I propose that we elect Mrs. Herrick president and send her the money.

L. M. (Scotland, Pa.).

I do not know that this plan can be carried out exactly as it is suggested. But I wish some of our chapters would turn their energies to planning such country outings as this for poor city children and see if by next summer they cannot themselves accumulate funds for such a purpose.

Clothes Are Not All

You will, no doubt, be interested to hear that I am in school now, enjoying a siege of good, hard study. Of course, this means doing without some things I would like to have—clothes, for instance. But do you really think that is what counts? I would like to know what others besides my own family think about the matter. Our English class is going to give a Shakespearian play this week, and I thought at first I wouldn't go, because I had nothing to wear. But, if you will believe me, I wouldn't miss it for anything. I am going, and will wear my old hat and dress, and I don't care who doesn't like it—ungrammatical, to be sure, but it expresses it.

PEGGY (Pasadena, Cal.).

A sensible decision and a sensible girl to make it! Girls like pretty clothes—they wouldn't be girls if they didn't—but there are some things more worth while than fine feathers, and "Peggy" seems to have laid hold of certain of them.

"Our Largest Chapter"

I want to say a word for the oldest and largest chapter you have—the people who turn to your page for comfort, help and advice, but will never write—some for want of time, others because they do not want their sorrows published. So won't you once in a while write a few lines for us?

Mrs. J. S. (Chester, Pa.).

With all my heart I wish I could say words that would be of help and comfort to all the sorrowing and suffering. My sympathy is with them always. Let me give them one word here which many have proved to be true—that to serve others lightens our own burdens. This may not sound like a help to those already overweighted with care and pain—but try to see!

A Clever Member

I am a young married woman. I have been married nearly seven months, and am keeping house. My dear mother died nearly sixteen years ago, when I was only a little girl of 8, so I did my father's work for two brothers and one sister until two months ago. I stay at home a good deal, and have made four very pretty quilts, several rugs and about twenty sofa pillows and other fancy articles, and I will gladly exchange or give any directions required in any of the above. I also make all of my own clothes and hats, and my sister's, also, and I have some good cooking recipes if any one wishes them. I would also like to have my name on the postcard exchange. Will some of the young married members, as well as the others, write? I will answer all letters and gladly give any information desired in regard to fancy work.

Mrs. LOUISE B. B. (Worcester, Mass.).

This member should belong to our Fancy Work and Domestic Science Chapters. I wish her interest in Each and All would take the form of teaching some of the girls near her her own cleverness with her fingers.

HAVE YOU EVER SEEN THEM?

What Robin Told.

How do robins build their nests?
  Robin Redbreast told me.
First a wisp of yellow straw
In a pretty round they lay;
Then some shreds of downy floss,
Feathers, too, and bits of moss,
Woven with a sweet, sweet song,
This way, that way and across;
  That's what Robin told me.

Where do robins hide their nests?
  Robin Redbreast told me.
Up among the leaves so deep,
Where the sunbeams rarely creep,
Long before the winds are cold,
Long before the leaves are gold,
Bright-eyed stars will peep and see
Baby robins—one, two, three;
  That's what Robin told me.

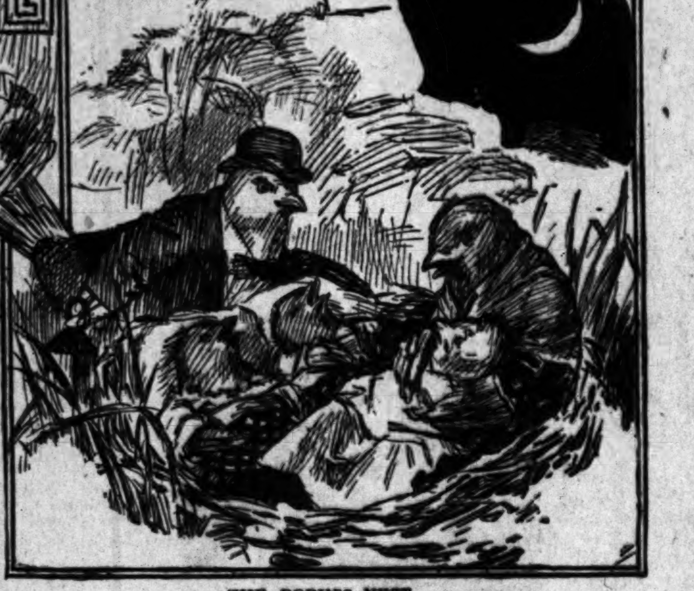
THE TORTOISE'S BREAKFAST



THE ROBIN'S NEST

"Cabbage this morning? That's good!" he says to himself. "But I do hope they've remembered to put a carrot or two somewhere in the pile, and I should rather fancy an onion to finish up with!"

Tortoises live to be ever so old—more than 100 years old, nearly 200 years sometimes. And they can go without food much longer than you or I could. If there happens to be no breakfast and no dinner and no tea, "Never mind," says Mr. Tortoise. "I'll wait till tomorrow."

And if there's nothing tomorrow, either, he tucks his head and tail and feet inside the shell and settles down to wait until next week.

Tortoises don't like sunshine; a dark corner where the sun never comes pleases them best.

If ever you pay a visit to the Hawaiian Islands, don't fail to visit the very old, huge tortoise in the tank back of the Aquarium. He is a monster.

Rarest American Coins

DEALERS say that the fifteen rarest American coins are worth a total of $16,000. Here is a list of them:

First is the New York doubloon, coined in 1787 by Ephraim Brasher, a jeweler. It has a record price of only $505, but is regarded as the scarcest of all American issues by experts, who believe that if a specimen were offered for sale today it would bring $2000 at least. It is the only gold coin of American coinage struck prior to the opening of the first United States mint. This coin weighs 411½ grains, and its intrinsic value is about $16. There are only five of them known to exist.

The second most valuable coin is the half-eagle of 1822, which has a record price of $2165. This coin was bought originally by A. P. Smith for $10 from a man in Wall street, New York.

Third on the list is the half-eagle of 1815, which is valued at $1062.

A VALUABLE DOLLAR

Fourth is the 1804 dollar, only four or five being known to collectors in the United States. It is valued at $1000.

The fifth coin is the Washington cent of 1791, of which pattern one impression was made in gold, and is valued at $2000. The few copper impressions are also highly valued. The design was not accepted by the government.

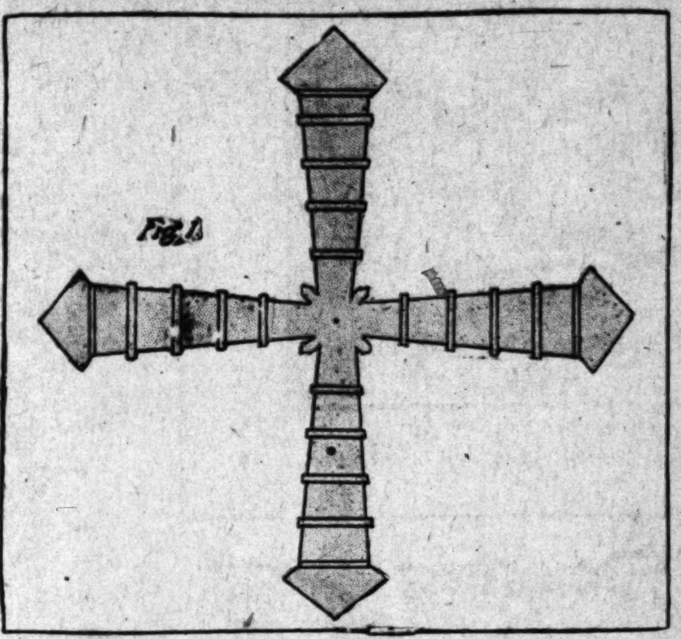
Ranking with this coin in point of rarity is the Washington half-dollar of 1792, struck in gold. This was struck as a compliment to George Washington, and was carried by him as a pocket-piece. It sold for $500 in 1875. It is now practically unobtainable, and valued at $1000.—The Circle.

He Asked the Office Boy.

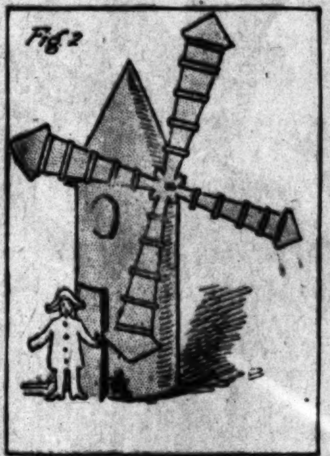
"Who is the responsible man in this firm?" asked the brusque visitor.

"I don't know who the responsible party is," answered the sad, cynical office boy, "but I am the one who is always to blame."

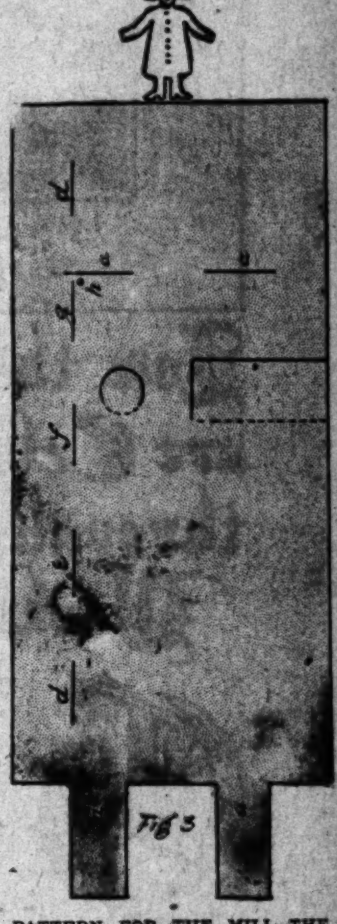
MAKE YOUR OWN WINDMILL



THE SAILS



THE WINDMILL COMPLETE



PATTERN FOR THE MILL—THE MILLER

THIS is made without either glue or tacks.

First, plan all the parts correctly, following these pictures in detail. Either cut the pictures out and paste them on cardboard, or else draw the same design on cardboard and cut all the pieces out.

Take the body of the mill (Figure 3) and curve it; then cut slits at the two lines marked a—a, and through them insert the two tabs marked a—a.

Make a cone-shaped crown out of cardboard, cutting to fit the top of the mill, and allowing tabs to be inserted through slits cut in the mill-body at d—e—f—g—d.

Cut the sails out of cardboard in one piece, and wind red twine around and around the four arms.

Fasten the sails to the mill at h by means of a pin.

Cut slits for the door and the round window, leaving each one a hinge to hang on.

Set the little miller close up to the door, then paint the whole mill red or any other bright color, and your toy is finished.

When the Ghosts Played an April Fool Joke

BY JEAN RIDDELL.

IRENE and Esther were twins. You could have told that not only because both wore their hair braided in the same way and their clothes made in the same fashion and of the same color, but because both had the same fair hair, blue eyes and infantile expression.

The resemblance between them ended with their appearance. In disposition they were as unlike as two little sisters could be. Esther could never get out of school fast enough to play with her little friends. Irene would never play when she could get a book to read. She particularly loved the stories of the past, the quaint old times when ghosts roamed about houses as familiarly as the butler, and often, in a more friendly vein, gave warning when the butler was about to depart with the family silver.

HELPED TO MEET A GHOST

Irene had, in fact, read so much of this class of literature that she began to hope that she might meet a nice, friendly ghost some night and have a chat with him. She felt quite sure she would not be afraid, for it was too evident from all the stories she had read that they had none but the friendliest intentions.

But alas! Irene lived in a thoroughly modern house in a thoroughly modern American city, and no ghosts ever walked there except on the days when her father received his salary, but that ghost, her father told her, would never be seen by anybody but grown-up men.

Irene used to tell Uncle Will all about her troubles, he was so sympathetic, and she confided to him one day the great longing she had to see a ghost, and how mean she thought it that their house was not haunted.

"'All houses wherein men have lived and died are haunted houses,'" quoted Uncle Will.

"But," objected Irene, "no one has ever lived and died in this house."

"Not in this house," replied Uncle Will, "but maybe on the ground that the house is built on."

"Oh, do you think so?" Irene's eyes shone eagerly.

And just at this moment a strange thing happened. A queer grating noise came from the floor under their very feet, followed by some words spoken in a low, muffled tone.

Irene nearly jumped out of her chair, but, remembering how brave she had said she would be, managed to sit still. But her face was very white as she said to Uncle Will:

"What's that?"

Uncle Will had been thinking, but he only remarked: "I will go and see. You stay here until I come back."

UNCLE GETS SUSPICIOUS

He only went as far as the cellar door, which he opened very gently and then called down the stairs in a low tone:

"What are you boys doing down there? Come up here."

And with that Irene's brother Joe and his chum Jack came running up the cellar steps. Neither of them seemed inclined to look Uncle Will straight in the face, and Joe only answered:

"Nothing. Looking for something."

"Very well," replied his uncle, into whose mind an idea had suddenly flashed. "Say nothing about it, and neither will I."

The boys stared and promised. But they walked off very uncomfortably.

"How much do you suppose he knows?" queried Jack, anxiously.

"Oh! you never can tell," answered Joe. "But he won't peach as long as he's promised."

Uncle Will returned to the room next the dining room, where he found Irene excitedly telling Esther, whom she had called into the house to hear the great news, that maybe—maybe—they had a ghost.

"Well?" cried Irene eagerly as Uncle Will entered.

But he was very solemn and not to be coaxed into telling all his news at once.

"Sit down," he said, "and I will tell you all about it."

Irene clutched Esther's hand and crushed her into a large chair, where she sat beside her and waited.

"I have seen him," said Uncle Will, pausing to let this stupendous fact sink into them.

"Uncle Will!" gasped both girls. "Where?"

He pointed down toward the cellar with one hand, and placed the fingers of his other hand upon his lips for silence.

"May we?" whispered Irene. Esther moved uncomfortably; the whole thing, lowered voices and mysterious gestures, were growing too much for her. She didn't know the kindly nature of ghosts as well as Irene did, and she was growing afraid.

"Yes," Uncle Will whispered back to Irene's question. "On the 1st of next month. He only walks on the 1st of each month. He had made a mistake in the date today, but when I told him it was the 29th of March he thanked me and vanished."

"How can we see him? Tell me quick," begged Irene.

"Next Monday," said Uncle Will impressively, "the first day of April, he will walk in the cellar."

Esther shuddered. "I don't want to go down to the cellar to see him," she said.

"You don't need to; he will come up here if you will follow my directions."

"Yes, yes," urged Irene. "We will. Go on."

"Well, right after school on Monday you must come to this room; shut the doors and draw the curtains down. Then measure ten steps from the door to the middle of the room; remove the rug, kneel down and look at the floor. You will find a loose board which you must raise up. Then you will see a flight of steps leading up to this floor. They will be ghostly steps, of course, but that is just the kind for a ghost to use. Then you must both say in unison, 'By my halidome, I bid thee come up.'"

Irene had taken in every word that Uncle Will had said and now stood repeating the directions, winding up in a great flourish, "By my halidome, I bid thee come up."

"Is that all?" she finished eagerly.

"That's all," replied Uncle Will, "but be sure not to do it until the first day of April, or you will break the charm."

And in the excitement of having a real live (or rather dead) ghost on the premises, neither one of the twins remembered that the first of April was All Fool's Day and that Uncle Will had a reputation for playing tricks on his unsuspecting nieces and nephews.

Irene cautioned Esther to guard their secret carefully from Joe and Jack, but Esther, who was not quite so lost in ghostly contemplations as Irene, could not help but see that Joe and Jack had some secret of their own which they were apparently hiding from the two girls.

Esther mentioned this to Irene, also the suspicious fact that Joe and Jack were very eagerly suggesting that the girls invite their other girl friends in to an afternoon party on the 1st of April.

But Irene never thought much of boys' secrets, and refused to consider any possible coincidence between Uncle Will's ghost making his appearance on the 1st of April and the boys' party suggestion.

"If you had heard what I did," Irene would reply to her skeptical sister, "you would know that there is something queer in this house."

And so on the Monday afternoon two very excited little girls ran all the way home from school and hurriedly hung their hats on the hall rack. They were very much startled to hear a loud shriek, apparently from the cellar.

Irene turned pale, but she did not lose her courage.

"Come," she said, "he's down there already," and without waiting to take their schoolbags off their arms they hurried to the scene of action.

In fact, they were so flurried they even forgot directions, remembering only to fling the rug away from the centre of the room.

There, sure enough, their excited eyes saw a loose board, which Irene lifted up, and, the top step touching the very edge of the hole, the flight of steps was disclosed to view.

Esther, less daring, and, in fact, thoroughly frightened, looked about the room for some sign of a less ghostly presence, who might aid them in case Irene's ghost did not prove as friendly as Irene anticipated.

But the only sign she saw of any presence save their own was a light fluttering of the curtains between the rooms, and then a hand stealthily drawing those curtains back.

This was too much for Esther. She shrieked and tried to run away, but she caught her foot in the hole and in another moment found herself bumping down the flight of steps, which felt anything but ghostly, into the cellar, Irene being too startled to prevent her falling.

At the same moment Uncle Will stepped from behind the curtains and cried out gaily,

"April Fool!"

But when he advanced to the centre of the room and saw the hole and the flight of steps just as he had described it all to the twins, he felt as if the joke was on him, and he had to rub his eyes to make sure he was not dreaming.

STRUGGLING TO ESCAPE

In the meantime Esther was struggling to escape from two white-robed figures who had caught her as she fell, and Irene, seeing her plight, was shrieking desperately down the hole:

"By my halidome, I bid thee come up."

Uncle Will ran to the hole and, thrusting a threatening fist down it, yelled:

"I'll wallop you both good for this. Let her go."

"You can't wallop ghosts," remonstrated Irene, "and if you anger them by threats, they may make off with Esther."

Uncle Will looked at his niece in amazement. Even yet, apparently, she did not realize that she and Esther were the victims of two different and distinct April Fool jokes.

In fact, Irene was bending over the hole and with perfect good faith repeating the incantation Uncle Will had given her.

This time a ghostly voice replied:

"Marry we will, an the maid will stop struggling."

"Esther," cried Irene, "the ghosts won't harm you. Keep still and they will let you come up."

At this juncture, however, a dim light was seen at a far corner of the cellar, and in anything but a ghostly voice one of the white-robed figures muttered to the other: "Skiddoo for us. Here comes the furnace man."

Esther stopped struggling at once.

"Joe and Jack," she said, disgustedly; "I thought so."

"April Fool!" the boys managed to whisper before they fled for safety.

"Oh, oh, oh!" cried Irene in great disappointment, as she saw the ghostly figures disappear, leaving Esther to climb the steps alone, "where did they go? Will they come back?"

SCENTS TROUBLE

"Not if father catches them," panted Esther, as she neared the top of the ladder, "and if he sees the hole they've made in his hardwood floor there will be trouble."

Irene straightened herself up.

"Do you mean to tell me that those ghosts were only Joe and Jack with sheets over them?"

"Of course," replied Esther. "Don't you know this is April Fool's Day?"

"I had forgotten it," answered Irene, sadly. "And, Uncle Will," she turned upon him accusingly, "you told us to look for the ghosts here because you knew the boys had made that hole and were coming up today to scare us."

"No, honestly," replied Uncle Will, "I didn't know a thing about it; it was just a coincidence, that's all."

"Then—then—" hope renewed itself in Irene's childish heart—"there is a ghost?"

Uncle Will shook his head sadly. "There was," he emphasized, "but you know how easily insulted they are. I don't believe he'll ever come here again after the boys doing what they did today."

Uncle Will helped the boys replace the board they had taken out of the floor, the girls forgave them, and all of them bribed the maid to see that the rug was never removed from the centre of the room when father was around, and Irene soon forgot the April Fool joke the boys had played upon her. But she never walked over the centre of that floor without a thrill or without repeating the incantation Uncle Will had given her, "By my halidome, I bid thee come up."

But—the ghost never came.

Catches.

Try these catches on your friends:

1. Which is correct? To say 8 and 3 is 12, or 8 and 3 are 12? Neither, because 8 and 3 make 11.
2. How do you pronounce
   M-a-c-d-o-n-a-l-d?

   M-a-c-f-a-r-l-a-n-e?
   M-a-c-h-i-n-e-r-y?

Some one is nearly sure to say MacHinery for the last, but, of course, it's "machinery."

Although not new, these catches are always unfamiliar to somebody.

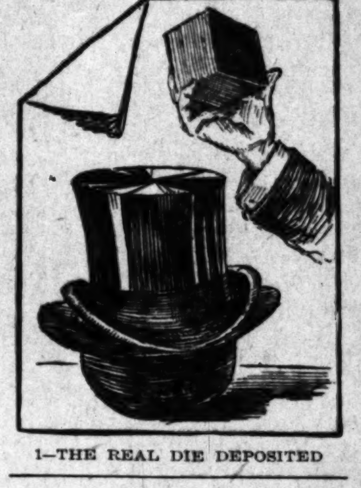
Magician's Hat Trick

THIS trick is simple enough, but it is not so easy to detect, after all.

All you need for it are the following articles: First a cube-shaped box with a cover that completely envelops it, highly polished and painted black, with the box part marked in imitation of a die (this is to be the false one of your two dice); then a real die, which looks precisely like the false one, and will exactly fill the inside of the box, and two hats.



1—THE REAL DIE DEPOSITED

Having first made sure you are ready to perform the trick, set a table in front of the company, several feet away from them, and set in it the two hats. Then produce your box, black and handsome, and set it on the topmost hat.

Remove the cover, leaving exposed on the hat the false die containing the real die.

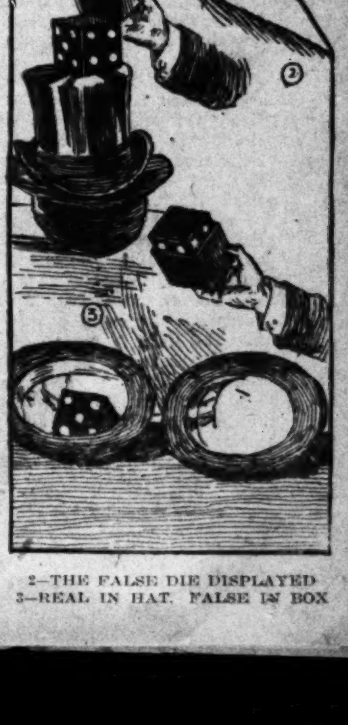
Rattle away in a happy conversational style, making all sorts of remarks, anything to keep their attention fixed on you rather than the box, and as you do so, clap your cover on, and lift up the whole thing off the topmost hat.

THE HARD PART

Then, still talking, bring it down on the hat again, and remove the cover again, but this time, pressing the edges slightly, carry away the real die in the cover, leaving only the false die on the hat. Your audience, sitting below the level of the die, will not see the difference.

Now, talking for all you are worth, go through a few unnecessary and meaningless flourishes, in the midst of which you should manage to move the top hat just enough to admit the real die into the hat below.

As soon as you think fit, announce to your audience that now they see the die on the top hat, but "now"—clapping your cover down over the false die, and removing it with a flourish, then displaying the bottom hat—"now, you see it in this hat."



2—THE FALSE DIE DISPLAYED
3—REAL IN HAT, FALSE IN BOX

Stevenson's Autograph

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, whose Treasure Island, Master of Ballantrae and other stories are dear to every boy's heart, had a great dislike for seeing his name misspelled, in such forms as Stephenson, etc.

Following is the letter he wrote to one of the numerous persons who asked the favor of his autograph:

"Vailima, Uphola, Samoa.

"You have sent me a slip to write on; you have sent me an addressed envelope; you have sent it to me stamped; many have done as much before. You have spelled my name right, and some have done that. In one point you stand alone—you have sent me the stamps for my post-office, not the stamps for yours. What is asked with so much consideration I take a pleasure to grant. Here, since you value it, and have been at the pains to earn it by such unusual attentions—here is the signature of

"ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

"For the one civil autograph collector, C—— R——."

Don't you suspect that "C. R." must have been a stamp enthusiast as well as an autograph collector? For it would occur to few others than philatelists to inclose Samoan stamps for a reply from Vailima.

A New Baby

NEXT time you visit a Zoo, ask them if they can show you a baby hippopotamus. The London Zoo has one.

He's such a quaint, big baby, with the pinkest of toes and legs and a fat, plum-colored, pudding-shaped body.

He's a dreadfully fat young man, this Master Hippo, with no less than four double chins, and he weighs about 180 pounds. I shouldn't like to have to carry him very far, would you? This baby hippopotamus has come all the way from Nigeria, in Africa, and he seems to have settled down quite happily in his new home.

There are quite a lot of baby animals just now at the various Zoos, so mind you look out for them the very next time you go—some of them are such pretty, interesting little creatures.

Easter and the Passover

Grinding Grain for Unleavened Bread in Asia Minor.

How the Seasons are Celebrated throughout the World ...

GROTTO of the Nativity at Bethlehem, desert home of the Bedouin nomad, primitive hut of the Asia Minor peasant, Christian church and Jewish synagogue the world over—to each of these places the spring religious season brings its special message, although known by different names and manifested in different ways.

About the Christian feast of the Resurrection, the ancient Passover of Zion and the Mohammedan Bairam, all occurring about the same time, common usage and tradition have woven the most picturesque customs of the year.

A strange sight, in view of the spirit of good will underlying the festival, is the practice in some European, South and Central American countries of burning effigies of Judas. Nor is it the Christian spirit of rejoicing, but, rather, a dread of pestilence, that influences the Bedouins to sprinkle their flocks with blood.

Sacrifices of live animals are still seen in some parts of the world at Easter time, although not to propitiate the Christian Deity; in other parts, the giving of alms on this one festival is supposed to cover the accumulated parsimony of the rest of the year.

That the principal festivals of at least three of the largest religious bodies in the world fall in the same period of the year is only a coincidence, but a remarkable one, since in all the celebrations is evident the "uplift" spirit of spring.

WHERE should one look for a proper observance of Easter if not in the Holy Land? There, one would suppose, would be kept intact that spirit of rejoicing that must have swept over the country when, to the inquiring women, the angel at the tomb replied, "He is risen; He is not here."

From the various picturesque incidents surrounding the great festival in the Church it would appear that Jerusalem has borrowed for its most elaborate ceremony that of the Pentacostal descent of tongues of fire upon the Apostles.

On this one day of the year there is real peace in Jerusalem. The Armenians become entirely friendly with the Greek Church Christians, who flock to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre for a joint celebration of Easter.

Not a light appears on the altar. Almost total darkness prevails. Suddenly, a clanging of silver bells, a single jet of light gleaming from the Chapel of the Angel, and all repeat softly, "God be praised; the sacred fire has fallen from heaven."

Those nearest rush to light their candles—every one carries a candle—at the sacred fire, and the light is passed on till throughout the church there is illumination from countless waxen points.

A courier hurries with the sacred light to the Grotto of the Nativity, where, upon its arrival, is a ceremony of rejoicing and praise. Another courier takes the light to Jaffa, where a Russian boat is waiting to convey it to Odessa, then to the cathedrals in St. Petersburg and Moscow and the imperial chapel.

If you could look in o the chapel a short time after this Easter, you would see Emperor Nicholas—the Czar whom half the world calls a despot—humbly kneeling there before the flame which had its birth where a new faith was given to the world on that first Easter day.

The Czar becomes an epitome of self-abasement at Easter. It is said that he enters into the Russian custom of kissing, and that each of his guards receives a royal kiss on the cheek.

Every one in Russia—that is, every believer—greets every other person met on Easter morning with the kiss of peace, saying, "The Lord is risen." To this the invariable response is, "He is risen, indeed."

Bedouins Sprinkling Camels and Flocks with Blood.

Almsgiving in Russia is a favorite way of observing Easter. The wealthy landlord on this day drops all that pompous dignity that characterizes the rest of the year, and goes outside his door with handfuls of coin, which he distributes among the poor of the neighborhood. At his side, usually, is his private patriarch, who blesses the generosity.

In Roumania a pretty Easter custom is the visiting of prisons by women of the better-class families, who distribute among the prisoners cakes stamped with the sign of the cross.

There, too, it is the custom of tenants to visit the landlord, which visit must always be taken as a surprise, although the custom has gone on time out of mind. They bring presents of poultry, eggs and fish, drink to the toast, "Rain in time" (for rain means crops and life to them), and then depart with their pockets bulging with silver for wives and children.

In Spain, in Portugal, in Mexico and throughout South America, Holy Saturday is enlivened by paying respects to Judas Iscariot. Hideous effigies of him are sold on the streets—some of them lifesize and others ranging down to doll-like images.

But they all fare alike; they are flogged, smashed and dragged in the dirt, then hung on wires stretched across the streets, and finally burned amid great rejoicing by the populace.

In Greece a priest carries around a cross bearing a small figure of Christ, which is placed in the centre of the nave of the church. After an interval several other priests, garbed in black, carry the body from the cross to a grave which has been made in an altar. The whole is covered with beautiful flowers, and then sprinkled with perfumes.

The worshipers then file past the grave and each one takes a flower, which is kept and zealously guarded in the home until the next Easter.

Commemorating the deliverance of the Jews from Egyptian bondage, and their preservation from the Angel of Death, that smote the Egyptian homes, the festival of the Passover was known as the Pesach. As it happened, the period of the Passion of Christ came within the celebration of the Jewish Passover.

The eight days of Passover begin on the fourteenth day of Nisan, Zionist calendar. The first two evenings are the Sedar nights, when the family gathering resolves itself into a love feast at which prayers are chanted by the master of the house, and every person present responds to the blessings by partaking of unleavened bread and bitter herbs.

The youngest child in the house then asks four questions, and the master replies by relating anew the story of the deliverance. The last two days are also observed strictly, while the intervening four days are termed "half holidays." In orthodox homes, new tins, dishes, knives and forks are used during this period.

In order that all may properly observe the Passover, it is customary in large cities to distribute matzoth (unleavened bread), Passover wine, food and new dishes to the poor.

In the furnishing of the Passover wine, an interesting custom is generally observed. It must be drawn from the cask and placed in bottles in the presence of a rabbi, who seals every flask with wax to attest its genuineness.

There is one place where, one may imagine, the unleavened bread is made much after the manner of that early time when the Jews fled from the Egyptians. This is in Asia Minor, where some of the people are very primitive in their customs. The earthen dish in which the bread is to be baked over a fire of twigs on the ground, is cleansed so that not a particle of the old leaven remains in it.

The Mohammedan feast of Bairam also occurs at the Easter season. Sheep are sacrificed for the great festival.

Associated with the Jewish festival of the Passover, there was, formerly, a rite of propitiation during pestilence. It consisted in sprinkling with blood the entrance to the house, or tent.

Even today the Bedouins sprinkle their camels and flocks with blood as a protection against disease.

A Little Brass Ring.

THE STORY OF LYDIA AND HER MANY LOVERS.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

"But, my dear Lydia," said I, mildly, "if you insist on having several strings to your bow, you mustn't be surprised if you have entanglements."

"I wish you would speak plainly," she retorted, with some petulance.

"Well, then, if you will flirt with half a dozen fellows, you—"

"How dare you?" she cried indignantly.

"You asked me to speak plainly, Lydia."

"And you were impertinent and horribly—untruthful. Half a dozen fellows. Oh, how dare you?"

"I believe there are only six. Pray forgive me."

"Oh, you insulting thing."

"Well, there may be more that I don't know about. Still, six is plenty to be ashamed of."

"I'm not ashamed. I haven't done anything to be ashamed of. I wish you would go away."

"But you asked me to come in and have a cup of tea. Where is the tea?" I demanded.

"You're the cheekiest boy I ever met," she remarked, smiling grudgingly. "I'm so sorry mother isn't in."

"I'm not going to be violent," I assured her.

"Fudge. You know quite well I could get one of the maids to put you out. So behave."

"I've been put out enough already this week," I returned. "I had a visit from Bill Carraway on Tuesday night."

"Oh," said Lydia.

"He was looking uncommon seedy."

"Oh," said Lydia again.

"He's going off to Western Australia on Saturday."

"Oh," said Lydia a third time.

"Do you know why, Lydia?"

"How should I know? . . . He's a nice boy," she murmured.

"Yes; but he found he wasn't nice enough—for you, Lydia. He told me all about it."

"The wretched creature."

"That just describes him, poor chap. However, he's so bad at present that I fancy he'll soon get over it. It's queer how fellows come and tell me of their troubles in connection with you, Lydia," I remarked musingly.

"It's simply horrid."

"I suppose it's because I'm a sympathetic sort of being and have known you so long."

"Indeed."

"I often wonder, though, what they would think if they knew that you and I had once been engaged."

"Rubbish, Paul."

"Oh, but we were. I've still got the ring you returned to me, though I burned the letters."

"The ring came out of Aunt Mary's wedding cake," said Lydia, laughing a little. "What sillies we were, Paul. Why, you hadn't left school."

"I was 17 when the engagement was broken off. Do you remember why we quarreled?"

"N—no," said Lydia, blushing.

"You do remember. You were fond of climbing trees, and I forbade you. And as you refused to climb down, so to speak, we parted, after you had shied the ring at me. So all was over between us, Lydia."

"How foolish it was!"

"You can therefore understand how sympathetic I feel towards fellows who love in vain. I had a painful interview," I went on, "with another of your—a—victims yesterday."

"Oh, talk about something else."

"I've nothing else to talk about. I met him at the club. He had been drinking heavily—"

"Paul!"

"And his first remark was to the effect that nine calls in an afternoon meant more tea-drinking than was good for man or beast. Talking of tea, when is mine coming?"

"Immediately, I am thankful to say."

"Are you thirsty, too?"

"No; I'm longing for you to go away. Here's Jane at last."

When we were alone again I resumed: "Well, Lydia, I was going to tell you about the fellow I met at the club."

"Pray don't trouble yourself."

"The calls he had been making were farewell ones, because he is going away also. He mentioned that he had asked you to go with him. He seems to have got a decent appointment in Canada."

"I never thought that Freddy Brown would have breathed—"

"His voice was a trifle husky, but perhaps it was the tea. Another piece of sugar, please. . . . Thanks. Well, Brown didn't blame you, Lydia."

"Poor boy!"

"He only said you were a heartless little flirt, and—"

"I can assure you, Paul, that he never had any encouragement from me. I couldn't bear him."

"Somehow, I always had an idea that you liked him—not so well, perhaps as Murray or Anderson, or Meredith, or—"

"You're awfully mean! Have you finished your tea?"

"Yes, thank you. Just ready for my second cup, Lydia. But about Brown—"

"If you say another word about Brown, or anybody else, I'll leave you. Indeed, I will! What right have you to discuss—a—these sort of things?"

"Three lumps, Lydia. What right, did you say? The right—ahem! of a rejected lover!"

"Fiddlesticks! Take your tea, and be quick."

"Here's hospitality!" said I, taking the cup from her. "Do you treat all your male friends like this, Lydia?"

"No; I treat them as gentlemen," she retorted.

"You mean?" I asked, stung by her tone.

"I mean that none of my male friends, as you call them, would talk as you have done."

"No; each would talk about himself, I suppose. You have an unfortunate way of making men conceited for a week or two, Lydia."

"Oh!"

"And I'm getting rather tired of meeting fellows whom you have lifted into the seventh heaven and then dropped. Please let me go on—I've nearly finished. If I'm not speaking the truth you can contradict me afterwards. I've had this bottled up for months, and I can keep it no longer. I can't stand hearing men calling you a flirt. It's horrible to me, who have known you and been friendly with you nearly all your life. I wish to goodness you had a brother, or a—a husband. You—"

She interrupted me by rising suddenly and facing me. Her eyes were very bright, but her face was pale. "Hadn't you better go now?" she said, coldly.

I put down my cup and rose. "You won't listen to me, Lydia?" I said, sadly.

"My patience is rather limited, and your—er—conversation is rather dull."

"And your conscience?"

"Is none of your business."

We looked at one another, and at last her eyes dropped.

"I'll go, Lydia," I said, with an effort. "And I won't interfere again. In fact, I won't meet you again, if I can help it."

"Very well," she murmured.

I turned from her without even a formal farewell; but, at the door a queer idea occurred to me, and I retraced my steps. She was standing by the hearth, looking into the fire, as I detached something from the end of my watch chain and slipped it into her hand.

"What's this?" she exclaimed.

"A relic of your first flirtation," I replied. "As you can see, the gilt is off it. Put it in the fire. I've often intended to do so, but always lacked the courage."

For a moment she bent over the little brass ring with its glass and tinsel ruby. "It used to be too big for me," she whispered, as if to herself.

"Yes; I remember it came off very easily," I muttered, and somehow I sighed.

She glanced up at me, and looked down again.

"Put it in the fire and I'll get away," said I.

She gave a queer little laugh. "It slipped on to my finger just now—so silly of it!—and I can't get it off."

"Let me see it."

She held up her left hand, and I saw the glass ruby winking freely on the third finger.

"Let me try, Lydia," I whispered softly, in spite of myself. And she laughed again, and gave me her hand. But the ring was tight and could not be removed without hurting her.

"Won't it come off?" she asked quietly.

"I don't want to hurt you."

"Don't you?" she said dreamily. And then, "Oh, Paul, Paul!" she cried. "Why did you give it to me?"

"Lydia!"

"It makes me remember——"

"What, Lydia?"

"Oh, just everything worth remembering. . . . Paul, you mustn't kiss my hands, you mustn't—oh, let me go!"

She moved a little away from me and leant her arms on the mantelpiece and hid her face. For a long time, as it seemed, there was silence in the room.

"Lydia," I whispered at last, "you've found me out. What am I to do?"

I had to wait for my answer, but it came. She did not lift her head, but she stretched her hand towards me, and when we were close together she sighed, "Let me keep the ring, Paul."

GIFTS FOR DOGS.

Gold and Silver Jewelry for Canine Pets in Paris and London—Also Expensive Clothes.

[New York Sun:] The ordinary person who casually hears of sable coats, diamond bracelets, gold collars, and other extravagances lavished upon pet dogs, is apt to dismiss such stories as grotesque inventions. But this is a taste which appeals to many women, French women especially.

Paris is put at the head of the list where such extravagances are indulged in because just as there are houses like Worth, Paquin, Doucet and Felix, to which women the world over go for their frocks and frills, so also in the Palais Royal and other quarters of the city you will find establishments which make a specialty of absurd fittings for dogs.

London has a Dogs' Toilet Club, and here men servants are in attendance to wash the pets with costly soaps, see to their teeth, and if necessary to clip their mistresses' crests and coats of arms in the long hair of the poodles. Associated with a club of this kind are several fashionable canine veterinarians, any one of whom makes an income that the average doctor might well envy.

Extravagance begins with the cost of the pet. In Paris a fashoinable dealer will think little of asking $2000 for a thoroughbred terrier. One dealer has just sold to a Philadelphia woman a pair of pure white Pomeranians of the muff variety, weighing but three pounds each. He refused to separate them, and the price of the pair was $800.

The dog once purchased, its mistress can go to a canine fashion house and choose gorgeous silks and satins, furs and jewels, booths and shoes for her pet, with card cases, handkerchiefs and other luxuries.

On the first floor above the magnificent reception rooms of one Paris establishment you will find rows of sewing machines driven by electric motors, and before each is seated a light-fingered girl who is turning out all manner of garments for every conceivable occasion. There are morning, afternoon and evening coats, mourning outfits, with traveling and wedding dresses. These last come in white brocade with sprigs of orange blossom, and are worn by the pet when it is led with white silken cords to some wedding to which its mistress is invited.

On tables and in show cases in the reception-room you will see dummy dogs, each bearing some garment whose effect can be judged, just as a woman judges her own frocks on the figures of living mannequins round the corner in Felix's. There are coats in scarlet silk and velvet with elaborate collars, there are motor goggles to protect the eyes, foot warmers, traveling coats with pockets for ticket and biscuit, yachting costumes in navy broadcloth lined with quilted satin and neatly marked with an anchor and the yacht's name.

Some of the dresses are trimmed with sable, chinchilla, ermine, and mink, and both fur and color probably match the mistress' own frock or the hue of carriage and livery. There is one great "Tailleur pour chiens" in Paris, who charges $25 for a simple canine coat, and this house publishes a regular fashion book of "Couvertures de luxe pour chiens." The pictures are lithographed in many colors upon ivory white paper, and there is every evidence in the establishment that money without stint is there spent.

You will see pictures of winter visiting costumes with big upstanding Medici colars of Persian lamb, and arrays of comic lingerie, lace handkerchiefs, dressing gowns, and robes de nuit in fine batiste, leaving uncovered both paws and tail.

A recent visitor was shown a yellow satin coat trimmed in Honiton lace at $55 which was made for an Irish terrier no less than seventeen years old. A novelty was a fine cloth coat lined with Russian sable, with a little electric heater lest the pet should suffer from cold when out motoring.

At London shops you will find similar extravagances in the form of traveling kennels, which are in reality handbags of cowhide or crocodile, heavily mounted in gold or silver, skillfully ventilated, and lined with lambswool. The whole of one side is covered with a heavy grille of silver wire. Above this grille is rolled a leather flap, which can be let down at the dog's bedtime or when the sun is too strong.

You might think all this was grotesque enough, but it goes much further in the form of gold and gem jewelry. You will find such things as a crimson velvet bow with a diamond buckle worth $250 in its center. There are even combs and brushes for canine toilet tables, specially designed and bearing the pet's initial in thin letters of gold on tortoise shell.

You will find drawing-room lounging baskets for dogs, made of light wickerwork and lined with sky blue or mauve plush, or even sealskin. For wet days there are rubber boots and shoes; but it is only fair to say the pets have hitherto strongly objected to such gear and prefer to run through the wet streets as nature intended them to, even at the risk of spoiling carriage wraps and carpets at home.

Many dogs in Paris are provided with gold and silver card cases, and cards are left by footmen or mistresses with entire gravity. In Paris, too, you will see the dogs with gold and diamond bracelets on their legs, and collars and couples also in precious metal.

London veterinaries can tell surprising stories about dogs. There was a poodle for which a prime leg of lamb was roasted every day; and there were other pets which when taken into the custody of the veterinary were visited every day by their owners in carriages, whose footmen would get down from the box and hand in partridge breasts and other dainties on silver dishes for the sick dog.

Old Noble, Queen Victoria's favorite collie, was often taken in as a patient by one veterinary, and found to be suffering from overfeeding. It would frequently eat a whole roast pheasant, and the wonder is that it lived so long.

A veterinary once got a telegram from Oxford to go down instantly and treat a pet dog that had fallen downstairs and broken its leg. But the veterinary had to wire that the last train had gone, whereupon another message came: "Take special." And he did, at a cost of $160.

LENTEN WORK.

Preparation of the Summer Gowns That Can as Well Be Done in Winter.

[New York Sun:] A number of young society women who have not money in abundance to spend upon their clothes are "smocking" this Lent, and intend to appear in the spring and summer in smocked gowns quite as beautiful as those commanding high prices. The "smockers" as they call themselves meet once a week.

"It's perfectly delightful fancy work," one explains, "and the joke of it is it isn't half as hard as it looks. It isn't hard at all. I do not think it is the work itself that frightens people off from attempting it, but the want of knowledge of how to cut out the gown to allow for smocking and of how to mark for it.

"We found a woman who understood all about this. We engaged her to cut out our gowns and mark them and set us going. The cost of this was comparatively slight for each. We found we liked to work so much that we did a lot of it at home in between times. When our smocking part is done we shall hand over our gowns to our instructor to put together for us.

"All of us in the class are tall and splender, the figure that I think the smocked gown is most becoming to. One has to have a slender waist to stand smocking around it. A waist that is not slender looks bunchy and queer in this novel sort of girdle.

"Smocking is still a novelty over here. It has been popular in London for a long time. My gown is a violet rajah silk. It has a deep rounded yoke and high standing collar in smocking. The smocking about the waist is done in a series of deep points running up the waist and down over the hips. Smocking forms a deep cuff from wrist to elbow. Of course there is not so much work to be done on gowns with Dutch necks and elbow sleeves.

"One of our class is doing a lovely rose satin afternoon gown. This has a lace Dutch yoke which is edged about with just a few lines of smocking."

A Dainty Room in Rose and Gray.

A girl's room, whether it be a sitting-room, a bedroom, or a combination of the two, should above all things be dainty. For daintiness is one of the sweetest attributes of womanhood, and a room should reflect the character of its habitant.

That a room may be successful in its appearance, it is absolutely necessary that harmony of color and form should exist throughout its appointments, the harmony of color being the more important, as it is the quicker to appeal to us. It is useless to fill a room with pretty things if they do not help the general effect, and no matter how plain and simple the materials used, if they bring into existence harmony the room will be a success and a delight to its occupants.

The room described by Arthur E. Gleed in The Home Magazine for March was one in which daintiness and distinguished taste appeals to one. The harmony of color was in silver grays and shades of rose. The harmony of form was in the woodwork being plain and undecorated, except for the shaped perforations on all the uprights, which at once suggested either a heart or a rose petal. The rose motif was used throughout, whether it was applique work, stenciling or painted panels, and the result was pleasing in the extreme.

In decorating this room the ceiling was first calcimined with a wash having a slight flush of pink in it, just sufficient to give a warm glow and no more. The walls were then tinted a pale silver gray from the ceiling to within three feet of the floor. Below this was a dado of plain gray burlap a shade deeper than the walls, and finished along the top with a molding with sufficient projection to form a shelf for small pictures and photographs.

Where Shopmen Love Haggling.

To achieve a successful day's shopping in the East, in the bazaars, say, of Constantinople, you do not require a long purse so much as an inexhaustible stock of patience and the certain knowledge that, unless you wish to pay an enormous amount more than you should do, you will have to waste a large proportion of your time in bargaining.

Nor is that all. There are tricks in every trade, and there are certain set tricks that are the recognized stock-in-trade of every shopper in eastern marts.

One thing you can always be sure of. If you leave the matter of price to the owner of the shop he will always ask you at least treble what he expects to get, and that even in places where "fixed price" is ostentatiously displayed.

In England you walk into a shop; a suave shopwalker advances, asks you "your pleasure," and leads you to wherever you may wish to go. Then goods are displayed before you, and you make your selection, and if you don't like a thing you are at perfect liberty to say so.

The Mussulman trader has a very different way of doing things.

Say you enter a bazaar. A turbaned old fellow will be sitting there, as likely as not smoking a hubble-bubble. He will salute you politely, and come forward to hear your pleasure.

A little jeweled ornament may strike your fancy. You pick it up and signify your approval and admiration. Watch your would-be seller's face. You will probably notice that, contrary to your approval evoking an answering appreciation from him, he looks somewhat glum.

You wonder, maybe, how much you had better offer him for the trifle. Suddenly your gaze is attracted by a fine piece of pottery on a tray. Instantly you approach this, and, picking it up once more, show your evident appreciation.

You will only see the gloom on your merchant's face deepen. Admire something else in the same way, and he will probably resume his hubble-bubble and his seat in obvious dudgeon.

Why? Unconsciously, you have been expressing the fact that you have not come there to bargain, but merely to have a look around, that you do not want to buy anything. Had you so wished, your behavior would have been far different.

You would have picked up the jeweled ornament with a contemptuous gesture, would have asked the shopman what he meant by selling such rubbish, would have avowed that you had never seen such gimcrack ware. Then his glumness would have vanished. He would have entered into the spirt of the game immediately, would have avowed that the thing was worth 200 piastres, would have ended by accepting 60 piastres for it.

And had you offered him eventually 50 piastres for the thing, he would have sworn in the most picturesque manner possible that he would rather fling himself into the Bosphorus than accept so ridiculous a sum. Thereupon you would have promptly made as though you meant to leave the shop, and he would have taken your bid.

That is how you shop in the East. It is not likely that the same method will ever catch on in our London stores.—[Pearson's Weekly.

Nelly.

WHAT HAPPENED IN THE WAITING ROOM AT THE BIG STATION.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

The notes of a popular song echoed sentimentally through the big station waiting-room. With one accord the despondent occupants of the benches turned to look in the direction whence it came. A young man had entered at the south door and was making his way across the floor. His clothes were those of the well-to-do mechanic; over his shoulder was slung a canvas bag of tools. Behind him came a colored porter bearing a step ladder.

The young man paused beneath the big station clock and glanced up at the dial. The hands pointed to 3, in open disregard of the fact that the afternoon sun was streaming in through the western windows. "Darn thing's taken to going two hours fast a day," explained the porter.

"Put the ladder here," said the young man, "and we'll soon see what's gone wrong." Still carolling, he mounted and began observations.

It still wanted three-quarters of an hour to the departure of the New York express, when a girl entered. She glanced round the room, then crossed over to the full length mirror, which hung on one of the walls. After a critical survey of herself she opened a satchel and drew out a hand-glass, a comb and a perforated chamois powder bag. Raising her spotted veil she combed to a still greater height her already exaggerated pompadour, readjusted the angle of her hat, carefully powdered her face and studied in the hand-glass the result of her operations. Finally satisfied, she pulled down her veil, returned the toilet articles to the bag, and shut it with a snap. She smoothed down her jacket, hitched out of place by the raising of her arms; and then, shoulders well back, and with an exaggeration of the fashionable gait, she haughtily strolled to an empty bench and seated herself.

The clockmaker had finished his job to his liking, and was stowing away his instruments, preparatory to descending the ladder. At the sound of his singing the girl started, and looked nervously round.

"Jim!" she murmured incredulously. Then, after a moment's hesitation, rose and stealthily moved to a bench directly in front of the clock.

He caught sight of the girl and paused abruptly.

The girl was elaborately gazing in a direction away from the clock, and had assumed a pose calculated to show at once the lines of her figure and the abstraction of her mind.

"Nelly," said the clockmarker, standing humbly before her. "Nelly"—Slowly she forced her thoughts and her eye from the far distance, and looked him up and down. For a moment a little bewildered frown drew her neat eyebrows together, then a smile of enlightenment brought a dimple into play.

"Why, if it isn't Jim Morris," she exclaimed.

"I came to fix the clock," he explained. "I'm a clockmaker, you know. But I suppose you've forgotten that as well as everything else."

"I've such a lot of gentlemen friends," she apologized "and it's so long—"

"It's only three months," said the young man, reproachfully. "I suppose," he went on dejectedly, as he sank onto the bench, "I suppose you're awfully mad with me?"

"Why, Mr. Morris, the idea."

"Of course, I ought to have known any one as pretty as you was bound to have more fellows than one," he continued, "and I oughtn't to have chewed the rag when I saw you playing up to Michael Donovan, and swallowing his compliments as if they were 'Huyler's best,' but"—his voice grew choky—"you don't know, Nelly, how a chap feels when he loves a girl. Why, he'll plan for hours how to bring one kind look to her eyes, and he'll hug himself for days remembering a smile—and then when he sees her looking up at another man, and blushing and dimpling the way he's come to believe she only does for him—why it's awful—that's what it is," and he brought his hand so violently down on the bench that his tools were set a jingling. "But even if I was jealous," he went on, "that wasn't any reason I should have acted the way I did. Insulted you by refusing to take your word when you swore that you meant nothing—left you alone at the picnic to get home any old way you could, and gone off and sulked for three months. I don't deserve you should forgive me, and that's a fact."

"I'm sure I forgave you long ago," interrupted the girl softly.

"Nelly," incredulously. "But what are you doing at the station? Not going away? I couldn't stand for that, you know, now I've got you again."

"I am going to New York."

"And so it's because you're going to New York that you are so fine, and look so pretty."

"Do you like my things?" she asked, eagerly. "Do I look pretty, really and truly?"

"Your things are up in G, and you're as pretty as a picture, Nelly. But what's the use of words? If all these people weren't here I'd show you what I think of you. What are you going to do in New York?"

She looked at him sideways. "I am going," she said slowly, "I am going to be married to Michael."

He gave a gasp. "That's not true," he cried. She shrugged her shoulders. "Nelly," he besought, "forgive me. I shouldn't have said that, but you gave me a fright. I know it isn't true. I know you're just teasing me. But I've lost my nerve and I can't stand for it. Say you don't mean it."

"What's the use of my saying anything" she asked him, "when you think I'm not telling you the truth? I'm going to marry Michael Donovan. For two years I was straight to you and put up with your jealousies and tempers, and turned down lots of better men because—well, because I was silly about you. But when you threw me off and left me to be a public laughing stock, did you think I was going to put on sack cloth and ashes, till you got good and ready to come back to me? Not much!"

"You needn't say any more," interrupted the man. "I quite understand, Miss McCullough. Well, I hope you'll be happy and have lots of good luck." He lifted his hat with awkward dignity, and turning on his heel, marched toward the door.

The girl watched his retreating form with frightened eyes, then "Jim," she called, almost under her breath, "Jim." He heard her and came striding back.

"Well?" he demanded.

"I—I didn't speak," she stammered.

"I beg your pardon, I thought you did. Oh, Nelly," he cried, "you can't mean to do this thing. If Michael were a decent sort I'd not have a word to say. But he isn't. Why, he hasn't a friend in the world. It was knowing the things I do about him that made me so riled when I saw him hanging around you. Nelly, even if it's all over now, I ask you, please wait!"

The girl gazed at him spellbound, her hands nervously opening and closing.

"Why, Nelly," with a sudden joyful conviction, "I believe you love me still."

"Oh, Jim," she sobbed, "I do—I do. But I've given Michael my word, and I'll have to keep it."

"Why, look here, Nelly," he pleaded, "if it's a question of keeping promises, you promised me long before you promised Michael, and it's the first promise that holds in law, you know."

"East-bound express, stopping at Hudson, Poughkeepsie and New York," chanted the station official. The girl made to rise to her feet, but the clockmaker's arm drew her back.

"Sweetheart," he whispered, "you don't want to go and marry Michael, do you?"

"No," said the girl, "I don't want to marry Michael, but—"

"But what?"

"Well, you see," she explained, "it's like this: I told all the girls at the store that I was going to get married, and about my trip to New York, and if I go back and tell them there wasn't any wedding, and there wasn't any trip, why they'll josh me to death. Jim—it's dreadful for me to say it—but you love me, don't you, Jim? Let's go away to New York, you and me, now, and let us get married. Then they couldn't throw anything up to me."

"But, Nelly," he protested, taken aback, "what would the boss say if I went off at a moment's notice that way?"

"I guess he'd say nothing, seeing you went to be married."

"Look at my clothes," he cried. "And, sweetheart, I haven't the money to buy a ticket, let alone to get married with."

"I've got the money, Jim," she whispered, "$50 I've saved."

"Nelly," he said, desperately, "I can't take your money like that. I'd be a regular sponge."

"East-bound express, stopping at Hudson, Poughkeepsie and New York. All aboard," called the official with a tone of finality.

"Oh, well," the girl acquiesced, "I don't wonder after the way I've behaved that you don't want to marry me."

"Not want to marry you," cried the clockmaker, "not want—hold on there," he shouted to the gateman, "we're going." Thrusting his arm thorough the girl's, they ran together toward the closing wicket.

Hair Care.

The hair will always grow and thrive if it receives proper attention, for ill health is absolutely the only thing that makes the crowning glory unmanageable and hopeless looking.

"While there's a hair there's hope" isn't a bad adage for the woman whose hair looks lifeless and comes out by the handful.

The only thing to do when the hair fails to respond to home treatment is to go to a good hair specialist and take scalp treatments, consisting of massage and electric brushing.

Then when it is again in good condition to take thorough care of it. A tonic that will stimulate the growth and that may be used nightly is made of half an ounce of tincture of cantharides, seven ounces of listerine and one dram of bisulphate of quinine.

The use of this tonic, with constant brushing and a shampoo every two or three weeks should keep in good condition the most fractious head of hair that ever bothered a woman.

Don't get too enthusiastic, however, and try to make up for past neglects by washing the hair too often, for too frequent shampooing exhausts the nutritive elements of the glands.

Never, under any circumstances, disturb dandruff by the use of a fine comb, even if your mother and your grandmother did think it invaluable. The growth will only increase as the skin or scalp is irritated and bruised.

A Formal Dinner Party in Paris.

Every one knows his stage position and his cue; and every hostess knows that part of her duty is to indicate and to give them. Perhaps the most characteristic instance of the way in which this affects social conduct is what generally happens at a dinner party. Instead of sitting at the ends of the table, where they are far apart, the host and the hostess sit opposite one another in the middle, where the table is narowest, and where they are able at once to keep in touch with each other, and easily to talk with three guests on either side of each. Thus a company of twelve is at once brought into a single social group, and the outlying members of a larger party are not so far away that they cannot readily listen to the general talk, or even take part in it. And the talk is always general—addressed, no doubt, to one or another of the company, as the tact of the hosts happens to find pleasantest; but never broken into a system of separate confidential dialogues, as is generally the case at home. A French dinner is not noisy, any more than is a French drawing-room, but in either case, the deeply subdued tone of voice prevalent in England and among the better sort of Americans would be almost a breach of polite manners. Every social function in France, even to the most informal, has a social character far more pronounced than ours. The individual is there to enjoy himself; but he is also there to play his part. In consequence, all social intercourse in France has a quality less personal, less confidential, somewhat more reserved than an American is used to. Whoever, even in private places, finds himself in the presence of fellow-beings, conducts himself in many ways as if he were in public. The French are in no way conscious of this phase of their manners. It is as normal to them as it is novel to an American visitor. And it results in a general and cheerful, though not quite intimate conviviality which makes our own manners seem, in contrast, somewhat melancholy in their dual isolation.—[Prof. Barrett Wendell, in the April Scribner.

DRESS WORSHIP.

How It Undermines a Woman's Moral Health and Makes Her Ridiculous.

[Manchester Chronicle:] "Is she a nice woman?"

"Oh, I don't know—perhaps she may be, but her clothes! Oh! my dear, garments like that would extinguish anybody's niceness."

This was what a girl said to me, and her response was merely an evidence of how half the idle women of England worship at the shrine of dress!

Absolutely, talent, charm, and beauty rank to them as less than nothing at all if clothes are not quite exquisite, quite smart, and quite fashionable!

I have heard these dress-worshipers actually drop their voices into a reverent whisper, far more reverent than if they were speaking in church, when discussing the cut of a French model, and I have seen them turn away almost with a shudder when called upon to exchange courtesies with a dowdy member of their own sex.

To be, "dowdy!" Why, it is far, far more forgivable to be vulgar—scheming—immoral—than to be dowdy!

Aristocratic mansions are big enough to welcome cashmeres and velvets alike, provided that the wearers are desirable acquisitions to a visiting-list, but there are many upper middle-class houses in which the mistress holds a despotic government, where none but the very newest and smartest frocks gain admittance.

A woman may be a sparkling conversationalist, a brilliant musician, or a delightful social acquisition in every way, but if her clothes are not the dernier cri she is only received in the most friendly seclusion—if she is received at all!

It is infamous to think that such a condition of things should exist in these days of feminine enlightenment, but the fact remains that no squaw or cannibal king's bride (whose sole life-interest it is to vie with her female neighbors in the lavish adornment of beads and feathers) is less empty-headed than some English women who make a complete fetish of clothes.

I have an acquaintance who, on leaving a theater, will judge the merits of the play solely by the success of the dresses, and who, while listening to Melba, ponders gravely upon where the diva gets her frocks.

She will go over-dressed to every function she attends, and the smallest outing is made an excuse for appearing en grande toilette, with the result that even at dressy resorts she is frequently the most dressy person present.

I shall never forget when she and I were invited to lunch at a certain very smart and exclusive woman's club. We met at our local station, and as we greeted each other Ida's blue eyes grew round with consternation.

"My dear!" she gasped, looking at my black cloth tailor-made costume, "why ever didn't you put on your velours, or something less suitable for a morning's shopping?"

"Because, my darling," I replied, determined to out-do her in affection, if not in dress, "I don't want to look as if I were forced to seize every available opportunity for wearing 'my best'—even though such may be the case. I shall be all right."

Ida merely hitched up the train of her 18-guinea mauve panne gown and would have looked resigned if, being so much encumbered by material, she hadn't dropped purse, hand-bag, and the contents of both. I picked them all up.

When we reached the club, pages and attendants looked at the mauve panne gown in the dull unseeing way which well-trained servants adoptt when they are especially amused; and as Ida swept through the entrance hall lounging members and guests raised their lorgnettes, or stared without them.

Our hostess greeted us with that overdone cordiality which markso momentary embarrassment, and then introduced us to half a dozen women whose furs were costly and clothes perfectly cut, but who all wore dark simple gowns or tailor-made costumes.

Afterward Ida alluded to them all as "dowdy frumps," and the next day went to see over a hospital clad in vieux rose velvet with gold-embroidered vest and trimmings.

Nothing would cure her.

To be a really nice human daughter of Eve every woman is bound to give as much care, thought, and money to dress as her circumstances permit.

She should take real pleasure in becoming hats and gowns, and if any garment isn't satisfactory she should have it altered till it is. She should most carefully choose colors and materials to best suit her own special style, and she should take pains to see that on every occasion she is as suitably arrayed as her circumstances permit.

But that is all.

She should not let the dress mania take hold of her in so firm a grip that it becomes an absolute disease, whose germs spread poison wherever she goes—for nothing so quickly leads to emulation and extravagance among women as example.

Perhaps the wife of a satisfactorily prosperous professional business man may be perfectly content with her own well-assorted selection of gowns, hats and fal-lals, till suddenly she becomes chummy with one of these dress maniacs.

From that time her justifiable contentment comes to an end.

She thinks the new white satin looks second-rate, she recollects that the breadth of sleeves has slightly altered since the violet voile was made, while a hundred other defects and needs all rise up to demand the expenditure of more money.

She spends it, then directly she feels she really has got her wardrobe almost fit for competition with her new friend, the dress maniac buys half a dozen more frocks, because she "was really without a decent rag to appear in."

And then, of course, the discontented wife has to begin all over again.

Once I interviewed a very famous authoress who, strange to relate, is smart as well as clever. The object of the interview was to gain her opinions on dress for a much-glazed ladies' paper, and when I asked how much she considered a woman must spend to be nicely turned out on most occasions, her reply rather made me feel that I had no right to live except hidden in some underground cell.

"Well," she answered, after [illegible] deliberation, "I should [illegible] woman could contrive to make [illegible] presentable with a dress allowance [illegible] less than £600 per annum."

We all know that the society [illegible] whose real business it is to [illegible] the show and display suitable [illegible] station, can easily and [illegible] sibly spend this amount [illegible] redoubled on her clothes; but [illegible] that it is impossible to be nicely [illegible] out on a sum that often feeds [illegible] and houses two or three families, [illegible] it just makes one feel inclined to [illegible] away from one's own sex.

DEVASTATING MICROBE[illegible]

Then, again, there is an [illegible] unjustifiable class of womankind [illegible] never takes the least pains over [illegible] interest in, sartorial matters, and [illegible] belong to such a class is a [illegible] pity.

It is an obligation to be as much [illegible] credit to oneself and to one's [illegible] as possible. Nothing is more [illegible] siderate than to attend a smart [illegible] gowned in a conspicuously dowdy [illegible] ion; but there is a medium [illegible] things, and that medium comes [illegible] the frock becomes the standard of [illegible] woman.

Surely it is a positive duty to [illegible] press the dress-maniac whenever [illegible] meet her. She is responsible for [illegible] misappropriated trust moneys and public funds, more bankrupt [illegible] and more general debt and [illegible] than any one would imagine.

She is a pest, a scourge, and drastic measures should be adopted to [illegible] out the bacilli of her [illegible] ease; and let any woman [illegible] herself being inoculated [illegible] lent serum of a dress-[illegible] ery antidote she can [illegible] hands to reach.

There are many antidotes [illegible] tion—ambition to do, or to [illegible] of use in the world—is among the [illegible] efficacious.

The Etiquette of Calling [illegible]

You leave your card at the [illegible] the person to whom you desire to present yourself, and there it is [illegible] charge by that peculiarly French [illegible] tionary—the concierge. As in [illegible] Paris, the greater part of French [illegible] live in large houses, containing a number of apartments with a common [illegible] trance and staircase. Close to the [illegible] trance door, on the level of the [illegible] are some stuffy little rooms [illegible] by the concierge—or porter—and [illegible] family. Their duty, among other [illegible] is to keep strict watch [illegible] goes in or out; and at least one of [illegible] often the porter's wife or [illegible] daughter is always at hand. [illegible] peculiarity of their temperament [illegible] to be insatiable appetite [illegible] ever hour of day or evening [illegible] on a concierge, you are sure to [illegible] somebody eating or just [illegible] table; and the atmosphere [illegible] this bustling personage [illegible] tally laden with the fumes of [illegible] recently boiled. No [illegible] you call on a friend who [illegible] unpretentious, out-of-the-way [illegible] on one who inhabits [illegible] palace, the concierge is [illegible] the same. You can [illegible] ference between those [illegible] important doors and [illegible] they are as like as [illegible] course, there are private [illegible] Paris, with regular [illegible] such as you would find [illegible] these, grand or simple, [illegible] that you remember the [illegible] erywhere standing between [illegible] further human intercourse.

In response to your [illegible] concierge duly sees [illegible] card, often with a note [illegible] as is generally the case, [illegible] edgement of your existence [illegible] intimation of when your [illegible] quaintance may be found [illegible] either habitual or for your [illegible] ut, you make your second [illegible] appointed time; and [illegible] real personal relations [illegible] your intercourse has [illegible] a polite exchange of cards [illegible] speaking, you never expect [illegible] to see French people [illegible] when they have asked you [illegible] their regular days of reception [illegible] made a definite appointment [illegible] in person at any other time [illegible] more than leave your card [illegible] concierge—would be an [illegible] tence to intimacy.—[Prof. [illegible] dell, in the April Scribner.

THIS EXTINGUISHER TO BE USED ONLY IN CASE OF FIRE

1.—Tom had made up his friend in an outlandish suit of old clothes he had found hanging in the barn. "Now, Dicky," said he, "you hide inside that door, and when the jinrikisha man comes along with Polly you jump out and scare him so he lets go the poles, and then see the fun!" Dicky lost no time in obeying Tom's instructions, for already Polly's footsteps were heard approaching.

2.—"Jump in the rear of my jinrikisha, Polly," said Tom. "We'll play we are in Japan and I'm the jinrikisha man taking you out to see the plum blossoms before they fall."

3.—Polly at once fell in with the idea and quickly seated herself in the tail of the cart, while Tom grasped the poles and started off with his load.

4.—Then a fierce wild robber jumped out from the mouth of a dark cave in the mountain side and so frightened the poor jinrikisha man that he relinquished his hold on the poles of the vehicle! Immediately the rear of the cart descended with its load, while the poles swooped skyward and dislodged a shelf with a fire extinguisher that was standing on it.

5.—The fire extinguisher lit bottom side up, according to instructions in case of fire, and at once began business! The hubbub brought Dandy Jimon the scene.

6.—"There!" said Polly, "I hope you boys are sufficiently extinguished!" while Dandy Jim held his sides and fairly exploded with laughter.

CARDINAL ATHLETES GIVEN CLOSE CALL.

U.S.C. Team Holds Stanford To Hard-Earned Victory—Relay Record Broken by Methodists—Parsons Runs Hundred In Fast Time.

STANFORD, 63; U.S.C., 59.

The greatest track meet ever held in the South was pulled off yesterday forenoon with the athletes of the University of Southern California competing against the crack team from Stanford University.

The most sensational event of the meet was the lowering of the Coast recorded in the relay race when the U.S.C. team made this in the phenomenal time of 3m. 29 2-5s. Shute running the last lap in a great finish.

Parsons did the fastest 100-yard sprint ever executed in Southern California by going the distance in 9 4-5. For thirty minutes interest centered in the pole vault with three men all vaulting 11 ft. 6 in. Lanagan of the Cardinal went six inches better than he has ever done before, taking first in 11 ft. 9 in.

Stanford won the meet by a margin of only four points. The northern athletes however, took ten first places, while the Methodists won three and the relay. The latter, however, scored in the most second and third places, thus sending up their general average to near that of Stanford's. Parsons and Richardson were the only ones to score first places for U.S.C., the sprinter taking two.

The 120-yard high hurdles was a close contest. It took just sixteen seconds to make the orderly flights of hurdles look as though a Kansas cyclone had gone down the track. A man who clears them cleanly evidently has no chance to win, according to the practice carried out. Only five sticks were left standing, and four of these were in Lanagan's lane, who did not win a place. McFarland of Stanford captured first, with Comstock of U.S.C. close behind him. Lennox came next, giving second and third to U.S.C.

PARSONS'S SPRINT.

Interest was on the qui vive in the 100-yard dash. A formidable line of entries awaited the pistol, there being Holman, Edwards and McNeil wearing the cardinal, and Parsons, Shute and Thompson bearing those of the Methodist school. Down the line they came, while watchers, as well as runners, held their breath, Parsons and Holman side by side to the seventy-five yard line, but Parsons had his face screwed to just the right tension and finished a yard and a half in advance of his competitor. Third place was well earned by Shute. Time caught was well within 9 4-5s, and one watch had 9 3-5s. It was the fastest done in the South, and the bleachers went wild over the result.

The quarter mile was a good race, entered only by Edwards and Davis of Stanford and Thompson of U.S.C. It was conceded to the northern team, but Thompson surprised his fellows by the way he hung on. They ran side by side to the second curve when Edwards led out, followed by Davis, and the race was won in this order, giving Stanford eight points.

But three men entered the two-mile run. Nash was the only entry for Stanford, but proved sufficient. It was a loafing race, all waiting for the sprint. Nash paced the race but at the last quarter Garbutt led out and a sprint began. The slow time of 11m. 47s. is no measure of the ability of the men.

In the 220-yard hurdles McFarland of the Cardinals took the lead and held around the curve, but Lennox started to pull in on him and they went over the last hurdle together. McFarland beat out in the sprint, however, leading by about two feet. The event looked faster than the timers' watches showed, the tickers catching it at 26s. flat. The 220-yard dash was another fast race, the swiftest in the South on a curved track. Parsons's time was 22 1-5s. Here Holman had to yield second to Shute of U.S.C., who ran it in about 22 2-5s.

MILLER'S MILE.

Miller, Stanford's crack miler, won the mile in 4m. 43s. Nordahl and Cornwell entered, but against Miller and his long stride the others had little show. He finished comparatively fresh, though sprinting hard.

In the 880-yard race Miller came to the fore again. Newmire won second, following evenly with his opponent to the sprint, while Shelton took third place.

U.S.C. men had more competition in the weights and jumps than in any previous meet this year. The hammer throw went to Richardson with a distance of 136 ft. 7 in. Crawford took second with 133 ft. 7 in. to his credit, though he surpassed Richardson in a throw in which he was disqualified.

Honors were reversed in the shot event, however, where the Santa Paula man was content with second place. Crowford taking first with a put of 39 1-2 ft. Comstock was third place winner.

There are very few meets where three men are vieing for honors in the pole vault when the bar is set higher than 11 ft. 6 in. Vaulters of all the schools in the South have used the standards on Bovard field in this event, but not until yesterday did they have to be extended. Lanagan and Kocher of the Cardinal team went several inches higher than they have ever gone before, while Richardson of U.S.C. equaled his practice mark. It resulted after a long competition in Lanagan taking first in 11 ft. 9 in., with Richardson and Kocher tieing for other honors.

The jumps went to Stanford, Sterling making 5ft. 9in. in the high, and Vandervoort doing 21ft. 3in. in the broad jump. Richardson was one inch lower in the high event and Chandler took second in the running broad jump with 21ft. 1½in.

GREAT RELAY.

The relay was a great contest. Stanford made a nice gain in the first quarter, increased in several yards in the next lap, still had the race on the three-quarter, and then came the surprise. In a grand sprint Shute of U.S.C. gained it all back and won out easily. It was a magnificent run and, when it was over, another Coast record lay shattered. The time was 3 min. 29 2-5 sec., making an average of 52 3-5 seconds for each quarter. Edwards of U.S.C., and Newmire of Stanford took the first lap. Newmire lost inch by inch and foot by foot, though he hung on tenaciously, and was fifteen feet behind when Edwards passed his turn to McFarland. Nordahl tried to catch the Stanford man but instead, the fifteen feet of Stanford's lead changed to as many yards. McFarland came in fresh while Nordahl could do no more. McNeil for Stanford and Lennox went the third lap, and U.S.C. thought the race over. Lennox lost sadly for 220 yards—spectators called to Stanford that the Cardinal was half a block ahead, and begged them to make it a whole city block. Lennox regained some of the lost distance on the stretch, however, and sent Shute off in a clear start against Davis of the Cardinals. Shute fairly flew and was ahead when the two came in sight around the track. He seemed to run faster still, while his opponent also did well, and U.S.C. finished several yards ahead of Stanford. It was Shute who won the race and,

STANFORD OARSMEN WIN EVERY EVENT.

Cardinal Crews Have No Trouble Disposing of San Diegans—Coach Murphy Beats King In Single Sculls. Napoli Best Motor Boat.

TWO thousand persons attended the first annual regatta of the Naples Rowing Club held yesterday afternoon on the Naples course, and saw the Cardinal oarsmen make a clean sweep in both of the races which they entered; and Trainer Dan Murphy take first place in the single shell event.

Encouraged by the success of their fellows on the cinder path in the morning, the oarsmen from the north entered the races with the determination to hold their end up also, and they succeeded. It was a great Stanford day.

More than 1000 persons who had attended the Harbor Day exercises at Long Beach in the morning and were desirous of witnessing the regatta in the afternoon, were unable to reach the course on account of poor car service between the two resorts. In spite of the assurances that railway accommodations would be made to handle the crowd, only the one car between Long Beach and Naples was in service.

The day was ideal for rowing, and the spectators who lined the course and thronged the pier at the finish, were very enthusiastic. A strong wind blew down the course and made the rowing easy work for the oarsmen.

The popularity of the sport in the southland was strikingly evident, and Roy Ryone, President of the Rowing Club, promises a regatta next year that will surpass by far anything ever held in the southwest.

The Stanford crews fully realized the hopes of their supporters, and San Diego, although crippled by the absence of Jackson, No. 2., one of the strongest men in the senior boat, gave a very creditable exhibition.

The big race was pulled off at 3:30 o'clock. Stanford arrived first at the start, and five minutes later the San Diego four, spinning along in splendid form, hove in sight. Capt. Zimmerman of Stanford won the toss and chose the west course. After manoeuvering several minutes for position, the starting gun was fired, and they were off. Stanford caught the water first and secured a slight lead; but San Diego forged ahead, and raising the stroke from 34 to 38, held the lead for the first half mile.

PACE QUICKENS.

At the half mile mark, the Cardinal stroke was raised to 38 and the Stanford shell began to close the gap between the boats. With the finish but one-quarter mile distant, the Stanford bow was overlapping the stern of the San Diego shell and the southern oarsmen showed signs of weakening. Stanford raised the stroke to 40, and forged steadily ahead, and amid the shouts of hundreds, crossed the line four lengths in the lead. The time was 5m. 42s.

The race between the junior crews was sixteen seconds slower than the senior race. Both crews got a bad start, but Stanford recovered first and kept the lead throughout, finishing three lengths ahead of the San Diego four. The southern crew showed splendid form, but was unable to keep abreast of the Cardinal oarsmen, who were superior in strength.

The motor boat handicap race was exciting, although some of the handicaps seemed unfair. The Napoli, in a close finish. The San Gabriel and Beck, starting from scratch, were unable to cut down the heavy handicaps. Although they literally flew through the water, they failed to win a place.

Dan Murphy was an easy winner in the single shells event, but as the timer failed to snap his watch at the finish, the time was not recorded. King took the lead at the start, but was passed at the quarter-mile mark and was unable to overtake the Stanford coach. Courtney dropped out at the half-way house.

Dan Murphy is jubilant over the showing made by his men, and thinks the chances are exceedingly good for a victory over Berkeley, April 27. The 'varsity eight will be composed partly of the four men who form the senior crew, and at least two members of the junior four will also be given places in the big shell.

Capt. Zimmerman has received a challenge from the Playa del Rey Rowing Club for a four-oared shell race to be held early in May. A reply will be given later. The Cardinal men will leave for the north tonight to take up hard training for the race with the University of California crew. If the Stanford oarsmen are successful against their rivals, a trip will be made to Seattle, where the crack eight of the Seattle Rowing Club will be met.

A celebration was held last night at the Channel Club in honor of the visiting oarsmen, and the prizes for the events of the day, consisting of silver cups, were presented to the winners.

AMID CHEERS OWEN WINNER.

Pilots Oldsmobile to Victory in Great Race.

Strenuous Times Along Entire Route of Contest.

Competing Crew Finally Quits Pope-Hartford.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The much-talked-of race between the Oldsmobile and the Pope-Hartford from Los Angeles to San Francisco is finally over. Owen's car reached Oakland this morning at 3:40, after consuming forty-five hours and ten minutes in one of the most strenuous auto runs on record. By 10 o'clock, E. P. Brinegar was flashing the $6000 check, the stake, which was turned over to him by Fernando Nelson, official stakeholder. At a late hour this evening it was stated that the crew who were capsized in the competing Pope-Hartford, forty-eight miles south of Bakersfield, had left for Los Angeles by rail.

The story of the difficult run is best told by Ralph R. Owen, driver of the winning Olds, who describes the race in the following manner:

"I was at the wheel from start to finish, and all knowledge which I may have gained in past trips through different parts of the United States could not have served me in this race, which was undoubtedly over the hardest and roughest country I had ever had to travel, had it not been for the crew with me. They were not mechanics, but sportsmen, understanding an automobile, and were able to help me at times in such a way that I had faith in what they were doing, so that it was not necessary to go over their work. This, if it had been a closer race, would have been a great part of the winning factor.

"Right from the start we went into bad roads. We had gone about fifty miles, and had reached the San Francisquito Cañon, when we came upon the Pope-Hartford for the first time. It was then hard and fast in a ford. We had been traveling then about two and one-quarter hours.

"We both had trouble there, but the Olds managed to clear first. After leaving this place we crossed the creek five times and finally came upon a sandbank which brought us to a stop. We had practically to build the automobile up to a level to the top before we could proceed. At this point the Pope went by under tow of a mule team. We traveled about three-quarters of an hour in the wake of the Pope until we reached a long, steep grade, when we caught up with them and passed. This was the last time we saw anything of our competitors.

"From there on we had to cut out our own course. We had trouble with the mud at Elizabeth Lake, and with snow at Goshen. At Merced, later while making the landing from the barge, at Tracy, and, in fact all along, we had difficulties of all sorts.

"Outside of the near neighborhood of San Francisco the people turned out as if for a holiday event. At Bakersfield the officers had to make room through the crowd to give us pots of coffee and sandwiches, and practically did everything in their power to assist us. If the roads were bad the people of California more than made up in their hospitality."

The crew in the car with Owen were H. O. Harrison, Olds agent at Los Angeles; W. A. Peck and Robert Emmons.

Owen brought the winning car over from Oakland on the first boat, and after giving the press an interview, went to the Hamma baths to make up his lost sleep. The car was on exhibition in front of the Pioneer Company's office throughout the day, and attracted much interest. A heavy coating of mud covered the entire body of the machine, and it bore all evidences of the trying trip described by Owen.

The race was the principal topic of conversation along automobile row throughout the day. The Pope-Hartford people have taken their defeat in a true sportsmanlike manner, offering no excuses.

Great as was the performance of the winning car in covering the distance in such good time under such averse conditions, still higher praise must be given the crew. To Ralph Owen a tribute of praise is surely due. Not only did he justify his reputation as one of the greatest cross-country drivers in America, but he set a standard of performance which for pure physical endurance must take high rank.

For forty-five hours he was at the wheel of a machine which he was constantly pressing to the limit of safety. He never left the car while it was under way, never moved from the seat of control for almost two days. A few men have tried to guide an automobile for twenty-four continuous hours on a track. Every follower of the automobile game knows that sooner or later the overwrought nerves result in the muscles doing one thing when the brain thinks another thing—result, an automobile through the fence.

As a feat of human skill, the grit and endurance of Owen in piloting his machine for twice that time over mountain roads, down torrent-swept cañons, through snow, rain and cold wind, probably stands without parallel in the history of the automobile.

COURSE PICKED FOR BIG RACE.

VANDERBILT CUP RACE WILL BE RUN ON MOTOR PARKWAY.

Dumb-bell-Shaped Double Circuit Will Be Used, With Grand Stand in Middle—Change in Eligibility Rules Is Projected in Order to Admit Foreign Racers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Much interest attaches to the meeting of the Racing Board of the A.A.A., which will be held shortly after the arrival from Europe of W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., next Tuesday. It is expected that he will have recommendations to make regarding a change in the eligibility rules to admit of the entry of cars which have competed in the Grand Prix, for the Kaiser's Cup and for the Yargo Florio.

Most interesting of all, however, will be the details that will be forthcoming of the arrangements for the running of the cup race itself. It can be said that the section of the motor parkway over which the race will be run has already been chosen. The contest will be over a dumb-bell shaped course made up of an eight-mile straightaway and two loops of considerable size. The race way on the straight will be fifty feet wide, there being no division of the cars running in opposite directions, save a whitewash line to guide the drivers. It is planned to erect a mammoth stand at the intersection of the eastern loop with the straightaway. Spectators will thus at all times have cars in sight racing around the loop or up and down the straight.

The distance of the race headquarters from this city will be too great to be covered by trolley and will require a railroad ride of considerable length. This will obviate an unmanageable crowd. The racing section of the parkway will be ready for practice not later than September 1.

Great Speedway Started.

GREAT BARRINGTON (Mass.) March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Work began today on the ten-mile automobile speedway which the New Marlboro Association is building in that town. The speedway will be 200 feet wide. The association members are H. K. Bloodgood, Charles Steele and Harry Hoyt, all prominent New York bankers. The speedway is to be built on private land entirely and owned by the above-named gentlemen.

In consequence of the failure of the attempts at The Hague to form a conservative cabinet in succession to the De Meester ministry, which resigned February 12, Queen Wilhelmina has asked the ministers who resigned to continue in office

Air is the feature of this car, the only one in the world with air brake and air-controlled clutch. It is the new Northern. Above is shown the engine, of which the four cylinders and their water-jackets are cast in one block.

AIR IS BASIS OF THIS CAR.

New Northern, With Many Unique Points, Attracts Much Attention.

Chief among the automobile arrivals of the past week was the four-cylinder Northern. This is a car to attract attention anywhere. Alone among automobiles, there has been applied to it the air brake, which is the standard equipment of all railroad trains and most trolley cars. Along with the air brake has been applied an air-controlled clutch, so that the car is practically under the hand of the operator by means of air.

This new Northern is a new car. Outside of the entirely unique features made possible by the use of air, it contains at least three other features which are worthy of notice from the motor enthusiast.

But it is the air which is of most interest. This is furnished by a pump geared to the camshaft, which resembles almost exactly a two-port two-cycle engine cylinder. One port is so placed that it is closed by the piston at a point when there is about two pounds pressure in the cylinder. This two pounds pressure is conveyed to the gasoline tank. The rest of the pressure, which will run very high, is taken to a small steel tank in front of the dash.

From here it is admitted to the brake cylinder and clutch chamber at will of the operator.

The clutch is operated by turning the handle of the gear change lever. It is so soft in action that the air may be turned on full, without the car jumping at all. At the same time it seems to be able to hold the car in any condition.

The air brake is on the throttle lever. Bringing the lever back first closes the throttle, and then applies the air to the brakes.

There are no side levers of any description on the car. Control is absolutely centered on the steering wheel column. A change gear lever of the familiar type employed on the Pierce Arrow cars projects to the right under the wheel. Three speeds forward are on this lever, and the gear in use is shown by an arrow, which moves over a disk. The reverse is a sliding lever, depressed by the foot, at the base of the steering column. The clutch, as explained, is worked by turning the handle of the change speed lever, and it is connected so that when the air pressure is on, the lever cannot be pulled to change a gear, nor can the reverse be used.

Other features are also noteworthy. The transmission is on the rear axle, a practice well known but not common. A traverse platform spring is used in the rear, and embodied with it is another feature. The middle of the traverse spring, instead of being rigidly fastened to the body of the car, is hung on a trunnion. The rear springs are over five feet long.

Still another feature is the motor. This is a four-cylinder engine, water-cooled, with all valves in the head and on the left side. But it is cast in one piece, all four cylinders, water jacket and all. This is supposed to be the only car in America employing this feature. At the last Paris salon, it was remarked that "moto-bloc," as the French call it, had an unusually large number of adherents, and that twenty-one makers were showing models in which it was employed. The leader in this type of construction is the Mors, and another notable car using "moto-bloc" is the Aquila-Italiana, whose six cylinders are all in one piece. At first sight it appears that this construction involves extra weight, but in the case of the Roydale, a new and somewhat notable English car, engineers have figured that its cylinders, cast "moto-bloc," weigh six pounds less than the cylinders of the average car having the same bore and stroke.

MOTOR PIRATE TRAPPED.

Brave Photographer Solves Mystery of Armored Auto Which Startled Quiet English Village.

A strange-looking motor car, that alarmed the few people who saw it some time ago, made a few brief appearances in the vicinity of the little town of Watford, England. It seemed to be completely armored, and had a superstructure built around it shaped like a very fat torpedo boat. Above the steering wheel was a conning tower arrangement.

From a port in the top of this tower peered a slim black muzzle with machine gun written in its appearance. Below was another wicked-looking muzzle. Slits for the driver to look through were arranged with shields, after the most approved manner of the armored automobiles constructed for the German and French governments. There was a trap door on the side through which the driver could enter.

A curious looking motor car which roused much speculation in several English villages where it appeared, until its use was explained.

It was seen flitting around lonely country roads, and quite a sensation was worked up over it. Finally, a brave photographer tracked it to its lair, and then the secret was out.

An enterprising moving-picture firm had rigged the car up, and with some assistants the driver repaired each day to a lonely spot, where, with appropriate setting and movement, he enacted the part of a motor highwayman. While he was robbing his victims, the whirring moving-picture camera was taking the pictures, which later enthused audiences in the music halls.

RACE MEET ASSURED.

Check Given to Secure Agricultural Park for Two Days in May—Committee Appointed.

Automobile racing in the interests of good roads, is now assured the motor-loving public of Los Angeles on May 4 and 5. Last week the dealers' association appointed a committee to take charge of the meet, and yesterday the matter was made absolutely final when Leon T. Shettler posted a check and secured the use of Agricultural Park for the two days.

Jim Morley has been made chairman of the committee, which consists of himself, Leon T. Shettler and Capt. H. D. Ryus. They have already made a contract with Barney Oldfield for his appearance on both days. His second car will also be raced in the meeting, but the driver has not yet been selected.

Other drivers and speedy cars in Los Angeles will be secured, and the committee hopes to provide the best meet ever held in Los Angeles. It has been two years since there has been any real racing in Los Angeles, and the time seems to be ripe for such an event.

Arrangements have been made with the management of Agricultural Park so that the contestants in the races will have the track every afternoon for a week before the event.

As has been explained before, the meet is for the benefit of good roads, and the entire proceeds will be used in building and repairing the highways. With this object in view, even better support than usual should be accorded the meet.

GIGANTIC TRUCK ORDERED.

New Entrant in Gasoline Row Takes Commercial Vehicles as His Particular Field.

About the time of the automobile show, which was under his management, James F. Morley decided to enter the automobile business. The commercial vehicle field has never received the attention it should on the Pacific Coast, and Mr. Morley saw an opportunity that he felt should not be neglected. So he secured the agency for several commercial trucks. One of these is the Coppock, another is the line put out by the Pittsburgh Machine Tool Company, and Mr. Morley announces that he will, within a few days close with two more producers of commercial vehicles.

The first sale that the new entrant into Gasoline Row has made is a notable one. A. Hamburger & Sons have gone into the brick-manufacturing business, so that they can be assured of material for their big new store, and they have bought a monster truck to use in delivery from their kilns. It is the largest commercial vehicle yet ordered from the West.

It is a steam truck, made by the Pittsburgh Machine Tool Company. The capacity of it is ten tons, and the rated horse power is thirty-five. The truck itself weighs four tons. The engine is of the poppet-valve type, resembling an ordinary gasoline engine largely. The drive is by side chains, from a spur type gear set.

Mr. Morley expects to close an order for fourteen delivery wagons this coming week, which will be the largest individual order ever placed in the West.

In addition to the various commercial lines, Mr. Morley has taken on one pleasure vehicle, the well-known Royal Tourist. The demonstrating car left the Cleveland factory last Tuesday.

Five Thousand to Us.

Leon T. Shettler has been doing a little figuring on the number of automobiles in Los Angeles county, and says that there are just about 5000 of them. License No. 10,002 was given out by Secretary of State Curry on March 27, and Shettler's statistics lead him to think that almost exactly 50 per cent. of the total registration in the State comes from this county.

NEW RICHMONDS IN THE FIELD.

TWO DRAGON RACERS FOR THE VANDERBILT CUP.

Already Two-thirds Completed and Application Made to A.A.A. for Their Entry—Will Be Light Weight, but of Standard Four-cylinder Construction.

Interest in the next Vanderbilt Cup race seems to be greater than in the last, and already there are signs that American makers are resolved to win the famous trophy if it is possible. New aspirants are coming to the fore. The latest of these is the Dragon, a car which has come to the front with remarkable rapidity. President J. K. Mills of the company has just made the following statement in regard to the projected racers:

"The Dragon Automobile Company is building two 110-horse-power racing cars for the coming Vanderbilt Cup race. These cars are about two-thirds completed and I have every reason to believe that they will prove to be two of the fastest machines ever constructed. They have been designed by an expert of international reputation, whose name I do not care to mention at present.

"The motors of the racing Dragons are of the four-cylinder type, having a large bore and stroke and high-tension magnetic ignition. A number of the parts are of special construction, and while each car will be considerably under the weight limit, its component parts will go to make a strong and speedy racing machine.

"The racing Dragons will not be 'freaks.' Their general appearance will be similar to that of the 'Golden Dragon' runabout type. In detail, the new racing model will be very much like the Dragon touring car chassis, with parts enlarged, as we desire to prove our theory that the present Dragon construction is the correct construction for an automobile.

"We have already made application to the Touring Board of the A.A.A. for entry blanks for our two Dragons, and as soon as these are ready formal entry will be made. As yet the drivers of these fast cars have not been selected, but they will be men of experience and the very best we can secure. Although the date for the Vanderbilt Cup race has not yet been set, these two Dragons will be on the road and receive a good testing out months before the elimination race takes place.

"I especially desire to state that we are entering these cars to run first and second in the elimination race, and we sincerely hope and have confidence that they will make good in the Vanderbilt Cup race proper. We are spending a large sum of money to get these cars right and will put them in this contest because we believe that they will help America to make a showing in this great race."

LICENSE LAW IS APPROVED.

SPORTSMEN GLAD TO PAY THE PROTECTIVE FEE.

All Residents of California Must Pay Dollar to Be Allowed Hunting Privileges—Stop Put to Reckless Shooting by Foreigners and Careless Persons.

Local sportsmen who pass their spare time in hunting on marsh, field or mountainside are much pleased over the action of Gov. Gillet in signing the new hunting license bill, which will take effect July 1. Resolutions praising the Governor and congratulating the Legislature have been passed.

In brief, the bill provides that all residents of California shall pay an annual license fee of $1 for the privilege of hunting, or, to be more exact, any one who hunts must pay that fee. For all non-resident hunters the fee is $10, and for those not citizens the fee is to be $25. It is said that no less than thirty-three States in the Union have similar laws, so this particular license law cannot be considered as having particular reference to California.

It is admitted among the sportsmen that the real object of the new law is to put a stop to the recklessness of the Japanese and Portuguese hunters, who grab a gun on Sunday and rush out into the highways and byways and take pot shots at everything from a sparrow to a cow, just to see them run. These particular "sportsmen" not only endanger the lives of other people, but injure the farmer's stock and scare away game that real hunters might get a chance at.

The true sportsman and the ordinary citizen will not complain of the law, because the cost of the license is next to nothing, and the purpose of the law is that every dollar collected in either licenses or fines shall go into a general fund to protect the game throughout the State. The sportsmen in this end of the State think so well of the law that at a meeting held a few days ago of the Bolsa Association, representatives of no less than twenty-two gun clubs voted unanimously to instruct their respective officers to have licenses taken out at once for every members of the clubs.

KNOX

WATERLESS

Will the Knox Air-Cooled Cylinders Ke
Cool on a Long, Hard Pull?

Of course not, if they were cold, they wouldn't pull.

The KNOX AUTOMOBILE CO. have built up their practically nothing, to millions, in seven years, through the of their engines for continuous work; they will not store up to stick because they can't.

The temperature of the gas in a cylinder at the end of the stroke is about 2000 degrees, and the normal temperature of the when running perfectly is about 500 degrees; therefore, the the engine to keep going on a hard pull, depends entirely on the with which it can dispose of this surplus heat, and keep mal temperature.

The harder you work a water-cooled engine, the the water, and you have to use it over and over, and at your engine is doing its best work, the water in that good starts to sizzle and boil over, the heat of your engine and you are not far from the next stop.

The KNOX cylinders are cooled by air of which there supply that has never been used before, and which is radiating surface of the cylinders, at a velocity proportion speed of the engine, and it makes little difference whether pheric temperature be 20 or 120 degrees, the air as thrown is far cooler than boiling water, and does not become as there is always a fresh supply, and you keep going.

If air-cooled engines do not keep a more even temperature a proper temperature, why, oh why, is it that they are more of fuel than a water-logged machine?

You Never Burn the Oil in a KNOX

If some air-cooled engines do not give perfect satisfaction fault of the air.

THE KNOX IS DIFFERENT.

If you are open to conviction, we can show you that does the work. A Chinaman is skeptical, so don't swell up too, but let us give you a demonstration.

CARDINALS CLOSE CALL.

amid the cheering, he was carried on the shoulders of his comrades, while Stanford came to him with congratulations for his remarkable run.

The meet was first class in every respect. Stanford men left well satisfied with the trip. One of them expressed their sentiments by saying: "We have had a good time; I call that a good meet." U.S.C. lost with a bare four points difference, but without any regrets. The sentiment throughout asked not that the opponent do less but that their own men might do more. The events were run off in quick succession, and would have been finished in two hours or less had not the pole-vault taken more time than expected.

Stanford's victory over the home team, yesterday, proves her superiority over any aggregation in the south, as U.S.C. has beaten all other college teams here in the dual meets.

PARSONS TO RETIRE.

TO MEET KELLY FIRST.

Charles Parsons, the crack sprinter, expects to wind up his career on the cinder path this season. As a finale to his grand career as 100 and 200-yard dash man, he may meet Dan Kelly in these events at the Jamestown exposition, if he does not do so before then. Coast track enthusiasts hope that the two will get together in Los Angeles at the A.A.U. meet, April 20, or in Berkeley at the Pacific Athletic Association meet, April 26.

Dan Kelly is credited with the amateur record of 9 3-5 seconds, but the California sprinters and many track men throughout the country believe this mark was a fluke. They contend that if he did run at that figure his performance is not so worthy as that of the sprinters who win in competition. It is alleged that a runner who defeats all the crack sprinters in the country and does not have to extend himself beyond ten seconds, is more worthy of the championship than the man who runs against time under ten flat.

Not detracting from Kelly's grand performance, he has not had much experience in contests. In 1905 he did not even place in the games at Portland, where Parsons won with ease in ten seconds. As Kelly was about twenty feet back, it is figured he did not run the distance under 10 1-5. It is argued that in running in ten seconds, a man comes pretty close to the limit of human powers, and that an improvement of three-fifths of a second is too much for Kelly to have accomplished in one year.

BASEBALL PRACTICE.

Occidental's Team to Be Trained Along Scientific Lines—Many Candidates.

Baseball practice is in full swing at Occidental, and last week twenty men were out for daily work. The Presbyterian ball tossers are entering into training with unusual enthusiasm, and the prospects are bright for a successful season.

Coach Merrill will follow the method employed last year of developing the team along strictly scientific lines. The success of last season has demonstrated to the Presbyterians that systematic play with all the men working together is far superior to the slugging game, and that it culminates in the highest efficiency of play at the end of the season, when the most important games are played.

Of the six players on last year's team who are in the school, Capt. Ross and Bird are showing the best form, and it is expected that they will far surpass their performances of last year before the season is far under way. Thacker, the star pitcher, is showing excellent form, and upon him will fall the brunt of the work in the twirling department. Thomas, who will fill the vacancy in right field, is looming up well, and will be strong in the position.

The new men are working hard for places on the varsity, and form excellent material from which to choose regular players. McKenney and Deckman, who are trying for shortstop, are good men, and either would be acceptable for the place. Wieman will give Bruce Merrill a hard fight for his place at first base, as he is one of the hardest hitters on the team.

Although spring vacation is now on at the Presbyterian school, four practice games have been arranged for this week. The Highland Park team will be played Tuesday, and on Wednesday Polytechnic High School will appear on the Occidental diamond. Harvard School will be played Thursday, and on Saturday the team will journey to Santa Ana to play the High School team of that place.

Stork Visits Lou Dillon.

CLEVELAND, March 30.—Lou Dillon, the world's champion trotter, foaled a pretty bay filly early today at C. K. G. Billings's private stable at the Glenville track. The foal's sire is the champion wagon trotting stallion, John A. McKerron, thus making her one of the most distinguished equinine juveniles living, in point of speed heritage.

An eastern commercial traveler, who is covering his country territory in a runabout, fitted behind the driving seat to carry his sample cases, finds he covers more ground, sells more goods and saves a great deal of time since he laid aside the railroad method.

The Sensation
of the season is the exhibit of Morgan & Wright auto tires at Angelus Hotel. The M. & W. Midgley Wire Grip Tire is worthy of all motorists' attention. Mr. Paige, in charge of the demonstration, can be seen each afternoon from 1 to 5 o'clock; evenings, 7 to 9, at room 519, Angelus Hotel, until April 8. It is worth the time spent by any lover of motoring to call on Mr. Paige.

LAUNCHING OF THE COLUMBINE.

MITCHELL'S CRACK YACHT IS READY FOR TRIAL.

Ceremony of Putting Sloop Into Water Witnessed by Owner and Many Friends—Fulton Construction Company Builds Fine Craft for Summer Racing Season.

Columbine, which, it is believed, will prove a star performer of the Class A racing fleet, took her first plunge in the Pacific yesterday. With flags flying, and looking as pretty as paint could make her, she won cheers from the assembled guests as she rolled down the steel rails of the ways and spurned new lift of the ocean tide.

"I christen thee Columbine," was the cry of the small fairy who acted as god mother for the new creation, and little Clara Fulton broke the champagne bottle on the brass leaders at the stern, the owner, Alexander J. Mitchell, was smilingly busy with the side lines as Columbine tobogganed to the deep assisted by Captain Clement Hebeler, who acted as signal officer of the day, and sent up the code flags to mean "Good morning."

It was a proud day for the Fulton Marine Construction Company. The Terminal Island yards never sent down a prettier piece of painted perfection. On her natal day there was nothing but enthusiasm for Columbine, with no criticisms of any kind in sight.

Probably because the Latin Columba means a dove, or perhaps because the Columbine is partly dove color, this boat went to the sea in dove color—the swift line of miladi's silken glove, and indeed, it is no hyperbole to say that the new racer looked to be "all silk."

The new boat floated at exactly the same degree of buoyancy that was calculated by Charles Fulton when he first designed the racer on paper. This was readily shown by the painted waterline which was put on to indicate where a 26-foot waterline would be on the boat. Columbine floated high above this. In order to test this highly important item regarding calculation, seven persons were put on board to represent the crew in weight, and then the craft was carefully examined by Designer Fulton and Matt Walsh. Fulton's private marks, as he understood them, showed that the racer was then floating on a waterline of 22ft. 6in., which is two inches less than the calculation.

CALCULATING CORRECT.

At this time, she also had her mast and standing rigging on board, her full 1500 pounds of lead on the keel and the probable weight of her crew—so that the finding was most satisfactory. To remain eligible for the Lipton cup race she could not exceed a twenty-five-foot water line, and if she had gone beyond this the boat would have been a structural failure. But as it is Columbine may take in, if she likes, a great deal of extra internal ballast and still be within the limits of her class. How much extra ballast she will need, if any, in her match racing will be partly ascertained in her first trial outings. These will begin as soon as the boat can be rigged.

Gangs of men from the Fallon yards went ahead as soon as possible after the launch, and by 2 o'clock in the afternoon a huge red cedar mast was stepped. This spar is forty-five feet long over all, which is only two feet shorter than the new one carried by the Yankee, of the thirty-foot class, and it is going to take a mainsail which is almost big enough for the Detroit. In this canvas, however, Mitchell has four lines of reef-points, so that in a hard breeze the boat can be snugged down to a small sailing area.

No attempt has been made to get a hollow mast from the East because the solid sticks of California cedar have been found to be lighter than the excavated spars which cost so much and are wider, with a worse windage. The stick now to be used is light for its size, and will get lighter as it dries out.

Matt Walsh is of the opinion that in summer airs the boat will carry her sail, but opinion greatly differs as to what amount of wind the boat will stand up to with her full sail area and without any addition to her 1500 pounds of lead fin ballast. This, however, is a minor and comparatively unimportant point, because inside ballast can be added at any time, and the structural success is that further ballast can be added, if necessary, without putting the water line length beyond the limit of the twenty-five-foot class.

Mr. Mitchell says, however, that if the boat be found to need any further ballast for fresh winds (which he does not think at all likely,) he will not use any inside ballast for the racing, but will haul out at once and have the further lead inserted as part of the keel ballast.

The first trial for the ascertaining of this will probably be made in private, as no announcement has been made regarding the vessel's first go under canvass. A good many persons are watching for Columbine's first trial, and unless she be towed to the other side of Catalina before she is sailed, there are some private launch owners who will try to "get wise" when the interesting event comes off.

Columbine's over all length is 45 feet 6 inches, and her beam is 11 feet 6 inches. The draught of her fin is 6 feet 6 inches, and her present water line length, without boom, gaff, sails or anchor chains, is 22 feet 6 inches.

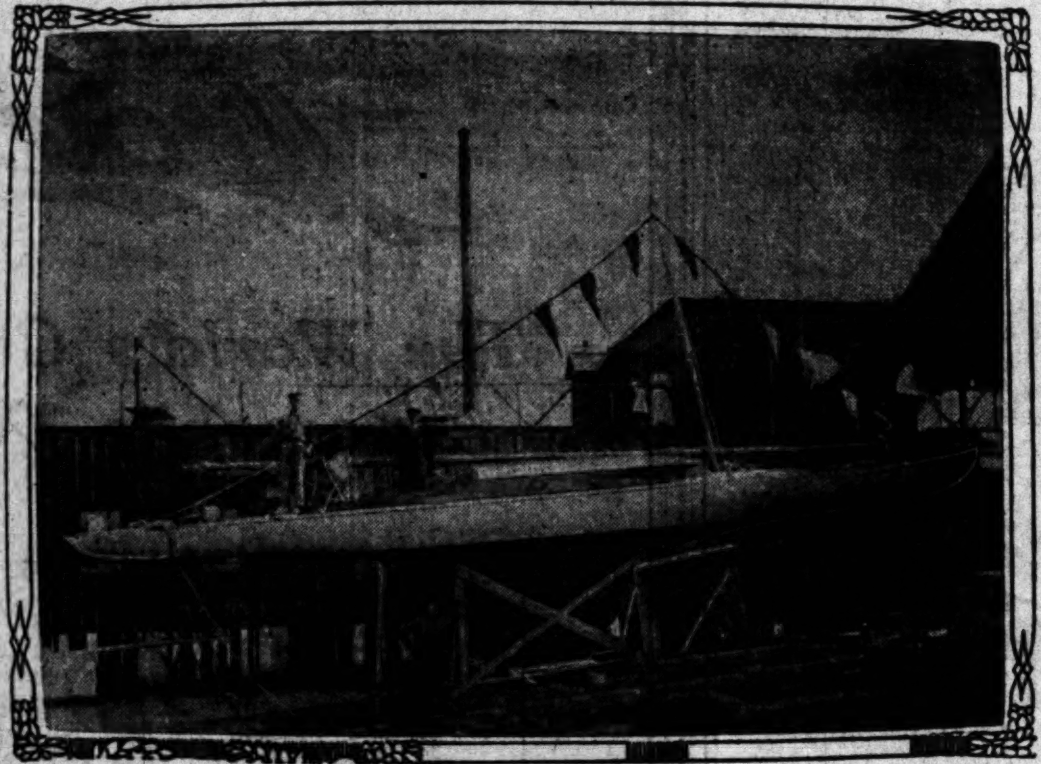
YACHTING NOTES.

While some of the richer yachtsmen are still building turbine yachts, it is certain that others are far from satisfied with them. The turbine has a terrible maw for coal. One of the dissatisfied is the rich F. Augustus Heinze, who is having the steel 177-foot Revolution altered. The turbine engines are to be taken out and replaced by one Seabury triple-expansion engine. This engine is a duplicate of the one in Henry Rogers's celebrated Kanawha, which took the Lysistrata Cup from the Noma in 1903, and also beat the Hauoli in 1904 over ocean courses. It is significant in the way of prophesy to find the stern of the Revolution being altered to take the old single shaft and one propeller—also that Heinze in one year of trial found the proposed saving so great as to make the huge expense of the present alterations desirable.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, commodore of the New York Yacht Club, is building in the 57-foot one design class to meet the new craft being constructed by Henry F. Lippitt and George M. Pynchon. This will give a new and handsome fleet to the racing fields, and each of the boats are being turned out by the Herreshoffs exactly similar in sails, rigging and hull. These have substantial build and comfortable internal accommodations for owners and guests, instead of being the absurd shells, empty from end to end, which have been turned out as racing machines in recent years. Lippitt and Pynchon have been up against each other in a friendly way for many years, since Lippitt had the Quissetta—the last two fleets being the Weetamoe and Neola, and then Weetamoe II and Neola 11—all being, like the new ones, in the neighborhood of sixty feet water line.

Nathaniel Roe of Eastport, N. Y., expresses confidence that his new scooter will attain the speed of a hundred miles an hour. He is said to have run it at the rate of seventy-five miles an hour. The motor which drives this ordinary 14-foot scooter is said to have served last year for driving a flying machine. The scooter itself first appeared in the large shallow tidal bays that line the south coast of Long Island. Like Great South Bay and others, these inlets have sandbars protecting them on the ocean side. People who live on the outside bars, and also many duck shooters, had to have some way of crossing the bays which, in winter, are filled with ice continually broken by tidal movement. They, therefore, had to have a craft that was partly iceboat and partly for water. Thus the scooter was evolved. It has a little forward overhang, which mounts far up on the ice when the yachtsman sails at full speed against the floating ice floe. He then steps out and gives it the pull necessary to set it fully on the ice, at which moment the craft becomes on iceboat and travels at a great speed across the floe. When it reaches the water at the other side, it sometimes rips into it at the rate of fifty miles an hour, and the sport is exciting. At this moment, the occupant generally sits down, as the change of gait is marked. But while on the ice, he stands and steers not only by weight, but with a pole that scrapes along the hard surface. There is no rudder to the skiff, and its bilges are stripped from bow to stern with bars or rods of iron, one on each bilge and one on the central backbone. Thus her ice traveling is always on two of these irons, which, in effect, are the same as the runners of a sleigh. Regarded as a form of yachting, the sport is frappé, but it is warmer than the real iceboating, the passage generally being to leeward.

MITCHELL'S RACER ON WAYS FOR FIRST PLUNGE.



SLOOP COLUMBINE, which was launched at Terminal Island, yesterday.

CALIFORNIA WINS MEET.

STANFORD FRESHMEN DEFEATED AT PALO ALTO.

Capt. Johns Won Fourteen Points for the Blue and Gold—Maundrell, Scott and Pemberton Do Best for Cardinal—Donnell of Los Angeles Does Poor Work.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The California freshman track team won from Stanford today by a score of 67½ to 54½. Stanford outclassed the blue and gold in the sprints and dashes, but took no place in the weights and was deficient in the other field events. The day was perfect and the track in excellent condition.

Capt. Maundrell, Scott and Pemberton did the best work for Stanford, while Capt. Johns won fourteen points for California. Shelton of Stanford left the hospital with a threatened attack of appendicitis to enter the two-mile, and got third place. Maundrell easily won the mile by twenty yards in 4m. 51 1-5s. His prep. record is 4:39 3-5. He also won the half mile. Scott's performance of 10 1-5 seconds in the 100 is remarkable, for he is not in training and has played on the ball team all season.

No Stanford men placed in the shot put or hammer throw, and Poor barely tied for third in the high jump. Scott only qualified the pole vault. California's best spritners were Johns and Grundy. Donnell of California, formerly of Los Angeles High, did not show up as he was expected to.

The fast time of 22.3 in the 220 is due to the fact that Grundy and Reed jumped the gun. Stanford is well pleased with the results, which are much better than expected. Fifteen hundred persons saw the meet.

Summary:

Mile run—Maundrell (S.,) Wilson (C.,) Mitchell (C.;) time 4:51.

The 100-yard dash, first heat—Scott (S.,) Grundy (C.,) Stevenson (S;) time 10 1-5s.

Second heat—Reed (S.,) and Kennell (C.,) tied for first; Martin (S.,) third; time 10 2-5s.

Finals—Scott (S.,) Grundy (C.,) Reed (S.;) time 10.1.

The 120-yard hurdles—Johns (C.,) Helsey (S.,) Bradley (S.;) time 16 2-5s.

Hammer throw—Swim (C.,) Freeman (C.,) Baker (C.;) distance 106 ft. 9½ in.

The 440-yard dash—Pemberton (S.,) Zacharias (S.,) Cushman (C.;) time 54 3-5s.

The Value of a Cleveland

Is the best represented by what the car will render in everyday service without those annoying delays caused by dirty spark plugs, weak batteries, or soils to adjust.

The Cleveland has no spark plugs, batteries, coils, or commutators. Its make and break system of ignition with Bosch magnets is the most reliable ignition system in the world, and is used by nearly all foreign cars.

Our Demonstrator has been run 3,500 miles without repairs or adjustments of kind save the grinding of the exhaust valves. We have never investigated our ignition system, but the running of the motor today will prove to you or any one else that it needs no attention. We have never even changed an ignition plate.

A 7-passenger car of such extreme high-grade construction that it weighs only 2,400 pounds and yet stands up perfectly under the severest service, is sure to interest you. That's the Cleveland. The Cleveland Catalog, describing these and other interesting features of the '07 model, is a work of art, and we make no charge for it.

Our Gentleman's Speed Car is the Smartest of Them All.

ASCOT RACING SEASON ENDS

Large Crowd Turns Out to See Final Events.

Two Favorites Finish First in Seven Races.

Horse Gilpin Breaks a Track Record Easily.

With the band playing "Auld Lang Syne" before the last race and in the presence of one of the largest crowds of sports that ever saw horse races in this city, the present season at Ascot Park closed yesterday in what might be called a blaze of glory. It was a fine finish on account of the immense crowd, the delightful weather and the general feeling of not caring whether [illegible] kept or not.

Mr. Duke, who has been acting as starter for the past two days, forever ruined his chances of being put on as a commencer at a real race track by the get-away of the nags in the sixth race. He got the twelve beasts in a perfect line, held them long enough for several of them to begin to turn around and then shot the barrier up. One animal was left at the post and the strongly played Comedian was flat-footed and buck-jumping. The big mob of bettors at once broke into a roar of hisses, cat calls and "boos" and poor Duke blushed under the roasting. It is said that his starting had been bad, but yesterday no one really cared, for it was the last day and every one expected to get almost anything.

Eighteen books lined up in the ring and with three field books in operation the bettors went at things as if it was the first day. Only two favorites won in the seven races and these were at 1 to 2 and 3 to 5, so there was little money won on these. Rostof opened the card by winning at 12 to 1 and J. C. Clem closed it by winning at 11 to 5 as the second choice. There was no particular feature except that Gilpin broke the track record by running the Brooks course in 2:02, the former record being 2:02 1-4. Results:

Mile: Rostof, 107 (Ross,) 12 to 1, won; Rosi Ni Ni, 105 (Goodchild,) 15 to 1, second; Lydia Wrouseman, 105 (Preston,) 7 to 5, third; time, 1:43. Melar, McGrathiana Prince, Jingler, Myrtle H, Moor and Walnut Hill also ran. Phys scratched.

Mile: Buna, 105 (Clark,) 11 to 5, won; Big Store, 107 (Boyd,) 3 to 1, second; Irish Mail, 102 (Ross,) 6 to 1, third; time, 1:42 3-4. Halton, Kamsack, Audubon, Canto Beach and St. Or also ran. Ed Tracy scratched.

Five and one-half furlongs: La Gloria, 106 (Preston,) 11 to 20, won; Silver Stocking, 95 (Archibald,) 13 to 1, second; Mazapan, 105 (Sullivan,) 25 to 1, third; time, 1:07 3-4. Otto Price, My Choice, La Chata and Masedo also ran. Taylor George, Redan, Teddy Mack and Interlude were scratched.

Brooks course: Gilpin, 105 (Hildebrand,) 5 to 1, won; Cello, 95 (Ross,) 2 to 1, second; Lilie B, 84 1-2 (Nichols,) 30 to 1, third; time, 2:02. Chimney Sweep and Los Angelano also ran. Desmages scratched.

Mile: Croix d'Or, 107 (Ross,) 3 to 5, won; Netting, 108 1-2 (Berry,) 12 to 1, second; Parvo, 105 (Preston,) 13 to 1, third; time, 1:42 1-4. Luckett, J. V. Kirby, Golden Light, Needful, Sam Craig and El Verraco also ran. Marpessa scratched.

Mile: Mohur, 102 (Nichols,) 4 to 1, won; Mike Jordan, 107 (Wilmot,) 3 to 1, second; Barato, 107 (H. Smith,) 4 to 1, third; time, 1:44 1-4. Yellow Kid Perdition, Sentado, Comedian, John H. Spartan, Ballaco and Martin Beck also ran. Vandola left at the post. Lisbia, Magnificio, Decimo, Veritas Vincit and Paul I, scratched.

Mile: J. C. Clem, 107 (Ross,) 11 to 5, won; Merlingo, 110 (Preston,) even, second; Madden, 107 (Carroll,) 16 to 1, third; time, 1:41. Rama, Revolt, Hi Caul Cap, Mountebank and Freesias also ran. Joyner, Avalon, Desmages, Stoessel, Woodthrope and Rubinon scratched.

NEW TOURNEY FOR HORSEMEN.

JOUSTING CONTEST TO BE HELD AT HOLLYWOOD.

Novel Event Scheduled for Latter Part of April and Large Entry List Expected from Various Cities—If Show Is Successful It Will Be Given Every Year.

The Hollywood Club has arranged an equestrian tournament to be held April 20. Hollywood residents are so impressed with the scheme that they may make it an annual affair, if this first tournament proves as successful as it is expected.

Besides the fine animals and good riders that are to be entered from Los Angeles, Pasadena and Hollywood, plenty of music and color is to be given to the scene by a brass band and the picturesque get-ups of the participants. Moreover, a touch of romance will be added when the successful knight of the tournament crowns the queen at the ball to be given in the evening at Wilcox Hall.

The grand equestrian march is to start at 1:30 o'clock from Hotel Hollywood. The events of the tourney are to be held up Cahuenga avenue, from Paul de Longpre's house. Nine rings are to hang from wires stretched above the street from side to side, and mounted horsemen will attempt to spear them with lances twelve feet in length. One amusing feature of the entertainment will be a gander race and other minor sports are promised, such as broncho riding and roping. It is said that the people of Hollywood have taken very enthusiastically to the idea, and that every effort will be made to have the tournament a social event.

The committee in charge consists of M. C. Nason, J. F. Graff, J. H. Durant, Dr. E. O. Palmer, G. G. Greenwood and H. C. Belville.

SCIENCE SHIVERS AT NEW GAUGE.

AUTO EXPERT UPSETS PATENT OFFICE AND PHYSICS.

G. A. Bobrick Invents Apparatus to Register Amount of Gasoline in Motor Tank—Authorities at Washington Reject Application for Patent, Saying Is Can't Do What It Does.

A Los Angeles inventor is now on his way East to argue a little matter with the Patent Office. He has invented a gauge that will register the amount of gasoline in the tank of an automobile. The gauge doesn't have to be on the tank, but can be placed anywhere on the car. It can be combined with an odometer, and will register the amount of fuel used to the mile, or the number of miles to the gallon. It can be hooked up with the speedometer, and will show how much more oil to the mile is used when traveling at twenty miles an hour than at forty. It will ring an alarm bell when there are only two gallons, or three gallons, or a pint, left in the tank. Besides this, it is so accurate that if the man says he put ten gallons in the tank, and the gauge shows eight, the driver knows that there have been eight gallons delivered. And on top of this, no amount of slopping around or tipping of the tank can make the gauge move.

This all very wonderful, but the most wonderful part is that the Patent Office won't allow the patent, because the gauge violates a particularly holy law of physics. When application was made, a commissioner returned the application. He said that Boyle's law was in the road of the gauge doing what the inventor said it would. Boyle's law refers to the action of liquids under pressure. Its most familiar action is expressed in the saying that "water always seeks its own level." The ordinary example is a U-shaped tube. No matter what the size of the tubes, if water is poured in, it will rise to the same height in both branches.

G. A. Bobrick is the man who has invented the gauge, and incidentally upset the Patent Office and a law of physics. He is the chemical and physical expert of the United States Liquid Air and Oxygen Company, a man of great experience in mechanical work, inventor of the adiabatic expansion method of producing liquid air, and a graduate of the Institute of Technology of St. Petersburg. He is a Russian, and his name is really Bobrikoff, but he dropped the final syllable when he came to the United States, in 1882. He was a nephew of Gen. Bobrikoff, Governor of Finland, who was assassinated by terrorists some time ago.

Just before he left to show the Patent Office that his gauge would do what he said it would, he discussed the matter of Boyle's law.

"I saw the necessity of a gauge of this kind, when using my automobile in collecting supplies to be sent to San Francisco at the time of the earthquake. Several times I got stranded for lack of gasoline. So I started to make a gauge that would sound an alarm. I used the U-tube principle, but found that there were difficulties. So I started on this scheme—to use the pressure set up by the volume of liquid in the tank.

"I found that it did not work the way it should, according to my conception of Boyle's law. I made tubes, tubes, tubes, of all different shapes and sizes. I put my gauge above the tank, below it, everywhere. Always I got the same result. Evidently here was something not taken account of in Boyle's law. I think the reason is because the pressure is partly pneumatic, and not wholly hydrostatic."

Explained as simply as possible, the gauge consists of a tube running down almost to the bottom of the tank. Its upper end is connected with a rubber hose, which leads to the gauge, wherever it may be placed. In the tube and hose is nothing but air. The hose leads to one end of a modified U-tube, which is partly filled with mercury. In the other end of the U-tube is a float, which rests on the mercury. The float works a plunger, which, through a gear, turns the needle on the register of the gauge.

When gasoline is poured into the tank, it cannot enter the straight tube, because the air in it cannot escape. Instead it sets up a pressure against the air, the air presses against the mercury, the mercury being depressed in one arm of the U-tube rises in the other, in turn lifts the float, which turns the needle. More gasoline in the tank makes more pressure, and the needle turn farther.

So far all is well. But on account of the construction of the mercury chamber, the pressure lifts the mercury in a certain proportion to the amount of gasoline in the tank. This it shouldn't do, according to Boyle's law. It ought to raise it in some other proportion. There's the rub, and Mr. Bobrick is going East to show the Patent Office just what the trouble is.

COURSE IS TRIANGULAR.

Exact Line of Grand Prix Circuit Is Established—Dieppe Is Favored Above Eure for Race.

The course of the Grand Prix has been finally selected by the Commission Sportive. The circuit selected is that known as the Seine Inferieure or Dieppe. The main town in the region is Dieppe, which is situated at the western corner of the course. The circuit is distinctly triangular in shape, with legs about equal. One leg lies its whole distance along the ocast, and it is here, along one of the great beaches of the French north coast, that the grand stands and pavilions will be.

Up to the last moment, the Eure circuit was supposed to be the favorite of the commission. This is a faster and smoother circuit, but very level. The dips and rises of the Dieppe circuit were thought to be a better test for high-powered racers.

Another thing was not forgotten. Dieppe is easily reached by channel steamers from England, and England is a highly enthusiastic motoring country. In addition, there is ample accommodation at Dieppe and the surrounding towns for almost any crowd that could be gathered.

The course is 47½ miles around, and this at once introduces a problem. There are at the present time thirty-four entrants in the Grand Prix, and nine for the cup of the sporting commission. If the cars are started at the short interval of one minute apart, the first one out should arrive after the first lap about the time the last is being started.

BOXING CARNIVAL.

Joe De Soto and Other Fighters to Give Entertainment Tonight in Turner Hall.

Joe De Soto and his friends join tonight in giving a boxing show at Turner Hall. There are to be ten four-round bouts, and a number of other stunts by professional persons. Sickness in Joe's family has put the lad down and out, and he is pulling off this entertainment to recoupe his fortune so as to open a boxing school.

The scheduled bouts are between Kid Solomon and Eddie Menney, DeWitt Van Court and one of his pupils, Jimmie Handler and Frank Kelly, Montana Kid and Kid Dalton, Kid Williams and Young Callahan, Gus Herget and Frank McConnel, Leonard Lauder and Joe Reilly, Kid Lewis and Kid Berry, Frank Fields and Al Hays, Jimmie Walsh and Joe De Soto.

Some of these bouts will have to be rearranged, as for various reasons the principals cannot go on. The goes will only be for points, but some scientific boxing is expected.

The Automobile Club of Buffalo, N. Y., erected forty road signs last year, successfuly fought the six-mile limit in the downtown section of the city, and will take up with the city the question of paving important streets with asphalt.

The Oldsmobile Won

The great race to San Francisco over roads and under conditions which have made it impossible for any of our rivals to get a car through.

THE OLDSMOBILE made THREE attempts to reach San Francisco and THREE times it was successful. Two of our rivals made FOUR attempts to reach San Francisco and FOUR times they failed.

THE OLDSMOBILE traveled the 500 miles over roads that were so bad as to be beyond description. A faint idea of their condition can be gained from the fact that for miles at a time the water reached the body of the car, and in places it was necessary to use the low gear to make headway DOWN a steep grade. At another place the mud was so deep that it ran into the tonneau. Yet through all this the faithful Oldsmobile never failed her handlers but always responded to their will and plunged and plowed her way through to San Francisco in 46 hours and 40 minutes, arriving in Oakland at 3:40 Saturday morning covered with mud but without a scratch, her engine running as true and perfect as when she left Los Angeles at 5:00 o'clock Thursday morning. This feat is probably the greatest ever performed by a motor car, and stamps the OLDSMOBILE as the greatest car in America today. The three trips without a failure have proven that the OLDSMOBILE can "deliver the goods" at all times, under any and all conditions.

When you drive an OLDSMOBILE you drive a winner. Come in and let us show you.

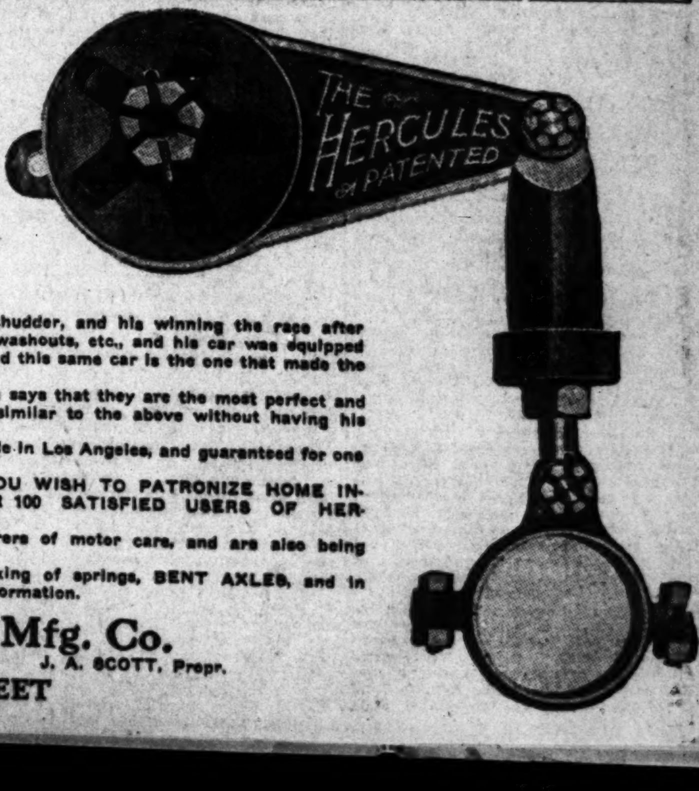
The Oldsmobile Wins
So Does The
Hercules Shock Absorbers



The OLDSMOBILE was the only car that started on one of the most severe tests that a motor car ever went through that was equipped with the HERCULES SHOCK ABSORBERS.

We do not claim that the HERCULES SHOCK ABSORBERS won this race, but we do claim they were a saving to the car to such an extent that it gave Mr. Ralph R. Owen, the veteran road driver, the more confidence in his car and he pushed it onward over roads that would make many shudder, and his winning the race after having gone over the same road on two other occasions through wates, mud, washouts, etc., and his car was equipped with the HERCULES SHOCK ABSORBERS before he took any of his trips, and this same car is the one that made the final and winning run.

Speaking of the HERCULES SHOCK ABSORBERS, Mr. Ralph Owen says that they are the most perfect and BEST shock absorber made today, and he would not think of taking a trip similar to the above without having his car equipped with the HERCULES.

The HERCULES is the invention of a Los Angeles man, and are made in Los Angeles, and guaranteed for one year.

ARE YOU WISE? DO YOU WISH TO SAVE YOUR CAR? DO YOU WISH TO PATRONIZE HOME INDUSTRY? CAN WE SHOW YOU TESTIMONIAL LETTERS FROM OVER 100 SATISFIED USERS OF HERCULES IN LOS ANGELES.

The HERCULES is being adopted by the most prominent manufacturers of motor cars, and are also being manufactured in Chicago in one of the largest plants in the country.

YOUR car needs the HERCULES, they increase speed, prevent breaking of springs, BENT AXLES, and in fact the entire car, and afford you the real pleasure of motoring. Ask for information.

LOS ANGELES HIGH BEATS OUT OAKLAND.

L. A. High, 31.
Oakland, 27.
Pasadena, 22.
Polytechnic, 20.
Ventura, 6.
Throop, 4.
Pomona, 3.
Glendale, 2.
Citrus Union, 2.

Los Angeles High won the annual U.S.C. interscholastic field meet, held yesterday afternoon, on Bovard field, by a score of 31 points; Oakland High came second with 27. Polytechnic fourth with 20 and Pasadena was third with 22.

Munn of Oakland won the individual championship of the interscholastic meet yesterday, on Bovard field, with a total of 21 points, taking first in pole vault, shot put, high jump, and second in the broad jump and hammer throw. His vaulting record of 11 feet 5 inches breaks the national interscholastic record of 11 ft. 3 in., held by himself and Crowley. He also set a new mark in the shot put with 49 ft. 10 in., taking the laurels from Trotter of Santa Paula, who did 49 ft. 7 in., March 16 at Pomona. He attempted yesterday to take the world's interscholastic record of 52 ft. 8 in., held by Ralph Rose, but did not succeed.

Ready, the left-handed hammer thrower from Ventura, outdistanced them all yesterday in this event by over 12 feet 2 inches, and made an attempt at the record held by Richardson of Santa Paula, but failed to set a new mark.

In the high hurdles Robertson, the clever performer for Polytechnic, easily distanced them all, landing first place in the final in 16 2-5 seconds.

Coover of Polytechnic won the 100-yard dash in 10 2-5 seconds, beating La Spada at the tape, it being almost a dead heat. Stine of Glendale showed up in good form and finished a close third.

MILLS DISQUALIFIED.

The only unpleasant feature of the afternoon arose in the mile race, when Mills of Oakland fouled Goodwin of the L. A. High School, according to the judges, and for this was disqualified, which action gave Gordon of Citrus Union third place. Hartwell of Oakland paced this race all the way and took first place. Davis of Pomona was wise enough to let the bunch pace him and came up on the last quarter, winning second. Many found the pace too hot at the beginning and dropped out early in the game.

The quarter mile race was won by Goodwin, captain of the L.A. High School, who took the pole and held it, keeping several yards between him and his nearest competitor. Pasadena High School took places, with Smith winning second and Pike third.

Four men qualified in the first heat of the 220-yard dash because of the large number entering. La Spada of Pasadena won the heat, Coleman taking third. The second heat was won by McDonald, both heats being done in 24s. This order was shaken up in the final, when Coleman took first, La Spada second and McDonald third, the dash being run in the fast time of 23 1-5s.

The half mile race was won by Free and Maddox of the Los Angeles High School, who had it all their own way. Stiles of Ventura came up from the rear and took third from Lee of Citrus by making a fine sprint. It was not a fast race but would likely have been faster had Holmes of Polytechnic, who was out of condition, or Lee of Harvard school, been entered. Both were out because of competing in the meet at Stanford.

The 220-yard hurdles was Lugo's race, and the contest for the other places was between Bristol of L.A. High and Whelan of Polytechnic, with the former taking second place.

GIBBS BEATS MUNN.

Pasadena's pride, Gibbs, the present champion of the broad jump, took this stunt from Munn of Oakland, doing 21 ft. 6 1-2 in. Munn won the high jump, followed closely by Walberg of Poly, and McCready of the L.A. High took one point for his school. Munn won first in the shot and a long-drawn battle occurred between Hendricks of Throop and Walbridge of the L.A. High for the balance of the points.

The relay race was the one that caused brain storms. After the second lap it was apparent that the High School on the hill had the race in its pocket. Oakland, with her supposed crack relay team was never in the race for a minute, Pasadena was second and Polytechnic, although still far behind, was an easy third. Maddox, Bristol, Coleman, and Goodwin each ran well for his school and gained on their opponents at each lap. Goodwin finishing twenty yards ahead of Smith, his opponent from the Pasadena team, on the race. The absence of Streeton, who was ill, perhaps cost Polytechnic a few points in the meet, and he was missed in the relay.

The meet was over and L. A. High had made good her favorite yell, "You can't beat L. A. High." After the relay a hundred of her rooters formed in lockstep and marched over the field, venting their exuberance over winning the meet. Her students were in a preponderance both on field and track and her yell leaders carried things their own way in the bleachers.

A larger attendance greeted the high school boys than was present at the morning meet between Stanford and U.S.C. Cups and medals were awarded winning candidates and teams at a big jolly-up held at the University of California in the evening.

The Oakland High men were in very poor condition, having been on the road for the past two nights. Capt. MacDonald claims that his men would have won the meet had they had a good sleep on Friday evening. The Oakland boys will meet Los Angeles High next Saturday and they feel that by that time they will be able to retrieve the defeats the local boys have administered to them this year.

L. A. HIGH SCHOOL TENNIS TRY-OUT.

The first of the two tryouts of Los Angeles High School to choose representatives to play at Ojai was held yesterday at Central Courts, and was won by W. Dawson, in men's singles, and by the Rogers brothers in men's doubles.

Next Saturday will be held the second tryout, and the gentleman winner will go North with the ones above mentioned to compete at Ojai on April 24. The ladies' singles and mixed doubles will also be played next Saturday, and the winners will meet the Polytechnic team in the near future.

The match between W. Dawson and C. Rogers was the best match of the day, and both did some fine playing. The results of yesterday's events are:

Gentlemen singles, semi-finals: C. Rogers beat A. Davis, 6-1, 6-4; Dawson beat H. Rogers, 6-0, 6-2. Finals: Dawson beat C. Rogers, 6-4, 8-6.

Gentlemen' doubles, finals: Rogers brothers beat Dawson and Davis, 6-4, 6-1.

TENNIS AT CALIFORNIA.

Despite Loss of Long Boys the State University Conditions Are Brightening.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, March 29.—The tennis situation, which, for a time, looked rather bad at the University, is rapidly clearing up. A regular tennis manager has been appointed by Graduate Manager Snedigar, and he is actively arranging for the preliminary tryouts and tournaments. The intercollegiate contest with Stanford will be held on the California courts the morning of the intercollegiate track meet. The tryouts for both singles and doubles will begin next Monday, the men who have entered drawing for competitors. There has been a large number of entries and an excellent tournament is promised.

When Herbert Long, '09, the college champion of last year, and prospective representative for California in the singles this year, left college, the chances for a Cardinal victory looked very bright, Melville Long, '10, is the champion of the Pacific Coast, and would probably prove an easy winner in the intercollegiate singles, but on account of the ruling of the faculty prohibiting freshmen from competing in any 'varsity contests he will not be eligible to represent California in any of the tournaments. There are, however, a number of good players in college who, while they would not show up well against such stars as the Long brothers, nevertheless will be strong factors in the contest with Stanford.

Several good teams have entered in the doubles, Claude Wayne, '07, and C. R. Clinch, '09, will form one of the strongest teams in the competition. Wayne played on the doubles team two years ago with "Bob" Variel, '06, and won easily from Stanford. Clinch has never had a chance to show his ability in an intercollegiate tournament, as the contest with Stanford was not held last year on account of the earthquake.

In the singles Wayne is the most experienced player in college. He was college champion in 1905, and was a close competitor of Long in last year's tournament.

J. B. Francis, '07 and O. J. Lowell, '07, are also a strong team in the doubles. They held the doubles championship of Northern California, and will be hard to defeat. S. D. Harper, '08, and . Gorrill, '08, are two other strong players who are entered in the singles.

CALIFORNIA CREWS.

Squad Narrowed Down to Eleven Men. Eight-oared Shell Has Not Yet Arrived.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

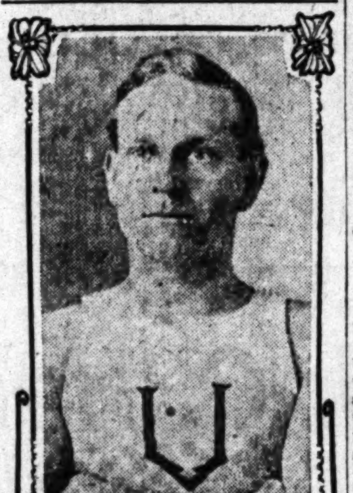
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, March 28.—The crew candidates are hard at work on the estuary, although the continued non-arrival of the eight-oared shells is a very serious handicap to their work. Contestants for seats in the eights have been narrowed down to eleven men. Coach Garnett has diminished the size of the squad in order to allow more individual attention to the men. The freshmen squad has also been narrowed down to thirteen men.

The eleven from whom the 'varsity eight will be picked, are: Seniors—Bush, Williams, McKillican and Evans; junior—Tuller, Ashley, Stow, Ball; sophomores—Witter, Richardson, and Stern. The fight for coxwains position has narrowed to Hubbard '07 and Myers '03.

The freshman squad has been narrowed down to the following men: Ashley, Barry, Battles, Bell, Bennett, Hatch, Land, Merritt, Markwalt, Mortensen, Robertson, Schroeder and Sperry.

Champion Oarsman.

Constance S. Titus, champion oarsman of America, has been appointed rowing coach of Princeton and has assumed his duties. There is not a man in America better qualified by experience for the position. He has been rowing nine months in every year for fifteen years, and has won scores of championships. He won the championship of America twice and has rowed on and coached dozens of victorious crews.



CONSTANCE S. TITUS, champion oarsman of America.

POMONA HIGH WINS.

Defeats Orange County Champions in Very Closely-Fought Game of Basketball.

The semi-finals in the Southern Academic Basketball Union were played today on the L. A. H. S. court between Pomona and the Orange High School team. Pomona won by a score of 15 to 12.

The game was closely contested all the way through and at no time was either team more than two points ahead of the other. To Miss MacFarland, star forward for Pomona, is due most of the credit of winning the game. She is a remarkably fast and accurate player.

Miss MacFarland had the misfortune to injure her ankle quite seriously in the second half, but despite this handicap she reëntered the game and played to the end.

The guarding done by Miss Perkins and Miss Granger for their respective teams was a notable feature of the game, and they did a great deal to keep the score as close as it was.

The contest was clean of fouls and well played by both teams. At the end of the first half the score stood 7 to 6 in favor of Pomona. As it was, the score might have turned out 13 to 12 at the end, but just as the whistle for time blew, Miss MacFarland made the last basket.

The Orange High School girls played as champions of the Orange county league, and the team showed up in fine form. The line-ups were:

Pomona.		Orange.
MacFarland	forward	Putnam
Pocock	forward	Kalar. Morrison
Cogswell	center	Humphreys
George	guard	Perkins
Posten	guard	Granger

Referee, Blair of Poly; umpire, Spencer of Harvard.

AMERICANS GAIN POINT.

Dates for English Tennis Matches Are Arranged for Month Later Than Last Year.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] George R. Mewburn, honorary secretary of the lawn tennis association of England, in announcing that challenges have been received from Australia and the United States for the Davis international trophy, suggests that the challenge round be played at Wimbledon after the British national championships. He suggests, on behalf of the committee of management, that the dates should be July 20, 22 and 23. This is almost a month later than last year, and shows that the Americans have won their struggle for later play for the Davis trophy.

The United States players have first to win their match against the Australians before they enter the challenge round against the holders, the English players. The Australians have Wilding, Brookes and Dr. Sharpe, and this may be a hard handful for the Americans. However, if they get through they will go against the British players under better conditions that those of last year. The weather will be warmer and they will have a better chance to show their skill.

CRICKET MATCHES.

Los Angeles Club Makes Arrangement for Names and Invites All Players to Attend.

Officials of the Los Angeles Cricket Club are showing much energy in getting together those who know the game thoroughly. The aim of the club and of all local admirers of the game is that special matches shall be made among the ordinary players who love the exercise. All such men are invited, and the present secretary, Gerald F. Gadsdon, of No. 1538 Berendo street, will give information of any kind.

The British contingent here can hope to make cricket the most favored and spectacular game played among them here. The club has made arrangements with the Los Angeles Driving Club to use their grounds in Agricultural Park, and at the meeting held a few nights ago, it was decided to have the first match on April 4th. Of this, details will be given later.

DANIELS'S NEW STUNT.

Great Young Swimmer Will Appear Soon in the Role of Back Stroke Performer.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] C. M. Daniels of the New York Athletic Club, whose name has been persistently before the public throughout the indoor swimming season, will shortly appear in a new role, that of back stroke swimmer. In a friendly match held a few days ago the great champion went fifty yards on his back in 34 1-5 seconds, which is more than a second faster than the American record. The most enthusiastic set want a race arranged. Daniels says he intends to go after the records, since he can lower them at will.

LASKER FAR AHEAD.

Great Chess Matter Has Prevented Fred Marshall from Winning Even One Game.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, March 30.—Dr. E. Lasker and Fred E. Marshall, principals in the chess match for the championship of the world, have returned to New York from Memphis, Tenn., where they played their last game, leaving the former with a lead of seven games to none and seven drawn and requiring another game to win the match. It has been planned to visit Kansas City and Chicago, but Marshall demurred. The next game will be played in this city probably on Tuesday.

Marshall states that he will be a competitor in the International Master's tournament at Ostend in May.

Hope to Win Out.

Capt. Garrels of Michigan is depended upon by the Maize and Blue to help win the intercollegiate track championship at Cambridge this year. Garrels is a crack hurdler, discus thrower, and shot-putter, and has beaten everything in the West in the two first events.

Revolver Club Growing.

The new revolver club promises to have things stirring next week, for it is expected that by tomorrow there will be fifty names signed to the membership list. After the lists are collected, tomorrow, notices will be sent out for a meeting to organize the club and

WESTERN CLUB PLANS TOURNEY

TRAP-SHOOTERS TO GATHER IN MAY FOR TWO DAYS.

Dates to Be Set Soon After Fiesta Closes—Added Money, as Well as the Usual Trophies, to Be Offered as Inducements for Visiting Marksmen.

Members of the newly-organized Western Gun Club are making preliminary arrangements toward holding a two days' tournament just after Fiesta week in May. The club has only been in existence about two months, but already numbers many members, and has several squads present at its Sunday practice shoots. A movement to change the second shooting day from Wednesday to Saturday afternoon will be submitted to vote of the members by postal card.

May promises to be a lively month in California trap-shooting circles. The State Association holds its tournament in San Francisco just after the dates claimed by the Western Gun Club, and the Los Angeles Gun Club will hold a two days' shoot early in the same month. In all probability several shoots will be arranged by the country gun clubs at times which will help to form a sort of trap-shooting circuit for that month. This will enable the shooting public to take in all the shoots without losing time and money traveling.

The Western Gun Club has decided to make considerable improvement in its shooting facilities by setting the shooting platform back, in order to obviate the vibration, which is something of a hindrance to the gunners, and will put an awning or roof overhead to screen off the hot summer sun.

Fiesta dates are May 7, 8 and 9, and it is proposed to hold the tournament Saturday and Sunday, May 11 and 12, as the Los Angeles Gun Club's dates are a week earlier, May 4 and 5. Both the local clubs will do a great deal of practicing every Sunday from now on. The Western Club will continue holding two shoots a week, Wednesday and Sunday, until change is made in the date.

San Diego's Pastime Gun Club usually holds a tournament early in the summer, and Corona, Pomona, Oxnard, San Bernardino, Redlands, Santa Ana and other outlying towns usually arrange one-day tournaments to correspond with local dates in order to enable the large number of shooters who attend from the North and South the opportunity to swing around the circuit and take all in at one trip.

RISE IN FAVOR.

Trap shooting, much to the surprise of many who in years past had noted its steady decline, is on the upward track. The new club has renewed activity in the ranks of the older one, and a healthy rivalry which has set in between the two is thought to augur favorably for the future success of a sport which is very generally followed throughout the East.

At the meeting of the Western Gun Club, last Wednesday night, the constitution and bylaws were approved, and several strong game-protective planks were inserted in the club's platform. Any member who violates any game law will be expelled from the club upon sufficient proof being brought before the club's officers. Quite a number of local shooters at one time and another undoubtedly have exceeded the quail limit, although the duck limit, last year, at least, was quite safe from offenses of this sort. Almost every organization of sportsmen has made it a rule to assist in enforcing the game laws, and the Western club has committed itself to do its part.

Work upon the tournament will begin at once, there being a great volume of business to be done in preparing for such an event, particularly when it happens to be the first of its kind for the club. Added money is the form of inducements that has proved most popular with the trap-shooting public, as it affords the good shot a chance to win back his expenses and therefore warrants him in taking more extensive trips than he could afford year after year, were only medals and cups offered. It is proposed to have several trophy events, several local business houses having offered to provide cups or medals. The usual programme will be compiled.

If conditions look propitious as the tournament nears, the time may be increased to three days, although the consensus of opinion is that two days is all the shooters care for, the third sometimes becoming monotonous.

It is proposed to extend the present improvements at the grounds to an extent sufficient to take care of the tournament attendance expected, and to further that end a membership campaign has been started with the result that a number of shooters joined the new club, which now has about fifty members.

Golf Play.

Attracted by the delightful weather thirty-five active members of the Los Angeles Country Club entered yesterday for the first day's play in the club's choice score tournament that includes play yesterday and next Saturday. No scores were turned in yesterday and none will be turned in until after the play next Saturday.

Blue Rock Practice.

The Los Angeles Gun Club will begin today the first of a series of three Sunday shoots for a total of 150 blue rocks. Fifty will be shot at today; fifty on Sunday, April 14 and the final

LEAGUE WILL HELP BOSTON.

Hub's American Team in Need of Assistance.

Shy on Players for Outfield and Infield.

Trade May Be Made With the Chicago White Sox.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The American League magnates are planning to go to the rescue of the Boston American League club and build it up again. Hard luck has followed the fortunes of the one-time world's champions almost ever since Gen. Charles H. Taylor bought the club and put his son, John I. Taylor, into the president's chair.

President Comiskey, talking of the suicide of "Chick" Stahl, today voiced the sentiment of American Leaguers and himself in saying he would be glad to help replace the loss the Boston club has sustained in the death of its captain and leader.

What players would be considered in a deal of this sort cannot be figured out so easily, but it is the policy of the American League—a policy built up by President Johnson—to keep the team and the balances as much together as possible, and at the same time make the organizatin one of close friendship, in which every member is ready and willing to fly to the aid of another if misfortune overtakes any. There have been occasions in the past when one club loaned one or more players to a club, owing to an overwhelming line of accidents serving to practically put the club out of business.

Boston is now shy on an outfielder of high class and a shortstop, due to the death of Stahl and the defection of Parent.

Whether Comiskey had in mind a trade of George Davis for Fred Parent cannot be told. A change of scene for these men might do both good. Parent will not play with Boston, and Davis appears on the outside of the breastworks with the Sox.

FAMOUS BALL PLAYER.

John M. Ward Runs for Office of Justice of the Peace at Babylon, Long Island.

John M. Ward, at one time one of the most famous baseball players in the United States, is running for a political office at Babylon, Long Island. John wishes to be justice of the peace, and has asked the Republicans to elect him to the place. His Democratic opponent is James B. Cooper.

JOHN M. WARD, one of the greatest of old-time ball players.

Ward is admitted to the bar and is practicing in Manhattan. He owns a handsome country place in North Babylon, and for recreation plays golf. Ward was captain of the New York Giants when they defeated the Baltimore Orioles in the famous Temple Cup series in 1894. He retired from baseball after that, although he still witnesses every game his business will allow him to attend.

MEMBERS FOR PISTOL CLUB.

REVOLVER SHOTS SHOWING BIG INTEREST IN PLAN.

Proposed to Go Ahead and Do Business as Soon as Fifty Names Have Signed the Rolls as Members. Indoor Range Already Is in Prospect.

Plans for the proposed Los Angeles Revolver Club are maturing rapidly, and already a number of local pistol enthusiasts have signed the roll. As soon as enough names have pledged their support to the club a meeting will be called to effect organization.

Many crack shots who used to do things to the bullseyes around local shooting galleries in years past have come out of retirement. These men are enthusiastic, and have volunteered their support. Among those who are interested are: Capt. Allen Kelly, Archie Freeman, J. W. F. Diss, W. J. Rouse, Charles E. Gillon, Ernest Somerville, J. L. Von Blon, S. P. Hensley, and a number of others.

It is desired that at least fifty members be assured before any steps toward securing an indoor range be taken. J. B. Wood has offered the basement of the store at No. 530 South Spring street, but the ceiling and one of the walls thereto, at least, will require deadening in order that the noise of the shooting will not bother others above. Estimates on the cost of this and other work do not exceed $100.

Nearly all the prospective pistol-club members are strongly in favor of an indoor range in the business center, saying the outdoor range can well wait until later on. The dimensions of the proposed basement range are such that the full indoor distance can be secured easily for the reduced targets, and three shooting booths can be made, with three targets if need be.

Chief of Police Ed Kern is quite an enthusiastic pistol shot and handles a revolver well. Many police officers may join the proposed club, Tom Rico being one who has already come forward. Former Captain of Police S. P. Hensley handles a revolver very effectively, as does Sheriff W. A. Hammel and Ernest R. Werdin. J. Wallace F. Diss and W. J. Rouse perfected themselves in the art of speedily emptying a revolver during the late unlamented campaign of "Teddy's Terrors." Ex-Sheriff Will A. White, Ernest Somerville of San Francisco, formerly an enthusiastic member of the northern club; J. B. Wood, W. A. Wright, H. L. Bowlds and several prominent National Guardsman are taking an interest in the projected club also and it seems as if the fifty names desired would be secured in a week or ten days.

GOVERNMENT ARM.

Uncle Sam is of no mind to be caught napping in selecting a small arm for the military service next September. The 38-caliber gun now in use has been demonstrated a failure by use in the Philippine Islands by the regulars, and the government does not propose to accept another lemon of the same sort.

The tests this year are to be more severe than ever. What with exposure to a sand bath, long immersion in sal ammoniac solution, rapid fire in long strings of shots without cleaning, not to mention a dozen other hardships to which the various arms submitted must be subjected, it seems as if any revolver or magazine pistol that passed the series of tests ought to be a good enough arm mechanically. In past years very few have done so.

This year the English firm of revolver makers, P. Webley & Sons, will take part in the competition. Their appearance in the lists is not taken seriously by either Colt or Smith Wesson, who stand at the head of the the revolver industry, and are both American makers. In high-grade shotguns this country has still something to learn from the Britishers, but American repeating arms are conceded to be beyond comparison with any made across the water. Particularly is this the case with revolvers. In every wild part of the world where men bear small arms the names of these two great makers are as familiar as they were in Arizona a decade ago.

In some quarters an opinion is expressed that the government may adopt some form of magazine pistol. Some of the improved small arms of this type are said to be reliable in their action and more trustworthy than a revolver. Uncle Sam wants to be shown, however, and it is said that the service arm to be adopted next September will be a revolver of considerable weight and not less than .44 caliber, more likely .45. A modernized edition of the old double-action army seems to be what most of the regular officers favor.

The cry from the islands has been for a "gun that will stop anything it hits." The 45-caliber always had that much to recommend it, the chief drawback being the packing about of so much ordnance.

In one respect the army revolver has always given satisfaction. The government almost without exception has succeeded in improving the handle as compared with the shapes and sizes commonly issued to the trade. More of a revolver's efficiency lies in the proportions of the handle than a nonshooter is likely to believe. The pistol stock is the very soul of snap shooting; it is as essential that it fit the hand as it is needful for the successful wing shot to have his shotgun come properly to his shoulder. Until recently it has been very difficult to get any of the makers to turn out the handles desired, and most of them show a wide margin for improvement.

When the local club is formed it will probably enter the National Revolver Association, to which the dues are only $1 a year. If this is done the local club can compete with other like organizations in all parts of the country in telegraph and mail matches, which would prove very interesting and no doubt exciting also.

The National Revolver Association aims to regulate the sport of pistol shooting in this country, and is in a position to verify records. It numbers many hundreds of members in nearly all the big cities of the Union. Without some such organization records would be in a chaotic state and there would be no way of arriving at anything official in the record line.

INJUNCTION IS MODIFIED.

HELENA (Mont.) March 30.—Federal Judge Hunt today modified the injunction whereby the St. Louis Mining Company will be enabled to resume operations on a rich gold vein which has been in dispute between it and the Montana Company. The St. Louis concern brought suit against the latter and secured judgment for $192,000 for unlawful extraction and it was to argue the appeal in this action that former Senator Brown of Utah went to Washington, only to be killed by Mrs. Bradley last year. The vein adjoins the Drumlummon property.

EXPLOSION KILLS ONE.

YOUNGSTOWN (O.) March 30.—Steve Zeramski is dead and Frank Holsinger is thought to be fatally burned as the result of an explosion at the Lowellville furnace near here today. Six other workmen were severely burned. The explosion was caused by a "slip" in the furnace, which blew out the belt.

Six steamers of 6000 tons and speed of sixteen knots have been contracted for at Tokio by the Osaka Mercantile Marine Company. The vessels will cost about $500,000 each and are to be used in a new American commerce.

MEN ONLY

I Cure the Cases That Others Cannot Cure

A bold statement, but just as true as it is bold. Not all cases that others fail to cure are curable by my methods, but fully ninety per cent. of them are. The way to learn whether your case is curable is to consult me. I know exactly what can be done in every instance. I ought to know this, for I have done nothing else other than treat men's diseases for twenty-five years. If your case is curable I will treat you. If it isn't I will not. If I treat you, and if you so desire,

I Will Wait for

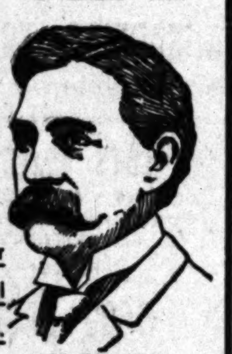
You Are Well.

WEAKNESS

Weakness in men is comparatively a simple ailment and is but a symptom of local disorder, a congestion of an important nerve center. No stimulating treatment, whether internal or locally applied, can do more than excite temporary activity. By my system of local treatment I restore absolutely normal conditions throughout the organs involved, which promptly results in complete and permanent restoration of strength and vigor. This treatment is original with me, and is the only radical and certain cure yet devised.

VARICOCELE

Varicocele is a relaxation, knotting and twisting of the most vital blood vessels of the organic system. It stagnates the local circulation and interferes with the processes of waste and repair. Neglect brings derangement of functions and injury to the general health. Most physicians resort to surgical operations and hospital treatment. I cure Varicocele in one week without operation, pain or detention from business. My cures are absolutely permament and no ill effects whatever can follow my treatment.



DR. TAYLOR
The Leading Specialist

I also cure all special diseases of men such as Hydrocele, Nervous Debility, Blood Diseases, etc.

EXAMINATION FREE

I offer not only Free Consultation and Advice, but to every case that comes to me I will make a careful Examination and Diagnosis without charge. No ailing man should neglect this opportunity to get expert opinion about this trouble. If you cannot call, write for diagnosis chart. My offices are open all day from 9 a. m to 9 p. m., and Sundays from 10 to 1.

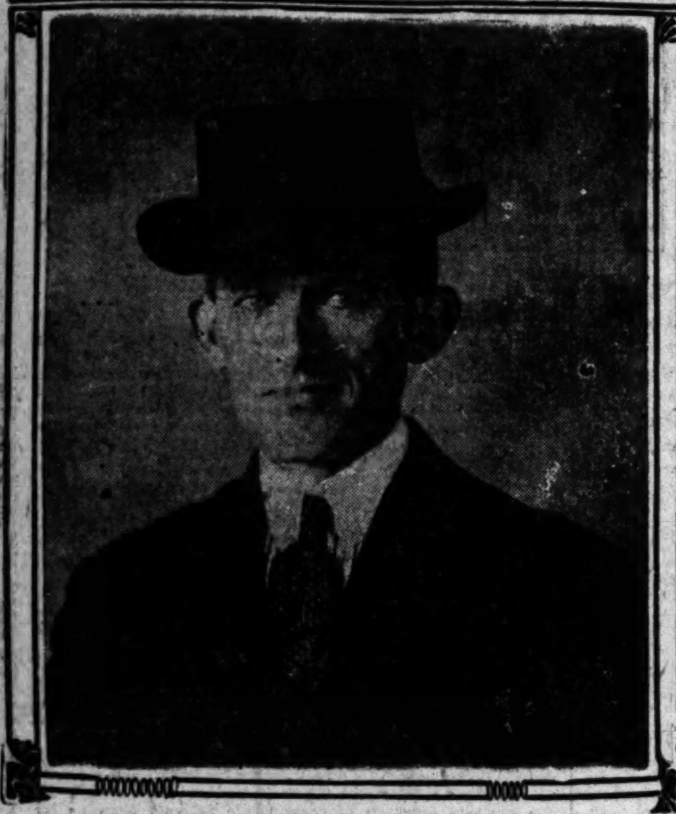
JOE THOMAS WILL FIGHT HARRY LEWIS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dan McKettrick, the manager of Willie Lewis, and Harry Foley, the manager of Joe Thomas, met yesterday and agreed to have their principals fight a short battle, weighing in at 150 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the mill. The managers had little difficulty in coming to an agreement, and it is expected that one of the Philadelphia clubs will put in a bid for the fight.

It was agreed that the managers should meet again on Tuesday next at the Hotel Bartholdi and then open the bids. The highest offer will receive the match. Thomas originally demanded that Lewis weigh in at 148 pounds, but McKettrick said that he could not do it, so Thomas conceded the extra two pounds. Tim Hurst was agreed upon as the referee.



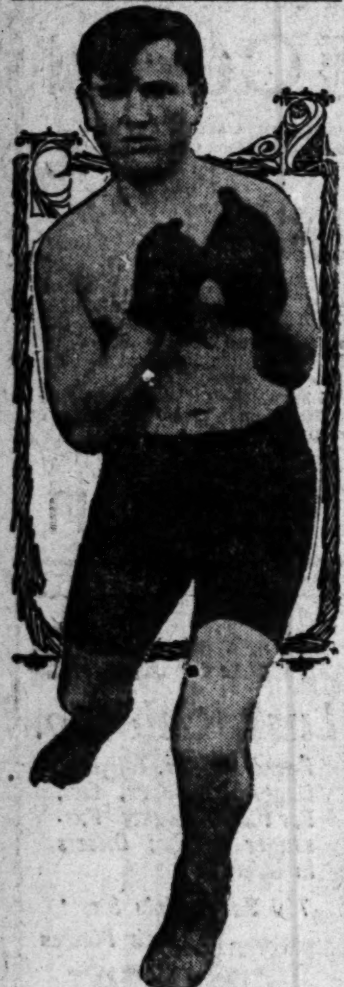
E. E. KEEVIN, manager of Jimmy Walsh, the bantamweight champion.

DORMAN-MURPHY GO.

ARRANGED FOR NEW YORK.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Jack Dorman, the local boxer, and Tommy Murphy, the Harlem fighter, will probably be matched in the near future to clash in a six-round bout before either the Polo Athletic Club or the Sharkey Athletic Club. Johnny Oliver, manager of Murphy, is anxious to have Murphy box Dorman, and as the latter is perfectly satisfied, the prospects are that all details for the contest will be speedily arranged. This ought to be a fast battle, as both lads are rapid fighters.



KID LEWIS, lightweight after preliminary match.

CHANCE FOR BALDWIN.

SIGNS WITH O'LEARY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Matty Baldwin, the New England lightweight, who has been doing such great fighting in the squared circle during the last twelve months, has another match on his hands. His manager, Johnny Mack, signed articles for him to meet Jack O'Leary, the Milwaukee fighter, in a ten-round bout at 128 pounds, weigh in at 3 p.m., before the Green Valley Club of Milwaukee on April 9. O'Leary has not boxed in over a year. He is a good boy, and will probably give Baldwin a hard battle.

TWO OLD ONES SIGN.

TONOPAH GETS A FIGHT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] John Wille, the local heavyweight, who is matched to fight Mike Schreck in Tonopah, Nev., April 15, left for the West with his manager, Jack Curley, tonight to prepare for the contest. All conditions of the contest have been agreed to, and there will be no hitch. The men are to fight for 80 per cent. of the gate receipts.

Wille has been working here for two weeks in expectation of having the fight closed, and will not need a lot of work when he gets to Nevada. Schreck, too, is in fair shape.

Sullivan's Class.

Jack (Twin) Sullivan's easy victroy over Jack Palmer emphasizes the statement that the bald-headed scrapper must be considered for championship honors in some class, whether it be in the middleweight or light heavyweight division. Sullivan has been giving away weight during the last few years, yet has not been defeated. The one decision against him was taken by Jim Flynn, and in that battle Sullivan more than held his own, but lost on rough tactics.

Sullivan can get below 158 with ease, and his challenge to Tommy Ryan cannot be ignored. He has as good a right to fight for the title as Hugo Kelly, with whom he fought a twenty-round draw in Los Angeles, March 9, 1906. He has beaten Tommy Burns and Mike Shreck, two of the very best in the heavyweight division. Another match with Burns would prove a drawing card, as Tommy claims he was weakened by having to make weight. In his last two fights Sullivan cut out his rough tactics, and won the applause of the fans here.

INVASION IS CHECKED.

Jack Palmer's showing in his battle with Jack (Twin) Sullivan here Tuesday night was a keen disappointment to followers of the ring. The Englishman had no chance at any stage of the battle, and his ignominious defeat has hurt the prospects of English fighters in this country. Palmer and Gunner Moir are considered the best of English heavyweights. Moir must be a great deal better than Palmer to stand a show with the Americans.

It is very unlikely that Manager McCarey will become active in promoting other international matches. Jimmy Lowes, manager of Palmer, contemplates bringing over "Digger" Stanley to meet Jimmy Walsh, and Bowker to beat Attell, and has gone to Philadelphia to promote the enterprise. Jack Cox came from Australia with a great reputation; he was outclassed by a preliminary fighter. Palmer's relative showing was little better.

The only man of real class to be imported is Bowker, and a match between him and Abe Attell looks to be the only one practicable at this time. Spike Robson may be considered an exception, for he has made good in Philadelphia. Bill Squires will have to prove his worth against an American before he goes up against Jim Jeffries.

BOXING NOTES.

If Jim Flynn makes the trip to England he may go under Lowes's care. The "fighting fireman" has made good, especially in his two fights with Jack (Twin) Sullivan. This pair seem made for each other. Although Flynn is ten or twelve pounds heavier, Sullivan's cleverness offsets this advantage. In both their battles each inflicted great punishment, and there was not a minute when action dragged. Lowes also has been authorized by London promoters to offer Jimmy Walsh a match with "Digger" Stanley in London, Derby Day, in the latter part of May. Walsh has not yet accepted, as he prefers getting on here.

Young Donahue is endeavoring to get on with some good man here. He is much disgusted with the Salt Lake City fight game. He was to have met Pete Sullivan there Monday night, but the county prosecutor prevented the battle. It seems as though the fight game is dead there. The sports look to Ogden for future contests, but the promoters there fear similar action of the prosecuting officers. Mike (Twin) Sullivan has Donahue in charge. Mike is matched to meet Honey Mellody here April 23, and proposes to get into training for the battle at once. It is understood that the battle is for the title, but the winner will have to fight a few more battles before he can claim the crown.

Joe Angelli, the San Francisco fighter, is here after a match with any 138-pound man in the world. DeWitt Van Court stands sponsor for the boy, as he is one of his old Olympia Club pupils.

Montana Kid is suffering with a very bad hand. He scratched his right and caught cold in the wound. The hand swelled nearly double its size, and blood poisoning threatened, but the injury since has proved not serious.

Joe Riley, who gave Kid Dalton such a hard battle in the all-star card early this month, is out with a challenge to the lightweights. Riley shows considerable class, and with proper handling ought to become a top-notcher.

Tom Sharkey says he has a brother Jack in Ireland whom he proposes to bring over here and "knock the blocks" off all the men now posing as champions, Jeffries, of course, excepted. Tom has as profound respect for Jeff as he has contempt for the swarm of near-champions who are always near-fighting.

Billy Nolan says Gunner Moir is a bit like Sharkey in build. If he is half as good a fighter he should be a match for most of the heavyweights outside of Jeff.

Eddie Kelly of Buffalo may be the first opponent of Freddie Weeks at Philadelphia. The match is considered to be a good one.

The best fight critics in the country say that the man who emerges victorious from the six-round bouts in Philadelphia must have championship timber in him. The distance of these bouts is short, but the pace is terrific.

Gus Herget is going to Tonopah, and while there he may referee some of Mike Riley's bouts.

They say Marvin Hart has "come back," but the pugilistic fans of Los Angeles want to be shown, if there is anything serious in Hart's intentions. Hart and Mike Schreck might not be such a bad card.

Monte Attell has just signed an agreement with the California Club of San Francisco, whereby he is to get $1000 for four four-round bouts.

Battling Nelson is very sore on the Britishers for some reason or other. It is hard to understand just what caused this change of heart, as it was only a short while ago that Nelson was reported to be having a great time over on the other side. At Newcastle-on-Tyne he was supposed to have been dined by the Mayor of that city. Perhaps the action of little Johnny Summers in putting up $5000 for a contest with him at 130 pounds was what upset Nelson's feelings, chiefly.

MELLODY CONFIDENT.

SAYS HE WILL BEAT MIKE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Johnny Mooney and Honey Mellody will start for the Pacific Coast tomorrow to prepare for the championship fight with "Twin" Sullivan, which takes place April 23 at Los Angeles.

Mellody has been doing light work at Westboro for the match, and will go away, with a fair start toward the condition necessary to get to the welterweight limit, at which he will meet Mike (Twin.)

Mellody does not underestimate Sullivan in the least, but is extremely confident that he will end the battle well within the limit. Mellody also says that he will then talk over matters with Thomas.

Stanford Wins Game.

RENO (Nev.) March 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Stanford University overwhelmingly defeated the University of Nevada in the annual baseball game, today, by a score of 11 to 0. Neither team scored in the first five innings, but bunched hits in the last part of the game gave the contest to the Cardinal team.

MINNEAPOLIS (Minn.) March 30.—An order of 40,000 sacks of flour for the famine sufferers in China which is to be shipped to San Francisco free of cost over the Northwestern and Harriman roads, was received today. The shipment is directed by Dr. Klopsch, editor of the Christian Herald.

MODEL "L" is the complete expression of the genius and originality of NORTH-ERN design thoroughly wrought out in the NORTHERN shops—not a of ideas from here, there and everywhere. Our position as leaders in sign, presenting new and vital principles in automobile construction, has questioned.

Comparatively, NORTHERN IDEAS anticipate automobile five years ahead—why not ride with the leader? Let the other fellow ride followers.

SHRINE SIRCUS SURE TO SUIT.

SCORES OF STUNNING STUNTS ADDED TO THE BILL.

Things Never Before Seen Under Canvas Will Be Shown in the Main Tent, Including the Jeffries Strong-Arm Team and the Real Cinnamon Bear in a Spicy Act.

Side-splitting stunts, stunning scenes of spectacular splendiferousness, side shows of surpassing sensation, soul-stirring symphony and simply silly or strikingly sentimental songs have been added during the last few days to the list of attractions at the Shriners' Society Sircus, which is to be given in the sawdust sircle on April 4, 5 and 6.

One hundred and fifty laughs in one hundred and fifty minutes is the promise of the Tody Hamilton of this marvelous aggregation of talent, who goes lame in his good right arm when he tells of the twirling toes of the "terpsicorian" twisters, and coins "connisseur" to fit admirers of the fine riding animals that are to appear in the ring. But he's strong on alliteration and we shall pass him by, ladies and gentlemen, and peep under the tent flap for a minute or two.

Ah, here we see the Jeffries Brothers, John and Dick, the strong-arm team, training for their part. Their trainers say they can put up 1500 pounds each without batting an eye. An English tourist who heard the remark wanted to know if they meant pounds sterling. He was laughed out of the tent.

Ernestine Wolf has composed and dedicated to Al Malaikah Temple "The Jolly Shriners' March," which Ed Kammermeyer, director of the Shrine Sircus Band, otherwise the Catalina band of thirty-five pieces, says is one of the best bits of rapid music he ever has heard. It has a swift Sousa swing and as the opening number at each performance is expected to make a big hit.

Two performing giraffes have been added to the menagerie by Leo Youngworth. They have the genuine spindle shanks and a longer neck reach than any others of their kind in captivity. The High School horse, Mabel Rex, has added a human intelligence act to her repertoire, also a horse laugh.

A cinnamon bear has been discovered by Heine Krohn. He has taken to Heine like a brother, and the pair will be one of the Big Noises of the show.

There is no joke about the skill of the Fremont Zouaves, seventeen in number, said to be the most perfectly drilled body of men in the United States, while the famous Eddy family, high-wire artists and acrobats, will be the headliners of the attraction. Marches and drills by the Entry riders, composers of members of the Crown Hills Riding Club, will be a big feature of the circus proper.

Half a lady is better than no lady at all, and as this is said to be the better half, she ought to make a hit at the side show, which, though it is to be half a mile long, undoubtedly will prove too short to please the crowds that will want to see the freaks which are being gathered from every corner.

And don't forget the concert just after the big show in the main tent, ladies and gentlemen. It will include a programme of fine music and fancy dancing and it will cost but a—well, they haven't decided what it will cost, but it won't be half what it is worth.

This sircus, the side show and the concert are for the general public as well as for the Shriners. There will be seats for all. Although the general impression has gone abroad that the whole thing is more or less of a "josh," there are to be some really remarkable exhibitions.

Ernestine Wolf, composer of "Jolly Shriners' March"

Miss Arabella Copprini A. J. Copp, jr.

Herbert Cornish, Joose clown

These shine in the Shrine Society Sircus.

HAZEL LE DOUX RELEASED.

Hazel Le Doux, who has spent a number of days in jail, as the supposed accomplice of Joseph M. Rodgers, charged with forging the name of John Brink to a check. Rodgers was brought back from New Orleans on Monday, and acknowledged his guilt. He completely exonerated the woman. When her case was called in the Police Court yesterday, the charge against her was dismissed and she was at once given her liberty. She left the Police Station with Kate Wilson, the twain having announced their intention to reform.

NUMEROUS THEFTS.

Many Reports of Petty Thievery Received at the Police Station Yesterday.

R. B. Mills, No. 1721 Westmoreland Place, reported his residence entered on Friday evening, a rear door having been opened with a jimmy. The thief was evidently looking for money, as he "passed up" much valuable plate and jewelry, and took only a few cheap pins, probably thinking they would not be missed. He also found $8 in cash.

From the residence of Mrs. L. D. Black, No. 107 North Olive street, the following articles were stolen on Friday evening. Lady's watch, pair opera glasses, two rings, a black lace suit and a long, broadcloth coat.

Miss May C. De Coursey, No. 742 South Grand avenue, reports a watch stolen from her apartments on Friday.

F. Bradley, of No. 830 Bartlett street, reports his house entered and his trousers, containing a wallet and $15 in money and a ring, stolen therefrom.

Raymond Killian, who was arrested on Thursday, on suspicion of having stolen articles from the Polytechnic High School, had his preliminary examination on a robbery charge before Justice Chambers yesterday. The evidence was not sufficient to satisfy the judge and the case was continued until Monday. The boy is said to have pawned a clarinet that was taken from the building.

DEATH OF UNKNOWN BOY.

A 14-year-old boy was playing on Buena Vista street on Friday afternoon and was taken suddenly ill. He was taken into No. 632½ Buena Vista street, and died there during the night, the people claiming to be entirely ignorant of the boy's identity. The body was sent to Pierce Brothers' morgue. It is that of a Mexican or Spanish-American.

Clark Connors, was struck by an Interurban car, at the corner of Eighth and Flower streets, yesterday morning, but suffered slight injury. His wounds were dressed at the Receiving Hospital. Norman Divine, a messenger boy, was thumped by an automobile, and received a small cut on his head. A few stitches were taken in the wound, at the Receiving Hospital, and he went out to get another.

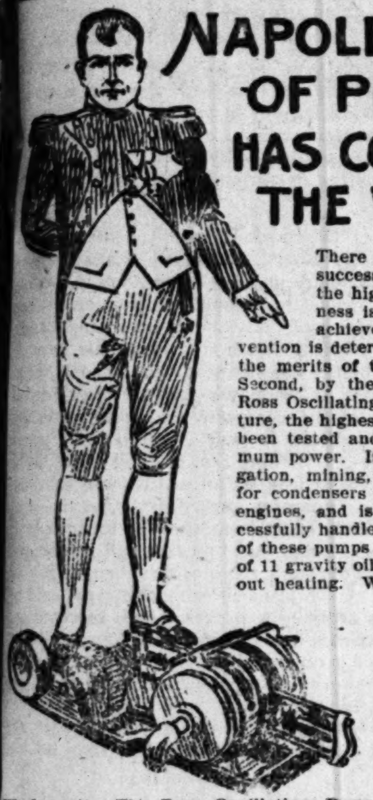
Buy Ross Oscillating Pump Stock Now at $2.00 Per Share

Only a Few Days at This Price---It Will Be a Good Investment Later at $25 Per Share

The capital stock of the Ross Oscillating Pump Co., is now worth $2,000,000. The sales of the past week at $1.00 per share have proven the merit of our enterprise, and the appreciation of the investor.

A limited amount of this stock will now be sold at $2.00 per share to secure sufficient capital to complete and install Factory No. 2. Our next raise will be to $5.00 per share, as soon as Factory No. 2 is completed, if not before.



NAPOLEON OF PUMPDOM HAS CONQUERED THE WORLD

There is nothing which succeeds like success. The world's demand is for the highest and the best. Man's greatness is determined by his merits and achievements. The value of an invention is determined by two things. First, by the merits of the article to be manufactured. Second, by the demand for the same. The Ross Oscillating Pump is the simplest in structure, the highest in efficiency and capacity, has been tested and tried. Is operated with minimum power. Its demand is universal for irrigation, mining, packing-house and ice plants, for condensers on the marine service, for fire engines, and is the only pump that can successfully handle liquid asphalt. At present one of these pumps is forcing fifty barrels per hour of 11 gravity oil to an elevation of 66 feet without heating. We have sold four more double the capacity duplex pumps to go to these same oil fields as soon as they can be built. A GOOD RECOMMENDATION FOR THE ONE IN SERVICE. A word to the wise is sufficient. If you buy a pump you will surely buy the simplest pump, the best pump, the pump that does the best work with the least power. We have it. The Ross Oscillating Pump is the conqueror of its field upon this valuation. We will soon begin building in Chicago. We are already well advertised in that city. The responsibility of our company and the merits of the Ross Oscillating Pump are receiving the highest commendation of the largest presses of the United States.

These Factories Will Assure Large Dividends

There are many who are disappointed because they did not know of this marvelous opportunity for an investment while the stock was cheap, but it is a better investment now at $2.00 per share than it ever has been at a cheaper price. The greater the value the less risk. This stock is in its infancy now in comparison with the value it will soon attain.

The opportunity is still open for a ground floor investment. Our advancement in the future will surely be greater than in the past.

The day of questioning is past. Living in the present and looking forward to the wonderful possibilities of the future we have every reason to expect great achievements and large dividends from the Ross Oscillating Pump Company.

We are to manufacture a staple article, costing 20 per cent. less than the average pump of its kind, which will net us 100 per cent. profit. The simplest in structure, the highest in efficiency, requiring minimum power for operation.

The demand is unlimited. Enormous profits are assured. Our company is under the control of expert management. Our officers are working for their own interests as well as for the interests of every stockholder. If you wish to engage in a business where the amount you invest is safe and will bring you larger returns than it possibly could by your giving your undivided attention and laboring from morning till night to earn a living, invest your money in an enterprise which is established upon the Pacific Coast to stay where larger profits are assured than from any other enterprise offered for investment. For full particulars call at our offices and we will cheerfully answer any questions. Call, write, wire your reservation. We will fill your order at $2.00 per share if sent before the raise. Remember! Time is short.

WE DECLARE WITHOUT QUALIFICATION THAT OUR PACIFIC COAST FACTORIES WILL BE EQUIPPED WITH THE MOST COMPLETE, MODERN AND UP-TO-DATE MACHINERY THAT THE TWENTIETH CENTURY CA NPRODUCE. WE WILL HAVE THE BEST, MOST MODERN AND UP-TO-DATE MACHINE SHOP WEST OF CHICAGO.

goods have been exhausted. There has been no butter in the valley for two weeks. These facts can but vaguely present the strained condition.

Six big teams are struggling through the mountains to St. George, 110 miles away, to get supplies, but it is feared that washouts will force them to turn back. Las Vegas is but seventy-eight miles distant, but no wagons can get through. An effort is to be made to take food from Kingman, Ariz., crossing the Colorado River at Scanlan's ferry.

A storm has raged in the Gold Butte region for the last two days that is said to be the worst in the memory of old-time settlers. The Virgin, at times but a step across, is a raging torrent 300 yards wide. Three bridges have been swept like chips down toward the Colorado. Wagons are mired down to their beds at various points along roads which are now useless. Mail is transported on saddle animals, and not without grave danger.

LITTLE KNOWN TO WORLD.

To the outside world little is known of the valley of the Muddy, and the new mining region of Gold Butte. Prior to the building of the Salt Lake Railroad that country was practically isolated. The beautiful, fertile valley was settled by Mormons fifty years ago, but many moved away when back taxes on the land were imposed upon them. They went hurriedly, as if pursued by the plague, a number of them leaving their stock and household goods behind them. At that time it was thought that the land was in Utah. When the mistake was discovered several years later a new generation of Mormons returned. Today a fairer little valley is not to be found in all Nevada. With the advent of the railroad a new market has been formed for fruits and produce, which, on account of early delivery, command big prices in Salt Lake or Los Angeles. Once becoming dependent on the railroad, the big freight teams that had been hauling from Modena, in the Meadow Valley, were abandoned and roads were no longer kept up. When the iron horse failed to sidetrack freight at Moapa the valley reverted to its former state of isolation.

NOT DISCOURAGED.

A serious setback to mining interests has been occasioned by the heavy floods, but great development in and about Gold Butte is predicted for the summer. A townsite is being laid out, and steps were taken by miners assembled a few evenings ago for the establishment of a new mining district. N. E. Sharpe, general manager of the Granite (Nev.) Gold Mines Company, is getting in material for the construction of a general store 24x60 feet, with a cellar 20x30 feet underneath. Sharpe is postmaster at Gold Butte, and will move the office into this building. Hotel accommodations are under way. Already eleven lots have been sold. There are 200 men mining and prospecting in the district, and good showings are developing on a number of properties.

Walter Topping has closed an option on Cobb Bros.' copper property, and it is said Schwab capital is behind it. A new strike was made on this property last week, and Cobb Bros. tried to block the deal. A new townsite called Copper Gulch was launched day before yesterday, four miles north of Gold Butte, as a result of the sale. The Moapa Commercial Company is rushing material for a general store at the new town. And it also sees money in a saloon, so it will have one.

Beyond Gold Butte the Grand Gulch and Savagic properties are taking out rich copper ore, and the Arizona Cañon Copper Company put on a large force last week. Work was commenced on the continuance of the Gold Butte company tunnel, which is now in 488 feet.

A new strike has been made at a depth of eight feet from the old workings on the Centry and Bonilla copper, adjoining Gold Butte, which was recently purchased by the Grand Gulch company.

BUSY "CENTRAL."

Attractive Features of the Big New Department Store Attract Large Crowds.

The first week of the Central Department Store's existence has passed into local history, and proprietors, managers of departments and salespeople, expectant at the outset, talk with wonder of the constant crowds who visited the store and of the great bulk of business done.

It was said by the manager last evening that the first week's business was beyond the expectation of the firm, and that the trade, as shown by the deliveries, reaches out over a vast territory.

The Central Department Store occupies the building at Nos. 609 to 619 South Broadway. While its display of fresh, seasonable goods is of itself an attraction that needs no embellishment, the interior of the big store has been adorned with an elaborate series of electric globes enveloped in deep-tinted tulips. The effect both in daylight and when the lights are turned on is exquisite.

One feature of the new shopping place is the daily afternoon concert. Arend's Orchestra has been giving fine programmes, and the management has arranged for afternoon recitals by popular vocalists. This will be a permanent feature of the Central.

The establishment consists of three stories and basement. The Lamson system of electric cash carriers has been installed, and the cash from every sales counter is carried directly to the cashier's office on the mezzanine floor, while the goods go directly to wrapping counters located on line with the shelves, so that there is no tedious waiting for parcels or change.

The store has a photograph gallery, reading parlors, rest-rooms, manicure parlors, hairdressing parlor and a French room, where the very latest novelties from the French capital are shown exclusively. The Sing Fat Company of San Francisco, probably the largest importer of Japanese and Chinese goods in America, has an attractive branch in the new store.

The Central Department Store will give employment to about 400 people, and even in one week's time its corps of salespeople and helpers have fallen into the system adopted by the house, so that the entire establishment is moving along without the least friction. It is hard to realize what this means without familiarity with the immense amount of detail work connected with the operation of a great department store.

The store opens at 8:30 o'clock each morning, and the employés are given a full hour for luncheon. Closing time comes at 6 in the evening and there are to be no night openings.

The crowds on the opening day were immense; but the large numbers of visitors and shoppers yesterday exceeded all expectations and set a mark for the Central which stamps it with the approval of popularity.

E. Diesenberg and A. and H. Prenzlauer, formerly of Sault Ste Marie, Mich., are at the head of the big establishment. They boast with pride that the Central is as complete in its appointments as any store of its kind on the Coast leisure hours, during which they are not corecting examination papers, or studying how to deal with forty-five different boys and girls. At the end of a month they have their salary clear.

TEACHERS IN DESPAIR.

Los Angeles teachers who have taught five years or more receive $820 a year in most of the grades, which, divided by twelve, means $68.33 1-3 per month. Good board with a room costs from $30 a month upward, generally upward; laundry bills from $3 to $5 a month; car fares $2 and upward; dress not less than $15. Add to that necessary literature, lectures, concerts, church dues, fees for teachers' institutes, charitable donations, and other incidentals, and at the end of the month, which has the most money, the teacher or the housemaid? The teacher has spent years in preparing for her work. Very few house girls have had any special training, and many none at all.

NO CHANCE TO RELAX.

"The public at large," says another teacher, "seem to think that teachers are paid enough, since they receive more than stenographers and bookkepers, as a rule. The state of my own finances shows how poorly we are paid, when everything is considered.

"I receive $70 a month, ten months in the year. My actual monthly expenses are as follows: Rent, $15; supplies, $16 (I keep house with a friend;) laundry, $5; gas, $1; clothing, about $5; car fare, $2.50; periodicals (two of them educational,) 50 cents; theater, $1.50; trips to the country, $3; payment on lot, $12.50; small birthday gifts, etc., amounting to about $1; total, $64. That leaves me $6 a month to save for the long summer vacation, and does not include the extra expenses of Christmas time or any trip of some length.

"With about $72, then, by denying myself some of the things mentioned above, I was last year able to save $90. I face nearly three months of vacation. For that sum I cannot go to Lake Tahoe or Yosemite or any of the beautiful places that would refresh and uplift me, and make me better fitted to do the high work entrusted to me. I can but stay at home, and rigidly economize, with only an occasional trip to the beach or to the foothills.

"Last summer, to fit myself more thoroughly for my work, I attended the Berkeley summer school for a month, but I am in debt for it still.

"Our work is a profession, and three of our best years are given to preparing for it, with constant expense and no income. After we become active teachers, there is such a constant drain upon our spiritual and mental resources, that we cannot keep alive in these respects without some recreation and travel. The result is that we are always poor, even penniless, and even so we cannot have any social position—it costs too much for clothes—we cannot be surrounded by the things our higher natures crave, the influences that would keep us broad and sweet; we cannot even dress as the dignity of our position demands.

"I long ago decided that teachers cannot be maximally efficient nor personally contented at a salary of less than $100 a month."

PURSE EMPTY, ENERGY GONE.

The following is from a teacher who receives $780 a year, and her principal pays her the compliment of saying that she has a genius for bringing out the best in the pupils, a hard worker, and a real missionary in the schoolroom:

"After one has met the requirements of a grammar school, high school and normal, she sets forth to prove herself capable before a board of trustees. Then come demands as varied as her fifty-five pupils. Each child not only is a separate problem, but many problems. The teacher just gives, and gives, and gives all that it is possible for one to give to another—time, skill, energy, patience, comfort, correction, punishment and love.

"What is the recompense—an empty purse, and a worn out body. The demands upon the teacher have increased daily; the returns have daily lessened."

LABORERS BETTER OFF.

"To one who has spent at least $2000 and four years' hard work for a university education, the maximum salary of $820 a year, or $68.33 a month, in the grammar grades, is not sufficient," says another teacher.

"Aside from the bare necessities of living, what is left for broadening one's self in the way of lectures, university extension courses or summer school sessions?

"Day laborers are getting more than ever before, the city officials five months ago received an increase of salary. Is it not time for the teacher to receive greater remuneration?"

IS THIS SALARY RIGHT?

From a teacher who is paid $780 a year:

"When the uneducated laborer, whose wants are few, whom society does not compel to dress in anything but his working clothes can obtain wages amounting to $3 a day, how can it be expected that a woman teacher, who has been reared and educated under the most favorable conditions, who had to spend hundreds of dollars for her training, who is expected to look neat and well gowned at all times, who must keep up intellectually with all standards and yet is exposed to the criticisms of all classes, can make both ends meet.

"How can such a person live on $66 a month when prices have more than doubled during the last five years? And do people generally realize what woman's dress means, when expenses for little necessities run up to considerable amounts?

"And is she always free to spend her little income for herself; must she not frequently help to eke out the daily bread of the family or support an invalid parent?

"Is she not at all times called upon to contribute from her little store to various demands of a public or private character? And all this time she must give her best energies—physical as well as mental—to one of the most serious and most responsible occupations, that of raising and educating a number of growing children to become men and women, worthy and respectable citizens.

"Is $66 adequate pay?"

A teacher who is paid $68.33 a month says:

"Divided by two, as I am supporting my mother, this gives $34.16 a month for each of us. Out of this money I pay the rent of a flat, $23.50. When living expenses are subtracted, nothing is left for laundry or sewing, and these must be done at home on Saturdays. Lectures, theaters or opera are seldom enjoyed."

Here is a teacher who has estimated closely the increase in living expenses:

"The price of board has increased 40 per cent.; laundry of waists and fine articles, 100 per cent.; laundry of plain articles, 50 per cent.; millinery, 50 per cent.; clothing, 10 per cent.; sewing by the day, 50 per cent.; dressmaking, 50 per cent. and up.

"Besides these increased expenditures, there are many incidentals—doctor, dentist, reading matter of a professional nature, lectures and musicales."

Here is a telling example of a year's expense and a salary which do not match: Board, $480; laundry, $100; doctor and medicines, $25; dentistry, $15; car fare, $50; railroad fare, $25; toilet incidentals, $18; stationery, $5; clothing, $375; total, $1093. Salary, $740.

Another list counts board at $480; clothing, $275; laundry, $78; doctor and dentist, $50; books and magazines, $50; pleasure trips, theaters, etc., $75; incidentals, $100; total, $1168. By omitting doctor and dentist, books, pleasures and incidentals, as many are obliged to do, the total is $893. The salary is $820. The deficit of $73 a year has to be saved by walking or going without lunch, or scrimping from clothing.

The Strength of "Mohawk-Johnnie"

Throughout the week ending with March 30th, "Mohawk-Johnnie" mining stock exhibited the strength which has characterized it since the first day it was called on the San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board. Yesterday the stock closed on the Los Angeles Exchange at 17½ cents bid and none offered at any price, and on the San Francisco Exchange at [illegible] cents bid and 20 cents asked. The week's exchange transactions were not numerous; this was not because of lack of demand for the stock, but because of the disinclination of holders to sell at bidders' figures, as generous as they were compared with the prices practically all of these holders originally paid. The fact is, buyers are plenty and sellers few, with every prospect of them growing fewer. The week was a slumpy one for mining stocks, generally, and the fact that despite this unfavorable condition the market strength of "Mohawk-Johnnie" was sustained on both the San Francisco and Los Angeles Stock Exchanges is peculiarly [illegible] of the esteem in which the stock is held by the investing public. Only a stock representing admittedly rich mining [illegible] could thus sustain a position at variance with the trend of the market.

Prior to the listing of "Mohawk-Johnnie" on the San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board, we sold 100,000 shares of the stock at 10 cents per share, mostly to persons in Los Angeles and vicinity. A surprisingly small proportion of the buyers has seen fit to take profit on their investments, despite the generous advances offered. Such trading as has occurred in the stock on the exchange has been in the 100,000 shares referred to. Not one share of "Mohawk-Johnnie" stock owned by officers or directors of the company or by ourselves has been disposed of or even offered for sale. The "inside" people with "inside" knowledge are holding fast to their stock, [illegible] firm in the faith (a faith based on the most intimate acquaintance with the company's properties and affairs) that the stock will in time, a comparatively short time, too, sell for at least [illegible] cents per share. Every order to buy or sell "Mohawk-Johnnie" executed for us through the stock exchanges has involved, solely, portions of the 100,000-share allotment sold by us within 60 days at 10 cents—the orders to sell representing actual profit taking by clients and the orders to buy representing actual investment for profit making, we wish to make this statement with all of the emphasis possible and to stake our reputation upon its accuracy, notwithstanding the [illegible] of one or two disgruntled borkers vainly hoping to bear the stock that some of it may be gathered in at less than its real worth.

The exploitation of the two leases owned by the Mohawk-Johnnie Company—the Rathbone and Beauregard leases on the Johnnie consolidated property in the Johnnie District—is being prosecuted with most gratifying results, the pile of rich ore growing larger each day, and when milling facilities are ready a huge quantity of the richest ore ever found in the Johnnie District will be available for reduction. Good [illegible] rock and plenty of it is back of "Mohawk-Johnnie," and that is why the stock so tsurdily withstands stressful market conditions to which other stocks and meritorious ones, too, [illegible]

We repeat the admonition of former letters—[illegible] your "Mohawk-Johnnie" and buy more, all you can, at present prices.

ARE PAINTING TOWN. RED.

Strawberries Again Reign in Epicure's Kingdom.

Sun-kissed Slopes Near Sea Yield Fragrant Fruit.

Industrious Japanese Growing Rich on Profits.

BY HENRIETTA B. FREEMAN.

Have you noticed, during the past ten days, how the fruit markets have been reddening with strawberries? Owing to the unusual amount of wet weather, the strawberry season is a little late, but the first of April finds us in full enjoyment of this most luscious fruit which is literally painting the town red.

Of course, strawberries may always be found in Los Angeles markets from January to December. There is not a week in the whole round year that they are not shipped in from the 1500 acres, more or less, that are devoted to their culture within marketable distance of Los Angeles. But it is the spring and summer strawberry that "takes the shortcake." It needs sunshine, and lots of it, to bring this luscious fruit to its perfection. From now until August this queen of berries will be with us in ever-increasing quality and quantity.

The berries you are now eating come from Moneta and Gardena, from the sun-kissed slopes that lie 'twixt here and the sea, where the mowing machine is making music in the fragrant hayfields these June-like days. The earliest breath of summer strikes the gently rolling mesas lying Redondoward, and there it is that 500 acres are now yielding up their crimson fruitage for Los Angeles markets.

JAPANESE GROWERS.

It is largely to the little brown men of Japan that we are indebted for our strawberries. Fully 90 per cent. of the growers are Japs. From early morning till late at night, hundreds of them are bending over the fields—men and women—for the Japanese wife is the literal helpmeet of her husband and works side by side with him in the field. During the past winter thirty women have come over from Japan to help their husbands raise strawberries. Armed with their little short hoes they bend daily to their task of cultivating the plants, or picking the fruit. Every afternoon at 4 o'clock dozens of wagons, piled high with crates, flock to the way station at Strawberry Park, where the waiting freight car is loaded and the fruit sent cityward.

GOOD FRIDAY FRUIT.

The largest shipment of the season to date was last Friday night, when 852 crates, or more than 10,000 baskets, were shipped into Los Angeles for the Easter market. The daily shipments throughout the season average 800 crates, or 24,000 boxes, from this one point. The largest single shipment was on a certain July day last year, when 1640 crates, or almost 50,000 boxes, were sent out. About 400 Japanese are engaged in strawberry culture in these fields alone, where are now 500 acres under cultivation, with an additional 650 acres being set to fruit.

RAISING BERRIES PAYS.

The wages paid to these Japanese gardeners is never less than $1500 weekly. It pays to raise strawberries. William Pitman, who is the Moneta middleman between the Japanese and the wholesale marketmen, has figured the matter down to a fine point. He says the little brown men clear as high as $300 per acre annually from strawberry culture.

"It costs exactly 80 cents," he says, "to raise a crate of strawberries and put it on the market. First, there is the 15 cents for the baskets. Then it costs 45 cents to get the berries picked, 12 cents commission for selling, 3 cents for freight, and the cost of irrigation and cultivation comes to 5 cents per crate. The Japs lease the land at from $15 to $20 per acre and pay from 50 cents to $1 for the water to irrigate once a week."

The Japanese are shrewd little fellows. At first thought, one wonders why they do not buy the land outright, since their profits are so very large. A very good reason, my friend. There is no fruit or vegetable so exhaustive to the soil as this same luscious strawberry. After three years it positively refuses to grow another berry in the same bed and demands a complete change of soil. The beds have to be plowed up and set to vegetables or alfalfa. This is not a mere temporary arrangement, either. The strawberries seem to have a long memory, for the tale is told by experienced growers of the disastrous attempt to make them thrive again on an old strawberry patch that, eight years before, had given up its last crop of berries and since had been devoted to the culture of vegetables and alfalfa. Scarcely a single berry showed its red head and the Chinaman, to whom the land had been leased, groaned sorely over his losses and only recouped his fortunes by a return to vegetable culture.

WISE LITTLE CHAPS.

So you see, it is much better business for the Japanese strawberry specialist to lease the land and, at the end of four years, move on to pastures new and virgin fields. That's why he doesn't buy, the wise little brown man.

Nearly all leases run four years and this is the way the expert strawberry gardener manages. The first year he plants one-half his tract to berries and the other half to vegetables in order that the latter may keep up expenses while the berries are getting in shape to produce. If he allows his strawberry plants to fruit the first year he will regret it the second, for they require that time to grow in order to insure heavy fruitage. By following this plan he sows the first half of his land to vegetables the fourth year after the strawberries have had their innings on that part of the patch and so he always makes the most of his ten-acre garden. He rarely leases a larger tract than this.

The berries now on the market are the Excelsior, Lady Thomson and Klondyke varieties, and a little later the famous Tropico Beauties will come on. Burbank is another locality where splendid berries grow and where a colony of the industrious little Japanese has recently taken up large tracts for this purpose. A new shipping point has just been opened this season at Arcadia and 400 acres around that locality and Monrovia have been set to berries. The first shipment from this new field came in last week.

Green peas and rhubarb come hand in hand with the Easter strawberries. The pea fields roundabout Moneta are white with blossoms now and the pods are fast filling with the fresh green peas. Marketmen are bewailing the fact that the apricot crop up north, from whence comes our supply, is a total failure this year owing to the wet weather and heavy frosts in the Santa Clara Valley. Vacaville, that narrow, sun-baked valley to the north of Sacramento, may be depended upon for our earliest cherries and Haywards is sending in three carloads of rhubarb per week just now.

The improvements will be permanent and substantial. There is already in operation a powerful pumping station operated by a plant of 160-horse power. The force of the pressure and the abundance of the water obtained may be judged by the fact, that a gusher is thrown by it to a height of 120 feet in the air. Pure water will be piped to the lots. Ramona Boulevard, a magnificent speedway 180 feet wide following the line of the electric railway to Covina, passes through Wilmar. Streets will be graded and oiled. Cement walks and curbs will be installed. Power and electric light will be obtainable. Schools are close by. No desirable home convenience will be absent, and every modern advantage of a business and manufacturing community will be provided.

Chino Ranch

The greatest opportunities agriculturally in Southern California today, whether for fortune earning from the cultivation of the soil or for quick and sure profits from a speculative standpoint, is to be found at Chino Ranch—the most productive and prosperous rural community in the entire State.

Hundreds of settlers are established at Chino and with a minimum of labor are quickly laying the foundation of independence. It has been proved without question that Chino lands, abundantly watered as they are, yield greater returns to the industrious rancher than any other in the West.

You ask WHY this is so? Stop to consider the unequaled natural advantages—the deepest and richest of soil capable of producing every profitable crop known to Southern California, fruits, berries, alfalfa, sugar beets, onions and potatoes, vegetables; favorable climate; known to be the most abundantly watered lands in the West; flowing wells are not uncommon; nearness to markets that pay big prices for all that can be raised.

Then consider the location—35 miles east of Los Angeles, connected by three transcontinental railroads, with a suburban electric line building.

Best Watered Ranch Lands
In Southern California

Chino Ranch is not a section where you must "pioneer." It is a community dotted with prosperous homes, where social life is active and model schools and fine churches are accessible. The soil is so responsive and the nature of the climate and agricultural facilities so favorable that Chino ranchers have abundant time for self-culture and refinement while their lands are yielding big incomes. Metropolitan advantages can be enjoyed here.

It is not unusual for settlers to pay for their land the first year from the products of the soil. Alfalfa, sugar beets and vegetables planted between the rows of young fruit trees not infrequently yield large enough returns to cancel the purchase price of a farm.

Large capital is not necessary. Ten acres has been made to support a family in comfort. The company will assist settlers in becoming established through the aid of loans from Southern California banks. The Chino beet sugar factory pays a high and unvarying price for every ton of this product. Chino needs more industrious settlers. Are you willing to seize the wonderful opportunities it offers?

Big Boom Is On In Beatty

Beatty is Destined to be the Chicago of Nevada

The boom is on in the great Nevada mining town of Beatty. Hundreds of people are pouring in. Two railroads are now operating into Beatty and a third is building in. Beatty is rich in gold and ideal in location. It is an oasis upon the Nevada desert. Beatty possesses the best water supply in Nevada. Beatty now has one of the finest hotels in the west erected at a cost of $100,000. A bank with $300,000 capital is now being organized. A perfect system of electric lighting is now being installed. This wonderful town in taking on metropolitan airs, and has everything to guarantee its permanency. In the district of which Beatty is the center, are a score of shipping mines, having millions of ore blocked out and contributing to the business done in Beatty.

Here are a few of the millionaires and business hustlers who are identified with the public and private business interests of Beatty, viz: Senator W. A. Clark, Charles M. Schwab, Robert Montgomery, J. Ross Clark, E. S. Hoyt, Dr. W. S. Phillips, J. E. Meyer, etc.

Old man Beatty years ago prophesied that the spot would some day become the site of a great city. He knew that it was the logical location for a great town, and his prophecy is coming true. Far sighted business men are building railroads, establishing banks, installing water works and lighting plants, building hotels and stores and opening up great mines in and around. Beatty is a center of transportation. Automobile express and passenger service is established between Beatty and other camps off the line of the railways. The entire district for miles in all directions is a beehive of activity and well applied energy.

Lots on Main Street in Beatty are being snapped up at $1,000. Lots on adjacent streets are selling at $100 and upward. These lots will go to $1,000 or even $20,000 and perhaps higher, in a very few months. Do you know the history of Reno, Tonopah, Goldfield and other great mining towns? If you don't know from actual observation you may learn from current information that nowhere in all this broad land do towns and cities grow with such amazing rapidity as in this glorious West, and mining towns often spring up overnight.

The advances of real estate prices in no city of the West are comparable, for suddenness, with the jumps that lots in lucky mining towns make. Lots in Goldfield which sold for $100 to $500 a year or two ago now bring $1,000 to $20,000.

The same advance is starting in Beatty, and it is expected that Beatty will surpass many of the older towns and become a greater railroad center than any other mining town in Nevada.

A Few Reasons Why Beatty Will Become a Metropolis

1. Beatty is situated in a district fabulously rich in mineral deposits, and having a number of famous mines—the great Montgomery-Shoshone, the Tramp Consolidated, Gibraltar, Homestake Kink, Golden Sceptre, Daisy, Victor and many others.

2. Beatty has three railroads—the Las Vegas & Tonopah, branch of the Salt Lake Road, now running into town; the Bullfrog & Goldfield, connecting with the Southern Pacific to San Francisco, which will be finished to Beatty within two weeks; the Tonopah & Tidewater (Borax Smith's road) will reach Beatty some time next summer.

3. Beatty is the logical shipping point for an immensely rich mineral district.

4. Beatty has a number of world-famous millionaires back of it, men who believe in Beatty's future, as is evidenced by their huge investments in its mines, railroads and other business interests.

5. Beatty is the garden spot of Nevada, having a pure and inexhaustible water supply.

6. Beatty has a glorious climate and is an ideal place to live.

These are chief reasons. There are many other reasons for our faith in the future of Beatty, which will appear as our plans materialize.

C. D. WARDEN, SECRETARY

SPRING RACES AND THE OPERA.

Atttractions of the Spring in Washington.

Campaign of Mrs. Roosevelt Against Long Train.

International Engagement Is Announced.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Holy Week at the national capital has been devoid of all social events worthy of the name. Not that all members of society belong to one or the other of the two churches which observe the Lenten season, but the example of the present chatelaines of the White House and diplomatic corps is adopted, generally, and with few exceptions church-going has been the dissipation of the last six days of March.

Of course, Mr. and Mrs. Everybody with their sons and daughters had to "take in" the opening of the spring races and enjoy the city's only three days of grand opera, but these events were regarded more as necessary diversion than as an object of life, and in rare cases were allowed to interfere with more serious plans. Rehearsals for the performance of Phelps Brown's "We Are in Society," to be given in a local theater April 1, 2 and 3, for the benefit of the National Junior Republic, are being continued with diligence and regularity. The all-star cast is composed of society men and women who belong to the "younger set," the leading role being taken by Mrs. Thomas C. Noyes, who is possessed of a truly remarkable voice and a charming personality. Another feature of the performance is the Spanish dance by Mrs. Piquette Mitchell, who was trained in the art during a six months' residence in Madrid. The affair is given under the auspices of the Women's League of the N.J.R., of which Mrs. Fairbanks is the president. The list of patronesses includes the name of three score women and ten who are prominent in Washington society, and the diplomatic corps.

"Sweet is Washington in the springtime"—at least so thought the thousands of people who, on Palm Sunday converted Connecticut avenue into a veritable Pall Mall or Bois de Boulogne. Carriages and automobiles filled with fashionably dressed women, occupied the center of the street going up one side and coming down the other, an animated procession of color flanked on the right and left by an equally gorgeous appareled crowd of pedestrians, and divided here and there, by an up-to-date electric car. This Connecticut-avenue Palm Sunday parade has become one of the features of the city, equaled only by that of Easter Sunday when every one seemingly vies with his neighbor in the effort to live up to the old superstition.

"At Easter, let your clothes be new,
Or else be sure you will it rue."

Mrs. Van Renselaer Cruger, the distinguished author of New York and Washington, aired her spring costume on Pennsylvania avenue one of those suddenly warm days about the middle of March. The gown and hat were of the kind that knows no season, but are marvelously becoming to the fair complexion and girlish figure of the wearer. With this outfit, Mrs. Cruger carried a biscuit-colored sunshade interlined with pink, the tones of which were reflected with telling effect upon the face of those who punctuated her walk from place to place.

Womankind is never so happy as when absorbed in the evolution of clothes, and so it is with marked interest that the women of Washington have joined Mrs. Roosevelt in a campaign against the long train. No fear of microbes or special regard for the views of health faddists is responsible for the movement. It is simply a proper estimate of what is suitable and becoming. It has long been agreed that only the "divinely tall" should affect the court train, but strangely enough long lengths of silk and satin have a strange fascination for those of medium stature. Mrs. Roosevelt has the advantage in inches over all the ladies of the Cabinet, except Mrs. Metcalf, who is tall and graceful enough for any length skirt. However, the first lady of the land rarely wears anything but a demi-train and recently intimated her desire that only that variety be worn at the White House gatherings. Will the number of her followers increase in arithmetical progression with the months between now and the opening of another Congressional season, or will they continue in the minority, is a question which only time can answer with any degree of accuracy.

Though the plucky little Archie has almost entirely recovered from diphtheria, he is still in charge of two trained nurses, and the shadow of illness has been extended over the White House by the return of Theodore, Jr., from Harvard, for the Easter holidays, in a condition far from well. However, it is not thought that this will interfere with the thirty-year-old custom for the President to invite juvenile Washington "to play in his backyard" on Easter Monday, to the accompaniment of the same band which furnished music for the more formal occasions at the Executive mansion.

The return of Mrs. Fairbanks from Atlantic City, where she has spent most of the time since Christmas, and the home-coming of Mrs. Root from a brief visit to New York, makes the circle of Cabinet hostesses once more complete—that is, as complete as it can be with Miss Flora Wilson, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture, still a student in Paris.

Mrs. Timmens has also returned and is at her parents' home in this city, after a fortnight's visit to her friend, Miss Hemenway, daughter of the Vice-President's successor from Indiana, in the Senate. Being an only daughter, Mrs. Timmons and her husband, who is an ensign in the United States navy, practically make their home with Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks, and have added greatly to the pleasure of society, when, but for their presence, the second official home at the capital would have been closed during the recent illness of the Vice-President's wife.

After Easter, Miss Edith Root, the diplomatic daughter of a diplomatic father, will make a series of visits in New York City, whither she goes to act as bridesmaid at the marriage of Miss Janet McCook and Malcolm Whitman. The ceremony will take place in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, the bride's uncle, Rev. Dr. Maitland Alexander, officiating. Miss McCook is a daughter of Col. J. J. McCook, one of the nine sons of Gen. Daniel McCook, who, serving with him in the Civil War, won the name of "the fighting McCooks."

The Misses Julia and Alice von Meyer, the very latest additions to the circle of "Cabinet girls," will also spend Easter week in the North, and, like Miss Root, will assist at the wedding of a friend. Serving with them as bridesmaids for Miss May Tuckerman, will be Miss Dorothy Kissel, grand-daughter of Mrs. D. P. Morgan of this city, and Miss Dorothy Whitney, daughter of the late Secretary of the Navy.

One of the prettiest weddings of the spring season in Washington is arranged for April 30, the contracting parties being Miss Zaidie Gaff, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Gaff, and Dr. Cary Langhorne, U.S.N. The ceremony is to take place at high noon in historic St. John's Episcopal Church, and it is probable that the Bishop of Washington, Right Rev. Henry Y. Satterlee, will officiate, as he did for the bridegroom's sister, on the occasion of her marriage to Mr. W. D. Washburn, son of former Senator Washburn of Minnesota. Dr. Langhorne's other sister recently married Capt. Powell Clayton, son of the former American Ambassador to Mexico, and a brother of the Baroness Moncheur, at present chatelaine of the Belgian Legation in this city.

Announcement of the latest international engagement of interest in official circles was made within the week by Commander W. H. H. Southerland, U.S.N., and Mrs. Southerland, whose daughter, Miss Harriet, will soon become the wife of Alfredo Calderon, first secretary of the Peruvian Legation here, and a son of the former Minister from Peru to Washington. The details of the wedding are somewhat undecided, owing to the absence of Mr Calderon, who went to South America on leave early in the winter. However, to prove that she is not at all superstitious, Miss Southerland has declared that she will be married in May, and is displaying an emerald engagement ring.

GRACE PORTER HOPKINS.

EDITOR TERRIFIES GIRL.

He Is Also President of Liberal Alliance, but Constables Have to Caution Him.

An unpleasant notoriety was obtained yesterday morning by Amaury Mars, editor of a new daily paper, Progress, and president of the Liberal Alliance, by seizing Miss Madge Clark at the corner of Franklin and New High streets, dragging her up the stairs at No. 207 New High street, and into the office of Progress, where he proceeded to scold her.

The girl was terrified and screamed, bringing Constable H. J. De la Monte of Justice Stephens's court, from his office across the hall, accompanied by Deputy Charles R. Thomas. The door of the Progress office was opened by them, and Mars was told that if he persisted in frightening little girls he would get into trouble.

The child is employed in the office of Mars, who boards with Mrs. Clark, her mother. Persons in the building who have a slight acquaintance with Mars and Madge Clark say that he has shown an affectionate interest in her in their outgoing and incomings together, which, however, is not reciprocated by the girl. The explanation given of the rage of Mars is that he found his pretty employé conversing with a young man, and in jealous fury dragged her away.

Mars himself has a different explanation to offer. He said yesterday afternoon: "This talk of jealousy is absurd. The girl is too young to think of being in love." She seems so, indeed, appearing no more than 16 at most, though Mars gives her age as 18.

"I am particular about my employés being on time," he continued, "and this morning she came late. That is all. There is no jealousy about it.

"Perhaps I was a little rough with her. She is very sensitive, hysterical, and she cried. Then the constables came. It is very unfortunate."

CHILD-STUDY CIRCLE.

A child study circle was organized at the Gates-street school, the following named officers being elected: Mrs. William Port, president; Mrs. Mary A. Ramsdale, vice-president; Mrs. Ernest G. Earles, secretary; and Mrs. C. C. Resler, treasurer. A practical and helpful talk was given to the mothers by Assistant Superintendent of Schools M. C. Bettinger. Music was contributed by Mrs. Frank Sturge, Miss Steckel and Miss Maud Sturge. Miss Florence Eales gave a recitation.

The Ordinary Savings Bank

that makes loans on lands and bonds is perfectly safe, but the interest is small to the depositors. If you can make twice that interest in a Co-operative Bank, that loans all your money on lands and buildings, and distributes all the profits to you, is it not common sense to place your savings in a Co-operative Bank? Think this over without the aid of your banker, and you will get more interest on your money, with the same security.

OLD ROMANCE.

story of his wife's past romances. The result was that he told her that they must separate. She wept, but he was firm and the separation became an accomplished fact.

In the settlement Mr. Tomlinson gave his wife the furniture of their home, $2000 in cash and an allowance of $100 a month on condition that she would leave him alone.

"Wherever you go I will do my best to ruin you," Mrs. Tomlinson is said to have exclaimed when she found all efforts to retain her husband by her side in vain.

In the office of Mr. Tomlinson Miss Margaret Irwin was employed as a stenographer. She was of a good family and was engaged to a wealthy young man of Chicago. But after the separation of Mr. and Mrs. Tomlinson the latter spread the story among her women friends that her husband was making love to his stenographer. Later she had something published in the paper and Miss Irwin at once left the employ of Tomlinson and remained at the home of her parents.

But the stories reached the ears of her fiancé, and his family insisted that the engagement be broken. Miss Irwin was heartbroken and for a time was so ill that her life was almost despaired of. When she became convalescent she came West, not with letters of introduction from Mr. Tomlinson, but in the company of friends.

GETS A DIVORCE.

It was sometime after the return of Miss Irwin to Chicago that Mrs. Tomlinson began proceedings for a divorce, but Miss Irwin was not named as the co-respondent, as has been stated, and during her western trip, Mr. Tomlinson did not meet the young woman who is now his wife. Neither has he ever been in Goldfield or Coronado Beach, nor ever opened an office in San Francisco.

When the divorce was granted, Mrs. Tomlinson was awarded $3500 cash in lieu of all alimony and both were again free to begin life over again. It was during the troubles caused by the stories told in Chiacgo regarding Miss Irwin that Mr. Tomlinson felt that at least in some indirect degree he was responsible for the sorrow which had come into her life, and in the wish to repair this injury he visited her at the home of her parents.

Then it was that he began to realize that, born of his sorrow, love had sprung into existence. He confessed to her and to her parents his wish to make her his wife as soon as he could get a divorce. But Mrs. Tomlinson began proceedings first and her husband states that he believed it was best that they should legally separate and did not defend the suit, which went by default.

At the time of their marriage, Mrs. Tomlinson told her husband that she was alone in the world, without a family and friendless. Developments later showed that she has two brothers living as well as other relatives.

Immediately after the divorce, Mr. Tomlinson and Miss Irwin were married with the consent of her parents and they are now on their delayed honeymoon trip to Los Angeles.

REASONS FOR DIVORCE.

Some of the Odd Allegations Made by the Petitions for a Separation.

The reasons for the granting of divorces are as numerous as the leaves of the forest, the result depending very much on the disposition of the judge and the impression made upon him by the appearance of the parties in interest. Very frequently the reasons given are suppressed from the public, and the Census Bureau has had considerable difficulty in getting at many of the facts desired in its recent investigation of this branch of human frailty. Some of the reasons given are in themselves often rather humorous. Such was the case with a divorce recently granted in Seattle, where the wife alleged that she had watched her husband with a spyglass, and had seen him go in bathing with his typewriter in a nude condition. On this statement she was granted the divorce, and was given the handsome residence in which she lived.

In San Francisco, the other day, August Netzel was granted a divorce from his wife on the ground that she had deserted him because he would not accompany her to church as often as she wished. On his return from work at night he often found her waiting at the church entrance, when she would insist that he accompany her within, which he generally refused to do. This broke up the family.

Mrs. Elvira Parent of the same city recently secured a divorce from her husband because he attended dances so much and refused to take her with him. An aunt of the plaintiff was present in court, and gave the judge a dissertation on "puppy love," as both the husband and wife were under 18 years of age when they were married, four years ago.

Eugene Johnson, a resident of Hammond, Ind., was recently granted a divorce because his wife declared he was a "boop." "It is no use taking you out in society," she said to him, "because you are too green. You stand around like a boop, and everybody laughs at me for having married you." The judge soothed his sensitiveness by granting his prayer.

Mrs. Frederick E. Stolze of Chicago was recently separated from her husband because the judge gave ear to her charge of infidelity. In rebuttal her husband said that in his business as a druggist he had treated at least twenty women during the last five years whose beauty was blighted with a foreign growth on their faces.

In the investigation of divorces at Terre Haute, it was developed that more divorces were granted about Christmas time than at any other time of the year. The reason appeared to be that the stress of holiday purchases developed domestic quarreling.

A Suitable Home.

Tastes differ. If one knew just where a suitable home could be purchased in the right location, the task of making a selection would be much simplified. Often times a search of the real estate advertisements or the "For Sale Houses" columns in the classified department of The Times will be rewarded by suiting your taste exactly. If not, a little "Liner" advertisement, setting forth your requirements, inserted in The Times, will accomplish the result, saving you worry, time and money.

EXTENSIVE IMPROVE

FACT AND COMMENT.

COMPARING the demand for houses and flats, both furnished and unfurnished, to that of last year at this time, the rental agencies have this to say: That for the first twenty-two days this month, compared with the same period last year, shows a healthy increase in the amount of business done, and shows a material increase in the number of lists given out, i.e., the number seeking rental properties. The companies further report that this increase is due to the large number of homeseekers who are coming to Los Angeles and Southern California from all parts of the East and Middle West. Monthly rents on all classes of residence property are about at the same figure as they were last year, and owing to the continued demand there is no decrease anticipated in the monthly rates. They further report daily inquiries from all parts of the United States, from persons interested in Los Angeles and Southern California, who are asking many questions regarding rental values, cost of living, possibilities for investment, in many instances stating that they expect to come here during the summer with the expectation of making it their permanent home. The business rental departments also report a healthy demand for stores, warehouses and manufacturing sites at rentals quite equal to those of one year ago.

The Real Estate Market.

There is no radical change in the real estate market from the conditions generally prevailing during the past year. The number of deeds conveying property going on record day by day run about as usual, being from 250 to 275 and upward day by day. There is one marked change of late in this transferring of property. While the list of deeds is not smaller than before, the list of mortgages has notably fallen off. There are fewer of them, and generally for a good deal less money. Large loans are not frequent, nor are small loans numerous. Fifty or sixty mortgages a day would be about the average going on record. The increased interest demanded for money averaging from 1 per cent. to 1½ per cent. over a year ago, perhaps explains this. The broken weather undoubtedly tends more or less to check deals in property far from street car lines. It cuts into country deals very considerably. But in spite of the influence of the weather, it is encouraging to note the activity ruling in ranch property of all kinds. There is more doing in this class of property in Southern California, especially in small tracts, than for years past. Many newcomers are seeking homes in the country, on farms where they expect to make a living, rather than in the city. This suggests that they are people of more or less means, enabling them to invest in one of the beautiful homes of Southern California.

To Careless Readers.

Numerous readers of this department have conceived the idea during the last two or three weeks that there was something radically wrong with the real estate market. Now this impression was not fairly received from anything that was said in the department. People have a way of glancing at an article and, catching a single portion which they take away from the context, let the false notion run away with their minds. As has been said in the department, the market has been quiet for some kinds of real estate, indeed dull for some. The exact types where this quietness and dullness prevail were carefully marked out. Then the contrary statement was made with all proper emphasis. It is said that some readers decline to go on with negotiations for the purchase of central business property under the impression that the whole market was not only quiet but dull, not only dull but depressed. It is amazing that intelligent people should conceive such erroneous impressions. It has been stated emphatically in this department that the only limit to dealing in central business property was set by the holders, who, as a general rule, will not even name a price for their choice central business property.

—o—

Ananias and His Wife.

The Fall River Evening News of February 25, reaches this office with a story told back there in the land of Puritans which for inspired prevarication dethrones old Ananias as the boss liar of the ages. One A. W. McQuillan and his family, it appears, visited Los Angeles, and not finding it to their liking, returned to the shadow of Plymouth Rock. As a reason for his return, McQuillin states that a year ago he visited Los Angeles, and finding everything booming, determined to make this city his home. He returned here in February and goes back reporting that the great boom in real estate and building is at an end, and that an era of such depression is running here that there is no chance for a contractor like himself to get a job. Listen: "Business is practically at a standstill as far as contracting and building is concerned." Listen again: "The real estate boom has also reached its limit, and land that was sold six months ago for fancy prices can now be purchased for half the cost." But here is the one where McQuillin's imagination ran riot surely: "Empty tenements and stores are the rule, not the exception, and dwelling places can be obtained on any street in the city."

—o—

What is the Truth?

As has been set forth in this department, too frequently to meet with the approbation of real estate boomers, there has been a little dropping off in the building line during the past few months, as compared with a year ago. This little falling off began in November, and continued in December and January. February of this year showed a little better record than February of last year. The current month of March, which for business purposes ended yesterday, falls considerably below March, 1906. But the number of building permits taken out month by month during these months of comparative quiet has been about 750 month. The cost of building has but once fallen below $1,000,000, and then only by a very small margin. During these months of comparative dullness, the cost of building has run generally at somewhat over $1,000,000. Take the month that closed yesterday, for example. It makes a small record compared with March, last year, but as an absolute fact the showing is a very encouraging one. Money is dearer. Building material is dearer. Labor is dearer. Naturally there is some little check in the building line. But a city which is erecting 700 to 800 new structures a month, some of them costing tens of thousands, yes, hundreds of thousands of dollars, is not a dull city. Where $1,000,000 a month or better is being expended in new buildings, surely a contractor who knew his business and had either nerve or sense about him, ought to be able to find enough to do. At the head of this department is a statement coming from a large rental agency of this city, which speaks for itself. There are some vacant houses and some vacant flats, but that is not an unnatural thing in a city of 250,000 inhabitants, where people are coming and going, especially coming, every day in the year.

About Building Material.

There is quite a little contention going on as to the relative merits of cement, pure or reinforced, as compared with brick and hollow tiles for building purposes. The Times' position is one of hopefulness that employment for all of these building materials in the city will increase. This is not a heavily-wooded region, but it is rich in beds of clay and other material for making cement and brick. The richness of these deposits is almost incalculable. It is astonishing the amount of money invested in clay and rock products in the United States. In 1905 there were 399 establishments in the country engaged in the production of glass. They were capitalized for nearly $90,000,000, employed 163,960 wage earners, paid out $37,288,148 in wages, consumed materials which cost $26,145,522, and the manufactured products of these establishments amounted to $79,607,998. These figures showed an increase in five years of 12½ per cent. in establishments, of over 47 per cent. in capital, over 21 per cent. in employés, nearly 38 per cent. in wages, over 56 per cent. in the value of the materials used, and nearly 41 per cent. in the value of products.

—o—

Clay Products.

So much for glass manufacturing. Of establishments employed in clay products, the number was 5507. These were capitalized for $230,892,977. The number of wage-earners employed was 118,499, who received $53,823,070 in wages. The raw material used cost $32,917,961, and the products sold for $135,352,854. In the five years there was an increase here of 56 per cent. in capital, 12 per cent. in wage-earners, 36 per cent. in wages, 43½ per cent. in the value of materials, and nearly 42 per cent. in the value of products. Of these clay products, brick, tile and terra cotta represented $109,518,341. Pottery products stood for $24,834,513. Of these the most important item was common brick, which represented a value of $51,239,871. Fire brick sold for $11,752,625, sewer pipe for $8,416,009, and vitreous paving brick for $7,256,088.

NORMAL SCHOOL PROPERTY.

To Be Sold at Auction Next Saturday at Not Less Than Five Hundred Thousand Dollars.

The real estate world of Los Angeles should take due notice, if any of them have not done so before, that next Saturday morning at 10 a.m., at the Grand avenue door, which is the main entrance to the State Normal School building, the board of trustees of that institution will offer for sale at public auction the real estate and buildings belonging to the school. This property consists of a square of land beginning in the west line of Grand avenue, 300 feet north of the intersection of Grand avenue and Sixth street, and its dimensions are as follows: Along Grand avenue, 390 feet; westerly parallel to Sixth street, 678 feet; southerly at right angles to Sixth street, 390 feet; easterly parallel with Sixth street, 578 feet to the place of beginning. In other words, it is nearly 400 by nearly 600 feet square.

This sale is made in pursuance of an act passed by the late Legislature. The matter has been in the public eye for nearly three months. The initiative was taken by certain real estate dealers of this city who pledged an upset price on the property of $500,000 and the act of the Legislature provides that it shall be sold for a sum not less than that figure. From the beginning it was a practically foregone conclusion that the property would be ordered sold, that the Governor would sign the bill providing for its sale, and that steps would be taken to offer it on the market at public auction. Those interested in real estate have had all this notice. Undoubtedly many of them have been wide awake to the opportunity, and have figured out carefully exactly what the property is reasonably worth, and will be on hand with at least the upset price.

The property has been duly advertised and is being advertised every day in the columns of The Times. It is open to all individuals an all syndicates to go into the market and see that no rival gets too big a bargain in this sale of public property. There is time still for those who have been half asleep to get awake and act in the premises now. There is still a week in which to form syndicates and get in upon the bidding. There is an unusual amount of interest in real estate. There is plenty of money in the town seeking investment and speculation in real estate. It will not do to wake up next Saturday noon and find the property sold and then squeal. The man who comes the day after the fair naturally missed the fun. Don't be one of the laggards now and one of the squealers next week.

OLD ROBERTS PROPERTY SOLD.

Frontage on Olive, Between Sixth and Seventh Brings Fifty-two Thousand and Five Hundred.

The sale of the house and lot, formerly known as the Robert's property, on South Olive street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, on the west side of the street, is reported by Robert Marsh & Co., for the stated consideration of $52,500. The lot is 50x60 feet in size, and the rate, at he consideration stated, figures at $1050 per front foot. The location is more definitely given as No. 609 South Olive street. The purchaser is Mrs. Louise Y. Pratt, a lady who has been an active personality in the local real estate market of late. There are nominal improvements on the property, which are said not to have been taken into consideration by the purchaser. These may be demolished within a few months to make way for a high-class six-story, reinforced, concrete apartment hotel, as the location is admirable for such a purpose.

MANY RANCH SALES.

Reports of Sales in Country Districts Show no Dropping Off.

Jacob Witmer, a well-known resident of West Commonwealth avenue, Fullerton, has purchased from Mr. King of the same town fifteen lots and a good residence on Broadway and Center street, adjoining the High School property, Anaheim, for $5000, and will sell his Fullerton property and move to that city.

W. C. Barth and E. B. Collier have bought of George LeGaye two cottages and a 75x150-foot lot at Ninth and Victoria streets, Corona. The price named is $2000. The cottages are to be moved to other lots and it is understood that E. B. Collier will erect a new home on the site.

T. P. Drinkwater has bought of A. Foster of Canada a five-acre lemon grove on Garretson avenue, Corona. The consideration named is $5000.

Fred Brown has sold to I. A. Newton his 37½x150 feet one-story brick warehouse, on East Sixth street, Corona, with a quarter block, 150x150 feet, on East Seventh street, along with his feed and fuel business and stock for same. The price of the deal, which was made by the Gaylord & Lyman agency, is $12,500. In exchange Mr. Newton turns in a 160-acre farm in Monon, Ind., and pays the difference of $6000 cash.

J. L. Carpenter has sold his ranch at Westminster to Dr. Reed of Lancaster, Wis., for $5000.

John Hartung of the First National Bank of Anaheim has sold his property on Adams street in Los Angeles for $30,000.

Bynon & Kimball report the following sale of lands in Orange county: Ten acres at Anaheim for Jacob Stern to George F. Durard, $2000; 142 acres for L. A. NEW RAILROAD BUILDING.

Harrison Albright is the architect of the recently completed passenger depot, hotel, curio store and power-house building, built by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railroad Company at Ash Fork, Ariz. The contractor is James Johnson of Needles, Cal. The building will be occupied by the Fred Harvey Company. Following is a brief description:

The building has a railway front of 450 feet and a depth of 215 feet; in fact, the structure is four buildings connected by colonades, the dimensions being as follows: Passanger depot, 36x108 feet; hotel, 200x215 feet; curio store, 42x62 feet; and power-house, 25x90 feet.

The passenger depot contains ticket office 18x28 feet; ladies' and gentlemen's waiting rooms, each 27x28 feet; baggage room 27x40 feet; also toilet rooms for ladies, gentlemen and employés.

The hotel contains, on the ground floor, lobby 40x88 feet, in which are an office, check room, reading and writing room and news and cigar stand. There is also a barroom 22x22 feet, a barber shop 12x20 feet, toilet 10x20 feet, lunchroom 44x44 feet, lunchroom kitchen 22x22 feet, dining-room 44x66 feet, kitchen 40x48 feet, with pantry, dishroom and other accessories, with bakery 16x24 feet, meat room 14x18 feet, refrigerator room 18x22 feet, storeroom 18x22 feet, fuel room 11x22 feet, charcoal room 11x22 feet, ice-storage room 16x22 feet.

The second floor contains fifty-four bedrooms and ten bathrooms. Every bedroom has communication with adjoining bedroom and twenty connect with bathrooms. Each bedroom has clothes closet, wash basin, radiator and telephone.

The power-house contains laundry 25x30 feet, boiler room 25x30 feet, and generator room 16x25 feet.

The building will be heated by steam, lighted by electricity, and cleaned by the new vacuum air suction system. The entire finish of the building is pine, stained to imitate fumed oak. All the walls and ceilings will be decorated. The footings, columns, girders, beams, floors, walls, roofs, etc., are of reinforced concrete.

BUYS CORNER ON PICO.

L. W. Leighton and H. R. Cowan have sold for W. J. Lawless and Sylvia Norton to a local capitalist, the northwest corner of Pico and Catalina streets for $25,000. The lot is 51x140 feet, improved by a four-flat apartment building, fronting on Pico street, and a two-flat apartment building, on rear of the lot, fronting on Catalina street. The property brings in a monthly rental of $120. The building facing Pico street may be turned around to face on Catalina street, thus leaving a frontage on Pico street of about 51x60 feet, which may be utilized as a site for a modern store and apartment building. Such improvements may be carried out by the new owner.

TWO-STORY BRICK BUILDING AT CENTRAL AVENUE AND THIRTY-EIGHTH ST.

CENTRAL AND THIRTY-EIGHTH.

Presenting a neat red pressed brick exterior, the two-story brick building being erected on the northwest corner of Central avenue and Thirty-eighth street for C. Winter is one of the evidences of the steady and persistent growth of the city in the south and east sections. The building, now nearly finished, contains two commodious storerooms, both of which already are rented to enterprising merchants. The second floor is divided into five three-room apartments, each with a bath, private hall and every convenience found in the apartments nearer the heart of the town. The dimensions of the building, over all, are 50x90 feet. The lot is 50x150 feet. John P. Kremple is the architect. The cost was about $15,000.

PLAN MAGNIFICENT BUILDING.

Property on West Seventh, West of Bullock's to Be Improved—Old Buildings Demolished.

Plans are being prepared for the erection of a magnificent class A fireproof store and office building on the property fronting on West Seventh street, between the alley west of Bullock's great store building and Dwight Hart's property, on the northeast corner of Seventh and Hill streets.

This land is owned by Gebbard Eshman, an associate of W. G. Kerckhoff, who has given notice to the tenants of the old structure on the land, notifying them that all must be out within thirty days. He has signed contracts that he will have work begun on the proposed new building on a date not later than June 15. No trouble is anticipated from the tenants, all but one having agreed to vacate at once.

This matter was brought about through the efforts of H. F. Vollmer, who has rented the northeast corner of Seventh and Hill streets and soon will occupy a two-story brick building, which the owner, Dwight Hart, will begin work upon.

FOR SALE—
I wish to call your attention to my house at No. 2001 Brighton ave. I built this place for a home and it contains everything to be found in a modern residence.

I will sell this place for the value of the lot, which is $2500, plus the actual cost of building the house by day labor.

There is not a reliable contractor in the city today that would duplicate this house for less than $7000.

It is an elegant, new, modern 8-room house, thoroughly up-to-date in every detail; cement steps, porch and sidewalks; handsome entrance, plate glass in reception hall, living-room and dining-room; all transoms are bevel glass, with copper ribs.

The reception hall has beamed ceiling, elegant stairway, seats, large mirror, umbrella rack, etc.

The living-room contains beamed ceiling, bookcases, numerous seats and without doubt the finest mantel in the city; this mantel is 6 feet wide and is built from the floor to the ceiling with genuine Caen stone.

The dining-room contains beamed ceiling, buffet 8 feet wide, paneled walls, plate rail, decorated ceiling and hand-painted frieze. The dining-room is 18x18 feet, living-room 17x21 feet; both finished in golden oak.

There is a convenient kitchen and pass pantry white enameled, screen porch extends almost the entire width of the house with toilet. Cement celar with laundry trays, furnace, Ruud heater and storeroom.

The second floor has 4 large sleeping-rooms with large closets, a front and rear balcony and an alcove off the front bedroom; there is a clothes chute from the second floor to the cellar.

The bathroom has cement floor, elegant shower bath adjoining, bath tub, wash basin and toilet; between the 2 rear bedrooms there is an extra wash basin and toilet.

Hardwood floors both upstairs and downstairs.

The lighting fixtures in this house were specially made and are very elaborate, harmonizing with the interior finish.

The back yard contains child's play house, arbor and automobile garage, 17x18 feet.

Lot is 50x150 feet on the corner, facing east and north; price $8750.

THE LOCATION—
Westminster Square is beautifully situated on high ground at the corner of Fourth and Western ave. in the Wilshire boulevard district. It is above the fog and dust of the city and presents a magnificent view. Elegant residence subdivisions and homes surround it on every side. In fact, the most ideal spot in this city for a home.

THE IMPROVEMENTS—
Westminster Square possesses superior improvements, such as are found only in high-class tracts. All streets are 75 feet wide—palms and ornamental trees are planted in front of every lot. Two handsome homes are in the last stages of completion, and plans for others are being drawn. The street car line, which is almost finished, will run directly through the center of the tract.

THE PRICE OF LOTS—
Surrounding property, lacking many of the merits of Westminster Square, is selling at higher prices. Lots in Westminster Square are priced at $1250 and up. This is positively cheap when one considers the desirable location, the fine improvements and the splendid environment. The extraordinary value of this tract is evidenced by the fact that one man bought six, another five, and another three lots—after each had searched the city over for the best proposition afforded. Conveyance waiting at our office to take you out any time of day. Come down early Monday and see the "gem of this city's residence subdivisions."

51-foot lot south side 15th st., 237 feet West of Main; price $15,000; 6-room house.
50-foot lot on 15th, near Hill, two 4-room cottages, price $12,000.
50-foot lot on 15th, between Hill and Grand ave., price $10,500, certainly a snap; make offer. Owner wants money.
These are great bargains, go and see the improvements in that neighborhood, then remember that lots are now selling for $300 per foot on Carr st., since it was paved. Carr st. is one and a half blocks north of 15th; $210 per foot is cheap for 15th st. It will be $350 per foot before January.

Owner must raise a certain amount of money, and will sell the above three lots, if sold immediately, for $33,000. The party buying these lots will clean up $12,000 by next February. They will never be offered again for $33,000.

ABSOLUTELY

in Los Angeles for the money, on the highest level land, just west of Figueroa st., and only two blocks from Figueroa and Sixth sts., 50 feet, fronting on Beaudry and running through to Boylston, giving 100 feet of street frontage, on two wide streets; this is very fine, high, sightly property, close in, easy walking distance, being only two blocks west of Bellevue Terrace Hotel. $9000 buys this, and if it is not the cheapest good apartment site in the city owner will make you a present of the same; have fine plan for this apartment site. Call and see it.

HERE IS THE SNAP OF THE MONTH OF MARCH, 40, 45 OR 50 FEET ON FLOWER ST., 120 FEET NORTH OF FIFTH, ONLY 100 FEET FROM WHERE THE HARRIMAN SUBWAY COMBINED PASSENGER AND FREIGHT DEPOT IS TO BE BUILT ON FLOWER ST. PROPERTY HAS ADVANCED OVER $100 PER FOOT NORTH OF FOURTH ON FLOWER THE LAST TEN DAYS; THIS SHOULD ADVANCE $200 INSIDE OF 30 DAYS. CAN DELIVER AT THE VERY LOW PRICE OF $450 FOOT, FOR VERY FEW DAYS ONLY. DON'T BUY THIS UNLESS YOU WANT IT. OWNER WANTS MONEY. SOME ONE WILL GET A BARGAIN. I REGARD THIS AS THE VERY BEST BUY IN THE CITY ON CLOSE INSIDE PROPERTY, AND YOU WILL, TOO, WHEN YOU SEE 5TH STREET OPENING THROUGH NORMAL SCHOOL GROUNDS. THIS WON'T LAST LONG. $5000 HANDLES THIS. FOR SALE—CONCERNING JEFERSON STREET.

JEFFERSON, between Main and Wesley, at $200 per foot is the BEST INVESTMENT IN LOS ANGELES TODAY. The paving of this street is going to begin in the very near future—which means two or three months. This improvement alone will cause a rise of $50 to $75 per foot in this section.

Then there is the crosstown line of JEFFERSON, between Central and Main, giving a through and exclusively crosstown line from Central to Arlington—the first of its kind in the city. This will have a positive effect on values.

Then there is the great Shriners' Auditorium, on JEFFERSON, between Figueroa and Wesley—the largest auditorium in the United States, west of Chicago and Kansas City. It will seat some 8000 people and be ready for the Shriners' Conclave in May, just a month distant. You will likely be out there at that time, with thousands of others, to see the doings, and then you'll begin to realize WHY property on JEFFERSON, between Main and Wesley, is INTRINSICALLY worth $250 a foot.

After the conclave it is the intention to hold conventions, theatrical entertainments, drills, etc., regularly in this great building. Among those just booked may be mentioned the commencement exercises of the Polytechnic High School of this city, and a number of the meetings of the National Educational Association, with its 30,000 visitors, next July.

Do you think it is possible to have such immense gatherings as these without attracting the attention of both local investors and those from all parts of the country, to JEFFERSON street? Is'nt everything mentioned in this ad. a step toward POSITIVE, PERMANENT PROGRESS AND IMPROVEMENT, entirely removed from the field of speculation? And isn't that what makes ACTUAL BUSINESS PROPERTY VALUES the world over?

Think about these things. Revolve them carefully in your mind and try to point out a spot in the city of Los Angeles where for $200 a foot you can buy property that will increase in value during the next two or three years faster than on JEFFERSON, between Main and Wesley. YOU CAN'T FIND THAT SPOT.

I say $200 a foot, because at the present time I have a piece of property there I can deliver for LESS THAN THAT PRICE. But this is your LAST CHANCE to buy it at the figure I shall quote, WHICH IS THE CHEAPEST ON THE STREET. After the Shriners' Conclave and the paving, prices will RAPIDLY RISE on JEFFERSON. April is the TIME TO BUY.

Take the advice of one who knows conditions thoroughly in that section and look into the proposition I offer if you want a QUICK SPECULATION or an INVESTMENT absolutely FREE FROM RISK.

FOR SALE—
LAND PRODUCES $600 TO $1000 PER ACRE ANNUALLY.
ROGUE RIVER VALLEY, OR.

Our climate combines all the best features of California and Oregon and possesses none of the objectionable features of either, here we have no excessive rains; the rainfall averaging twenty inches, with days and weeks of bright, clear, sunny days during the winter; no excessive cold, the temperature seldom falling to the freezing point; during this terrible cold wave from which the entire country is still struggling to extricate itself, we did not even have a frost here; no excessive hot weather, while in summer blankets are a necessity, the nights always being cool.

OUR APPLE AND PEAR INDUSTRY

Is our greatest attraction; here we have orchards which produce per acre $600 to $1000 annually. Our pears bring the highest prices in the world in the markets of New York and London. Our Newtown apples also bring higher prices than those of any other section of the world. Our Spitzenberg apples are unsurpassed for quality, color and size. This industry is still in its infancy here, we have thousands of acres of undeveloped lands irrigated, and upland, at lower prices than ordinary alfalfa lands are selling for in California. Here we get four crops of alfalfa without irrigation.

Three new railroads are to be built immediately, one to our copper mines, one to our coal mines, and one to our timber. Our lands will produce anything that grows out doors, corn, grain, vegetables, alfalfa fruits of all kinds and berries of all varieties from April till November.

Our copper mines are developing such a volume of ore that the entire mining world is now turning its eyes this way.

Medford is a beautiful little city of 4000 inhabitants, possessing all modern conveniences and with the hosts of homeseekers now settling here, promises to have a population of 10,000 in the course of a couple of years. We have splendid schools, electricity, new water system now going in, fine business houses, hotels that any large city might feel proud of, and a delightfully picturesque environment.

We can offer more undeveloped opportunities for money making than any other section of the United States, and that with natural attractions unsurpassed anywhere.

THE LAND OF PROMISE.
BERRYFIELD.
BERRYFIELD.

BERRYFIELD is the cream of Orange county, subdivided into 2½, 5 and 10-acre tracts; its location is superb, situated on the Santa Ana branch of the Pacific Electric railway, making it possible to have a country home or small ranch on the car line in close proximity to Los Angeles; the soil is a rich, sandy loam, does not bake, is easily worked, and retains the moisture to a wonderful degree; no finer lands can be found in or around Los Angeles for the growth of oranges, walnuts, berries or vegetables.

WATER.
PLENTY OF WATER.

Each acre of land carries with it a sufficient quantity of pure water, piped to the ground, to properly take care of any and all crops; domestic water is also piped to the ground.

The water is the purest in Southern California; artesian wells furnish the supply, which is unlimited.

Land and water only $350 per acre.

Only one-fourth cash, balance in one and two years.

Note these facts.

Orange county has the largest peatland district in the world.

Orange county has the largest artesian belt in Southern California.

Orange county produces more celery than all the other counties of California combined.

Orange county ships more winter vegetables than all the counties of Southern California combined.

Orange county sends away more poultry and eggs than any other county in Southern California.

Orange county sends away more dairy products than any other county in Southern California.

Berryfield is in the heart of the Orange, Walnut and Vegetable district.

Berryfield offers the best inducements to the homeseekers, truck farmers and poultry ranchers.

Do you wonder that Orange county is called the "Gem County," and that Berryfield is known as the Gem of Orange county?

LOCATION.

Berryfield is located on the Santa Ana branch of the Pacific Electric Railroad, 27 miles southeast of Los Angeles, and seven miles northwest of Santa Ana, and in the heart of the orange, walnut and vegetable district.

In offering Berryfield lands to the public we are presenting the very choicest part of Orange county, and that means the best to be found in California; it is incomparably choice, positively nothing better; yet with all this said, Berryfield must be seen to be appreciated; come in and let us take you down and show our lands; if you go alone buy tickets to Mesto, as the railroad company has not yet changed the name to Berryfield.

Berryfield is right on the railroad, no walk after you get there.

FOR SALE—SALINAS
POTATO LAND.

We have a number of 5, 10, 20 and 40-acre tracts of the best land in the Salinas Valley, which has grown and is now growing the finest Salinas Valley potatoes, which command the highest prices of any in the markets of the Pacific Coast. The name alone is sufficient for any one who has been in the potato business in this State.

We are offering this land at $75 AN ACRE; it is in Monterey county, on the Coast line railroad, about half way between Los Angeles and San Francisco, has an elegant, free and perpetual water right, and the land is good for winter apples and pears, in which products it is already making from $300 to $400 per acre per annum.

On this tract of land the finest alfalfa in the State of California is now growing, and this is not an empty statement.

There are only a few tracts of this land left in the First Home Extension Colony, established in 1905, and which now has banks, stores, postoffice, schoolhouses, and other conveniences; join our excursion party next Tuesday afternoon at 3:30, round trip rate only $15; and ticket will take you all the way to Watsonville and return if you desire to visit that great apple district.

BY THE EL MONTE REALTY CO.

10 acres of 10-year-old walnut trees in full bearing; 5-room house with bath and reception hall, built one year; good large barn; windmill and tank, with good well of water for domestic use; and a pumping plant that cost $3000 a short time ago—plant pumps 200 inches of water at a cost of about 20 cents an hour. The walnut trees are interset with alfalfa. This place nets over $1500 a year. It is located within a mile of the business portion of El Monte and is less than a quarter of a mile from the electric line. The improvements alone on this place cost $5000, and today would cost more. Our price on this piece of property for a short time only is $8500, $4000 cash, balance to suit purchaser. When the electric line is running it will be worth $10,000, at least. Come before it is too late.

7 acres, one mile from El Monte, good 4-room house, recently painted; good barn; fine well of water. About seventy bearing walnut trees. All fenced. This would make a fine chicken ranch, and it's a bargain at the price, $3000; terms. See about this.

in BEAUTIFUL HOLLYWOOD.
Between 4 and 5 acres.
Commanding the grandest view conceivable.

In the midst of palatial homes and next to a hill on which is being expended $100,000.

$75,000 being spent on one of the most palatial homes in Southern California.

I am asking only $5000, which is the greatest bargain on the market. It is at least 50 per cent. under value, by this I mean that property far less desirable adjoining this and in the immediate neighborhood has sold and is valued at more than twice what I am asking.

This is one of the most exceptional bargains ever offered.

I also have an entire block, 200 feet frontage, double corner, on beautiful Prospect ave., which I am compelled to sell immediately. In order to insure immediate sale I am offering this magnificent property for $6000.
$6000.

This is at the rate of $30 per front foot for boulevard frontage in West Hollywood
Do you know what this means?

The price of the piece adjoining mine is over $17,000 for same amount of land, and it is not a double corner either, nor, has it the same improvements. Adjoining mine on the other side the same amount of frontage sold recently for $11,000.
CAN YOU BEAT THIS?
WE KNOW YOU CANNOT.

FOR SALE—
Suburban Property.
ALHAMBRA.

FOR SALE—
that you have ever seen is the San Gabriel Valley, with its beautiful coat of green, at the foot of the snow-covered mountains on the north. You ought to see it this week, and you will never forget it. There is no better viewpoint than from Alhambra, and Alhambra is also the nearest and best location for that home of yours.

We have some very choice chances for homes, that are as good as those we offered last week, and it will pay you to look into them before they are gone. At $2350 we have a new, modern cottage, with all up-to-date improvements, close to the car line, on a street with all the street work finished, and in a very attractive locality, and at $2500 we have a five-room cottage just completed, that is as attractive as the first one, and as near the car line, on a lot set to orange trees, and street all improved. Either of these are first-class opportunities.

At $1500 and $2000 we have several choice opportunities in cottages and homes, with all improvements. Lots set to trees and shrubbery, and on improved streets, any one of which would make a very pleasant home, and is a good buy at the price.

If you want a home in one of the most beautiful residence sites in this city, where you have a fine view of the whole city as well as of all the mountain range and the valley below it, you should let us show you one at $6000, near the car line, on the right corner of two improved streets, with grounds entirely set out to ornamental trees, shrubbery and oranges. This is something particularly good.

Sales in our Alhambra Vista Tract, which has just been put on the market, are very satisfactory, and as the tract is one of comparatively few lots, they will not last very long. Purchasers are delighted with the beautiful views of the mountains and valley which are seen from here to better advantage than any other portion of the city. They are in a choice locality, within easy distance of the car line, and the prices are from $450, and terms that will suit you.

There are only a few lots left in the orange grove tract on Marguerita avenue, which has become famous by its name of Valencia Terrace. No tract has sold more rapidly than this one, and every buyer is the best advertisement, for they are all thoroughly satisfied. Prices run from $600, and we know that you will be pleased with the lots when you see them. Terms on these and other lots that we have in this location, at from $450, make them easy of purchase.

We will be pleased to have you call at our Los Angeles office, 223 Mercantile Place, any day, and take a trip to Alhambra, and let us prove to you that it is the best place for you to locate in the county.

We have a bunch of fine improved lots in the "Valencia Terrace" Tract, fronting on Marguerita st., only $600, $50 down and $10 per month.

FOR SALE—
We have several calls for houses for the summer months. Have YOU thought of where you will make your summer home?

Did it ever occur to you that you might save money by buying a place here?

Remember: The cost of building has increased two-fold in the last few years, and lots have also appreciated. Sometimes we find some one who bought and built a few years ago, and who HAS to sell because he needs the money. In such case the lucky buyer gets a home that he could not duplicate for anywhere near the price asked.

We have several such houses on our lists at present, ranging from $1500 to $5000. Perhaps it would pay you to look at some of these.

Summer rents here range from $50 to $150 per month, and the desirable houses are being taken already.

We have a listing of about 800 houses and still have some good ones left.

Call at our office when at the beach, and let us prove that Ocean Park is still "the leading beach."

Biff! Boom! Bang! 'Tis the echoes of the "Wizard's" guns, again primed and all trained on the game, which will surely fall under his skillful aid. He is the Nimrod with the eagle eye, who never sleeps, whose domain is the earth, and who is monarch of all he surveys, in the trading world. He who knows not the meaning of the word "fail," is waiting to fill your game bag, too. You have but to name your game, and this "wizard," the best trader in the United States, will produce, whether it is jacksnipe or double eagles; 'tis all the same to him. Following is a selection of his choice game, fresh from his private preserves. Select your ammunition and game, then fire it in the "Wizard."

Subscriptions for these shares must be accompanied by checks or drafts for 10 per cent. of the purchase price, the balance may be paid 10 per cent. per month. 5 per cent. discount will be allowed for cash.

Subscriptions will be closed after the 10th day of April. The 10th will be the last chance to obtain these shares, and the company reserves the right to withdraw them from subscription at any time.

About three months ago we were appointed sole agents for the sale of 100,000 shares of this stock at prices ranging from 25 cents to 50 cents.

The 25,000 shares now offered for subscription at 50 cents is all that is left of the whole block of 100,000.

From the proceeds of the sales so far made, the treasury has been placed in a strong position, and the company has been working diligently since the middle of February. An inexpensive blacksmith shop and bunk house has been built, and work started on the tunnel, which is now in about 100 feet.

In a winze sunk 15 feet in the bottom of an open cut they have uncovered a 4-foot vein of Copper ore that averages, for the entire 4 feet, better than 40 per cent. Copper. They expect to cut this vein in the tunnel at a point 40 feet below the bottom of the winze. They expect to extract the ore from this vein and send it to the smelter at Tacoma. This ore should net at least $3000 per car.

The company's holdings comprise 41 claims, 32 of which they own outright, and on which there is standing over ten million feet of cedar, fir and pine.

There has been over 500 feet of work already done. This company has recently acquired an option on other valuable property, and its future is exceedingly promising.

Application will be made to list these shares in Los Angeles and San Francisco on or before the 11th day of April.

We not only recommend but urge you to subscribe at once for what you can carry of these few remaining shares.

DEATH OF YOUNG SPARGS.

Salt Lake Railroad Man's Life Ends from Injuries Received While on Duty.

Ben Sparks, Salt Lake railroad man, died at the California Hospital yesterday from injuries received while on duty.

The accident occurred January 10. The young man was employed as brakeman on the west-bound Salt Lake Limited. In the Cajon Pass in the night he went ahead to turn a switch for another train to pass and in the darkness fell about forty feet from a bridge.

The fall caused injuries to the spine. He was taken to the hospital, where he remained till the end came.

He was 27 years old and a son of O. D. Sparks, who for a long term of years has been a conductor in the service of the Salt Lake road. The young man was formerly employed in the engineering department of the Salt Lake Railroad and afterward for awhile with the Los Angeles City Engineer's office.

The funeral will be held at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday at Sutch's undertaking parlors on South Figueroa street between Eighth and Ninth.

SOME FACTS ABOUT APRIL.

From the records of the past twenty-nine years the local Weather Bureau has compiled some interesting facts about the month of April. The normal temperature has been 59 deg. The warmest month was in 1885, when the average temperature was 63 deg.; the coldest month was in 1893, the average being 56 deg. On April 13, both in 1888 and 1889, the mercury climbed to 99 deg., and on April 8, 1901, it fell as low as 36 deg. The average precipitation has been 1.10 inches, although over five inches fell in 1880. The humidity has averaged from 83 at 5 a.m. to 63 at 5 p.m. The average number of clear days has been 12; partly cloudy days, 12; cloudy days, 6. The prevailing winds have been from the west, with a velocity of five miles an hour.

The Fantastic Dream of Equality.

By Harold Bolce.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

AN IMPORTED economist from London lecturing in New York has stirred up the social reformers who dream of a reign of equality upon earth. Newspapers and magazines are devoting much space to the discussion. The hope of equality is a lofty one, but nature is opposed to the project. She confers genius on one man and inflicts mediocrity upon another. In one hut she produces a Confucius, while the millions of rookeries around him swarm with coolies.

"God must have liked the common people," said Lincoln. "He made so many of them."

Upton Sinclair puts the blood and brawn of the stockyards into fiction and dines forever after on the choicest cuts. But the men and women he used in his novel still grind their lives away in the packing-house.

There is only one Zangwill, but there are obscure and unnumbered multitudes in the Ghetto.

Few fallacies have worked a greater distortion of economic thought than the declaration of our forefathers that all men are created equal. The men who framed and signed that document stand out like landmarks. No strength of rhetoric could pull the American masses of that day up to the intellectual level of the leaders. The whole rank and file of the Revolutionary army did not equal George Washington. The Continental forces went down in rags to oblivion, fighting to uphold the delusion that all men are equal!

The popular idea is that everything depends upon proper social conditions. We have an idea that an absolute monarchy makes the expansion of real greatness impossible. Yet it was under such a form of government that Confucius was produced. Nor can America match him, although some of the disciples of Fra Elbertus have opinions of their own upon that subject.

George Washington presided over a republic, but Aurelius Antonius, who had many similar traits of character, was the head of an empire.

Genghis Khan conquered a domain reaching from the Amur to the Volga, and southward to the Persian Gulf, and was the supreme autocrat of that vast region. Yet without being compelled to by reformers he established such a system of law and order that a man could travel from one end of Asia to the other without being molested.

In the interests, as we suppose, of the people in general, the Genghis Khans have been suppressed. Yet in our free democracy the natural leaders take possession of the land without stopping to mobilize armies.

Nor does our system of universal suffrage make the people sovereign. The man who imagines when he casts his ballot that he is sharing in the management of America is brother to the victim that buys a gold brick.

The man today who exercises the greatest political power in the world is not King Edward, or the Kaiser, or the Czar, but President Roosevelt. Yet another man in that same position might exercise far less strength. It is conceivable to have a Bibulous in the White House and a Caesar in the Senate.

The point is that it is the individual not the multitude, that controls, and it makes little difference what title he holds.

Nature maintains the same sharp distinctions in point of might in the lower animal kingdom.

Ten thousand lizards would run from a lion.

All the diatoms of the deep could not swerve the course of a whale.

The difference between the gnat and the Nubian vulture is typical of the difference between the small dealer and the syndicate.

The codlin moth and the condor both ply the same predatory trade.

There is no equality among these animals, and there is none among men.

A recent cartoon graphically portrayed the inequality of combat in the world. A diminutive monkey steps forth from the jungle to wrestle with a hippopotamus. The simian as he approaches consults a volume on Jiu-jitsu, which tells him to grasp his antagonist by the wrist and hurl him over his shoulder. The puzzled expression on the face of the anthropoid as he gazes from the volume of instructions to his mammoth antagonist symbolizes the perplexity that must always confuse the weak in the battle with the strong. The theory set forth in Markham's poem that somebody has loosened and let down the brutal jaw of the proletariat, and blown out the light in his brain, is not supported by the historic facts.

The greatest King of ancient Israel got his training herding sheep.

Cromwell, who overturned England, had had no military training.

Gen. Funston began his operations in the field as a botanist.

Markham himself, before he took out his poetic license to enlighten the world, pounded iron on a blacksmith's anvil.

The men against whom the social reformers protest frequently come from the very ranks that are pictured as stumbling along under crushing burdens. Jim Hill, who has cut a big figure in American industrial development, started out with an ax as his only asset.

The rise of genius in other fields brings out with equal clearness the truth that it is not the condition that counts, but the man himself. One of the greatest, if not the foremost Anglo-Saxon philosopher, Herbert Spencer, was not a college graduate.

Edison never attended any engineering or electrical school or any technical institution.

If children of the same family developed into people of equal ability it might be safely predicted that under a system of paternalism in which every person would have the same treatment the Utopia dreamed of by the idealists could be realized.

As a matter of record, however, the unequal development of children born of the same parents and reared in the same atmosphere reveals the vast futility of attempting to equalize mankind.

Benjamin Franklin had about seventeen brothers and sisters, and that one statement covers their biography.

There were born to the wife of Karl Wagner in the police department of Leipsic, Germany, nine children. What became of eight of them nobody knows, but the ninth child Richard, set to music all the emotions of many and most of the thunders of the gods.

The only way to bring about anything like equality in the world would be to exile or execute the men of genius.

Nature operates in fine scorn of all the carefully worked-out formulas of statesmen and reformers. Rousseau, whose brilliant economic writings led all Western Europe into new ideals of government, was the son of a dancing teacher.

The mother of Beethoven was the daughter of a cook, and the father of this great musician was a common drunkard.

If there were any rule to go by in perfecting civilization the ambitious programmes of the Socialists and other reformers could be taken more seriously. But the student, incredulous of the sanguine promises of these dreamers, has the right to wonder how any economic ideal could establish equality in a home, for example, like that famous one in Stratford. We happen to know what became of one of the brothers of Shakespeare. His name was Gilbert, and he went to London, located on the Strand, and became a dealer in gents' furnishing goods.

It is not implied that to sell socks and suspenders is a less honorable pursuit than to write about the "Merry Wives of Windsor." Yet it takes a different order of intellect. It is conceivable that an ironclad system of equality might put a tapemeasure in Shakespeare's hands and tell him to sell dry goods, but it is another thing to make a dramatist out of a dry goods clerk.

The protests of the members of the family that produce a Shakespeare or a Wagner should be directed, not against society, but against nature.

Even if some governmental system better than democracy should produce equality in one generation there would be no assurance that the next would not lapse. Here and there is found some freakish corroboration of hereditary theories. A remarkable instance of it is in the Bach family, in which musical genius was handed down through successive generations.

In America there have been a few families distinguished for their ability to maintain the standard of intellectual strength from father to son.

If there were, however, any certainty about this all the families that had a start intellectually at the moment of the introduction of some new social order would continue forever ahead of their fellows and so establish an aristocracy that could not be shaken.

The most hopeful thing in the world is nature's contempt of governmental attempts to establish either equality or inequality.

"The great man," said Ingersoll, "is usually a mountain, with the valley of ancestors on one side and the depression of posterity on the other."

Josh Billings expressed a similar idea when he said: "The American aristocrat is usually ashamed of his ancestry, and if he lives long enough has occasion to be ashamed of his posterity."

If the great man had the power to reproduce himself invariably we would have some marvelous geniuses in the world who could trace their lineage back to ancestors like Socrates, Aristotle, Caesar, Charlemagne, Napoleon and others. Emerson said that the descendants of genius declined in power, just as decoctions of tea made from the same leaves get weaker and weaker. That sagacious idea does not seem to be always borne out, either in the record of genius or in the serving of tea. The father of Roscoe Conkling was a successful man. He was United States Minister to Mexico and held other important portfolios, and before his more illustrious son came into prominence the elder Conkling engaged much public attention. But there came a time when he was introduced to an audience in New York as "the father of Roscoe Conkling." But there the law of heredity stopped, so far as any indication now shows.

There are a great many people in the United States who have managed to trace their lineage to Revolutionary sires, but the trouble in this as a demonstration of the law is that these jubilant descendants are far prouder of their ancestors than their ancestors would probably be of them.

I know of no really great man in America who owes anything genealogically to the political geniuses of George Washington's day.

This same uncertainty in regard to the ability of a great man to duplicate himself in his offspring has been conspicuous in the lineage of all ages. It is universally admitted that Aurelius Antoninus, for example, was not only one of the greatest emperors of antiquity, but one of the noblest men of all time. His maxims are among the choicest writings and his life was an inspiration. But his son, the Emperor Commodus, was the most detestable tyrant in the history of Rome. In brutal jealousy he had the greatest scholars of the day, the respected friends of his illustrious father and his own preceptors, cowardly murdered. Not one of the traits of his great parent was reproduced in this royal degenerate.

We have had in America some curious instances of acrobatic surprises in heredity.

The father of Jesse James was a clergyman.

The father of Jim Jeffries preached the gospel.

Those two names by no means exhaust the list of prominent Americans whose exploits have been in fields foreign to their early environment. It is reported that Harriman's father was a preacher. This magnate has very successfully learned the art of taking up the collection, but it is hardly credible that he got his financial genius counting the offering in his father's church.

It is easily possible that the captains of industry under some other economic system might have their titles changed, but it is doubtful that any form of government could keep Jim Hill chopping wood in northwestern forests, or compel Rockefeller to serve forever as a shipping clerk, or confine Harriman's operations to the curve of a pulpit.

Men who have accomplished much like to minimize the gifts with which they started in and to emphasize the importance of industry. Thus the Far East has the sententious proverb, "Time and patience change the mulberry leaf to satin." And the Occident likes to repeat that "Genius consists in an infinite capacity for taking pains." The value of this latter epigram lies in its euphony, not in its truth. A surer apothegm is that "You can't educate a goose up to be an eagle." Even if an infinite capacity for industry and detail would invariably win the highest success that would not be a demonstration of equality, for the ability to take vast pains is in itself an exceptional possession. The lives of many men reveal that the genius inspiring them was the outcome of no capacity for taking pains, for their mighty gifts frequently became manifest in childhood, long before they had thought of ambition or had made any conscious effort. Turner, the greatest landscape artist of England, began to make sketches almost in his infancy. Beethoven began his marvelous musical career at the age of 4. What would a system of equality do for the juvenile colleagues of such a boy? Before he was 9, Paganini had produced a sonata. At 16 he was making triumphal tours of Europe. At the age of 9 Chopin had played a concerto in public, and was far more interested in his new collar than he was in the performance. He received an ovation, and boylike, his boast to his mother was that everybody in the audience showed great admiration for his collar. Here was genius, defying the limitations the proverb writers have set up for it. And it is such genius in all art, in all invention and in great commercial undertakings, no less than in music, that will set at naught the equality programmes of any political economy.

Who will contend that the operas of Wagner are the results merely of a superb industry? Even in his boyhood he showed the character of his genius by compiling a tragedy built upon the jumbled plot of several of Shakespeare's, and killing off so many of the players in a Titanic struggle that their ghosts had to come back to complete the final act.

All people who have listened to the thumpings of a student not naturally endowed need not be told that a lifetime of practice would not make him the equal of a Mozart, who at 5 years of age was composing minuets and concertos and at 6 was giving successful exhibitions before critical audiences in the capitals of Europe. By what subtle processes nature produces such prodigies is a mystery, but we do know that no socialistic ideal could supply the deficiencies which the vast majorities of mankind disclose.

Napoleon had many colleagues at Brienne and they all had the same opportunity as he to become the Emperor of France. At 25 he was cannonading the mob in the streets of Paris. At 26 he was in command of the army of Italy and had scattered the Austrians, under the Archduke Charles. At 38 Napoleon was master of France and had begun to dictate terms to Europe. Clearly here was demonstration of the hopelessness of creating men equal, for Napoleon a few years before was an obscure and taciturn draughtsman in the Hydrographic Office at Paris. No man will deny that this unknown government clerk was marked by destiny and that nature, with imperial disregard of France's revolutionary dogma of equality and fraternity, gave to this youth from Corsica more brains than were combined in the multitude his cannons destroyed.

Yet economic idealism beguiles itself with the thought that under its régime a Napoleon would grow contentedly gray over a hydrographic chart.

Talks With Big Ones

HENRY CABOT LODGE, CHAMPION OF THE ADMINISTRATION AND "THE SCHOLAR IN POLITICS," DISCUSSES OWN CAREER.

By James B. Morrow.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Hazard is in the friendship of despots. In Russia the Czar's favorites are butchered with dynamite. Strafford went to the ax by the order of Parliament. Suffolk, caught at sea, had his head cut off and his body thrown overboard. In Rome poison and the poinard were the weapons of an earlier, but more subtle civilization.

Murder is no longer the argument of philosophers, Christians, and gentlemen—at least not in America. Daggers have been refined into sneers and aspersions. The block has been transformed into the newspaper, which has also become a pillory as well as a scourge. There is no personal danger in the favor of a President—only the discomfort of being the fag of a policy or the target for wit in the shooting gallery of politics.

HENRY CABOT LODGE.

When the Senators who were helping Grover Cleveland put a crown of thorns and thistles on the brow of silver were called cuckoos on the White House clock by good old John Morgan, of Alabama, he wrote a permanent phrase into the literature of party mirth and sarcasm. But there was no jeopardy to them in that, even though he looked as fierce as thunder when he said it. The lash of language braided for McKinley almost invariably was laid on the willing back of Mark Hanna.

DEFENDS, BUT DOES NOT ATTACK

Strangely enough, in the reversal of historic precedent and practice, Henry Cabot Lodge, the most intimate friend of Roosevelt, individual and official, suffers nothing more than some periodical banter and occasional satire. Always the wakeful and reliable warden of an administration, he employs the tact of a Talleyrand rather than the violence and energy of a Napoleon. But his exemption from the fangs and penalties of a President's friendship does not stop there. He defends, but he does not attack. Herein will be found both the Lodge strategy and the Lodge temperament. Furthermore, in self-composure, knowledge and culture he has an armor against familiar levity and assault in the Senate. Elsewhere, a rich man without the economic brutalities and immoralities of wealth, his associations are with the library instead of the market. If he were Roosevelt and Roosevelt were he a tempest would burst every day over the Senate. But at the White House there would be the intense patriotism, repose, and dexterity of McKinley, with more loftiness, but no less courtesy and fellowship.

"How did your friendship with the President begin?" I asked.

I had worn him down by pursuit, and now had him cornered in his room at the Capitol—a room as elegant as himself, but more florid, pictures painted on the plaster, a huge crystal chandelier suspended in the center, and much red mahogany and black leather. He had come leisurely in, with the erect bearing of an active officer of the line. A tall man and slender, having crisp brown hair much dashed with gray, blue eyes, both steady and friendly; a wide, full brow, and a beard trimmed down to the skin at the sides of his face. In dress, inconspicuous; tweed clothing, ironed and creased, and a scarf dark green in color.

FRIENDSHIP WITH ROOSEVELT.

"Mr. Roosevelt followed me at Harvard," Senator Lodge replied, "and while I heard of him during his student days, I did not meet him until 1884. I was delegate-at-large that year to the Republican national convention and he was a delegate-at-large from New York. My State was opposed to the nomination of Mr. Blaine. I went to New York to see Mr. Roosevelt and George William Curtis, who were also known to favor some other candidate. Mr. Roosevelt and I have been friends ever since."

"When the convention met you led in the defeat of Gen. Powell Clayton for temporary chairman by a speech in which you nominated John R. Lynch, a colored man?"

"That was simply a matter of tactics. Gen. Clayton was the Blaine candidate. He lived in Arkansas. Therefore, we picked a man from Mississippi and were successful. However, we didn't succeed in beating Mr. Blaine."

"You had been a delegate to the convention in 1880?"

"Yes, and voted for Edmunds and against Blaine and Grant. However, Massachusetts helped to nominate Gen. Garfield, and my vote was given with the rest."

"In 1896 you telegraphed that 'Massachusetts is coming to St. Louis for Reed and gold and is full of fight?'"

"Such a telegram was printed and attributed to me. However, it fully expressed the views I had at that time. My seat had been next to Mr. Reed's in the House of Representatives, and I not only had great respect for him as a public man, but was much attached to him as a friend."

"Will you tell me about the gold plank in the platform of that year?"

"The Massachusetts delegates arrived in St. Louis on Sunday morning and at once began work among the other States. We wanted an honest declaration on the money question. I saw Senator Platt of New York, and he said he would give us his support in the matter. We put aside all ambiguousness in words and made our fight for gold. I also talked with Mr. Hanna. I remember that he saw me Monday morning, and good-humoredly called me the most obstinate man in the world. 'Well,' I replied, 'I don't care what color you paint the engine so long as it is red.' That night we had the promise of enough delegates to win."

"Who wrote the plank."

THE FAMOUS GOLD PLANK.

"It was the work of several men. Senator Foraker, Gov. Merriam of Minnesota, Edward Lauterbach of New York, and myself were, perhaps, the chief authors of the plank, although others were consulted. Senator Foraker did most of the writing, but changes were made by all of us. William E. Chandler, then a Senator from New Hampshire, and a Republican not unfriendly to silver, said he would give $100 to know who had suggested the clause pledging the party to promote the cause of international bimetalism. He hunted through the scraps of paper in Senator Foraker's room and found an early copy of the plank, and in my handwriting the interlineation of the clause which had pleased and interested him. He paid $100 for a silver box and gave it to me."

"What will be the issues of the campaign of 1908?"

"I don't know. Issues are outside the limits of safe prophecy. They frequently come unexpectedly. It was so in 1896."

"Will the Philippines ever become an American asset?"

"I am sure the port of Manila will be of great value to the United States in the matter of trade with the Orient. As to the value of the islands as a whole, I am uncertain."

"Are the military and naval expenses of this government too large for a nation which stands for peace?"

"That is a great question, and I should want to take time to write my answer carefully. However, I believe in readiness, and that, of course, implies preparation. There would have been no Cuban question in 1898—and I said so at the time—had there been twenty battleships and 100 torpedo boats in our navy. Spain would not have taken the risk of war under those circumstances."

"Called 'the scholar in politics,' you believe, nevertheless, in party organization and are practical and not theoretical in that respect?"

WINCED AT THE APPELLATION.

The finger of inquiry had been laid on a sensitive spot, and Senator Lodge winced under the touch. "I am weary of that designation," he replied, "because I have never assumed it."

But he is a scholar. His work in letters establishes the description. And so do his speeches. "I have been reminded by this Democratic opposition on several occasions," he said during the debate on Panama, "of Dr. Johnson's remark about Thomas Sheridan, the father of the great dramatist and orator. He said: 'Sherry is dull, sir, naturally dull; but he must have taken great pains to arrive at his present position. Such an excess of stupidity is not in nature, sir.'" Whenever Mr. Lodge addresses the Senate he brings from literature and history much that is pertinent to his view and subject. In one of his speches on the regulation of railway rates, in which he ransacked the world for practical facts, giving the mileage and freights of remote places in Europe, as well as the charges on hay and butter in New England, he quoted Burke, who asserted that "small minds and great empires went ill together;" took a story from Pickwick Papers, approved of Dr. Johnson's observation that "no man was ever written down except by himself," and described the means of transportation employed by the peoples of ancient Egypt, Chaldea, and Assyria. Advocating the treaty with Spain, he said he believed "in the rule of the majority, because in the long run the majority is far more likely to be right than the minority. I have no faith," he continued, "in Matthew Arnold's self-complacent doctrine of the remnant."

REVENGE ONLY WILD JUSTICE.

"Ah, Mr. President," he once exclaimed, "as Coleridge says, 'Old faiths often become new heresies.'" Then he went to Lincoln's second inaugural and repeated that "the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether." While discussing intervention in Cuba, he called in Bacon, "who tells us that revenge is nothing but wild justice." In the same speech he spoke of negotiation and arbitration, but "whenever I think of that solution there comes to my mind the lines of Lowell, written at another period, a very dark time in this country—written in the homely New England dialect:

Ef I turn mad dogs loose, John,
On your front parlor stairs,
Would it jest meet your views, John,
To wait an' sue their heirs?

"Yes," he went on to say to me, having rejected his claim to scholarship, "I believe in parties and am a party man. By parties things can be done, and so there must be organization. The United States and England are the best-governed countries in the world, because in each the government is by party, and in each the government is opposed by party. One is put out and the other is put in. Thus the party of the administration becomes the party of opposition, and those who oppose become the responsible government. In other countries the government is made up of groups of various beliefs, which, coming together, soon fall apart."

"Why did you take up politics as a career?"

"From my days in college and onward I was interested in public questions. I was sent to the Legislature for two terms, and then beaten for the State Senate. But I wasn't out of politics. I was elected chairman of the Massachusetts Republican Committee and conducted the campaign of 1883, when Benjam inF. Butler was again running for Governor."

"Did you ever come into personal contract with him after his defeat that year?"

"He visited Washington when I was a member of the House, and I then met him for the first time. 'Sunset' Cox and I took lunch with him, and had an agreeable hour. Butler bore no animosity toward me. He was only bitter against those who once had been his friends and had turned."

NO THOUGHT OF PRACTICING LAW

"I had no thought of ever being an active lawyer. Law was to be a part of my general education. I was married directly after I left college. Then I traveled another year in Europe. Coming back, I spent two years at the Harvard Law School, a year in the office of the brother of the late Associate Justice Gray, and at the same time took a post-graduate course in history at Harvard. Henry Adams, the historian, was my professor. I had to write a thesis before I could get my degree. I chose the land law of the Anglo-Saxons as my subject. Two other students wrote on the same topic. The three papers, with an essay by Mr. Adams, were put into a book. I had now, I suppose, become an amateur historian."

"As a boy or young man, did you ever work for wages?"

"Not until I got to be assistant editor of the North American Review, which was then published in Boston, and was not a money-making property. Henry Adams was editor, and, needing help, came to me."

"How much did he pay you?"

"Come to think of it, I didn't receive anything. But I was glad to have the place. I wanted to get into literature, and here was an opportunity."

"I have heard that you rewrote your first article nine times?"

"After reading and editing manuscripts for a month or two, Mr. Adams gave me Gottlob Bachmann's 'History of the Papacy,' for review. He sent the article back to me eight times. Finally, it was printed. In the meanwhile, I had learned much that was new about the mechanics of authorship. My first signed article was an essay on Alexander Hamilton."

"You lectured on the 'History of the American Colonies' at Harvard in 1875-76. Had you any notion of a college professorship?"

LITERATURE AS A PROFESSION.

"No, I had no thought of teaching regularly. Mr. Adams suggested my appointment at Harvard. At the same the North American Review and taking time I was reading law, helping edit a post-graduate course for a university degree. I had now gone into American history, having studied all other, and without knowing it was entering upon that branch of literature as a profession. The 'Life and Letters of George Cabot,' printed in 1877, the year after my admission to the bar, was my first book. Cabot, who was my great-grandfather, was a Senator from Massachusetts from 1791 to 1796, and was appointed by John Adams to be Secretary of the Navy on the creation of that department of the government. He declined the place, however, after being confirmed by the Senate, and it was given to Benjamin Stoddert of Maryland. In studying his life, I came to know his period, and so wrote the Hamilton essay, to which I have referred. Later I elaborated the essay, and it was made into a volume and included in the string of biographies which are printed under the title of 'American Statesmen.' Both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Adams contributed to the series."

DISGUISED AS MAN WOMAN WINS TREASURE FOR LOVER.

Man She Is Engaged to Marry Becomes Ill—She Leaves Him in Canada, Goes to South Dakota, Discovers Mine and Sells It—Now Caring for Sweetheart.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CROOK CITY (S. D.) March 23.—Many strange, picturesque characters have found their way to the Black Hills within the last quarter of a century, and many romantic stories have come to light here, but no stranger or more picturesque character has ever come to these hills than a young woman who recently found a fortune in the ground near here, and no more romantic story has ever been related of a hill's character than that in which she figures as the heorine.

The young woman came into the hills wearing male attire and passing herself off as a man, so excellent was her disguise and so cleverly did she assume the rolt that no one suspected her secret until she herself chose to reveal it.

After prospecting for gold in Idaho, Montana and Nevada, this young woman came into the Black Hills last fall and began a search for the precious metal.

A short time ago she struck a promising lead up in the hills near here, and a few days later she sold it for a snug little fortune, threw off her disguise and set out for Canada.

She sold the property for more money, she says, than she had ever hoped to have, and she has gone back to Canada with it to get married and to try to save the life of the man she loves and for whose sake she endured all the hardships involved in her several years' prospecting experiences in the western mountains.

She might have sold her property for more than she did, had she elected to hold it longer, but she was eager to get immediate returns and to carry out promptly her long-cherished plans.

The young woman was known as Kingsley Malcolm when she was tramping through the West prospecting for gold and masquerading as man. Her real name is Ethel McNeill and her home is in Winnipeg.

It has come to light that she used to be a school teacher in Western Canada and that while she was teaching she met and became engaged to Wilson McWhorter, a young teacher whom she met at a teachers' institute.

Soon after their engagement was announced McWhorter became ill with consumption and was compelled to give up his work entirely.

Then it was that his brave sweetheart made up her mind to go out into the world disguised as a man and seek a fortune for her lover.

Her search for the hidden treasure was a long and trying one, but she never lost hope.

Immediately after her marriage she will take McWhorter to New Mexico in the hope of restoring him to health.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The Brownsville investigation today, with Lieut. Harry S. Grier of the Twenty-fifth Infantry on the stand, before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, dealt largely with the opinions held by the white officers as to the guilt or the innocence of the former negro soldiers. The lieutenant said that he had been convinced of the negroes' guilt by th finding of Springfield rifle shells an bandoliers in the streets of Brownsvil on the morning of August 14. He di not approve of the course taken by t inspector's department of the army trying to ascertain the guilt or inn cence of the men, however, and aft an ultimatum by Gen. WHEN YOU BUY ICE STOCK

You Get an Absolutely Safe Investment That Never Knows a Failure

The stock of the Consumers' Ice Company appeals to the practical business sense of all the people. The investor, the householder, the landlord, and the tenant alike must realize the unquestioned merit of an independent, economical ice business, in a great and growing city like this. The novel feature of this corporation lies in the fact that three-fourths of the capital stock is held by the consumers, making the company to a large extent co-operative. In addition to this, every share sold entitles the holder to two tons of ice at the actual cost price of production, which will not exceed $3.50 per ton. Even this price, under economical management, may be materially reduced.

The company has secured a location at 15th and Alameda streets. The Southern Pacific switch is already on the property, which reduces the initial expense of building and facilitates the work. The plant will be in operation by July 1.

Men of Ability and Integrity Have the Affairs in Charge

Among the officers and principal stockholders are: Alfred M. Salyer, president; Dr. J. W. Jones, vice-president; Ira C. Tichenor, secretary; Harrison Albright, architect and builder, and O .E. Farish, of Mines & Farish. All details connected with the securing of the site, construction of the plant, and ordering of necessary machinery has been practically arranged, and the entire success of an independent, semi-co-operative, profitable ice company is absolutely assured.

It Means More Ice and Active Competition for Los Angeles and Surrounding Cities

The business will be operated on business principles. It is a well-known fact that the profit on ice is from 30 to 40 per cent., a statement borne out by the fact that not a share of stock can be purchased in any local ice company. The demand for ice in this country is as staple and unchanging as the demand for flour. This company will act entirely independent of the trust, and besides proving a great advantage to the public at large will yield handsome returns to its fortunate stockholders. It is safe to claim that this stock will soon be worth many times its face.

Prices of Shares Are Now at Par, $10, But You Must Buy at Once

Remember that every stockholder is entitled to two tons of ice at cost price, effecting a saving on your ice bill alone sufficient to pay for your stock. The cold storage feature of the business alone returns a steady profit, making the investment one of the best industrials ever offered.

HER DEVOTION LEADS TO DEATH.

WIDOW KILLED WHILE RETURNING FROM CEMETERY.

Mrs. Harriet Gray, Who Had Placed Flowers on Her Husband's Grave Every Day for Four Years, Struck by Electric Car on West Sixteenth Street.

Walking home from Rosedale Cemetery, where she had been decorating her husband's grave, Mrs. Harriett Gray, No. 1211 Magnolia street, was struck and instantly killed last night by an electric car. An out-bound Los Angeles-Pacific flyer ran her down at Sixteenth and Fedora streets.

Since the death of her husband four years ago, Mrs. Gray had made daily trips to the cemetery, when her health permitted. Mrs. Gray resided with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Richards. From their residence she started for the cemetery late in the afternoon.

After arranging new flowers and attending to several plants about her husband's grave, Mrs. Gray started home. After passing Fedora street on Sixteenth street, Mrs. Gray walked near the railroad tracks toward Magnolia avenue. Then she turned to cross the right-of-way.

The electric car was running at a high rate of speed and witnesses to the accident, who were in the immediate vicinity, claim that they did not hear the gong or whistle of the car. Persons acquainted with Mrs. Gray claim that she was slightly deaf. When the car struck the woman it hurled her along the tracks about twenty feet and mangled the body fearfully.

When the car was stopped, the crew ran to the woman and found that she was dead. The police and Coroner were notified. The remains were sent to Pierce Bros.' morgue. When the police arrived they could learn but little about the accident. The car had gone on its way to the coast town.

HE'S HUNTING WILDCATS.

STATE MINERALOGIST ON THE TRAIL OF MINING FAKERS.

Says There Are More in Los Angeles Than in All the Rest of the State, and He Hopes to Get the Scalps of Some of the Gang—Better Location Law Needed.

State Mineralogist L. E. Aubury is visiting the city in the interest of the State Mining Bureau.

In connection with the work of the Bureau in Southern California, a field assistant will commence work the coming week on the collection of statistics of mineral production for 1906. The statistics of the State Mining Bureau are recognized as being more accurate than those issued from any other State, and it is the aim of the State Mineralogist to complete and publish them as soon after the 1st of January as possible, yet it is found that many producers fail to fill out the blanks furnished them, and in order to expedite the work it is necessary for a field assistant to call upon producers in person.

Mr. Aubury says that at no time in the history of Southern California has the mining outlook been so promising. Many important discoveries of gold and copper have been made in eastern Inyo, San Bernardino and Riverside counties. The advances, which have been made in railroad construction are primarily the cause of this development. From reports received from authentic sources Mr. Aubury concludes that developments which will be made in the desert section within the next six months, will cause as much interest to be manifested in that section by investors as in the Nevada discoveries.

The growth of mining in California is retarded by the lack of a proper law governing mining locations.

The Southern representatives to the late Legislature worked hard to frame a law similar to the Nevada law, which requires a stipulated amount of development within ninety days of location, but their efforts were in vain. If a law similar to the Nevada law had been passed, the location hog would have been shut out and the mining interests of this section of the State would have been advanced materially.

The State Mineralogist has a field assistant now at work in the Greenwater district, mapping the region and making a report on all developments which have been made up to date. As soon as this work has been completed, the Ubehebe and other copper districts in Inyo county will receive similar attention. San Bernardino, Riverside, San Diego and Kern counties will then be examined. Work on copper will continue throughout the State until July 1, of this year, when the results of investigations will be incorporated in a bulletin on that subject.

While in the city the State Mineralogist will give attention to a few wildcat mining companies, which have been defrauding the public, and he hopes to land some of the swindlers behind the bars of the County Jail. The State Mineralogist placed Capt. E. W. Emmons in the San Francisco county jail, where he is now awaiting trial. Emmons sold considerable stock in the Drummer Boy mine in Siskiyou county to Los Angeles and Riverside people, and from the number of counts against him, Mr. Aubury hopes to place him in the penitentiary for the rest of his natural life.

"This faking business in California has got to stop," said Mr. Aubury. "We have run most of the swindlers out of the State, but there yet remain more in Los Angeles than in the rest of the State combined. Some of them are eminently respectable, but they are 'gas pipers' just the same, and I hope to have some scalps before long.

"The greatest difficulty has been in the lack of coöperation of the victims. Unless a person who has been defrauded will swear to a complaint, a case cannot be made out. The victims, in most cases, prefer to pocket their losses rather than have it known that they were gullible. When California is rid of these leeches, the honest promoter will have a better chance to enlist capital. Confidence in California mines, however, is being restored, owing to the large exodus of fakers, who were forced out of business by the law enacted two years ago."

TEMPLARS' EASTER SERVICE.

At 1:30 o'clock this afternoon the Knights Templars of Los Angeles, Pasadena, Pomona, Long Beach and Santa Ana will meet at Masonic Temple, on Hill street, and march to Temple Auditorium, where the annual Easter sermon will be preached by Dr. Robert J. State Division Long the Goal of Visionaries.

Romance and Tragedy in Earlier Efforts.

Napoleon Once Interested in Carving California.

BY J. M. SCANLAND.

Periodically the question of State division is advocated by visionaries and office-seekers. The question of dividing California into two or more States began with its conquest from Mexico. In fact, it began before, for the principal object of the war against Mexico was for the conquest of territory, and the formation of slave States out of that territory. After the conquest, the pro-slavery southern statesmen, and the California pro-slavery advocates, outlined their plan. It was to carve California into three States, admitting slavery, as the South desired more political power and slave-holding territory. One State was to be composed of all that territory from San Francisco to the Oregon line, including the city of San Francisco. The second was to extend from the southern boundaries of the first to the northern boundary of San Luis Obispo county. And the third State was to extend from the southern boundary of the second State to the northern boundary of New Mexico. Hon. William M. Gwinn, a Southerner of national reputation, was one of the originators of this plan, and a member of California's first constitutional convention.

Having mapped out their boundaries for three States, room was left for the expansion of these States. Mr. Gwinn claimed that the California of the Spaniards extended from the Oregon line, or 42 degs. north, to the Salt Lake region, or the Rocky Mountains; also, to the line of New Mexico as it then existed, before the "county of Arizona" was erected into a territory.

The territory extending from the south boundary of Oregon to Salt Lake would make a large State for North California, and though the middle State would be a little cramped, the extreme southern State had ample room for growth. Statesman Gwinn had his eye on a slice of Mexico. In support of this claim, Delegate Gwinn produced Spanish records and argued that even if the line was restricted to the Sierra Nevadas, California would then have three times the area of the New England States combined, which was only 62,000 square miles, and a sea coast of four hundred and fifty miles. The fact was also made prominent that California had about 1400 miles of sea coast.

The six New England States had six United States Senators, and California, with three times the area, would have only two Senators. Even that extreme southern part of California, which was to be carved inot a State, had an area of 45,000 square miles, and would be as large a State as Ohio. In addition, Lower California was large enough for a State.

This was an intimation of the plan of expansion which it was hoped, would make it popular. Gwinn even went further, and showed that there was enough territory in the west and southwest for the formation of eight or ten States, as its area was about 350,[illegible] square miles. The mountains and the rivers made natural divisional lines, with the ocean in front. It was different in the case of Texas, where there were no mountains between, and no varieties of climate.

SOUTH INVOLVED IN SCHEME.

It was charged that Mr. Gwinn [illegible] that if the Southern States seceded, the West would organize a "Pacific Republic," and that the proposed division of California and the northwest into a number of States, was a part of that plan, which was in the interets of the Southern States. Mr. Gwinn denied this on the floor of the convention. However, such division was advocated by the southern element in California, and by the southern delegates in the convention.

Mr. Gwinn's measure to extend the boundaries of California to about the latitude of Salt Lake, was warmly contested, and finally carried by a vote of twenty-four to twenty-two. Immediately, the wildest excitement prevailed in the convention. Members mounted chairs and shouted: "No more slave territory; no Mormons!" Even the southerners who wanted slavery extended, refused to be incorporated in a State with Mormons. There were motions to adjourn, and shouts of "order!" from the most boisterous of the members.

Finally, an adjournment was taken, and next morning a compromise was made, and the boundaries were fixed as they are at present. Had it not been for the slavery question and the Mormons, perhaps the limits of California would have been extended, and there would now be at least two Californias. No doubt Los Angeles would have been selected as the capital of the southern State.

GWINN IS PERSISTENT.

Though defeated locally in his plan for the extension of California on the original Spanish lines, Statesman Gwinn, then a United States Senator, renewed it in Congress. He was aided by leading pro-slavery Democratic Senators of the Southern States. This plan was to buy a strip of territory on the northern border of Mexico and add it to California. The territory was bought, ten million dollars being paid, and it is known as the "Gadsden Purchase," the United States being represented in the purchase by Gen. Gadsden, then Minister to Mexico.

Senator Gwinn and the other leaders in the plan favored the purchase of a strip of territory beginning thirty miles south of Mazatlan, which would give a port on the Pacific, and paying therefor fifty million dollars. But the commissioners decided to take less territory, and pay less. So, we got practically a worthless strip of land, and failed to get an important commercial port on the Pacific, which would also serve for a naval base. This restriction of the territory defeated the object of its purchase. The forming of a new State out of Southern California.

Senator Gwinn and some of the southern leaders, next advocated the purchase of Lower California, or its "acquisition by other means." The object was to make out of it a slave State, or annex it to California, and divide the State.

ATTEMPT AT CONQUEST.

In a few years, after the failure of the plan to purchase, an attempt was made to annex Sonora by conquest. Henry A. Crabbe, formerly an editor of Vicksburg, Miss., was the leader of the "filibusters." At the time he organized the expedition he was editing a paper in Stockton, and also represented that county in the State Senate. This political expedition was tinged with romance, and ended in a tragedy that shocked humanity. Pesqueria, the Governor of Sonora, had "confiscated" some rich mines belonging to Juan Bautista Ainza, and "exiled" him from the country. The charge was that Ainza was plotting against the government. Ainza came to California, and Crabbe married Señorita Filomena, one of Ainza's pretty daughters.

The statesman-filibuster now had a double object in view. He would add Sonora to California, and perhaps become Governor of the new State, and also recover the rich mines of his father-in-law. He organized a company of fifty men, and halting at Los Angeles, the "army" was recruited to about one hundred. In the spring of 1857 the filibusters left Los Angeles, marching across the desert. Pesqueria heard of their coming and issued a bloodthirsty order: "Death to the Filibusteros!"

PRISONERS SHOT.

Crabbe and his company were surprised at Caborca by an overwhelming force and about twenty were killed or wounded. The others surrendered on the guarantee that their lives would be spared. Pesqueria violated his word of honor, had the men bound hand and foot, and shot to death. Of the sixty-eight, not one was spared. Crabbe and his brother-in-law, John A. Cortelyou, were reserved for the last. Crabbe's head was severed from his body, put in a jar of mescal, and exhibited to visitors by the ghoulish Governor. The mines which Pesqueria took from Ainza were known as "La Cananea," and were recently sold by Pesqueria's widow to Col. W. C. Greene, now a millionaire.

About this time there was an attempt among the politicians of Texas to divide that vast empire into four States, thus giving the South six additional United States Senators. The South was struggling to maintain its political supremacy in the Senate, and this division would have given it great power. It was argued that as Texas had increased its territory in consequence of the Mexican War, which otherwise would not have been done, the people should consent to the carving process. But the people strongly opposed division, even preferring loss of power in Congress. There were two offenses for which Texans then hanged people—horse-stealing and advocating State division.

The Legislature of 1859 submitted the question of dividing the State of California to the people, which was carried. But the courts decided that the Legislature did not have the constitutional power, and the papers were pigeonholed in Washington. The new State was to be composed of the counties of San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, San Bernardino, and San Diego, or all territory south of the thirty-sixth parallel. The new State was to be named "Colorado."

AGAIN NO DIVISION.

Ex-Senator Gwinn made one more effort for State division, but with the foresight of a statesman, he had no hopes of bringing it in as a slave State. The country was ablaze with war, and slavery was in the balance, and virtually doomed. He visited Paris in 1864, having matured a plan to "colonize" Sonora, and annex it to California. This would give hopes and perhaps prospects to the State divisionists. He stated his plans to Emperor Napoleon, who approved them, and gave him a letter to Marshal Bazaine, then commander of the French troops in Mexico. The Marshal was requested to furnish Ex-Senator Gwinn with the troops necessary to carry out his plan of "colonization," or conquest. The Marshal refused, and the usurper, Maximilian, also opposed the plan. Emperor Napoleon then peremptorily ordered Bazaine to furnish the troops, but, by duplicity, he disobeyed the orders. Napoleon had conferred upon the California ex-Senator the title of "Duke of Sonora." Failing to get the necessary troops, he asked for a bodyguard and returned to California.

Thus ended his last hopes and plans for State division. All dreams of a "Pacific Republic" now vanished, and like most dreams, are remembered only as fleeting fancies of the imagination.

Secretary of Interior Provides Additional Appropriation to Show Possibilities of Scientific Agriculture Near Orland, in Sacramento Valley. Ranchers Confident of Success.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) March 24.—The Secretary of the Interior some time ago made a conditional allotment of $650,000 for the Orland irrigation project in the Sacramento Valley, and it now rests wtih the land owners in the vicinity of Orland as to whether the Reclamation Service will have an opportunity to prove to the people of the Sacramento Valley what government irrigation is capable of doing for that valley. Everyone knows that a large number of the land owners in that valley consider wheat raising good enough and that means that it takes from one section of land up to maintain a family.

With the examples of the success of irrigation in many parts of the valley before them the people are gradually awakening to the fact that the cultivation of large areas in wheat is not calculated to bring about the best development of the valley's resources, nor does it bring financial returns commensurate with the labor and capital invested. The big ranch man, more than any other one factor, has retarded the proper development of the State of California, and progress will continue to be slow until the large land owner can be brought to see the possibilities of intensive cultivation under irrigation.

The people in the vicinity of Orland have shown a remarkable spirit of progressiveness in organizing a water user's association entirely upon their own initiative, and in urging upon the government through their Washington representative the consideration of a reclamation project in the vicinity of their town. By energetic action they have succeeded in proving to the Reclamation Service the possibility that land owners might consent to the necessary subdivision of their land; that the owners of present small canals are likely to agree to an amicable settlement of water disputes by the disposal of their properties at a reasonable price, and that lands that may be required for reservoir purposes will be obtainable at fair figures. The Orland people have been able to induce the Secretary of the Interior to make an allotment from the reclamation fund for the construction of an Orland project, conditioned upon the above matters being actually done, and it is gratifying to everyone in the valley to observe the intelligent and ambitious manner in which the people are going about doing these things.

When the conditions imposed by the Secretary of the Interior shall have been complied with, and when the conditional allotment shall have been made definite, the final plans of the necessary work will be promptly prepared by the Reclamation Service, after which construction can be begun.

The area of the project probably will be slightly in excess of 10,000 acres. As compared with the irrigable area of the Sacramento Valley it represents less than 1 per cent. It cannot therefore seriously affect the physical conditions throughout the valley. When, however, these 10,000 acres now producing a small amount of wheat shall become highly productive, when oranges and lemons and walnuts and almonds are being shipped from this small area by the hundreds of carloads, when the land shall have increased in value from less than $10 to many hundreds of dollars per acre, then it is hoped that other parts of the valley will desire to be similarly improved, and that the large land owners will consider it to their benefit to encourage similar work elsewhere.

The immense possibilities of the valley will then become more and more apparent, and the various interests will come to realize that the success of one will assist in the success of the other. It can then be shown that the difficulties in protecting the lowlands on the Sacramento River may be helped by the construction of reservoirs for the irrigation of the highlands, that navigation can be better provided for than at present with a less wasteful use of the summer flow of the Sacramento River, and that there are ways in which the mining industry can be carried on without detriment to agriculture. With a better understanding of these facts the people of the valley will insist upon attacking the problem of general improvement on the vast and far-reaching scale which it deserves, and henceforth progress will follow in broad lines and with constantly accumulating results.

Have You Bought a Lot yet in the LUCERNE TRACT at Long Beach?

About 150 lots in Lucerne Tract are still unsold. Prices range from $250 to $425 for inside lots, and from $300 to $550 for a few choice corner lots. Terms are easy—one-fourth first payment, the balance in 6, 12 and 18 months, interest at 6 per cent. These lots will be worth at least $1000 apiece within a year from now by reason of the development of the Inner Harbor.

If you were down at Long Beach yesterday and witnessed the jubilee of its enterprising citizens you must have been impressed with the importance of the developments in progress at the Inner Harbor. You must realize what it means to the property owners in that locality. It will be but a short time before Long Beach will have grown solidly to the confines of our tract.

Among the recent purchases of lots in Lucerne Tract are mechanics and shipbuilders who will be employed by the Craigs as soon as their new plant is constructed. The increment of population due to the establishment of new industries on and about the Harbor will of itself be sufficient to compel the conversion of much acreage property in our vicinity into town lots.

Upon a lot costing $250 you may put a pretty bungalow costing $1250. Your property thus improved will be worth fully $2000 and will sell for that by the time your house is finished. If you buy two lots and improve one, the value of the other will be enhanced fully 50 per cent. without the outlay of a dollar on it. Even if you buy and hold while your neighbors improve and build, you will profit by all that goes on around you. On reflection you will detemine that lots in Lucerne Tract are superior investments for immense and immediate profits. If you did not make a selection of a lot on Saturday go down as early this week as possible and take your pick.

Communicate with this office (both phones 6416,) and we will arrange for a sales agent to accompany you at your convenience. Prospectus and full information for the asking.

It is likely that the present prices of Lucerne Tract lots will be advanced upon the remnant left unsold after the first of April. Act at once.

Honestly said, I could take a swim in these medicines I swallowed. I was treated by the best physicians in the city, but only with bad results. They doped me so much that I became a total wreck. I had asthma, bronchitis, kidney trouble, diabetis, enlargement of the heart, cancers of the stomach and bowels, liver and female troubles of the worst kind. One day I saw an ad. in the paper, Drugless Institute. I thought I would try that for the last resort. From the very first treatment I got relief. For four years past I have suffered from general catarrhal conditions and from overweight, both of which I felt were becoming a peril to my life. Under the direction of specialists I submitted to surgery in the nasal passages. My ears had become affected, endangering my hearing. My conviction that I needed constitutional natural cure rather than local treatments which were not satisfactory grew stronger from day to day. December 11, 1906, I commenced treatment with Dr. F. S. Kurpiers of 702 South Spring Street, Los Angeles. Since that time I have lost 15 pounds and the catarrhal symptoms are rapidly disappearing. Probably occasioned by poisonous drugs given me by physicians, my gums were painfully sore and were receding from some of my teeth. In five days after I began treatment by Dr. Kurpiers this soreness disappeared as if by magic. Dr. Kurpiers has not given me any medicine whatever and under his regime I am expecting perfect health in a reasonable time.

The Beautiful "Redondo Villa Tract B" The Beautiful

Only $90 Per Lot $4 Down, $4 Per Month No Interest, No Taxes

FREE ROUND TRIP TICKETS from Los Angeles to Redondo and Return, On cars going every 20 minutes, every day, are given away at our office absolutely free upon application. Also Free Automobile Ride at Redondo.

Large level lots, 50x150 feet. Rich Soil, Pure Water, Fine Climate. All lots, including corners, one price—$90 per lot—no more, no less. You know what you have to pay—$90 per lot—no higher. At Redondo over $2,000,000 has already been expended in grand and substantial improvements. The beautiful "Redondo Villa Tract B" is on the Camino Real (King's Highway) boulevard connecting Redondo with Los Angeles. We have just bought this beautiful tract for $151,000, and believing in the principle that it pays to let our customers make a profit, hence we have decided on this grand profit-sharing plan. We will make a profit and all our purchasers are guaranteed a profit of 25 per cent. within one year, as per our written agreement.

MR. H. E. HUNTINGTON IS EXPENDING OVER A MILLION DOLLARS AROUND REDONDO IN SUBSTANTIAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Go down to Redondo and see for yourself. At Jefferson street and Grand avenue see the immense stacks of heavy steel rails for the double-tracking of the present two electric lines of the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway Company. The rails are arriving daily. Dirt is now flying. Better buy now. Then there's the Los Angeles-Pacific Railway Co.'s electric line to Redondo, the broad-gauging of which will soon occur. And in addition to the above three electric lines now running to Redondo is the great Santa Fe steam railroad. With four lines of transportation it would seem as if same would be sufficient, but surveyors are in the field laying out the shortest line of all to connect Los Angeles with its choicest seashore suburb—Redondo. Mr. Huntington is now building at Redondo the largest electric power house on the Pacific Coast, to cost $1,250,000, as fast as men and money can do it. Go down and look at the mammoth cement smokestack.

A suburban electric railroad is now nearing completion at Redondo. The grand three-story business block of Mr. W. M. Garland at Redondo is just finished. Follow successful men like Mr. Huntington and Mr. Garland—they know that Redondo is substantial and a safe place to invest in. Buy anywhere around Redondo and you are sure to make large profits. Three commercial wharves. A safe harbor by twenty years' practical test. Redondo is permanent and has just begun to grow. Then again, referring to successful men, we notice that the following men have bought to the north of Redondo:

Mr. Edwin Chambers, the far-sighted General Freight Agent of the Santa Fe; Mr. George H. Peck, the successful banker of San Pedro; Mr. John J. Byrne, the capable General Passenger Agent of the Santa Fe, and Dan Murphy, the millionaire oil operator of Los Angeles. A word to the wise is sufficient! BUY

Remember that your purchase is made with the distinct understanding that we will refund all money paid us, with 6 per cent. per annum interest added, if after visiting the "Redondo Villa Tract B" it is found that we have misrepresented our proposition in the slightest particular.

25 Per Cent. Guaranteed Increase

For $4 down and $4 per month until paid for we sell you a "Redondo Villa Tract B" lot for $90, subject to the following guarantee from us: If at the expiration of one year from purchase this $90 lot is not worth $112.50—or 25 per cent. increase—based on the price at which our corps of salesmen will then be selling similar lots, we will refund all of the money you have paid us, with 6 per cent. interest additional. If you should die at any time before payments have been completed, we will give to your heirs a deed of the lot without further cost. If you should lose employment or be sick you will not forfeit the land, but as each written certificate of sickness or non-employment is received monthly your time for payment will be extended another month.

Our Restrictions

No saloons, no shanties, no factories. Purchasers are not compelled to build, but if they do then they must erect attractive looking houses, there being no "dollar limit." We leave it to each purchaser to build a pretty looking house, which must be neatly painted, as we known that for a moderate sum one can now build a very pretty bungalow. Lumber is cheap at Redondo, as there are three commercial wharves at Redondo, at which lumber schooners are daily discharging their cargoes.

If Russell Sage, the multi-millionaire of New York told you that you could make a fortune in suburban real estate (especially when it costs you only $4 down and $4 per month) wouldn't you be impressed? Well, listen! That's just what Mr. Sage did say in the New York World of September 28, 1902: "Young man, buy real estate, especially acre property, in the outlying boroughs, and then work hard at your usual avocation. Your real estate purchases will make your old age comfortable."—Russell Sage.

Come One! Come All!

Office open every night during week days from 7 to 9 p. m. to accommodate those who cannot come during the day.

RAILROADING THEN AND NOW.

IN THE TIMES of Sunday, March 24, a week ago, appeared extracts from a letter written by Charles G. Dawes, former Comptroller of the Currency, in which reference is made to Charles E. Perkins, at one time president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company. The railroader was referred to by the Comptroller of the Currency as a man of the utmost probity and, therefore, one who had won staunch friends in the business world. Reference was also made at that time to an article on the relations of the railroads to the public and to the government, written in 1885 by Mr. Perkins. The following remarks are based on that paper:

There is no other question before the American people today which is attracting so much attention or absorbing so much public thought as that of railroad management and control. It is not a new subject, but one which has occupied public attention for nearly a quarter of a century. To be sure, it has only assumed the acute stage during the last few years. A thorough solution of all the many difficulties involved in the problem has not yet been found. The President and his Attorney-General, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and all the great railroad managers and financiers of the country, thence down through the other great industries and branches of business so intimately connected with railroading, are all absorbed in the study of this question.

More than twenty years ago, in 1885, the Interstate Commerce Commission addressed a series of comprehensive and pointed questions to those in charge of great railroad enterprises seeking for the views of those most intimately acquainted with railroad management as to existing abuses and their remedies. One of those appealed to was Charles E. Perkins, the president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. Mr. Perkins has displayed his great abilities as a railroader in developing and building up to perfection this great system of roads. It is one of the most important in the Central West still, and always will be.

Of course in the twenty-two years which have elapsed since this comprehensive and lucid article was written, a great many changes in the situation have taken place. One of Mr. Perkins's most important contentions made at that time was that the common law of England was in full force in defining the relations of our government with the railroad management of our country at that time. The argument made there was worthy of a powerful legal mind. Since then there have been important changes made in the statute laws of the United States, which have weakened very much the force of Mr. Perkins's argument for the application of English common law to the regulation of government relations with railroads. There are other features developed in the paper which would be more applicable to that time than to this.

The general plea of this distinguished railroad man was undoubtedly founded upon absolute justice. There is very much in what he says in an article that would occupy ten columns in The Times, which would apply to the conditions existing today. If his reasoning prevailed in the dealings between the railroads, the government and the country, in many respects a solution of the existing difficulties would be easier than it is.

One of Mr. Perkins's most important contentions is that the needs of the general public for railroads are vastly more in number and greater in their importance than the needs of the investors in railroads themselves. He points out the patent and indubitable fact that the railroads have, in a general way, been the chief feature in developing the wilds of the great West, with all their numerous and magnificent resources, and the great increase of the wealth in the country and as great an increase in the comforts of the population.

Another point made in this paper is that the railroads are, in a way, at the mercy of the public, and that public clamor needlessly raised, and tending to severe and unjust interference with railroad operation, must always be one of the most cruel injustices possible in our industrial life. In other lines of business a person who finds his enterprise attacked, whether properly or improperly, if in a way not agreeable to him, can dispose of his property and move his enterprise to some place where it will be more favorably treated.

This the railroads cannot do. They are fixtures, impossible of transferring, and they involve the investment of colossal sums of money. The stockholders are not few, not always rich, but, on the contrary, many in number and, in thousands of instances, people of slender means.

The popular contention that railroad fares should be universally based on the length of the haul, and that every shipper should enjoy the same right as another, is answered in this paper. Railroading is compared with merchandising, where there are wholesale rates and retail rates. A long haul on the railroad may be compared to a wholesale rate on merchandise. A carload rate made by railroads, or a ten-carload rate, manifestly, as is claimed by Mr. Perkins, should not be the same as the rate on a part of a carload or a single carload, as compared with the ten-carload rate. The great mass of the American public recognize these manifest facts, and it is only the cranky brain of the populist or the anarchist which finds any fault with this phase of railroading.

Competition is also discussed by Mr. Perkins, especially water competition. Where the railroad has to compete with water transportation, or even with another line of railroad, freight rates are likely to be lower than where there is no competition, just as in merchandising a wholesaler who has a certain district under his immediate control is likely to demand higher prices than if he had a rival. Nor is this always unjust. The railroad which is left without competition is usually a railroad where there is little business to be done. The volume of business naturally enables the common carrier to render his services to the public cheaper than where there is less. As business increases, competition naturally comes in, and with competition naturally come lower freight rates.

Another question propounded at that time by the Interstate Commerce Commission was as to the desirability of improving the waterways of the country by the government in order to generally regulate railroad affairs. The paper in question concedes the right of the government to improve generally existing waterways. As to the creation of artificial waterways by the government, Mr. Perkins thinks that would be neither just nor desirable. On this point there will be some difference of opinion in the general public mind, and if Mr. Perkins were writing today he would probably modify these views somewhat himself. But, after all, the pith of this question is the improving of natural waterways. The Federal government never has and probably never will extensively enter into the business of digging interior canals. The Panama ditch, of course, is a thing not comprehended in the paper of the railroad man. It is a matter of our days, not of twenty years ago. He would probably, as most railroad men of our own day do, concede the right of the government in every way to dig the Panama ditch, and the desirability of that enterprise to the public.

DEATH AGAIN VISITS MINES.

TWO MORE UNFORTUNATES ARE ACCIDENT VICTIMS.

Heavy Timber Crashes Down Shaft With Fatal Result—Miner, by Slipping Off Plank, Falls Two Hundred Feet—James Shorten Pardoned by Governor—Boarding-house Fire.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) March 29.—Fatal accidents are becoming common in the Bisbee mines. The latest names to be added to the roll of miners killed are those of Patrick Carter and Joseph Enright. Carter was a timberman in the Gardner shaft. He was descending the shaft in company with two other miners, taking below a timber 12x12, eight feet long. About half way down the timber slipped and was caught on the side of the shaft, soon dislodging, however, to drop again to the descending cage. Carter was caught beneath and instantly killed. The other miners were injured, also, but not seriously.

Enright was at work in the Spray shaft, when the plank on which he was standing slipped, and he was dropped to his death 200 feet below. He had made arrangements to leave deep mining and to go to some property he owned in Mexico. He was well known along the Pacific Coast, and he had spent several years in Alaska.

Timothy McGrath, a miner employed by the Lake Superior and Pittsburgh Company, committed suicide at Lowell Sunday. No reason can be found for the deed, as McGrath had many friends and appeared happy and prosperous.

GOVERNOR PARDONS.

James Shorten, who was sentenced in 1904 to ten years' imprisonment in the Territorial penitentiary, has been pardoned by Gov. Kibbey and has returned to his former home, Douglas. The pardon was granted because of Shorten's excellent record as a convict. There is, too, the general impression at present that he is innocent of the crime charged against him. He was accused of being a member of the gang which held up the Little Iceberg gambling saloon in this city.

The Calumet miners' boarding-house at Douglas was destroyed by fire Saturday night, through a defective flue. The loss will be about $2000.

ROAD WANTS HELP.

BUSINESS MEN MAY GIVE IT.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) March 29.—The business men of Tucson are about to take up the proposition of assisting in the construction of an extension of the Twin Buttes Railroad. The railroad company intimates that something in the way of a subsidy would much expedite the construction of the line, through which would be offered the nearest route between Californian and Western Mexican points—much better than the present Southern Pacific line around by Benson.

With encouragement that has come out of the successful race meet, lately concluded in Tucson, the horsemen of Southern Arizona are preparing to take the initiative in a movement for the formation of a southwestern racing circuit, to include El Paso, Douglas, Globe, Tucson, Prescott and Albuquerque, to conclude at the Territorial Fair in Phoenix in November, where purses of $1000 are the usual thing. Visiting horsemen at the Tucson meet were more than pleased with the treatment accorded them. First money in four of the five main events of the meet went to outside horses, the exception being Nutbird, owned by C. M. Lincoln of Tucson, which led in the 2:28 trot.

ANOTHER NEW BLOCK.

Still another handsome block is to be added to the many lately erected on the business streets of Tucson. This latest structure, to cost $150,000, is to include an operahouse, eight storerooms and numerous offices. The building will be 200x185 feet in area, on the west side of Stone avenue, between Pennington and Alameda streets, near the new postoffice. It will be the property of Albert Steinfeld.

A most notable death was that Sunday of Noah W. Bernard, one of the pioneer residents of Tucson and a citizen of Arizona for thirty-three years. He had served as Councilman from this county in the Legislature and was always prominent in Democratic politics. He had been associated with W. C. Greene in Mexican mining enterprises and was widely known and highly esteemed in Sonora. The funeral, which was held Tuesday, was conducted by the Masonic order.

DIES AS HE DRINKS.

"Doc" Dougherty, 45 years of age, a well-known miner and prospector, was found dead a few days ago near Globe, his face in a small mountain stream, six inches deep. It is believed that he died of heart disease as he stooped to drink.

Driven temporarily insane by fifty days of journeying among people to whom his speech was unknown, Pedro Gaban, a Montenegrin, bound from Europe to Globe, tried to commit suicide Sunday on a train on the Gila Valley, Globe and Northern Railway, north of Bowie. He cut his throat with a pocketknife, but the job was so poorly done that the surgeons at the Gila County Hospital believe he will recover. He is being cared for by relatives in Globe.

TO MAKE SILK.

The picture is of the building designed by O. E. Goodale for the Curtis Silk Farms at Mission View, east of San Gabriel Country Club.

The company has recently purchased twenty acres at Mission View lying along the proposed extension of the San Gabriel street car line. The grounds are now being laid off as a botanical garden and a grove of mulberry trees are being planted.

The building will be mission style, plastered exterior; will have a concrete foundation, concrete floors, tile roof, have two towers with mission bells, and will be used for exhibition purposed, a silk worm cocoonery and the manufacturing of silk into dress goods.

The idea is to establish an industry as truly and typically local as the ostrich farm. Small silk things, like flags, ribbons, kerchiefs and aprons will be made.

MISSION VIEW ACRES.

Charles L. Hubbard & Co. report the sale during the past week of 206 acres lying east of the San Gabriel Country Club for Joseph Burkhardt to a syndicate of Los Angeles investors for a stated consideration of $75,000. As soon as possible water mains will be laid and the streets graded and oiled. Owing to the activity at Arcadia where the "White City" and race track are now being constructed, agents report that real estate in the San Gabriel Valley has been especially active of late.

NEW WORK PLANNED.

The Builder and Contractor furnishes the following details of work for the future, plans for which are now in the hands of various architects:

Charles E. Shattuck is drawing plans for a seven-room residence in Swiss chalet style at Monrovia for C. F. Guthridge.

A. C. Smith is drawing plans for a one and one-half-story, six-room bungalow on Forty-fifth street between Moneta avenue and Main street for F. G. Hentig.

Hudson & Munsell are preparing plans for a large two-story residence on West Adams street near Arlington avenue for Mrs. L. Lindsay. The exterior walls and partitions will be of hollow tile, made by the Western Art Tile Works. The plumbing will be of the best quality, and all the conveniences of a first-class residence provided for.

Morgan & Walls are preparing plans of a two-story and basement business building on the northeast corner of Seventh and Hill streets for the H. F. Vollmer Company. It will be 80x86 feet and have pressed-brick facing, plate-glass and iron store front, composition roofing and strictly up to date. The same architects are preparing plans of a three-story brick warehouse building 175x125 feet at the corner of Third and Santa Fé avenue for the R. L. Craig Comany, wholesale grocers. Bids are now being received for the excavating and concrete work of the basement walls. The building will be of heavy construction and equipped with elevators, business offices, etc.

Scott Bros. are drawing plans for a one and one-half-story seven-room residence on Mariposa street, near First street, for Frank Herring.

Edelman & Barnett have prepared plans of a two-story frame residence on Westmoreland place, between Seventh and Wilshire, for Mrs. S. Jacoby. It will contain eleven rooms and have hardwood floors throughout; slash grain pine trim, four mantels, two bathrooms, beam ceilings to dining and living rooms, rustic and shingled exterior, plate and art glass windows, plumbing and electrical conveniences. The same architects have prepared plans of a large one-story suburban villa for Willard Stimson on his ten-acre plat in the Eagle Rock Valley. It will contain seven rooms with large living-room and cobblestone fireplace. The interior will have pine trim, the walls will have silcloth and burlap finish, and every convenience will be provided for the occupants.

The designs of Marsh & Russell have been accepted by the board of trustees of the First Presbyterian Church of Long Beach for a new church building. It will be English Gothic in design, 93x128 feet in size and constructed of concrete blocks, stone and brick. Besides an auditorium, seating over 1000 people, there will be a Sunday-school room, with large lecture room and individual classrooms. Ladies' parlors, social rooms, pastor's study and an up-to-date system of heating and ventilating will be provided.

A. Dudley is drawing plans for a two-story, eleven-room frame residence at Beverly Heights, near Hollywood. The first story exterior will be artificial stone, the second story old English half-timbered style. The roof will be tile. It will have plate, leaded and art glass windows. The living-room will be octagon in shape, 25x25 feet, with inglenook. A large music room also adjoins the living-room. The dining and living rooms will have beam ceilings, oak floors and mahogany trim. The second story will be finished in white cedar enameled, and with maple floors. A billiard room will be located in the attic. The laundry and heating plant will be quartered in the basement.

Clements & Blachman have prepared plans of a two-story, ten-room frame residence at the corner of Kalmia and Albatross streets, San Diego, for H. S. Richards of the Ice and Cold Storage Company. It will be mission in style with cement plastered exterior, concrete foundations and have oak, birch and redwood trim. The same architects have plans for the furniture and fittings of the new banking house to be established in the Johnson building. The vault and safe work are being installed.

TWO MATCHLESS BUNGALOWS.

A model type of house in the old English half timber Elizabethan style is shown in the accompanying sketch. Brown Arizona sandstone being introduced in the front porch and porte cochere with tile roof, lends color, and gives the desired massive effect. The floors throughout are oak; the library is finished with birdseye maple and paneled seven feet high. The walls of this room are finished in a gray, with a delicate touch of old rose in the decoration and fixtures to harmonize with the woodwork. The remainder of the woodwork is slash grain Oregon pine. The reception hall, living-room and dining-room have a Flemish oak finish.

The entire second floor is finished in white enamel. Two baths finished in tile are arranged, en suite, with two and three bedrooms to each. The walls throughout are covered with canvas and decorated with landscape scenes, in the modern La Noveau styles. There are ten rooms on the first and second stories, besides servants' rooms on the third floor.

The feature of the house is a broad and massive stairway leading from the reception hall to a spacious landing which opens on to a balcony overlooking the Raymond Hotel and its surroundings.

J. M. Kellerman is the owner of the house. It is located in the Oak Lawn tract, at South Pasadena. The cost of this structure was about $20,000.

Now nearing completion on the heights of Franklin avenue, overlooking beautiful Hollywood, the residence being built for J. C. Keatz will be one of the most striking homes in a town famed for unique residences. Built in the popular mission style, and adhering closely to the fundamental idea of the bungalow, it presents a very attractive appearance, as the accompanying sketch, on this page, shows. The scheme of the architecture has been followed in finishing the interior of the house. Beamed ceilings, wainscoted and paneled walls, hardwood floors, plate and leaded art glass windows, and all modern conveniences also are included in the finish. The approximate cost, complete, will be $10,000.

The plans and specifications for both the above described buildings were made by Wilson and Barnes at Ye Planery.

AN OPERATOR'S VIEWS.

What Julius R. Black Has to Say About the Present Condition of Los Angeles Realty.

The following is to be taken as the personal views of an intelligent, experienced real estate operator. The Times publishes them as such:

Julius R. Black of the firm of Black Bros. delivered himself of the following opinion on the condition of the real estate market, in an interview with a Times reporter late Saturday afternoon:

"It is a significant criterion of the true condition of affairs in the real estate market today that nobody is hollering "slump" except the man who is looking for a choice speculative investment. When that kind of a man is in the market to sell, he passes out a fine line of talk about 'God's country' and how this is just the place for the old woman and the kids, but when he is in the market to buy he claims the real estate values are going to Hades. The game is as old as the hills, but it manages to fool some of the people all of the time.

"The slump bugaboo was first trotted out in the days of the 'Frisco disaster, and served its purpose then to shake out a few people from whom it was a shame to take the money. If our real estate values had been inflated as much as 5 per cent. above the normal level established by healthy demand, there would have been an immediate decline at that time and the reaction would have carried values a bit below their true level. But no such decline took place and none is going to. It is a powerful, if sad, commentary upon the stability, not only of our real estate values, but of our financial and commercial institutions, that such a terrible catastrophe so close to home failed to affect them one iota.

"Any man whose brains weigh sixteen ounces to the pound knew then and knows better now that the calamity howlers in the days of the earthquake were trembling for a chance to swallow up some choice downtown real estate at panic prices, but none was offered. They accumulated large holdings of cash for that purpose and those who did not buy later at full market rates are still 'wyteing by the church.' More money is lying idle in the banks today looking for such snaps than ever before in the history of the market, and it will undoubtedly be exchanged for choice real estate at full market rates as in the good old days of yore. Few people even among the insiders realize the enormous power of the total buying element in the real estate market of Los Angeles. It must be in excess of $50,000,000, taking into consideration the amount of money utilized for improving as well as purchasing real estate. A good portion of this is concentrated in the business district, and that part of it is bound sooner or later to become centered in large units in the development of certain parts of the business district. Five years ago a hundred thousand dollar transaction looked big to our local operators. Today a million dollar deal does not scare many of them. Under the circumstances there is little likelihood of the market going to pieces, because there is infinitely more money than water in it—in fact, I think there is no water in it at all.

"The earthquake might have damaged our real estate values somewhat had there been anything wrong with them. But the fact that it did not inclines me to believe that a lamb-skinning carnival in Wall street, no matter how frequent, will have still less effect. Our real estate is bought with real money, and until we get to gambling with it on the margin, I've got to be shown where it is a bad form of investment."

On receiving his new car Thomas A. Edison dropped work on an important experiment on which he was engaged and rode off for a thirty-mile spin.

LIFE EVERLASTING.

"TRAILING clouds of glory do we come from Heaven, which is our home." In these words Wordsworth gives voice to the faith, hope, expectation and longing of the human heart. Easter Day is the crowning glory of the year. It is the day which makes all other days worth living. Take its inspiration away and not only is the Christian "of all men most miserable," but man is of all animals the most pitiable.

Reviving life spreads over the northern portion of the globe these spring days, and it is north of the equator that the first Easter Day was kept. The shroud which the dead winter wore has been removed from the landscape. The whole world breaks forth into bud and blossom, into leaf and flower, into song and brightness. The leaves which fell rustling to the ground in the chill winds of the dying year have again been placed upon the branches left vacant by Death, and they stand forth beautiful "in newness of life." Bird and stream and whispering wind all sing their anthem of the resurrection.

Creeds may change, may die, may disappear. Interpretations of creeds which meant much to human souls may wither, may lose their life-giving power, may be forgotten. The Easter hymns of the past may be obsolete today. Theories as to how the body shall be raised up may give way to newer views. The apostle's metaphor of grain cast into the ground and his notions of "bodies celestial and bodies terrestrial" may grow a little dim to the eyes of the chemist and biologist of the present time. But the mind of the twentieth-century scholar holds just as tenaciously to the hope of immortality as did that of the plain fishermen of the Sea of Galilee, who thought they saw the Master appear to them alive from the dead.

The verse above from the poet expresses the view of Bishop Butler in the "Analogy," that the soul is a creation separate from the body, comes from heaven, and "returns to God who gave it." We may conceive of the soul as an integral part of our being, created with the body and forming the real essence of our being, the true ego on which personality depends. But although we differ here from the profound theologian of the past, we agree with him that the soul "is the foundation of all our hopes and of all our fears, of all our hopes and fears at least which are of any consideration."

The scalpel of the surgeon may fail to show the soul as he strips muscle from muscle, nerve from nerve, and member from member of the body. The alembic of the chemist may fail to intercept the soul as he dissolves the tissues and liquids of the body into their ultimate elements. The rapt gaze of love may never have seen the soul, as the beloved companion of many years, child or parent, wife or husband, breathes the last breath. But through all these impossibilities to reach a physical demonstration of the soul's existence, the human heart refuses to give up its hope or to relinquish its highest aspirations. The eye of human faith will not be turned downward into the dark recesses of the cold and cheerless grave. We will not have it that the "touch of a vanished hand" is lost forever, and that "the sound of a voice that is still" here on earth is not heard in "sweeter, nobler strains" in a world where death can come no more. There is a thrill in the cry "O death, where is thy sting, O grave, where is thy victory?" which touches the profoundest chords of our being. It seems like a natural echo of our own inmost selves. Materialism may proclaim its sway over this world, death may point to the tombs and graveyards of all the ages and say: "There I reign alone," but humanity with a thousand voices replies: "Yes, but not forever, and not in the great Beyond." 'Faith still sings on:

"There is no death;
The stars go down to rise upon a fairer shore,
And there in heaven's jeweled crown
They shine for evermore."

Logic and rhetoric may interpose the objection that the poet's simile is faulty. The human soul replies: "But yet I am and I shall be for ever and ever." Daily experience may point to death's frequent footsteps all along the paths of our daily life, and to his many monuments reaching back through all the ages. But the real personality within us will still proclaim "The material world is not all the universe. Matter is not the only fact. Matter is unstable and all its forms are transient. There is above all matter the Father of spirits, who is "without variableness or shadow of turning," and we are His offspring. He cannot die, and because He lives we shall live also.

MEASURING THE SUN'S HEAT.

The instrument in the observatory on Mount Whitney, by which the variations of the sun's heat are measured, might be called an electrical thermometer. It is an apparatus so large as to occupy a building of considerable size; yet the essential part of its mechanism, which makes the record, is a fine thread of platinum, connected electrically with a balance of marvelous delicacy. The beam of the balance is a filament of spun glass five inches long and less in diameter than a hair, in the middle of which is a concave mirror as big as a large pinhead. This mirror (which weighs two and a half milligrammes—about as much as the hind leg of a fly) is fastened upon a square piece cut from a dragon fly's wing, and the whole affair is suspended from a fiber of spun quartz crystal two feet long and one five-thousandth of an inch thick.

Outside of the building is a queer-looking machine provided with a large circular mirror, which is controlled by clockwork in such a way as to face the sun at all hours and to throw a reflected beam into the mouth of a great tube that enters the observatory. A single ray of sunshine thus conveyed is permitted to fall upon the platinum thread, through which a current of electricity continually passes. It is well known that the electrical resistance of platinum varies with its temperatures; and so, by measuring the resistance of the thread, the heat of a sun's ray thrown upon it is determined. So accurate, in fact, is the determination that a variation of one millionth of a degree Fahrenheit can be distinguished.

Changes in the temperature of the platinum thread cause the wonderful little balance to sway, while another ray of light, allowed to fall upon its tiny concave mirror, is reflected upon a measuring scale. Thus, as the dot of reflected light runs along the scale, one may observe with the eye the variations in the amount of heat conveyed by the sunbeam, which comes through the tube from outside the building. When desired, however, the measuring scale is replaced by a slowly-traveling photographic film, which makes a permanent record of the fluctuations of the solar temperature, convenient for printing, filing and subsequent reference.—[René Bache, in The Reader.

XXII—HOLY LAND.

This is the earth He walked on; not alone
That Asian country keeps the sacred stain;
'Tis not alone the fair Judaean plain,
Mountain and river! Lo, the sun that shone
On Him, shines now on us; when day is gone
The moon of Galilee comes forth again
And lights our path as His: an endless chain
Of years and sorrows makes the round world one.
The air we breathe, He breathed—the very air
That took the mould and music of His high
And godlike speech. Since then shall mortal
With base thought dare front the ever-sacred sky—
Soil with foul deed the ground whereon He laid
In holy death His pale, immortal head!

PRACTICAL ETHICS.

HOPE.

"A propensity to hope and joy is real riches; one to fear and sorrow, real poverty."—[Hume.

"ALL the world loves a lover." Is that true? If so, we have reason for general felicitation, for such universal affection for the specifically affectionate is proof positive that at bottom the much-abused and more particularly misunderstood heart of humanity is still sound. Moreover, in that fundamental soundness of the heart of man lies the hope of the world.

Ah, hope, fond hope; if it were not for hope, how many of us would be here today? Given hope, we may live without material food for days and not succumb to the sickle of the grim Reaper; but to live on without hope is not life or living, however rich one's diet, but mere existence. An existence dreary and forlorn, or at most gray and shadowy. It is hope, like love, which makes the heart beat faster, the eye shine brighter. Hope by its own inherent, subtle alchemy has the power to nourish and sustain. Hence it has been said that "In the treatment of nervous cases, he is the best physician who is the most ingenious inspirer of hope." Rapid is the repair carried on under the influence of hope; for hope thrills and rejuvenates when all else has lost its glamor, and life is seen in its ugly, undecked nakedness. Not to be divested of hope, therefore, is to be in grasp of a real lifeline! It is to be in touch with the vital cord to which we must hold fast after all other supports have failed. Once hope is gone, then, too, courage, ambition, faith, desire, quickly slip away from us. But by clinging to upbuoying, soul-transforming hope, nothing will seem permanently lost, but only temporarily hidden.

Is there sadness, sorrow in the heart, then Hope comes whispering sweetly: "Up, up once more, dear one; yield not to the withering touch of grief or shattering distress. It is your portion to be glad; hold out a welcoming hand to Joy, the capricious sprite who for a moment has eluded you but is not forever beyond recall. Repress not the happy, curving smile, or voluntarily extinguish the bright beams which come to linger playfully in your eye because of some depressing, or gloom-casting afterthought. Willingly attune your spirit to the new-found gladness so clearly depicted on the radiant countenance of Nature! Rise up in the might of your regenerative being, with feelings fresh and stirring to greet the newborn season: the sweet, the verdant, soul-enchanting and world-adorning, springtime.

At such a time as this, do we not readily incline to a fanciful belief that the first Creative Cause was Love? That the spirit of Love lay dormant, enveloped in ethereal space, until aroused by the creative impulse, when Love united with Hope in an elective affinity; and as a result of the union consummated in blissful harmony was brought forth the new life of the universe.

What is the meaning of the vocal messages resounding from hill and plain? What is indicated by the slender shoots rearing afresh their tender buds and blossoms after a season of chilly burial? Does it not all speak of Love and Hope intertwined, of delicate issue, of renewal of life or sanctified fruition? Why the swiftly circulating sap upward, through root, and stem and branch? Is it not the creative impulse actively operating to reproduce its seed? Over and over at this auspicious season, the lesson of hope is demonstrated in every nook and crevice of Nature, and it only remains for us to make the teachings and the messages ours, to make them a part of us and of our endeavors, that out of our hearts also there may be "new issues of life" and that out of the recreating Hope buried deep within our human nature, may grow the actual realization of a new physical and psychical being.

"Ah," but some one will say, "all this is not for me. It is well it should be so in the world without. Well that Nature should take her course from death to life, from depletion to opulence. True, the pathway but a short time since hard and barren from frequent pressure of passing footsteps, shows fertile patches of brilliant blades of grass sprung anew.

"For me, however, there is no music in the rippling waters, nor is a jocund mood awakened by the joyful carnival or tuneful love meets of the happy harbingers of spring. Charm of color, song of birds, what are they to the wintry mind where ill-foreboding lies entombed?

"What though earth sparkles with freshness, and the air of newness is everywhere, so long as the old be not changed for the new to me? What if there be the springtime of Hope and Love in the world without, of change, and a festal array of every form of natural beauty, so long as Hopelessness and Despair stalk within?"

Then listen: "Hope is a lover's staff; walk hence with that, and manage it against despairing thoughts." Where hope is not, there love is wanting. To have hope, love; to have love, hope. Be a lover, love something, some one, or if you are big enough, let the floodgates of your heart open to pour its affection out over the greater heart of the world. But, if you would have hope, love, love, and thus acquire hope as the "lover's staff." For hope is indeed the rod or "staff" for all mankind to lean upon.

Remember further, that "a propensity to hope and joy is real riches; one to fear and sorrow, real poverty." Which will you cultivate? If the breath of spring is lacking in your soul, invite your mind to contemplation of scenes of gladness. Let bright and happy thoughts take the place of dismal, brown reflections; so will light make away with darkness, hope and love will drive out distrust and despair, and freshness and fullness of life will find their entrance into the heart and mind and spirit left hopefully open for regeneration and rejuvenation. Thus will human nature be transformed within, just as the regularly recurring spring of the year sets in motion the forces which recreate the natural world without.

French in Algeria. By Frank G. Carpenter.

THE TELL.

How the French Are Colonizing Their African Empire.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PERREGAUX.—The French are colonizing Algeria and are rapidly increasing its value as a good farming country. It is already the granary and winter fruit garden of the republic, and is fast becoming the wine cellar as well. The government has a colonization department, which is now laying out new towns and farm sites. Some of the lands are given away and others sold at auction on long time. There are agricultural banks for the benefit of the farmers, and special inducements for settlers in low rates of steamships and railroad transportation. Immigrants are brought here from Marseilles, a distance of about 500 miles, at a $2 steerage rate, and the fares for third and fourth-class are not much higher.

There are already 600,000 Europeans settled in Algeria. More than half of these are French; but there are also many Spaniards, Italians and people from Malta, Sicily, and other islands of the Mediterranean Sea. Already about one-eighth of the whole population is of European origin and the best lands of the country are being rapidly bought of the Mohammedans by these invading Christians. The European population has doubled within the past thirty years.

The cities are growing. There are French towns all over the country, and the Christian element is everywhere in control. Perregaux, where I am writing, for instance, contains 5000 European inhabitants, and it has all the surroundings of a rural city of France. Its streets are wide and well shaded, and it has a large public garden in which the band plays several times a week. Its stores are like those of France, and it has no end of cafés and restaurants. There are scores of other cities just like it throughout the Tell, and many such, as Blidah, Tlemcen, Orleansville and others, which are more populous and more prosperous.

The Tell.

Have you ever heard of the Tell? It has been noted for many generations as one of the granaries of the world. It fed Carthage from the time when it was founded by Queen Dido, along about 800 or 900 years before Christ. It was the bread basket of Rome in the days of her glory, and the Arabs and Moors grew fat upon it for centuries before the French came. It comprises the rich valleys between the mountains running along the coast and the high plateaus of the Atlas which fall away into the Sahara, and also a rich coastal strip here and there. It runs clear across Algeria and Tunisia, and in round numbers is 700 or 800 miles long from west to east and from thirty to 100 miles wide. It contains altogether an area almost as large as New England and fully as large as the State of Illinois. It has somewhere between 35,000,000 and 50,000,000 acres of excellent lands, but this is in patches, some large and some small. I have gone through regions, such as Oran, where the soil is as rich as the Mississippi Valley, and through others where the vineyards grow out of a fat, red loam, like that of the best coffee plantations of Sao Paulo, Brazil.

Much of the Tell is like California or Colorado, and not a little of it is irrigated. There is an enormous dam near this town of Perregaux which holds back a lake, containing 14,000,000 cubic meters of water, and another not far away near St. Denis-du-Sig, which contains 6,000,000 more. Wherever the water can be stored it is conducted over the lands, and a great deal of irrigation is also done by means of wells, the motive power being a blindfolded donkey, mule or ox, and sometimes a camel.

A Nation of Farmers.

These Algerians are a nation of farmers. More than one-half of the Europeans and three-fourths of the natives are engaged in agriculture, and there are in addition an enormous number of native stock farmers. The Arabs own a great deal of land in the plains, and such of canvas or oiled cloth. The straw is carried over the Kabyle farms, some of which are not much bigger than the ordinary city back yard. The French are settled pretty generally in the valleys of the Tell. They have bought their lands from the Arabs and Kabyles and have also acquired the most of the state reservations for colonization.

I wish you could take a trip with me through some of these rich lands of the Tell, and see the queer ways of farming in this part of North Africa. We should have high mountains in sight all the way, and they would be rocky and barren. There would be no fences anywhere and very few houses. Here and there, at some distance from the white limestone road, we should see the home of a French settler, a plain building covered with stucco, standing almost alone in the fields. There are no outbuildings, and few barns; the cattle can be pastured all the year round, and there is no need of stables. I have seen no haystacks since I came into the country, although I observed some alfalfa fields near Tlemcen.

The chief stock food, long food as our Virginia farmers would call it, is straw. This is most carefully saved. As soon as the thrashing is done it is stacked, sometimes in bales, and sometimes loose. The stacks are then covered with a thatch as carefully put on as the roof of a house, and in some localities, where the soil forms a natural cement, the whole outside of the stack is plastered. I have seen hundreds of stacks, larger than any haystack in our country, so covered. This is done mostly in western Algeria, the thatch being more common in the east.

A great deal of straw is carried on the railroad. It is brought to the stations in bales, and if piled up while awaiting the cars it is always covered with tarpaulins of vanvas or oiled cloth. The straw is carried over the railroad on open trucks, but always covered, and while loading the straw piles are thus protected at night. The most of the cattle, horses and donkeys of the cities eat straw instead of hay.

How the Arabs Raise Grain.

A large part of the Tell is devoted to grain. Algeria produces over 300,000,000 bushels of cereals every year, and it exports a vast deal to France. The value of the crop is something like $60,000,000. There are about 4,000,000 acres annually planted to wheat and something like 3,000,000 acres devoted to barley. In addition some oats and corn are raised. The corn, however, does not grow nearly so well as in our country.

Wheat is by far the most important grain crop, and a large part of that grown is of the macaroni variety. The wheat farming is done by both the French and the natives, and in the latter case in a most slovenly way. There are but few modern agricultural implements, and it is only the large foreign farmers who plow more than two or three inches deep. They have plows of a French make with wheels in front. The shears cut well into the soil, but it requires a team of six or eight or more animals for each plow. Such a team is usually composed of oxen, but sometimes it is a combination of oxen, horses and mules, and not infrequently a little donkey aids in the work.

The plows used by the natives are little more than forked sticks with a sort of a shoe of iron shaped like a trowel, as a plow point. This shoe is about ten inches long and a quarter of an inch thick, and it serves to turn the earth to a depth of two or three inches. It is not so good as a single shovel plow by any means. Such a plow has but one handle, and the native does not press down upon it, but merely steadies it with one hand as he walks behind in the furrow. The tongue of the plow is fastened to a stick which rests under the bellies of the two horses forming the native plow team. The stick is fastened by breast straps to the horses without traces of any kind.

One of these plows cannot cost more than [illegible], while the foreign plows I have described sell for [illegible] and a sulky plow brings $20 or more.

The natives are unable to do deep plowing with their tools, and as a result much of the grain is planted in and out among the bushes and undergrowth. Along many of the foothills of the Atlas the fields contain more bushes than wheat, and in places the wheat grows among thistles each of which has a head as big around as a tin cup.

The present average wheat yield per acre is not much more than one-half as great as that of the United States and less than one-third that of France. It is only about eight bushels per acre.

Reaping and Threshing.

These Algerians do most of their reaping by hand, and that with the sickle. It would be impossible to run a mower and reaper through fields covered with [illegible] and it is only on the large farms that threshing machines are employed. Most of the grain is trodden out by oxen or other animals. I see threshing floors everywhere near the straw stacks; they are circles of well-pounded earth upon which the animals are driven around over the straw until the grain is ground out. After that the straw is raked off and the wheat, barley or oats is thrown into the air against the wind to remove the chaff. The straw is then stacked and the grain put in large bags for shipment. If it is to be carried to market upon camels, the bags used will contain six or eight bushels, as two such bags of grain make a load for one camel. If it is to go upon donkeys or mules, each will contain half as much. There are no elevators in the farming districts nor at the stations, and all grain goes to the markets in bags. It is frequently hauled on great wagons with five, six or seven mules to each wagon and a snarling dog on top to guard the load. The driver, who is usually an Arab or Kabyle, walks. A donkey will carry one bag of wheat at a load, and thousands of bushels are thus transported. The bag rests on the little animal's back without being fastened, and the donkey moves along without bridle or halter, its Arab master following behind.

The most of the labor here is done by the Kabyles. The Arabs and Moors are lazy, but these white Africans, who are of our race, like the almighty dollar quite as well as their American cousins, and will work for it. I see them everywhere; in the grain fields, in the vineyards and in the orchards and gardens.

They are employed by the French farmers, and come down in gangs from their homes in the Atlas Mountains to aid in the harvest. At such times they live in little straw shacks which are built for the purpose. They cook their own food on fires out of doors and sleep on the ground. Their pay is from 20 to 40 cents a day, without food, or from $6 to $10 per month. The European farm laborers are paid from 50 to 80 cents a day, or $10 a month and found. At the time of the grape harvest they get more.

Wine at Two Cents a Quart.

The vineyards of the Tell are quite as important as the grain fields. This is one of the best wine-growing countries of the world; it is now producing so many grapes that they are a drug in the market. Good wine can now be bought for about 2 cents a quart bottle, and it is cheaper than pure water. Indeed, it is so low that the vineyardists tell me it hardly pays to make it.

I have never seen such grapes anywhere. I measured some that were served for dessert at the hotel here last night. They were three and a half inches in circumference, or more than an inch in diameter. They tasted as sweet as maple syrup, and their flavor was delicious. The best of the grapes now in the markets sell for about a cent a pound.

I have seen excellent vineyards everywhere I have gone. Algeria has almost a half million acres devoted to them, and they extend from one end of it to the other. The wine annualy made runs between 100,000,000 and 200,000,000 gallons, and it sells for from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000, the most of it going to France. The French are careful as to the introduction of fruit diseases into the colonies, and they have stringent laws against the importation of trees, plants and vines, as well as of flowers and fresh fruits. Indeed, the only vegetables now admitted are potatoes, well cleaned.

Algeria produces all sorts of fresh garden stuff. We have green peas and beans, as well as asparagus, celery and lettuce. Radishes are raised in great quantities, egg plants and tomatoes thrive and onions and potatoes yield two crops a year. Vegetables by the shipload go to France throughout the year, and Paris, Lyons, Marseilles and other French cities rely upon this country for their winter supplies of fresh fruit and garden stuff.

Algerian Fruits.

The Tell is now producing almost everything that can be grown in the United States. It has apples, peaches and pears, as well as figs and olives, oranges and lemons. The olive thrives well up into the Atlas Mountains and many of the trees are centuries old. They live so long that the people have a saying that he who plants an olive is laying up treasures for his children's children. The olive crop is now worth about $5,000,000 a year, and 2000 tons of olive oil are annually exported. There are, altogether, about 10,000,000 olive trees, of which 6,000,000 are grafted. The natives consume large quantities of olive oil. Even the Kabyles make it in a rude way and store it in their huts for the winter. It is used for cooking, and has largely the same place that butter has with us.

There is an enormous number of figs produced in Algeria, and something like 30,000,000 pounds are annually exported. The fruit is fine, although not equal to that raised in Smyrna. Some of the varieties are white and others blue. The fig orchards are to be seen everywhere. They are as common as apples in America, and quite as freely eaten. The natives dry them and store them away for winter use.

Algeria does a great deal of stock farming. Not only in the Tell, but in the ranges of the Atlas Mountains and on the high plateaus upheld by them, are large flocks of sheep and goats, and they are also to be found all along the edges of the Desert of Sahara. There are more than a million of cattle in the Tell, and in the whole country more than a quarter of a million donkeys and almost that number of horses. The camels are something like 200,000, and the mules quite as many. Of this stock more than nine-tenths belong to the natives.

The sheep here are fine, large, long-wooled animals. They weigh, I venture, more than either our Southdowns or Shropshires, and they seem free from disease. They are white and brown in color, many of the white sheep having brown faces. Their ears are long and silky and hang down somewhat like those of a spaniel. The ewes are worth from $2 to $3 each, while the rams will bring double as much.

Four Million Black Goats.

Algeria has about 4,000,000 goats, and it furnishes many goatskins for our American shoes. The goats are black and brown in color. They are of good size, but in their milking qualities they do not compare with those I saw in Morocco. In Tangier the goats furnish most of the milk of the city, and they are made to carry it in their bags from door to door, the milkman drawing his wares direct from the goat. Sometimes he allows the kids to run with their mothers, but in such cases he ties strings around the teats of the mamma goats so that the baby kids cannot suck on the sly. This might be used to cure cows of sucking themselves, as they sometimes do in our country.

The goats of Algeria, as I have already said, are always grazed with the sheep. I have yet to see one flock which did not contain both animals, and I have passed millions as I have traveled through Algeria. The flocks are always watched by shepherds—white-gowned, barefooted men or boys, who live out in the fields with them. On the edges of the desert there are many nomadic shepherds, who live in tents, driving their sheep, goats and other stock from place to place to find pasture.

The horses of Algeria are largely of Arabian stock. They are well made and tough, and many of them are fine riding animals. Some French horses have been brought in for heavy draft, and those about the wharves of the cities often have a strain of Percheron or Norman. The draft horses are usually worked single file, and a long team of five or six horses pulling a load, harnessed up tandem, is not uncommon. Sometimes they are harnessed three abreast; a team of seven will often have two leaders tandem and behind them two abreast, with three abreast next the wagon. Every harness has bells on it, and the common draft horse wears a collar weighing ten pounds or more, with a great leather horn eight or ten inches high over its shoulders.

Algeria's Fine Roadways.

A large number of horses are needed for the stage lines which connect all parts of the country. Algeria has something like 3000 miles of national roadway, enough if stretched out in one line to reach from San Francisco to New York. And these roads are better than any we have in the United States. They are as smooth as asphalt, and are so laid out that the slope is everywhere along the easiest possible lines. This enables the hauling of big loads, and also of fast travel by stage. The mails are taken to out-of-the-way places in coaches, and the natives everywhere patronize this means of conveyance.

Indeed, I doubt whether these roads are surpassed anywhere in the world. One could easily travel all over Algeria in an automobile. The French Governor-General is now making a tour of that kind through the Tell, and there are frequent automobile excursions from Algiers into the wild scenery of the Atlas Mountains. I had an automobilist offer to take me on his machine through Grand Kabylia and thence on down into the Desert of Sahara, to the Oasis of Biskra, but I did not go, as I feared that we might break down on the way and be left in the sands. These roads were begun by the French as a military necessity, and they are still kept up for the army. Everywhere the troops go new roads are being made, and they are now to be made in the more settled parts of the Atlas and down to the very edge of the Sahara, the greatest desert on earth.

A READY MADE CITY.

NAIROBI BUILT OF GALVANIZED IRON IN BRITISH EAST AFRICA.

[New York Sun:] One of the oddest of towns has just risen to political distinction. Nairobi, a European settlement on the high plateau of east tropical Africa, has been made capital of the British East Africa Protectorate.

Mombasa, on the Indian Ocean, is still the most important town commercially in the Protectorate, for its development on European lines is advanced and it is the leading seaport along the coast north of Zanzibar. The great advantage of Nairobi as the seat of government is that it has a central position in the Protectorate, being 328 miles from Mombasa and 256 from Port Florence on Victoria Nyanza, and it is on the edge of the lofty region where British farmers are now settling and developing new homes.

The nicknames of "Tin City" and "Zinc City" are applied to Nairobi by the white men who have visited it.

There is not a wooden building in the place. Every building was constructed of galvanized iron, which was brought from Europe in sheets ready to be fastened together to form the walls, roofs and partitions of houses. The town came into existence by the fiat of Sir George Whitehouse, the chief engineer of the Uganda Railroad.

Grumbling Britons who think he might have chosen a more picturesque site for the town agree that Sir George is a good enough engineer, but say he has no artistic sense. His white tents were scattered over the plain where the town now stands when one morning Sir George is a good engineer, but say he has no bled for breakfast:

"On this spot we are going to have a large settlement. Here will be the entrepot of the Uganda Railroad. Here will be the machine shops and here will live hundreds of our countrymen and thousands of Indian and native workmen."

Everybody was surprised. People asked the chief why he had selected this place on the vast Masai plateau, where there was not an inhabitant or a tree. Why did he not choose for the site of his town one of the wooded ridges within sight of the plateau? He would have plenty of elbow room on the flat plain, but it offered no other advantages.

"Well," said Sir George, "I have been thinking of this matter for a long time and the town will be built on the plain.

"There is not room for it on the surrounding ridges. Its situation is first-rate for our purposes. It is high and healthful, and the railroad officials with their families can live in this region in good health, while they would probably die at Mombasa or Port Florence.

"This spot is right on the edge of the territories occupied by the Masai and the Kikuyu, and here better than in any other place we can manage these two turbulent tribes. The land rises rapidly to the north, and there is the fertile region to which we are going to invite British farmers.

"Nairobi Creek runs across the site and supplies the best of water. The name of the settlement will be Nairobi. The homes of the officials will be built on these surrounding ridges, but all other employés of the railroad, with all the shops and other interests of the place, will be in the town."

So the place has developed at a great rate. In December last its population consisted of 4652 persons, of whom 162 were Europeans.

In those long rows of galvanized iron buildings were two Christian churches, two Mohammedan mosques and two Hindu temples. The postoffice, principal stores, hotels and restaurants are situated on Victoria street. In the market place every morning are picturesque groups of Masai and Kikuyu farmers who have brought their produce to sell.

This is the city of the subordinates. The officials or superior functionaries have their pretty cottages on the neighboring elevations, with gardens, tennis courts and polo grounds.

The European farmers to the north bring their potatoes and other produce to Nairobi to sell, and here is the headquarters of the East Africa Agricultural Society, which every year gives a large exhibition of agriculture and horticulture in East Africa and Uganda. Everybody says that Nairobi has a great future, for it is destined to be the center of large development in that part of Africa.

FASHION IN THE ARCTIC.

PARISIAN GOWNS EXHIBITED ON THE ICEBOUND COAST OF SPITZBERGEN.

[New York Sun:] The birds and walruses of Spitzbergen saw a distinguished party in their Arctic home in July last. One of the French magazines telling about this pleasure trip says the party belonged to "the most aristicratic society."

Eugéne Gallois has written a book describing the Arctic experiences of these notable personages, who included professors, doctors, diplomats, Deputies, two generals in the army and a member of the French Academy, who was certainly a rare bird in Spitzbergen. They all went north on the steamer L'Ile de France.

Women have heretofore gone to the Arctic regions, but it has not previously been recorded that they took "elegant toilets" along with them. This party did so. The fashionable gowns were reserved for the festivities on shipboard.

Everything was supplied for the enjoyment of the party, and Mr. Gallois writes about the fine music in the drawing-room, the superior cookery, the bountiful table, the excellence of the wines and the gaiety of the stated occasions devoted to bridge whist. Edification was also provided in the way of lectures by Dr. Nordenskjöld, Dr. Olivier and a number of other learned men; the library contained the largest collection of Arctic books ever taken north, and kodaks with a total of 48,000 films were supplied.

The steamer passed from fiord to fiord, landed climbing parties here and there on the glaciers, and cast anchor, now and then, so that an especially grand or picturesque view might be admired. The company were alone with nature. There were no villages, almost no vegetation, and when a plant about five inches high was discovered it was called a tree by general consent.

Unfortunately the whale hunt which had figured prominently on the programme was not a success. The only whales seen in the waters of Spitzbergen were two carcasses washed ashore on the coast of Bell Sound, food for thousands of birds.

Just before the party turned its back on Spitzbergen an accident occurred which looked serious for a time. The steamer struck a rock and hung there, while water began to pour into the hold.

It was only a little way to the shore, and the tourists were landed, while the crew strained every nerve to save their vessel. The outlook for a fortunate sojourn on this inhospitable coast looked very dubious, but fires were kindled on the beach, preparations were made to camp, elder eggs were collected for supper and all tried to play the rôle of Robinson Crusoe with cheerful countenance.

Fortunately a Russian steamer and a Dutch cruiser came along the next day, helped L'Ile de France out of her dilemma, and the tourists went home on their own vessel.

They are now informing everybody in France that the summer climate of Spitzbergen is salubrious and that many invalids would greatly benefit by a month or two along those coasts. The crying need, they say, is summer hotels like those which are perched high among the Alps, and they believe that the future will bring all the conveniences needed to make a sojourn in this Arctic land enjoyable.

INDIAN METHODS.

The great medicine man of the Creek Indians was asked by a United States commission (of eminent physicians:) "Can you cure cancer? We have a patient who has been dying for seventeen years, and we are unable to do anything for him." The aged redman called for a hot iron, and with it burned a big hole in the leg of the man where the cancer was gnawing. The physicians were astounded. He explained briefly: "Indian no cure cancer; Indian easy cure burn!" Therefore—burn, burn, burn, when a dog or snake bites you.—[New York Press.

Easter the World Over.

HOW THE DAY IS CELEBRATED IN ODD CORNERS.

By a Special Contributor.

THERE are as many different ways of marking the great spring festival, Easter, as there are peoples on the earth who celebrate the holiday, and while each nation has its own peculiar "special feature" with which it welcomes the occasion, all mark the day by an intermingling of social and secular rites.

It is among simple and primitive peoples, not yet caught in the sweep of railroads and public schools, that one finds Easter celebrated with a wealth of quaint customs that make it the most interesting, as it is the oldest, of all the festivals. In the little villages of Silesia, among the mountains and forests of eastern Germany and Austria, the peasants retain traces of the ancient customs which our Teutonic forefathers, in their wild German forests, used for ages in their old spring festival. This festival, Eastre, gave its name direct to the church festival Easter of today, and the Easter celebrations of the twentieth century are marked in very much the same manner as were the Eastre days of the fourth and fifth centuries.

The market places are the center of attraction in the Silesian villages at all seasons, but most particularly so during the Easter holidays. As the great day approaches, the dark old market squares, wherein so many strange scenes, tragic and rollicking, have been enacted for so many hundreds of years, suddenly become a mass of bloom and brightness. "Spring" or "Eastre trees" spring up as though by magic, flags are flung to the breezes, bright kirtles and petticoats are donned by fair maids, and the gloom of winter is swallowed up in the gorgeousness of spring in one mighty outburst of gaiety.

These Eastre trees are twigs cut by the boys from the willow trees, and painted in bright colors and trimmed with flowers by the women. Booths are covered with them. Every market woman has a bunch to sell. They wreathe the strings of sausages and stand boldly aloft from the bootlegs in the show stores. Every passer-by carries one, and every market woman calls: "Buy an Eastre tree; buy a Lattery switch," the "Lattery" being a corruption of the word "Latore," an old ecclesiastical term for the second Sunday before Palm Sunday.

On Palm Sunday in these Silesian villages every human being carries a green twig. The men and boys place theirs in their hats, so that a moving mass of peasants looks like Birnam wood coming to Dunsinane. In the church they pull out the twigs for the priest to sprinkle with holy water, and then preserve them carefully to nail upon the barn, to protect the stock from lightning or other disaster. On the next Thursday, too, "Green Thursday," the farmer will be sure to walk over his fields, while the holy water is fresh upon him, to insure good crops. On that day also Silesian children go out in the fields to search for the nest of the Easter hare, the wonderful hare, who, they really believe, lays eggs once a year, all red with the blood of the Savior.

Through the streets on Saturday afternoon hurry crowds of maids and kitchen boys, bearing home from the baker's great trays, a yard square, loaded with "Steuzel Kuchen," the Easter cake. Near every village is a hill called Calvary. There, in earlier times, was a crucifix, and on Saturday afternoon, the people, rosary in hand, crept up this hill, past the seven "stations" of the Passion, until they reached the crucifix at the summit. But nowadays a rustic restaurant crowns each hill of Calvary. This restaurant is open only once a year. On the Saturday before a flag is hung out to signify that it is open once more after a long winter of desertion. It is only a rustic hut in the grove, with rude benches and tables put about among the birch trees, but thither, on the afternoon before Easter Day, the country boys and girls repair for coffee, and lovemaking, and the woods resound with their laughter until the place is closed again for another year.

While the Silesians are waving their Eastre branches and making merry on their hills, Russia is fasting in darkness and gloom and baking tempting dishes which the half-starving cooks are forbidden to even taste until the hour strikes which ends their long fast. A Russian Easter rises to the height of a national eating bout. Among no other people in the world is the Lenten fast observed so strictly as in the land of the Czar. All the peasants and many in other classes abstain strictly from meat, eggs, butter, cheese, milk and sugar throughout Lent. They live upon fish, cabbage and black bread. In a cold and damp climate, making peculiar demands upon the vitality, this is a real privation, and the average Russian adult looks forward to Easter with the anticipations which an American child feels for Thanksgiving and Christmas combined.

Passion week is a curious compound of church and cookery, of sanctity and savory seasoning. Half the time is spent in church, the other half in marketing and cooking. Immense stores of eatables of all sorts are purchased. The boiling and coloring of Easter eggs rises to the dignity of a religious rite. Tons of them are boiled hard, dyed and decorated. And, besides, for the poor there are the wooden eggs, carved by the peasants, and for the rich, dainty silver eggs, containing rings or other small and valuable presents. Every one gives and receives presents at Easter time.

And still the cooking goes on, and the poor women, who have starved for six weeks, must not taste the goodies that are growing under their hands. On the Saturday before Easter the dvorniks, or porters, can be seen on every street, staggering under the weight of great bags of groceries, fruits and sweetmeats which they are delivering. In the house everything is in turmoil. Every room is turned inside out, every inch is cleaned, the floors scrubbed white, the tables laid for a feast, for the Russian Easter is a combination of New Year's, Christmas, Thanksgiving and old-time spring cleaning.

Early on Easter eve the streets are quiet, but by 10 o'clock they are thronged with crowds hastening to the churches. Every one has had a bath, for the body as well as the mind must be "cleaned and made ready for the new" which Easter opens up, and each is dressed in his best. Each bears an unlighted candle, and one member of each household carries a portion of the Easter supper in basket or on silver dish, according to his worldly station. They enter the church, dark save for a bier in the center, covered with a black pall and lighted with candles. This is the tomb of the Savior. Rich and poor kneel together, for there are no seats in a Russian church. About the altar the white robes of the priests can be faintly seen. They intone the old Greek chants, most ancient of all church music. The people respond, bowing to the earth. A quarter of an hour before midnight the chief priest advances to the center of the nave, where stands the bier. He looks within and announces that the body is no longer there. Then all the priests, swaying their censors, set forth to find "where they have laid Him." From room to room they pass, the sound of their chanting voices floating back to the ears of the silent, kneeling people. At the stroke of twelve they reënter. The boom of a cannon announces the birth of Easter Day. The priest bursts forth in a [illegible] phant chant, "Christos voskres" (Christ is risen).

"Vo istine voskres," (He hath risen indeed) the [illegible] thunder back. Immediately the Easter salutation is [illegible] changed. She passes her light to the [illegible] and in a moment almost every candle in the church [illegible] lighted. Last of all comes the blessing of food. [illegible] impatient congregation passes in front of the priest [illegible] him to tithe and bless the pasha, a dish of curds [illegible] hard and served in pyramidal form, and kulitch, a [illegible] round white loaf, which they have brought. The priest takes his tithe, then he blesses the food, and at last the worshipers hasten home to feast. The table is laid [illegible] Ham, and cold joints of every description are [illegible] features. Then there is the "paskel" cheese, a [illegible] of the word "Paschal," and the "kulitch," the [illegible] cake, which, along with the great bowl of eggs, has [illegible] to the church to be blessed. All Russia sits down to [illegible] midnight supper. In the homes of the rich all are [illegible] evening dress, and the table is gay with flowers [illegible] plate. So it has been for a thousand years. Other [illegible] may change in Russia, but the Russian "paskel" [illegible] changes. Incidentally, it may be said that one [illegible] commonest features of the great Easter fête is [illegible] burglary, more houses being broken into [illegible] people are absent at the midnight mass than [illegible] other ten nights in the year.

Down in Venice the Easter festival is given [illegible] chiefly to religious services, but there is one [illegible] which marks the day and which makes Easter [illegible] land unlike that of any other country. It is [illegible] Day," or Easter Monday, when the young [illegible] their elders, too, gather in the public squares [illegible] a merry game of tag "lift the ladies." This [illegible] when a maid is captured she is swung aloft by [illegible] tor unless some other admirer comes to her [illegible] is a merry time, this Lifting Day, and a [illegible] generally, as readily can be imagined.

In Venice, too, the old ceremony of [illegible] held. This rite is performed in the [illegible] Mark's Church. A large square space is [illegible] middle nave, in which the chairs are placed [illegible] circle. Thirteen old men, wearing long [illegible]

When all is ready, the priests come out, headed by acolytes bearing candles. A big brass ewer and some towels are brought, and then the ranking priest proceeds with the ablutions. He dips one hand in the water, washes the foot before him several times, dries it with a towel and kisses it. This ends the ceremony supposed to teach humility. In the evening the canals are made bright by gondolas decorated with many lanterns, and from which fireworks are set off.

In Roumania the week before Easter is a time of sacrifice and mortification, of long religious services, but Easter Day itself is as joyous an occasion as in other lands. After the early church service, when the priest announces that "Christ is risen," the people hasten home to an elaborate breakfast. Many of the poor families have pinched and saved for weeks to provide a suitable feast for this occasion.

Their long hunger appeased, neighbors call on each other with baskets filled with eggs, cheese, cakes, pies and other delicacies, which they exchange with the season's greetings. Then young and old hasten to the market place or some other pleasure ground for an extended period of merrymaking.

Everywhere the air is filled with music produced by military bands, wandering minstrels, troupes of gypsies, street organs and soloists. Swings, merry-go-rounds, bowling alleys and other amusements are at every hand, and all are busy. Far into the night the festival pleasures run, with eating, drinking, dancing and music. Generally, the holiday lasts three days; in some places it is continued for a week. Every one dresses in his or her best, and the houses are decorated with flowers and willow branches.

Dancing is a favorite Easter diversion with the working people of Armenia. The drinking shops are filled with men who sing and dance for hours without appearance of tiring.

Most of the Armenian merrymaking takes place in the cemeteries on the outskirts of the cities and towns. These burial places are usually surrounded by high walls, which screen the parties from the view of the intolerant Turk. The wide, flat tombstones are made to serve both as seats and tables. There the festival banquets are spread, and there the older people sit and play cards or watch the younger ones dance.

Some years ago the Turkish government endeavored to stop the noisy Fourth-of-July manner in which the Christians of Constantinople were wont to welcome Easter. It proclaimed that the custom of firing guns, pistols and squibs must cease. With more than ordinary interest the coming of the next Easter was awaited. Could an edict of the Sultan cause a quiet Easter in Constantinople? It did not. There was, if anything, more noise than ever.

Small boys of families belonging to the Greek church delight in the custom that supplies them with wheel rattles at Easter. With these they rain a terrific clatter, calling it "breaking Juda's bones." "They always break Juda's bones after Christ is risen," explained a native to an inquiring American tourist.

In Mexico and all over South America Judas plays a prominent part in the popular celebration of Easter. Holy Saturday is especialy devoted to him. Toward the betrayer of his Savior popular abhorrence is generally and most picturesquely expressed. On the morning of Good Friday images of Judas, large and small, but all distorted and grotesque of visage and garbed in rough attire, are for sale in the shops. Passing through the streets of the average city the following morning one may see innumerable ropes stretched across from house to house, and hundreds of effigies of Judas dangling from them.

All the morning the betrayer swings in the breeze like a gibbeted felon; he is flogged and maltreated. The person who devises the most ingenious and striking method of expressing hatred and contempt, of heaping the greatest insults and torments, is the most benefited.

Just before the noon hour arrives, fires—small funeral pyres—are built here and there, in the streets, a few minutes before 12 o'clock, the people become strangely silent; the hitherto bustling, noisy throngs are still. Only the effigies move; they still swing in the sunlight, passive and unconcerned. When the bells begin to strike the hour the crowds awake to frenzy. Yelling men tear down the swaying figures and cast them into the flames. Each figure contains a quantity of gunpowder, which is exploded by the flames, blowing the Judas to pieces. Shouts of joy greet the noise and the curling shafts of ill-smelling smoke, for it symbolizes the fleeing of the betrayer's soul to the torments which he deserved so richly.

Another quaint custom is witnessed in Cuba and other Latin-American countries. This is the procession of the image of the Savior.

While crowds gather about the church where the ceremony is to take place (usually a comapny of soldiers lends a martial touch to the pictures—a picture of the church militant), the gowned and surpliced procession emerges from the door. First comes a band of acolytes swinging censors. Next, borne on the shoulders of monks, is a life-size waxen figure of the Savior, with gaping, bleeding wounds. Priests, with crosses and many candles, follow.

As the procession marches down the street it is met by another. A second figure, borne by four priests, heads this procession, and it is the figure of a woman—Mary Magdalene coming to meet the Lord after the resurrection.

As the processions meet, the figure of Mary Magdalene turns and hurries away. She is going to carry the joyful news to the awaiting faithful. On the way she meets a third figure, also a woman, robed in yellow satin, adorned with gold and wearing a crown. This is the Blessed Virgin. The two women pause, then go forward to meet the risen Lord, saluting him by bowing repeatedly. The three processions enter the church, the troops fire a salvo, the music ends with a flourish, and the people disperse.

Costa Rica also witnesses the procession through the streets of priests and people, bearing a figure of Christ. Frequently the honor of helping to carry the figure is so fiercely combatted for that a mob-like tumult takes place.

Breaking the Easter pinato is an almost universal custom from the Rio Grande to Patagonia. This feature of the season is for the benefit of the children. The pinato is a hollow doll, large or small, according to the financial ability of the family possessing it. It is generally constructed of clay or similar substances that is easily broken.

On Easter Sunday morning the little ones rally to this custom of "breaking the pinato" with the same enthusiasm that children in the United States rush for their stockings on Christmas morning. The doll, filled with candies or containing a few pennies, is swung from the ceiling. The children, blindfolded, are each given a wooden club, and each is permitted to have three swings at the pinato. When it is broken, there is a wild scramble for the scattered candy or coins.

Up in the Arctic Circle the Eskimos have a spring festival which comes at the same time as our Easter. It is a festival in honor of the return of the sun. Good cause have they to be glad of its coming back after the long winter's darkness, during which for months together they have been deprived of its cheerful rays, for to them it means not only a renewal of the season of light and warmth, but also an opportunity to recommence the business of hunting and fishing. Thus it is that the Eskimo Easter is a feast dedicated to the sun god, and that glorious divinity figures as the chief actor, one might say, in the ceremonial performances appropriate to the celebration.

For the Eskimo Easter is distinctly a religious festival, and many gods, both greater and lesser divinities, take part in it, being represented y persons disguised in suitable costumes and wearing grotesque masks. A surprising extravagance of fancy is displayed in the carving of these false faces, some of which are of such size that they have to be kept in place by the help of stout straps over the shoulders of the performers, while others, on account of their weight and dimensions, are actually suspended from the rafters of the ceremonial house, the actors standing behind them and wagging them from side to side. Meanwhile a continual chanting and dancing are kept up, the weirdness of the effect being more easily imagined than described.

There are all sorts of frolics on the ice, and huge snowballs rolled about take the place of the Easter eggs of other lands.

Coming to our own land, we have several methods of celebrating Easter which are of as much interest to foreigners as their celebrations are to us. For instance, there is the great gathering at Atlantic City, where the board-walk parade is the feature of the day—a feature which hundreds come many miles to witness. And there is the quaint Moravian Easter in Bethlehem, Pa., where the trombone players usher in the day. An interesting phase of the purely religious side of the season's celebration in America is furnished at the Convent of the Holy Family, in New Orleans, a convent for colored sisters. Hundreds of reverent spectators, many of them of prominent white families, gather to witness the solemn and impressive services in the convent chapel.

Every Friday during Lent the sisters pass, in devotional humility, along the "Way of the Cross," kneeling before each of the bas reliefs on the wall and chanting their prayers. On the morning of Good Friday this "Way of the Cross" is traversed for the last time, and with greater solemnity than ever.

The chapel is filled with flowers on the Thursday before Easter. In the cathedral, near by, the bishop washes the feet of twelve orphan boys, in commemoration of the lesson of humility and helpfulness taught by the Savior.

Extending over Saturday morning, the solemn and stately services commemorative of Christ's suffering and death at length give way to preparations for the celebration of the resurrection morn. The statues are unveiled, and all the signs of sorrow and lamentation are removed from view.

Silently, in the early morning light of Easter Sunday, the sisters glide in and kneel with their faces turned toward the altar. Girl pupils of the academy, boarders in the convent, and boys from the orphan asylum next come in and pass to their places.

When the deepening rose color of dawn gives way to the first rays of the rising sun, the priests, in gold-embroidered robes, take their places, and the first mass of Easter Day begins. From the choir gallery rise the rich notes of the Kyrie.

AUTOMOBILE OF THE FUTURE.

A PROPHET'S VIEW OF THE SERVICE IT WILL RENDER HUMANITY.

[Harper's Weekly:] When a man takes hold of the knob of his office door he knows that, year in and year out, the knob will perform its proper function. When the housewife sits down to her sewing machine she knows that hardly once in a thousand times will it fail to do its work, and do it well. Unreliable is an indictment to which our cars must too often plead guilty. In America we have done a lot of foolish things in motor-car building, but we are approaching saner methods and more correct lines. The car of the future, either for business or pleasure, has not yet been laid down. He would be a bold, perhaps a rash, prophet who would undertake any detailed description of this car. Nevertheless, reasoning a priori, there are some features we may prognosticate. In the first place, it will be built of better steel than we have been accustomed to use. In the next place, the cars will become standardized, and when standardized they will be built by machinery in enormous quantities at an exceedingly low cost. The wheels will be large, built of wood and of the artillery type. Hard rubber or some enduring substance will take the place of the present high-priced unsatisfactory pneumatic tires. The car will be light, simple, strong, and easily kept in repair. Mr. Edison once said the automobile will never be wholly practical until it is fool-proof and the ordinary repairs can be made on the highway by a darky with a monkey wrench. The present highly unsatisfactory system of change-speed gears will be supplanted by a variable-speed device. There are not wanting good judges who believe that the problem will be solved by a system of hydraulic transmission. The fuel of the future will be kerosene or grain alcohol. Thirty-five per cent. of the population of America are farmers. The farmer will be the chief automobile owner and user. The maximum speed of his car may be only twenty miles per hour, but that is twice as fast as his present mode of travel. The car will be an invaluable adjunct to his work on the farm. The adjustment of a belt, the turn of a crank, and the automobile engine furnishes power to thresh his grain, cut his woods, chop his feed, and pump his water. After being in constant use all the day, the car is ready to take the entire family to the social gathering in the village at night or to church services on Sunday morning. The farmer will use the automobile as will the butcher, the baker, and the storekeeper—when he can in no other way get the same amount of work done at so low a cost; and when the business man can deliver his goods more quickly and more economically than he can by using the horse he will do so.

There will always be motor cars de luxe for the rich, but they will be merely the fringe of the garment of a great industry. The countless millions of tons of freight now slowly and painfully drawn over country roads and through city streets by poor dumb brutes will go spinning along, the motors of the heavily-laden trucks humming a tune of rich content, and all the thousand tongues of commerce will sing the praises of the motor car.

Let me suggest a few practical things that the tireless horse of the future will accomplish:

1. It will solve the problem of the overcongestion of traffic in our city streets.

2. It will free the horse from his burdens. A few years ago, in the city of New Orleans, an old darky came in from the country and for the first time saw the electric street car, which had taken the place of the mule-drawn car. The old darky threw up his hands, and looking up to heaven, said: "Bress de Lord, de white man freed de nigger, now he done freed de mule."

3. The automobile will furnish relief to the tenement-house districts.

4. It will stimulate the good-roads movement throughout the United States.

5. It will save time and space and become invaluable to the physician, to the fireman, and to many classes of citizens.

6. It will tend to break down class distinction, because one touch of automobilism makes the whole world kin.

A PRESIDENT'S ICY BATHS.

Before the cheerful glow of a well-filled latrobe stove one recent evening in a Washington residence several gentlemen were having a symposium. They were talking over all sorts of matters, including, of course, the ever-recurring topic of the weather.

"I expect," remarked one of the party, a man from Boston, "there will be some bitter cold weather before the spring fairly opens. If that rugged old gentleman from my State, John Quincy Adams, was with us now he would have a chance to indulge in what we have often been told was one of his favorite habits—that is, going down to the river on cold winter mornings and breaking the ice preparatory to a plunge in the Potomac. I have never believed that yarn, however," continued the New England man, "but have always looked upon it as one of the usual fables that crop out in this city every now and then."

"Well, you might as well believe it," said a Washington man, who is pretty well advanced in years, "for it is a well-attested fact. I knew in my younger days a gentleman of this city, one of the most prominent physicians of ante-bellum days, and later on a distinguished officer in the Confederate army, who has assured me and others as well that when he was a mere lad he has seen President John Quincy Adams break the thin ice in the Potomac on a winter morning and take a plunge into the water. He was in the habit of going to a point at the foot of Twelfth street for these morning ablutions.

"In mild weather Mr. Adams would always go down to the river and take a plunge from the wharf. The boys all knew him, and would greet him with a shout, particularly when, after making his dive, his head, which had no more hair on it than there is on an egg, would come bobbing up to the surface. The President knew the boys, too, and enjoyed going in with the crowd. The boys, however, drew the line on joining in the swim when there was ice. They preferred skating.

"In my younger days," further remarked the Washington man, "I have seen a number of people baptized in the Potomac when the mercury in the thermometer was below the freezing point. But don't you make any mistake," he said to the gentleman from Boston, "about John Quincy Adams swimming in the icy Potomac. There are men living in Washington today whose fathers and grandfathers have seen him in the act. Maybe that accounted for his long life, for he was over 80 years of age when he had his fatal stroke of apoplexy in the House of Representatives, of which he was a member at the time of his death."—Washington Post.

Immigrant Reforms.

ALIENS TO BE DISTRIBUTED AMONG DIFFERENT STATES.

By a Special Contributor.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The long-lamented concentration of immigrants in their disease-breeding, crime-generating "colonies" in New York and its environs is at last to be relieved by the Federal government.

On July 1 next Frank P. Sargent, the commissioner-general of immigration, will throw open the doors of a "division of information"—an innovation which promises vast results. Its function will be "to promote a beneficial distribution of aliens among the States and Territories desiring immigration." The official in charge will gather from all available sources, useful information regarding the resources, products and physical characteristics of each State and Territory. This information will be published in different languages, and will be distributed at the immigrant stations among all admitted aliens who ask for it.

State Boomers at Immigrant Stations.

Furthermore, the States and Territories will be permitted to send to the immigrant stations agents, to be given access to all newly-admitted aliens. These official promoters will point out to the new comers the special inducements for settlement offered by their respective States.

To protect the lives and limbs of the aliens who, particularly at the great Ellis Island station, will run the gauntlet of these two score or more State boomers, Commissioner-General Sargent will frame some strict and drastic regulations. Those agents violating these rules will be denied the privileges of the stations. Some of the States, particularly those of the South, already maintain immigration bureaus, and these will appoint the agents sent to the immigrant stations. Other States desiring immigrants are expected to organize such bureaus before July 1. Practically the whole of this educational campaign will be waged at the Ellis Island station, New York. Through its portals passed last year 880,000 of the 1,057,000 aliens admitted to this land of ours.

How very badly immigrants are wanted in many sections of the South and West is disclosed in the urgent appeals which Mr. Sargent has been receiving. These come especially from agriculturists, mine owners, manufacturers and railroad officials. A majority of our immigrants are pouring into the sections where they are least wanted and where the least chance of work awaits them, while they are avoiding the sections where they would be welcomed with open arms and given remunerative employment.

Where Aliens Concentrate.

Just how this is will be seen by the figures for last year. Over seven-tenths of those passing through the immigrant stations said they were going to settle in already thickly populated centers, and all of this while the clamor for immigrants was coming from thinly populated districts. Over one-third of these aliens said they were going to make their abodes in New York State; more than one-sixth in Pennsylvania, and one-twelfth in Illinois. Amost as many declared themselves bound for Massachusetts, and next ranked New Jersey.

To put it in another way, there set out for New York last year more than enough newly-arrived aliens (374,708) to populate a second Buffalo; for Pennsylvania enough (198,681) to fill another Minneapolis, or two Scrantons; for Illinois enough (86,539) to duplicate Richmond, Va.; for Massachusetts enough (73,863) to fill a Trenton, N. J., and for New Jersey enough (58,415) to fill another Hoboken.

More than 90 per cent. were destined for the North—the North Atlantic and South Central States. Only 4 2-5 per cent. were bound for the West—beyond the Mississippi—and only 4 1-5 per cent. for the South. Ohio alone got more of these aliens than either the whole West or the whole South. Such is the state of affairs against which Mr. Sargent's new information office, reinforced by the States and Territories, will wage its strenuous educational campaign.

South a Splendid Field for Aliens.

The South in particular wants immigration now. Formerly it desired nothing less. Its change of sentiment on this subject has been both recent and marked. It offers a splendid field for the newcomer with brawn and energy. It has millions of acres of cotton, cane, rice and tobacco lands that have never been cultivated. Indeed Louisiana alone has 19,000,000 acres of vacant land out of a total of 26,000,000, and it is estimated that not more than one-eighth of the cotton lands of the whole South is under cultivation. In Louisiana there are more than a hundred immigration societies, and in Maryland there are still more. But neither these nor the similar organizations in other Southern States are looking for the Hungarians and Russians now flocking into the North in superabundance. The South has been calling for the good old Teutonic and Celtic stock which settled the country in its first days—the English, Irish, Welsh, Scotch and Germans, in particular. Yet, climatically speaking, the Italians are, of all of our immigrants, those best suited to the South, and moreover they now constitute the largest class of our immigrants. The supply of these far exceeds the demand, in the North. They have proved to be successful farmers where they have so far settled in the Southern cotton and sugar plantations. The great lumbering companies of the South are also employing them, and it is estimated that more than 100,000 are working in the southern Mississippi Valley. They have begun to purchase little farms, to build good homes and to put money in the bank. They are found to be prompt in paying debts, and to have improved morally as well as financially since arriving. The younger of these Italians do not wish to return to Italy, which desire has caused their race to be generally disliked in America.

More Steerage Room Per Immigrant.

A requirement that more and better steerage space per immigrant be given by vessels is another wise innovation provided by the new immigration law. One of the first acts of Oscar Straus, after assuming office as Secretary of Commerce and Labor, was to look into this question. He has been abroad many times—in fact is of foreign birth—and has taken a personal interest in the condition of the poor immigrants en voyage. He at once appointed a commission to go over the question carefully. In 1882 Congress passed a law requiring vessels to allow each steerage passenger 100 cubic feet of space on the upper and 120 cubic feet of space on the lower decks. But since that time the use of steel in ship construction has permitted almost as great an increase in the dimensions of ocean steamers as in those of buildings on shore. It was Mr. Straus's opinion that since modern steel vessels now have so much more room than in 1882 the advantages should be shared with the poor immigrants. The British government recognized this in 1896, and acted accordingly, but the framers of the new immigration bill, at the instigation of Mr. Straus, give immigrants bound for America about 20 per cent. more room than required even by the British law.

Each adult immigrant will be assured 123 or 140 cubic feet according to whether he is on the upper or lower steerage decks. Those on the upper must have at least eighteen square feet of deck surface and those below at least twenty, and there must be seven feet from deck to ceiling, so to speak. On the lower steerage decks less than seven feet from floor to ceiling may be allowed if there is thirty square feet of floor space per passenger. The same extra allowance must be made also if light and air are admitted to the steerage through apertures averaging less than three square feet to every 100 square feet of deck surface. Sailing vessels must allow at least 110 cubic feet per immigrant and will be forbidden to carry passengers in any "between-decks" or in any [illegible] having less than six feet from floor to ceiling. [illegible] vessel owners may have ample time in which to [illegible] these alterations, this wise reform will not go into [illegible] until January 1, 1909, when all ships bringing [illegible] grants or other steerage passengers to our ports [illegible] have to comply or pay $50 fine for each passenger [illegible] given the required space and fresh air.

Consumptives Are to Be Barred.

Another reform is the barring out of [illegible] of all "persons afflicted with tuberculosis." The [illegible] Plague is thus specifically mentioned for the first [illegible] in an immigration law. The fact that this grim [illegible] is claiming about 146,000 of our population per [illegible] which is more than the annual mortality average [illegible] both armies in the Civil War, sufficed to move the [illegible] ers of the new law to this reform. Science has [illegible] pointed to the fact that consumption is particularly [illegible] alent in this country among foreign-born [illegible] who have settled in localities differing in climate [illegible] those to which they have become habituated at [illegible]

During last year in [illegible] was noted by the examining surgeons of the [illegible] service an increased number of weak-minded [illegible] aliens, whose cases were not so marked [illegible] diagnosis of idiocy or insanity required [illegible] but who throw doubt on their ability to [illegible] selves.

It would seem as though the cream of [illegible] peasantry are now nearly skimmed off. [illegible] has been a significant increase of persons [illegible] old law have had to be passed by the [illegible] geons, but who have been marked as "[illegible]" This marking has implied that the subject [illegible] dersized or poorly developed, has feeble [illegible] arteries below the standard size, etc. [illegible] as one of the surgeons explains, that he [illegible] ically degenerate.

The degenerate himself is [illegible] likely to become a desirable citizen, but it [illegible] that he will transmit his undesirable qualities [illegible] spring. By admitting such aliens we vastly [illegible] number of public charges. "That the physical [illegible] tal quality of the aliens we are now receiving [illegible] below that of those who have come in [illegible] evident," says Commissioner-General Sargent [illegible] cently instituted an investigation of the [illegible] tutions of the country, and actually found [illegible] paupers, including lunatics, in our public [illegible] besides 5000 more in private institutions. [illegible] found about 10,000 alien criminals in our [illegible] tions, making altogether a grand total of [illegible] all but 5000 of them supported at public expense. [illegible] dition he found in these institutions about [illegible] ralized foreigners. New York State was found [illegible] porting 12,440 insane criminal and pauper [illegible] sylvania, 5600; Massachusetts, 5490, and [illegible] But the most striking fact gathered by the [illegible] general was that while in the United States [illegible] seventy-five citizens to each alien there [illegible] sane asylums and poorhouses only six citizens [illegible] alien.

Still another reform imposed by the new [illegible] that any alien woman or girl found to be [illegible] of a prostitute at any time within three years [illegible] ing the country shall be deported. INTERESTING SCENES IN THE MID-PACIFIC PORT.

By a Special Contributor.

HONOLULU is the half-way house of the Pacific. Every transport, every passenger boat, every freight boat and every big maru that sails from San Francisco for Japan, China, Manila or the colonies, puts in to Honolulu Harbor. Every boat sailing from the Orient, the Philippines, and the colonies, bound for San Francisco, does likewise. Because of this the harbor takes on quite a cosmopolitan air, and there is never a time that there is not some interesting boat to visit.

To the visitor from an inland city to whom all shipping is a novelty the life of the harbor away out there in the middle of the great Pacific offers an irresistible fascination, and he waits eagerly for the siren's call which announces to the city that a ship is sighted.

As soon as the lookout at Diamond Head, gazing through his powerful glasses, sights a ship, he telephones the news to the naval station in town, and a whistle is blown to tell the town a ship is approaching. A little later, after the ship has anchored in the stream and the quarantine officers have boarded her, have found a clean bill of health, and her yellow flag is lowered, another signal is blown to tell that she is coming in. It is then that those who want to see the landing prepare to go down to the dock.

The entrance to the harbor is through a very narrow channel between the points of the coral reef, and two boats went on the reef at the very entrance to the harbor while I was in Honolulu. Most of the boats of the Pacific Mail, the Occidental and Oriental, and the Toyo Kisen Kaisha Steamship Companies dock at the Hackfeldt wharf, the Oceanic Steamship Company boats dock at the Oceanic dock, while at the naval wharf the army transports and armored cruisers anchor. There are times when every slip is full, and the harbor presents a very busy appearance.

There is no better known or more useful man in all Hawaii than Diamond Head Charlie, the old lookout who spends his life searching the horizon for ships. This old Swede, who used to follow the sea, and has been wrecked more times than most people would care to think of, lives in a little white cottage on a bit of promontory beyond Diamond Head, alone with his daughter and his cats and his dog. The daughter is employed in town during the day, so the old man's companionship for the most part is reduced to his pets.

Diamond Head Light house

The Manchuria just off the reef

The bay window of his cottage looks out across the coral reef to the open ocean beyond, and standing in this window Diamond Head Charlie points his powerful glasses seaward in search for ships. For twenty-eight years he has watched for ships, and there is no other can see so far or see so soon. "At twenty-five miles out I can tell whether she is French or German or American," this grizzled old salt says with a note of pride in his voice. "There ain't nobody can see 'em like I can."

And it is true. On several occasions when the lookout is supposed to have communed too freely with the flowing bowl he has been withdrawn from service, but each time his successor has proved so inadequate that the old man has been reinstated, for he is too valuable to lose. He is a little shrunken fellow, with sparse gray hair and gnarled and twisted hands, and his bare feet are thrust into old cracked shoes.

The lookout's house is but a short distance from the lighthouse known as Diamond Head Light. The keeper is John Kaulin, a native Hawaiian, a big, burly fellow, who good-naturedly conducts visitors to the tower. The light is of the second order, and is a steady white light, which may be seen five miles out at sea. At this point the reef extends far out, and the coast is very rough and dangerous. The Gainsborough, an English vessel which went ashore below Diamond Head several years ago, was on the reef for six weeks. At certain points along the shore the water over the reef is so shallow that one can walk out a mile straight into the ocean—so they say. Not being anxious to try an ocean promenade, I did not attempt to test the truth of this statement, though I do not doubt that it may be true.

There are two other lights on Oahu, one at Barber's Point, near where the transport Sheridan went on the reef, and one within the harbor, but Diamond Head light is the chief one.

Diamond Head is a sharp promontory at the end of an old crater, and is one of the most distinctive features of Honolulu landscape. It is the first thing one sees in approaching Honolulu, the last one sees in leaving it. The residents of Honolulu returning from the States exclaim in joy when the first faintly blue outlines of Diamond Head show against the sky, and the more enthusiastic, impulsive ones greet it with tears in their eyes, as it stands sentinel-like as the guardian of the harbor approach. The sides are furrowed and creased where ancient lava flows have poured down, and are bare and brown in summer, but after the winter rains the old crater's cup is covered with grass, and wild flowers bloom where once the lava flowed.

There are many boat clubs in Honolulu, some for men and some for women, and on regatta days the bay presents a gay appearance. Most of the men and girls row well, and everybody swims. The surf boat, a long, canoe-like boat, affords much diversion for those fond of water sports, while an occasional houseboat adds to the picturesque phases of the harbor life.

Honolulu is the coaling station for boats passing between the Orient and San Francisco, and while the liners wait to coal, the passengers are given a brief time in which to see the beauties of the Hawaiian capital.

As a passenger boat approaches its dock it is surrounded by a school of jabbering, brown-bodied human fish, darting hither and thither through the blue-green water calling eagerly for coins. These young native boys, clad only in a boatman's trunk and an air of assurance, are as used to water as they are to land, and as they spring out of the water, their muscular brown bodies glistening in the sun, they add a very picturesque, foreign touch to the scene. Passengers crowding the steamer's rail are liberal with their coins, and as they toss the shining nickels and dimes and quarters into the water the money is quickly seized and deposited in the capacious mouths of the young divers, who loudly cry for more. When a boat is at anchor, the boys clamber up the ropes to the upper deck and dive off, expecting more coins for their feats.

As we sailed to Honolulu last September the passengers crowded the Alameda's forward deck at 4 o'clock in the morning, straining their eyes to catch the faint gleam of the Manchuria's lights as she lay stranded and disabled on the reef at Rabbit Island. For many days we watched and waited for the great liner to come into port. It was a glad day when the big ship, moving slowly but under her own steam, came majestically into the harbor's entrance and finally lay alongside the Hackfeldt dock. Her hull was stained with great blotches of white from the hundreds of sacks of flour thrown overboard from her hold after she went on the reef, and long streamers of green moss clung to her sides. Few visitors were allowed on board, but at the invitation of one of the officers a party of four, of whom I was glad to be one, were entertained at luncheon and were presented with souvenirs of the noble ship. After luncheon we were taken on a tour of inspection of the great ship, and there wasn't a spot from the sailors' bunk-room and the Chinese opium den in the hold to the bridge deck that we did not see.

The crews on these oriental boats are all Chinese, and at the time the boat went on the reef they became so infuriated at their bad joss that they threw him overboard. A new joss was installed in their bunk-room, and offerings of chickens and various other things were made to him because he proved to be a good joss and helped the boat pull off the rocks. Tiny candles and lamps of vegetable oil were burning before his hideous visage, and prayer sticks and prayer slips were all about his altar.

An opium den has to be built on these big ships for the use of the Chinese steerage passengers, for they will smoke, and if there were no place where they could congregate there would be danger that they might set the ship on fire. Piled on the after deck were long crude coffins, which are always carried, there being some deaths on every voyage among either steerage passengers or crew.

The Manchuria is the boat upon which Alice Roosevelt and the Taft party made their long voyage, and while inspecting the ship we drank lemonade in the luxurious stateroom occupied by the President's daughter.

The Manchuria and Mongolia, sister ships, are said to be the largest boats on the Pacific, and it was a strange coincidence that both should go on the reef within a month of each other. While the Manchuria lay alongside the dock the word came that the Mongolia had gone ashore on Midway Island, and in due time the great disabled sister ship came into harbor and docked on the other side of the same wharf. It was probably the first and the only time these great twin ships will ever lie at the same dock at the same time. When on their decks you do not realize their size, but as you stand below on the dock and see the long flight of swinging steps you must traverse to reach the lower deck, you feel as if you were looking to the top of a three-or-four-story building.

I stood with the captain of the Manchuria on the after deck and watched the great Mongolia steam out of the harbor on her long, lonely voyage to the coast with only her crew and her officers and one wee laddie on board, while the Manchuria sounded her whistle of farewell and was answered with the good-by Aloha of her departing mate.

Whenever a warship comes into port, receptions and dinners and dances are held on board, and similar affairs are given at the large hotels in honor of the officers. Most of the time a relief ship is kept in the harbor, which goes in aid of a disabled boat, and this is always the center of much pleasant social life.

One of the most unique affairs ever given in Honolulu was the large reception given on board the Japanese training ship Anegawa, which visited the Hawaiian Islands last fall, by Capt. Hanafusa and his officers. The conditions themselves were novel enough to arouse unusual interest—attending a social affair on board a former Russian battleship, one sunk at Port Arthur and later reclaimed by the Japanese and turned into a training ship; eating good American chicken salad and caviar sandwiches while the band of the American battleship Wisconsin, stationed back of the Japanese Consul and the demure, almond eyed ladies of the consulate, played "Star Spangled Banner" and "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean". Crimson blossoms glowed where once were blood stains, and the frou frou of silken skirts and the music of women's laughter took the place of the battle cry and the sound of booming guns. The decks bloomed with fifteen hundred artificial chrysanthemums made by the Japanese sailors en route from the Orient, showers of wistaria blossoms and branches of cherry blossoms hung from the top of the decks, and beds of purple and white iris lined the hatches. Every one of the seven hundred Japanese on the ship was in immaculate white, each doing his part in offering some hospitality to the several hundred guests. Women in smart reception toilettes, civilians in dignified afternoon dress, officers in dress uniforms, mingled in gay groups, laughing and chatting beneath the crossed flags of America and Japan. Flags and pennants fluttered from bow and stern, from mast and gangway and it was hard to realize that this gallant ship once lay at the bottom of a foreign harbor a disabled and grewsome thing. The captain and his officers were gallantry personified and looked quite military in their spotless white uniforms, their chevrons bearing instead of the stars of the American navy, the cherry blossom of Japan. An anchor, surmounted by a cherry blossom, is the imperial naval sign of the land of the Mikado and this symbol was embossed upon each invitation.

I shall never forget my visit to the great American battleship Wisconsin, which anchored in port for a few days. It was late in the afternoon, and while I was turning the lever of one of the mammoth guns and wondering how it would seem really to be "the man behind the gun" "colors" sounded and we hastened to the after deck where the band was assembling. My captain and lieutenant escorts stood straight and immovable at attention, and the band played "Star Spangled Banner" as the colors were slowly lowered. On the other side of the dock the same ceremony was going on on board the transport Lawton, and a short distance over the blue water the officers of the Anegawa were observing a like ceremony. Great masses of amber clouds were piling up in the blue sky, driven seaward through the mountain passes by the evening breezes, a wonderful rose light lay on the hills and gradually flushed the clouds; pale blue clouds drifted across the horizon above the darkening ocean, and the ships at anchor over toward Pearl Harbor were darkly silhouetted like shadow ships against a golden sky. On one side lay the town stretching out to meet the green hills beyond, the red roofs glowing from among the clustering alganoba trees. Around us lay the quiet harbor and the shipping, back of Diamond Head, stretched out to greet the sea, the great lens of the tower light glistening like a mammoth diamond in the sun's last rays. In that quiet between-whiles of the day there seemed not to be a sound save the sweet and mellow tones of the band out in the bay as the sun dropped behind the water line and the last flag was furled.

When a battleship is in harbor, our lieutenant escort told us, it is the custom to play the national air of every foreign boat in port, in the order of the naval rank of the countries represented.

At the sailing of a boat the Royal Hawaiian Band, when in town, always plays at the dock, and as the passengers, adorned with bright floral leis, crowd the decks for a last glimpse of friends below, the sweet and plaintive notes of the "Aloha Oe," or half-white song composed by ex-Queen Liliuokalani, are heard in tender, regretful farewell. As the blue water widens between the dock and the steamer's prow, you find yourself looking back at the island town with the words of the Ahivela parody on your lips:

"Honolulu, when shall I ever
  See thy green hills any more?
When shall I anchor in that harbor.
  Honolulu, as of yore?"

The Overcomers.

HOW A STRANGE AMERICAN COLONY CELEBRATES EASTER.

By a Special Contributor.

LIVING within sight of the spot where it is said the tragedy of the crucifixion and the miracle of the resurrection occurred is a little colony of Americans, called the Overcomers, who for twenty-five years have been celebrating Easter as they believe Christ would wish the day held.

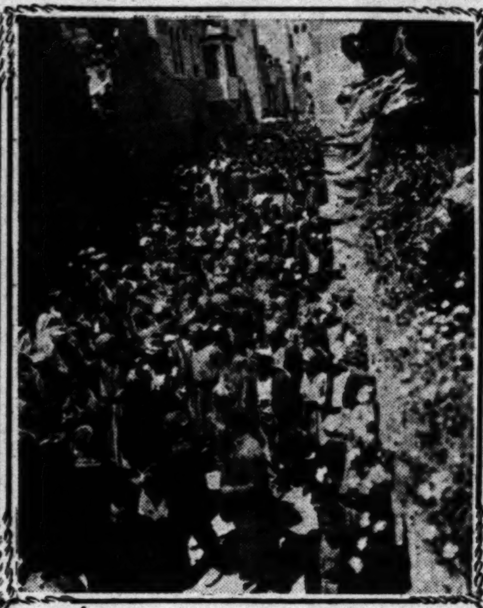
About a quarter of a century ago a little band of Americans who failed to find safe harbor for their religious beliefs in any church in the United States, left Chicago and traveled across land and seas to Jerusalem, where they took up their abode in the shadow of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. Here they felt free to worship according to the dictates of their conscience, which bade them cast aside all dogma and sect rulings and to hold to the Golden Rule and the teaching of the New Testament according to their interpretation of that work.

Horatio Spofford, his wife and William Rudy formed the nucleus of this colony, which now numbers 165 Americans and about fifty Swedes and perhaps half that number of Germans. The Americans, however, live a little apart in a settlement of their own, although in every other way the entire colony is as one great family.

Each man works for the welfare of the entire community, and everything they have is at the disposal of any visitor who may require shelter or food. Over the doorway of the main hall in which this colony gathers to hold divine service hangs the Golden Rule, and this is the only creed professed by the Overcomers.

During Holy Week instead of spending their time in fasting and praying, as do most of the pilgrims and other dwellers in Jerusalem, this little band of Americans work happily at their various money-earning trades, putting in extra hours and endeavoring in every way to earn additional money. All profit derived from Holy Week labor is put aside, and on Easter Monday is given over to the chief elder, who distributes it, or its equivalent, among the sick and the needy. Thus with a week of honest labor behind them and the thought of the future blessing which their efforts will bring to the deserving, the Easter service of the Overcomers is joyful indeed.

Overcomers near ruins they have redeemed.



Pilgrims on their way

There have been many reports of the strange actions of this little band of Americans in Jerusalem, and of the mysterious religious rites which they perform. Most of these are very highly colored, and misrepresent the truth of the simple life of these sincere people.

It has been said that their leader retires into a dark room one day a week, and to him come all the diseased and maimed to be healed through the divine power which descends upon him.

The truth of the matter is that Jacob Roth is a licensed physician and an oculist, and when he retires to his darkened room he merely does so in order to test the eyes of some sufferer. His "divine healing" consists in the giving of medicines such as any homeopathic doctor would administer.

It also has been stated that the Overcomers are awaiting the second coming of Jesus, which they believe will be within the next ten years, and that in order to be ready for Him they keep asses saddled and milk and provisions always on the table after nightfall. True the asses are kept saddled, and the larder is never allowed to be empty, especially during the Easter season, when the town is swarmed with pilgrims, but these things are not done against the coming of the Savior, but in order to give quick succor to the many sufferers and the needy ones who always pour into the city at Easter time.

On Good Friday the entire colony rises at 4 o'clock and forms a procession to the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. Here they sing and pray for an hour, when they return to their homes for breakfast, to which meal they give hearty welcome to any stranger who stops at their door. During the rest of the day they go about their labors or are sent out to administer refreshment, or to care for the sick according to the instructions of the Elders who spend the week in searching out the needy and in devising means of relieving them.

On Saturday and Sunday when the great crowds are pouring in from the Garden of Gethsemane and the Mount of Olives, where they have spent the week in fasting and praying and offering all kinds of sacrifies, the 165 Americans and the seventy-five foreign Overcomers, after a brief song service in their own beautiful little chapel, are scatttered far afield, relieving burdens and heartache and all kinds of suffering, spreading the doctrine of the Golden Rule and spending Easter as they believe Christ would order it spent were He to come suddenly among them.

Christians from many lands, Arabs, Jews and Mohammedans, crowd the hotels, pitch tents or, wrapping themselves in their voluminous robes, make their beds on the ground of the Holy City during Easter week.

The Garden of Gethsemane, now a little inclosure, lies at the foot of the Mount of Olives. Here was fulfilled the prophecy of Isaiah: "I have trodden the wine press alone." A high wall has been built around it by the Latins, who have planted trees and laid it out with hedges and flower beds in modern fashion. Each sect in turn is permitted to hold services in the Chapel of the Sepulcher upon the very spot where Christ is supposed to have risen from the dead.

In the center of the church—it is a large building of yellow stone—rests a rose-colored slab of marble which is said to be the identical stone whereon the body of Jesus was laid to be prepared for burial. Another stone, in an adjoining chapel, is said to be the one which the angels rolled away from the tomb. Night and day these stones are surrounded by crowds of devout people, who gaze upon them with awe or who kneel with reverence and kiss them.

A day of elaborate ceremonies is the Thursday preceding Easter. Before 8 o'clock in the morning a great crowd surges in and about the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, filling every available space. This is the day of the footwashing and the exercises take place upon a platform in the center of a court. With great pomp and dignity the Greek Patriarch and twelve priests perform the ceremony. Gold embroidery makes their robes resplendent; costly jewels sparkle and superb music is heard. During the closing moments of the service, when the patriarch has finished washing the feet of elderly pilgrims selected for the purpose, a flock of doves released from somewhere above, swoop down and circle about the heads of the priests.

During the afternoon the same ceremony takes place in the Armenian church, which is built on the site and largely out of the débris of Herod's palace. As this church is the richest and most magnificent in oriental Christendom, the scene is one of great splendor.

Robed in dazzling vestments, priests in large numbers surround the Patriarch at the high altar; lights flicker from golden lamps, their rays reflected by the gold mosaics on the walls; stately pageants move about and the people press eagerly forward with their votive offerings.

A notable Moslem religious feast happens to fall on Good Friday, when all male Mohammedans must join the procession of Neby Moussa, which marches from the Mosque of Omar on a week's journey to the tomb of Moses:

> "By Nebo's lonely mountain
> On this side Jordan's wave."

On the night of Good Friday several thousand persons spend the hours of darkness standing, sitting, kneeling or lying on the stone floors and benches of the outer court of the church; in the galleries and cloisters, and even on the balconies, roofs and stairways.

On the day before Easter, exactly at 2 p.m., the "sacred fire comes down from heaven." Awaiting this, most of the crowd of the night before—Greek church adherents—remains, while hundreds of others endeavor to crowd into the church.

Behind closed doors, within the chapel of the sepulcher, the Greek patriarch prays long and fervently for the light from heaven. At last he appears, bearing a lighted candle in his hand. As many as can press forward to light their tapers from the patriarch's [illegible] these in turn give the fire to others, and in a short [illegible] every person in the crowd is waving a lighted [illegible] In an incredibly short time the sacred fire spreads [illegible] over Jerusalem, and even runs out to the [illegible] villages.

It is on Easter Sunday, however, that the most [illegible]geous religious ceremonials take place. With the [illegible]ing of the morning a mighty chorus rings from one [illegible] of the city to the other: "Christ is risen! Christ is risen! Christ is risen!" and thousands of feet [illegible] eagerly toward the Church of the Holy Sepulcher.

There, beginning at an early hour and continuing until noon, masses succeed masses, and the most [illegible] rituals are carried out by priests resplendent in [illegible] most costly robes. These services are the [illegible] glory of the Greek, Latin and Armenian religions [illegible]

While all these elaborate services are being conducted by the thousands who crowd the place, the Overcomers are baking and brewing and putting up cots in a [illegible] effort to feed and house the pilgrims who, either for lack of money or because of the crowded conditions, cannot obtain food or shelter at the inns, hotels or few private houses which throw their doors open to the pilgrims at this time.

They hear none of the elaborate masses at the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, nor do they receive a spark of the sacred flame which is flashing through the [illegible] city, but they do receive the blessing of hundreds whom they feed and shelter and the knowledge of days well spent brings a glow to their hearts which far outshines the paschal taper.

This little band of practical Christians can scarcely be called a colony, for all organization is absent.

There are no directors or leaders, save such as lead by force of wider experience and knowledge. Each individual man and woman does what he or she pleases and in whatever manner the individual deems best. There is a common purse into which all earnings are put, and when any one requires any money he or she takes it out of the purse, and no one asks any questions.

Complete confidence is the basis of the entire arrangement, and it might be more correct to call the aggregation of individuals a family rather than a colony, for their relations are truly fraternal.

Every member of this great family follows some task suited to his or her tastes. Some weave, others make rag carpets, some attend to the household duties, and others do the washing. Some make shoes; others are tailors and dressmakers. There are goldsmiths and photographers among the members of this family, and many are trained teachers. Olive wood is fashioned into all kinds of articles, beautiful and useful, and the ferns and flowers of the Holy Land are gathered and pressed in albums for sale all over the world.

Many children are intrusted to the colony, for its reputation for kindliness and right living is widespread. Even better-class Mohammedans send their children to be taught by the Americans, and the only government school for girls in Jerusalem is intrusted to the women of the American colony, four of whom, with the aid of nine Mohammedan teachers, instruct 300 pupils.

The American colony occupies four different houses, renting all of them, but the chief house or home is situated a short distance outside the Damascus gate. It is two stories high with green shutters and a flat roof, unlike most houses of the town. Entering the house the visitor passes up a broad flight of carpeted stairs up to the central saloon, or meeting-place. If he is fortunate as to come on Sunday, he will be invited to take part in the services, which are simple and in true accordance with the doctrine which they profess. The hundred sixty-five men and women working faithfully and without thought of benefit to themselves have accomplished a wonderful reform in the town which, because of its heterogeneous gatherings, had long been in a state of civil unrest. He will be handed a hymn book in English, and probably hear a chapter of the Bible read and duly commented upon. There will be a singing of hymns accompanied by the organ, and after the service, which lasts but an hour, coffee and cake will be passed. Possibly if he comes in the evening he will witness a festival among the children, with recitations and songs taught them by their American teachers.

The saloon is paved with marble, and its broad windows curtained with white hangings, lamps covered with tasteful shades, and bunches of fresh roses and lilies in all the corners of the room, it presents a most [illegible] room. The center of the ceiling of this large room is [illegible]pressed, and on a background of gold stars [illegible] all surrounded with a garland of flowers. Near the organ may be seen five women and three men who are the elders of the congregation.

There is an atmosphere of peace and good will throughout the assembly, and the entire house, for they live only to do good to one another, cannot fail to be happy in their well-doing. The poor, and especially the despised lepers of Jerusalem, count the Americans their best friends and constant helpers. Amid the motley throng of ne'er-do-wells with which Jerusalem is overfilled, the American colony stands out in relief by its thrift and general helpfulness.

The Mohammedans esteem the colony most highly, and it is said that although they make no effort to gain followers, they have done good work in spreading Christianity through the force of example.

HOCK IN TINTED GLASSES

The German wine called Hock was served in glasses tinted blue.

"Why is Hock always served in a colored glass?" a young girl said. "Is there a reason for this [illegible]"

"An excellent reason," her companion, [illegible] made answer. "Hock is full of a sediment so light that it never settles, but floats in the wine. In a clear glass you'd see it there—it would annoy you—you'd think it dust or bits of cork. But in a tinted glass the sediment is invisible, and the wine as clean and grateful to the eye as to the palate."

The First Easter Lily.

A Child's Vision and His Proof of a Kingly Visit.

By Mrs. Carter H. Harrison.

THE day was warm, and the sunshine flashing through the oak trees in brilliant sparkles danced along the ground, while overhead the big white magnolia blossoms, in their cradle of green leaves, smiled so broadly that their yellow centers shone like little golden crowns.

Tomorrow was Easter!

Already the skies had a richer tint, and the earth, adding hourly to the gorgeous-colored garments in which it was arrayed, was ready to come forth as Spring.

The birds, rehearsing their hymns of praise for the morrow, fluttered about among the trees, and the flowers could hardly wait to bloom out in a riotous burst of color! Great clusters of pink oleanders were rearing their heads proudly from a mass of dark green leaves, while across the yard daintily-perfumed cape jasmine peeped out, like white stars, from their homes in the thick hedges.

The lawn, stretching away like soft velvet, sloped gently down from the handsome red-pillared plantation house to the white shell road, beyond which glittered and sparkled the blue waters of the Gulf.

Five or six children were playing merrily on the grass. Their peals of laughter, ringing clear as silver bells, made sweet music as they ran about hiding the nests for the Easter rabbit's expected visit.

In every secluded spot one of the nests was put—in the shadow of the rose bushes, in the hollow of a tree, in the deep foliage of the hedge, and under the sharp-pointed stem of the sweet-smelling acacia. The Easter rabbit would have to hunt out these hiding places to put its treasures in, if it would please the children.

In the midst of the happy frolic, Chariton, the youngest of the little ones, tiring perhaps of the play, stopped suddenly, and slowly sauntered back to his mother's knee. She sat on the broad gallery of the mansion, dreamily watching the curling waters of the Gulf as they deepened or paled in wonderful tints of blue, and floating shoreward in a shimmering mass beat gently upon the hard, white beach.

"Mamma," said the child, leaning against her, wise-eyed and solemn, "what is faith?"

"Faith, my sweetheart," replied his mother, caressing him, "faith—why, it is trust, perfect trust."

"Then, mamma, if I have faith will God answer my prayers?"

The mother gathered her treasure in her arms before replying and as she kissed him whispered:

"Yes, my darling, absolute faith will surely bring an answer to your prayers—but my little boy must be older to understand these things," and she smiled lovingly into his eyes, and the child seemed content with her answer.

But that night, when, tucked in his white bed, the mother thought him asleep, Chariton lay awake and prayed—prayed that he might see the Savior risen, see Him in all the splendor of His shining robes of light—and in the innocence of his childish heart he believed that the vision would come to him.

Through the open window he caught glimpses of the sky, and in its blue vault, shining like a big diamond, trembled a brilliant star. He could hear the soft rustle of the leaves as they stirred beneath the breeze floating by, and the air was sweet and heavy with the odor of orange blossoms. A long time he lay awake. The hours, one after another, struck from the big hall clock downstairs, but Chariton lay quiet and expectant. He could not sleep until—until——

What was that sound, so entrancingly beautiful that he held his breath to listen? It rose and fell in delicious cadences, breathing out the joyous happiness of innocent life, telling of love and peace. The mocking-bird was hymning her praises to her Maker. Her throbbing notes floated out soft and rich in the volume of delicious song, flooding the mysterious silence of the night with music.

But what had happened to the star? It had grown larger and more brilliant. It glittered and sparkled with a strange light, while waves of brilliancy filled the room. Silver and gold, diamonds and rubies mixed together, could not have been more wonderful in their splendor. Its long rays reached down in a clear stream of glory flooding the room with brightness, and in the midst floated a radiant being so beautiful that the child cried out aloud, in an ecstasy of delight:

"Christ has risen!"

His flowing garments shone like the sun. His face was sublime in the majestic beauty of the holy pictures, and as He floated on these clouds of splendid light He outstretched His arms and smiled upon the little child, saying:

"Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Chariton sprang forward to meet the glorious vision, but in the instant it had vanished, and he heard the voices of his brothers and sisters crying:

"Christ has risen, Easter is here!"

Chariton lay back upon his bed. He heard the children's voices mingling in happy talk, and he knew they were dressing in haste, eager to seek the gorgeous-colored eggs the Easter rabbit was sure to bring. But he did not stir; he was reluctant to join them, and even when later they rushed out upon the lawn and peals of delighted laughter told of nests filled with red, and purple, and green, and yellow splendors, he lay quite still thinking of what he had seen.

When his mother, missing him, found him in his little bed, his arms crept shyly about her throat and he softly whispered of his glorious vision. Then smilingly he led her to the window and pointed to the spot whereon his innocent eyes had seen the splendid sight.

They stood together, awestruck, to find beneath the window a glorious proof of the kingly visit, for there, imbedded firmly in the earth, was a wonderful plant with slender stalks, green and tender, swaying beneath the weight of a marvelous cluster of flowers. A delicate perfume floated up from the bright yellow stamens, but they could see that the curving petals of the transparent blossoms were as white as the driven snow. Dainty and graceful, this wonderful gift from Paradise, with its strange and delicate beauty, held its head proudly aloft, as though knowing its royal birth.

And thus, stately as a young princess, rose the first Easter Lily.

A Swedish Folkfest.

Skandsen, Stockholm's Open-Air Museum, on a Holiday.

By a Special Contributor.

SKANDSEN, the open-air museum in Stockholm, was brilliantly lighted. The music of the splendid orchestra floated down, inviting the people to come and spend one of those unique evenings when a genuine, old-fashioned folk festival was the attraction. They came in large crowds, as they all knew that it would be an evening full of interest and pleasure.

It was a balmy autumn evening. The sky was dotted with stars, and the soft light, so characteristic of the northern summer night, still lingered, as if loath to give way to the darkness of the coming winter. The trees were clothed in the most brilliant hues, and in the sharp electric light they stood out one mass of gold and scarlet.

The people who were too lazy to walk up the winding road past the double terraces with costly marble balustrades, took the car line, built like the mountain trams in Switzerland, which carried them straight up to the lighted plateau, where the quaint, old-time bell towers loomed dark against the sky.

As the car passed the old guardhouse, the guard stepped out and saluted. He looked very picturesque in the uniform of the Gustav Adolph Regiment.

The broad roads and the narrow wood paths were all thronged with happy people, but the merriest group was gathered around the old Maypole, in front of the cottage from Mora.

To raise such Maypoles became a custom in 1520, when the inhabitants of Stockholm went out to receive Gustaf Vasa, who had liberated them from the Danish sway. The people were then all decked with flowers, leaves, and their houses were rich in the bloom of the summer; dances and games were performed around the newly-raised poles.

As then, the pole was now, four centuries later, decked with flowers. It was a pretty sight to see the blue-eyed, bright-faced girls, in their picturesque costumes, swing around it and sing their ringing songs. They were so full of life and fun that the stiffest, gloomiest onlooker surely must have felt like joining them. In an open place was a large crowd gathered to watch the peasants dance their national dances; the inhabitants of each valley dancing a different dance.

The boys swung their girls with ease and grace; the maidens teased their rustic swains with laughing coyness as they stepped in and out in the intricate figures of the various dances. The bright-colored costumes, different from each valley and country, the graceful vivacity, the sure-footed self-confidence, the splendid rhythm and fine melodies, lent light and charm to the whole scene. There was no coarseness or immodest abandon; the visitor felt that those rustic peasant boys and girls treated each other with respect and good will.

Sometimes the older people also joined in the dance; and it was truly wonderful to see how light-footed and lively those stiff, heavy-shod peasants became, when they swung around in their favorite pleasure. For all northern races are fond of dancing.

In another open space, the national games were played, mostly by children, whose merry laughter rang out in the still night. Some of the games were similar to those of other nations, but some were games seen only in Sweden. In spite of the rules against it, some of the visiting children could not resist the temptation to join in the play, but wherever they attempted to do so, a strange bashfulness seemed to fall over the little peasant children, who shyly drew back to their mothers.

Tuneful fiddling and merry singing sounded from every open place, house or cottage. In the cafés, in cosy leafy garden-houses, or in the open squares sat gay parties, sipping the Swedish punch, or drinking beer or coffee, with delicious sandwiches. The fragrant smoke of Havana cigars mingled with the odor of flowers; the rather high-pitched women's voices blended with the deeper tones of the men; happy laughter, witty remarks and gay banter were heard everywhere. The Swedish people are rather blasé; but when they enjoy a thing they enjoy it whole-heartedly.

Yet, in spite of all the fun, there was great decorum and order, a pleasant, good-natured spirit was shown by everybody. There was a mingling of finely-dressed ladies, gentlemen in evening attire, officers in gay uniforms, workingmen, servant girls in their Sunday best, and peasants in their national costumes. Skandsen is to a certain extent, as much as is possible in a European country, a class leveler.

Everywhere was a tone of festivity; even in the camp of the Laplanders. It was an odd sight to see the small, serious-faced men and women move slowly around to the music of a single monotonous instrument.

In a quaint little nook Yoedde from Goeljaryd sang his characteristic songs, so full of weird melody, fun and pathos. Farther on, the good-looking Delsbostintan told her merry tales, and away in under the dark trees sat an old man who told many a grewsome tale, from the time when the famine and the black death held sway in Sweden. One would not think that his sad tales would draw a crowd on such a merry evening, but the Swedish people like to listen to stories of dark mystery and hardship and courage. In spite of their wish for pleasure, they are a serious, earnest people. Even the quaint old cemetery, lying far away from the dancing and merriment, had many visitors, who read the inscriptions on the old tombstones with interest and sympathy. The large cages where the native animals had their houses were lighted so the visitors could get an idea how those animals lived. Each cage was almost as large as a house, and had surroundings suited to the different animals. The golden eagle had a tremendous cage, where full-grown trees waved their crowns and a high heap of rock represented mountain tops. The fishes were swimming in large, well-lighted aquariums, the seals had a fine dam, the bears had their huge cages, the mountain foxes had their rocky lairs—only they were fenced in. Graceful swans glided around in the small lakes, where boats invited the visitors to a quiet row. The wild animals were all safely caged, but the domestic animals were to be found in the stables, the cow-houses, the pig sties and in the homes of the peasants, as they had been kept from generation to generation. Of the wild animals, the bears seemed to be the jolliest; they jumped and scampered around in their cages, to the great delight of all the children. The large herd of beautiful does gathered the most admirers.

Of all the old, interesting homes lying scattered in different parts of the vast grounds, the beautiful Lashbrostugan drew the greatest crowd. The road led past peaceful ponds with quaint bridges, beside winding waterways, running between small mountain passes and deep into the still woods. To the right of the road, on a small hill, was a little, yellow garden-house, which belonged to Swendenborg and where he did most of his writing.

Through the trees shimmered the lights from Lashbrostugan. The house was brought from the northern part of Sweden and was built in 1600. It had been the home of refined and educated people and was entirely different from the peasant's home. The interior proved that, even so far back, the people had luxuries and good taste. The strong light shining through the windows revealed the fine flowers and plants in the garden, which was laid out as it used to be in the sixteenth century. There were no people living in the house, as in the peasants' homes, but portraits on the walls showed what fine families had lived there. The house lay so quaint and peaceful in the woods that if the visitor had a keen imagination he could fancy the road had been lined with carriages, with elegantly-dressed people who were welcomed by the noble host and hostess.

Sweden has had, has and will always have, a hearty welcome, a marvelously hospitable feeling toward all. If such old homes could speak, they would be able to tell many an interesting tale, but as it is, they stand as silent as monuments of past life, struggles, sorrows and joys. Farther on, in solemn pine forests, there were no electric lights, only the faint lingering summer light, and no sound of merry music, only a twittering bird note broke the stillness.

The thoughtful visitor is filled with admiration for the master mind great enough to provide a place like this where the people can learn how their ancestors lived hundreds of years ago. The patriotic feelings of a nation are aroused by such a place. Every little turn in the various roads, and every open place, shows a monument, a house, a hut, or a group of buildings, which carries the mind centuries back. Every visitor, no matter of what nationality, is impressed with the text that Skandsen preaches to all—"Know yourself and your country."

SMELLING FOR HER MAJESTY.

There are several trades which provide men and women with good livings simply because they enjoy an exceptionally keen sense of smell. Remarkable Rites.

THE GREAT HINDU BATH WHICH MARKS EASTER IN INDIA.

By a Special Contributor.

THERE is a charm about even an old map of the sandalwood land of the mystic East Indians and the very names of Burmah, Thibet, Hindustan, flood the imagination with romance. One doesn't need to be a Kipling to be lured by the call of the breezes in the palm trees and the chime of the temple bells.

Many hundred tourists will travel northward from Calcutta, southeast from Cashmere and southward over the Himalayas this year at the call of those breezes and bells, and they will speed their boats and hasten their groaning caravans in order to reach Cumbaconum, a little town directly east from Delhi on the Missoorie, a branch of the Ganges, in time for the "Sacred Dip." For ages the Hindus have held the great festival of Cumbaconum in the town of that name, and as it occurs at the same time as the Christian Easter each year finds it witnessed by a greater number of English and Americans who make it a point to spend the day in Cumbaconum if they are within traveling distance of the town.

The famous Hindu Bath or Sacred Dip is a spectacular rite which is not equalled in any other land. In early spring the Sacred Pool joins the River Ganges, and in order to receive the blessings of health, prosperity and salvation, which the uniting of the waters bring to the faithful, thousands of Hindus from all parts of India travel to Cumbaconum and fill the town with weird chanting, waving banners, white tents and much clanging of cymbals as they await the great moment when they shall be called to plunge into the warm lapping waters of the Sacred Pool.

Hinduism is the religion of over two-thirds of India and, although there are several divisions of the parent creed or doctrine, every good Hindu bows in reverence to the Great River—the Ganges—and to the Sacred Pool; therefore on the festival of the Cumbaconum, from 20,000 to 30,000 copper-colored sons and daughters of this far eastern land travel many miles to be present at the great uniting of waters.

White-turbaned, their bronze skins glistening like satin, the Hindus gather from the four quarters of their land, traveling over miles of desert, through valleys and over mountains, pouring in from all the many tributaries of the Ganges and swarming to the very edge of the Sacred Pool.

The pagodas along the water's brink are gaily draped, flags are flung to the breezes, great palms are cut and all are on the tiptoe of expectation as the moon creeps nearer and nearer the point where she will at last light the way to the meeting of the waters.

The several "potail" or head inhabitants gather together in a tent set apart for their conference and meditation, and while their people pray and fast, or sing and march through the palm groves in stately march, they, the "potail," await some sign from their gods which will tell them that the great time of sacrifice and its subsequent benefits is at hand.

When the sign is given runners are sent forth to call the people together, and the Hindus, 30,000 strong, arise and, with solemn step and voices low, march singing to the great steps which lead down to the Sacred Pool. The Pagodas are filled with visitors of every nationality except two directly facing the east. In these stand the potail and those in high authority, the very aged and the sick. As the sun comes up, a fiery ball, the bells ring out, the 30,000 worshipers prostrate themselves with much groaning and chanting and beating of hands.

This rite lasts for about twenty minutes, and then, with heads bowed to the ground, this great mass of people remain motionless while the potail stand with eyes riveted on the waters.

Suddenly a sweet piercing note rings out on the stillness, the silver thread of the oncoming Ganges has been sighted. As with one voice the Hindus, rising, break into their hymn of praise and with eyes turned toward the pagodas in which the potail stand, await the signal which will plunge them into the pool.

It comes in the winding of a horn, and what a few minutes before had been a glory reflecting pool, catching and sending back the vivid colors of the rising sun is on the instant a surging mass of humanity plunged waist-deep in the water, with arms upraised and eyes strained in the direction of the river.

Back of them glows the sun riding higher and higher over the fluttering palm trees and catching the gold and silver on the banners, making them flash and sparkle in appropriate splendor.

Once more the sweet note of the bugle rings out, and with a mighty shout the full 30,000 Hindus disappear under the united waters of the Sacred Pool and the Ganges River. Again comes the note. Heads and shoulders appear above the water, and a hymn rouses the sleeping morning to full life. The great rite of the Cumbaconum is completed, Easter Day has been gloriously marked. The younger Hindus remain in the warm water of the pool splashing about in pleasing enjoyment, but the elder population have business to attend to. The commercial instinct was long ago aroused in these people by European invasion into their peaceful land and the Hindus have learned that the English and the Americans like to partake of sweets and flaky pones on this festival of the Cumbaconum. So queer little stoves are brought forth and Easter sweets are concocted and sold to the Christian visitors who usually gather and hold a litle Easter celebration of their own after the meeting of the waters.

They sing their western hymns, voice their Easter prayers unmolested.

The feast of the Cumbaconum lasts nine days, during which time there is much feasting and dancing and singing. On the 8th day tents are taken down, caravans packed, and all made ready for the exodus on the morrow which will thin out the town and leave a silence and a desolation which a foreigner is wise to escape. Nothing like a deserted ballroom or theater to rouse homesickness in the alien. Nothing like the dispersing of a mighty crowd and the period of waiting before the regular routine is taken up to cause the same sensation in the breast of a visitor in a strange country.

But there is a charm about these Hindu rites which makes the man who has once witnessed them long to spend his Easters on the shores where the Sacred Pool and the River Ganges meet. The breezes in the palm trees, the sweet chime of the temple bells, the soft voices of the multitude, the implicit faith of the great army, the child-like enjoyment of these pilgrims, the splendid beauty of the scene all combine to make an atmosphere of peace, good will and harmony particularly appropriate to the Easter season.

COSTLY PRIVATE DRIVES.

"We are building up some pretty grand private estates," said a millionaire, "and I suppose that a hundred years hence, unless Socialism steps in, America will be one great park with a Biltmore house every ten miles, and, hidden out of sight in damp, unhealthy places, the mean little black villages of the poor.

"Our private estates, though, do not compare at all with those of England. There is, for instance, the Duke of Buccleugh's place at Boughton. The private drive around this estate is seventy-six miles long, and cost $1,750,000 to build.

"The Duke of Argyle has at Inverary a private drive on the banks of Loch Fyne that cost $1,550,000, and the drive has trees on both sides that were planted by kings and queens.

"The Marquis of Ailesbury, Lord Overtoun, the Duke of Westminster and the Duke of Devonshire all own private drives that cost $1,000,000 or more to build."

Genoa in Transition.

THE GREAT LIGURIAN CITY IS CHANGING FAST.

From Pall Mall Gazette.

THE great Ligurian city that is seated at the head of the noblest gulf of the Mediterranean Sea is changing fast. Two winds blow there—one from the mountain, which brings gold and blue, and, in winter, cold; and one from the sea, which softens and sombers the whole colors of the coast, shatters the light of the sun with clouds, and sheds it, broken, here and there, out at sea, on a mountain top, on palace walls, calling this or yonder headland to stand out from the gloomy ranks. It is because these two winds only prevail that the Genoese are hardly aware how much their diamond atmosphere is now beset by factories. The smoke is carried up the valleys inland, or straight out to sea, and, in spite of it, Genoa remains a city of pellucid air and light untarnished. To the west a long suburb of smoke and modern streets has lately joined together a string of little towns; to the much more beautiful east nearly the same change is on foot. Here, lately, were palace gardens and their orange blossoms. When Evelyn sailed the bay the garden odors came out to him to sea. It was a clean world, even in the memory of the living, that was so fragrant. The foul and melancholy suburb is principally busy with the noisome manufacture of—soap!

Strange are such signs of the change as the gragment of a colossal statue that must once have stood over a fountain in an architectural garden of the sixteenth century. A broken wall clings to it; it is a kind of Hercules; below it runs the grimy rail; thin and mean houses blacken slowly around, full of unclean people, and nearby chimneys send up their smoke. The Hercules is high up on what was once a terrace, but he will soon be found to be in the way, and worth the while of a demolisher. This defiant statue, in a sixteenth-century attitude, with his fountain, the nymphs, the long line of terrace wall that fulfilled the design of some majestic palace all gone, and a black blur between him and the sea, is a signal of the change from the side of the past.

King Pandion he is dead,
All his friends are lapped in lead.

Perhaps the fountain of our Hercules, if it still lives, hides in a leaden pipe. This, I say, is a signal of the past. Let me take as a signal of the present the "Vico Enrico Ibsen." A vico, called vicolo in Rome, is a very small street; being old, it is always narrow and tall, full of beautiful shadow or more beautiful reflected lights; it leads darkling to the dazzling sea, or landward steeply to the cultivated hills. It generally bore, until now, the name of a church or of the saint of its dedication. This one, in a mere village of the coast, had the name of a convent. The municipalities have been hard at work renaming every street in Italy—the smallest hill village has not escaped. This convent has been suppressed, and it is with a shout of honest derision that the traveler reads its exquisitely inappropriate new name: not a house counts less than 300 years of age: Vico Enrico Ibsen.

Genoa is a Renaissance city; her incomparable street—the most beautiful in the world, renamed "Garibaldi," after having worn its name of "New" until the word had assumed a noble historic irony—is typical of everything showy and majestic in the age of conscious "style." Some of its palaces are of the very central Renaissance before the inevitable commonplace set in; and everything conspicuous in the great solid town makes proclamation of the fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth centuries. Evelyn could find little, indeed, here to contemn as merely of "Gotiq ordonance." The Middle Ages are, as in Rome, effaced, overthrown, overridden, shouted down, driven underground; or else overlooked and spared in some rare tower, or the mosaic-lined apse of some heavily-gilded church. Yet even in Genoa, as in Rome, one may seek and find a trace of the great medieval centuries. A belfry, a tower, lifts itself among the roofs, a doorway with a St. John the Baptist deeply carved in its stone lurks in the profound little streets. And in the port, on the quays themselves, where a great commerce screams and roars, one may come suddenly upon the eleventh and twelfth centuries, partly restored, it is true, but restored by an artist who has elsewhere—notably in Piedmont, at the Italian outlet of Alpine valleys—achieved the inexplicably difficult feat of scholarly and spirited reproduction. Many sentences by many men have gone forth for restoration and against it—the weightier, perhaps, against it; and though I am happy to present the thanks of England to the Commendatore Alfredo d'Andrade for what he has done in keeping ancient buildings from destruction, I will not venture to speak for any one but myself in praising his reconstructions; and in principle I might hesitate, but for the extraordinary faithful spirit of adoption by which he makes medieval invention his own, working like a copyist with the delight of a designer. Moreover, all the mason's and bricklayer's work is done with tools of the ancient form, and not a brick is of modern shape. Moreover, again, he dates his restorations, so that their exactitude shall not deceive the antiquary of centuries to come; for his work is to stay.

On the old harbor, then, stands a hall of St. George of the Middle Ages, a machicolated building of brick, with a vast tiled floor. Here was done, and will be done again, the government of the harbor. Does England remember that Genoa financed her in those centuries—and not her only? Does England know that her St. George came to her from Genoa? Venice held the gorgeous east in fee, but Genoa held the needy west. And close to this glorious hall, facing the harbor, stands the ancient colonnade under which the poorer Genoese of the port open their little sheltered shops, not for the stranger, but for themselves; ironware and tin, and hats and clothes, and food of the local taste, cakes of chestnut flour fried in oil, are sold there in the intimacy of the place. The arcade is low and round-arched, and looks old enough; but the eye of the architect has discovered of late that it is much older yet, that pointed arches have been built up along its whole length, and that this most Genoese of little thoroughfares is in fact Gothic. The low arches are therefore to be abolished, and the old roof is to be found again. It is brick, it will not look Genoese, and I confess I am unreasonably sorry, albeit this is not a work of constructive restoration.

Pushing on, whether to the west or to the east of the city, one finds the exquisite cultivated country, unspoiled, unsmirched; one looks through olive and cypress from the steep road straight into the blue sea. The factories have but postponed the country a little; one thing, however, they have not postponed, but destroyed—the suburban palace with its gardens to the south. The peasant's house, the peasant's belfried church, the tune of the bells, the little terraced lands, the heavenly colors of sea and sky, are to be found again, a mile or two away; but never again the august square houses, with their orange blossoms breathing out to sea.

An Arctic Winter.

SOME COLD WEATHER EXPERIENCED IN RUSSIA.

From London Evening Standard.

SUCH a winter as this has not been recorded in Russia for seventy years past, and can only be received by those few who have traveled in the Arctic region. Mere cold, of course, is nothing to the Russian. A temperature of minus 38 degrees Fahr.—70 degrees of frost!—does not upset the equanimity of the Russian; indeed, in Siberia the thermometer records nearly a hundred degrees of frost every year. The feature of the recent wave of cold was that low temperature was accompanied by wind of considerable force. Not even the hardened Russian can face 50 to 70 degrees of frost with a wind! Meteorologists talk of some vast disturbance near the pole which sent the icy blast careering joyously over the bleak plains of Russia. Such a phenomenon was last experienced in 1836. A hundred years before that was another phenomenal frost—the same year in which the Thames was frozen over and bullocks were roasted whole on the ice. On the Neva a palace entirely of ice was erected that year for the amusement of the court, and among other curious features were cannon of ice out of which salutes were fired with ordinary gunpowder!

As a rule, in Russia, when the thermometer registers anything below zero Fahr. (32 degrees of frost) there is no wind, not a breath stirring anywhere. Such frost is thoroughly enjoyable, the pure, hard air, always dry in central Russia, clears the lungs and seems to fill you with new store of health and freshness. Frost is the principal sanitary engineer of the Russian empire, and no better could be desired. Everything is deodorized, and presumably every dangerous germ is killed. Full advantage is taken by Russians of this peculiar form of sanitary engineering, and spring in Russia is, in consequence, a season to be shunned by sensitive noses and delicate constitutions. Frost, too, makes all the roads of communication that Russia has, away from the very sparsely scattered lines of railway; practically all the carting of the empire is done over roads made by frost and nature. The only outdoor work that can be carried on in a Russian winter is woodcutting. Those who cannot engage in the lucrative trade of preparing the stores of chopped timber which is the fuel of the greater part of Russia, must find employment in carting or betake themselves to the nearest town to find some odd jobs of indoor work. The overwhelming majority of the rural population of Russia simply sits on the stove all winter, or plaits bast shoes, carves simple toys, and the like, but for the most part rural Russia hibernates—"takes it out in sleep."

This year a ceaseless wind, rushing to and fro over the dead levels of a Russian landscape, always icy cold from whatever quarter it may come, robs winter of all its pleasures and adds hardships even from the well-to-do. Happily the snowfall was abundant and early. In the country the peasants heap up, with the wind to help, great glacis of snow against their rough timber huts, and the snow keeps them warm. In the towns every street is piled with mountains of snow ten feet high, restricting the fairway of traffic to half the usual breadth of road. All this must be gradually carted away to the nearest river bank before a thaw comes on, and the shaggy little horses, ungroomed since the day they were born, are busy all day long. The men work with spades made entirely of wood, and wear huge fingerless gloves of leather, each as big and as yellow as a brief bag, while they shovel the mountains of snow into sledges with an edging of wickerwork that gives them the appearance of huge dilapidated market baskets. Bonfires burn at all street corners, round which the policeman on point duty, the errand boy, and the casual loafer stand thawing out frozen toes and trying to gain comfort in the cheery sight of the blaze. In Moscow the municipality has this year erected hundreds of little huts warmed to fever heat with stoves. Between these and the government drink monopoly shops a great many worthy citizens who, but for that terrible wind, would be seeking work in a score of different directions, hover to and fro. Vodka is consumed in astounding quantities, and, whatever the advocates of temperance may say, it has the property of enabling the generous drinker to withstand the icy blast for hour after hour—in fact, so long as the stuff is procurable. But there is no credit in the government drink monopoly shops, and when they close the streets become strangely deserted by all but the few well-to-do who care to face the cold on business or pleasure bent.

The only garment that will keep out frost and wind is the Siberian dokha: ordinary fur-lined coats, with huge collars embedding the head covered with well wadded fur cap, are useful only for short drives; for anything over a few miles the dokha is indispensable. This is preferably reindeer hide without and some heavy, close fur within, and is made large enough to envelop the wearer with clothes and ordinary fur coat, if need be, as well. Of late years the dokha, somewhat reduced in size and made to look something less shapeless, has been imported into England by Russian travelers as a motor coat, for which purpose it is effectual and inexpensive as such things go.

It is astonishing what extremes and sudden changes the human frame will accustom itself to. You sit in a warm house at a temperature of 68 degrees Fahr. one moment, and the next you are out in the street breathing with exhilaration generous lungfuls of air at minus 40 degrees Fahr., a difference of over a hundred degrees between the opening of the first door and the closing of the third—you always have at least three doors to get in and out of during a Russian winter. The snow crunches under your high felt overboots, and the skilled in Russian weather signs can tell pretty nearly by the sound of the snow crunch underfoot the number of degrees of frost. The wind blows cruelly and nips white in a minute any exposed part—the tip of an ear or a nose you have forgotten to rub at frequent intervals. Birds fall on the wing and fall dead, hard and cold before they reach the ground. Even the hardy Russian horse will not stand very long in this wind, although at the same temperature without a wind a Russian horse will stand half a day without visible impatience. Every house is pouring forth volumes of smoke, for every household is consuming about twice the normal winter allowance of fuel, and the smoke streams out horizontally from the chimneys and lies low over the streets to be dispersed anon by the ceaseless wind.

Most of all to be pitied in this weather are the wretched firemen. With the double firing in every house conflagrations are frequent, and out the fire brigade must go. It takes five minutes to break up the iron-hard snow over the fire plugs, which are sunk deep down and housed in dung and matting. When the water is got at the flow must never stop a moment or the hose pipes freeze solid. Nothing can be touched without thick leather gloves, as the skin freezes to everything metallic. Imagine the tragedy of a fire in such weather! The country house of Count Tolstoy (not the writer) recently took fire in the early morning. It was twenty miles from town and a fire brigade. In the basement were a number of hunting dogs. In the lower rooms slept the count and several men friends who had been celebrating Russian Christmas. In the bedrooms above slept the ladies of this house party. The house was of wood, and the flames had got firm hold before the alarm was given. Six persons perished, and their bones were indistinguishable from those of the dogs when the house fell in and all were buried together. The Countess Tolstoy escaped. Picture to yourself the manner of her escape. The thermometer registered on that night minus 40 degrees, Fahr.—72 degrees of frost!—and there was that pitiless wind ever blowing. The Countess leaped out of bed, and, without staying to put on a thing, set to work to break a way through the double window frames, and leaped on to a balcony. From this an iron ladder led to the ground. In the terrible frost and wind, just as she left her bed, she managed to get down that ladder and run half a mile to the nearest hut. Now, every time you touch metal in such a frost, you leave skin, and perhaps even flesh, behind sticking to the iron.

Picture also the fate of the famine-stricken peasants in such weather. They had begun to burn their roofs and the outworks of their huts a month ago to keep the hearth warm. They are now sacrificing entire huts for fuel, and crowding together many families in one hut, where they burn the deserted home piecemeal for warmth. And in these overcrowded huts, shared by the cattle for warmth, typhus, scurvy, and other hunger-bred diseases are running riot. King Frost is Russia's sole sanitary engineer, but even he cannot save her from the epidemics bred of famine. And these dread scourges are beginning to reach the towns. A terrible winter, terrible in all ways!

The Drillers' Coach.

IN WHICH THE COACH ACHIEVED THE GREATER VICTORY.

By a Special Contributor.

IT was Miners' Day at the Territorial Fair. At 10 o'clock in the morning the crowds were dense. From every pueblo and mining camp in the Territory the people had gathered to see prize pigs and poultry, to buy lemonade and doughnuts at outrageous prices, and to witness the races and the drilling contests. While the "squawk" of little red bladders and the tooting of silly tin horns mingled with the cry of fakers and the blatent bray of donkeys, a man on the race track was calling through a megaphone: "Jack Sanders is wanted at the judges' stand!"

Again he trumpeted his message: "Jack Sanders is wanted at once!"

Jack Sanders, however, was having a bad quarter of an hour in the Mineral Building, out of hearing of everything except a young girl's "no."

Perhaps in the same fear that moved the artist to write beneath his drawing, "This is a horse," the little room in which the young couple stood had been labeled "Art Exhibit." From the wall a low-spirited cow gazed mournfully at the young man. Her color was improbable and at variance with the color scheme of the sunset which illumined her. Jack had never seen a cow exactly like this one; but she fitted into his mood, as did the three prim callas, suggestive of coffins and early death, depicted as rising stiffly from a vase on a table. In a good light, too, was hung a picture of the highest mountain in the vicinity. In a desert of foreground loomed a dozen suagaras, double the height of the mountain, each one. But the perspective of the picture was in keeping with Jack's present mental outlook. In the background stood Honor, Loyalty, Friendship; they had dwindled until they were almost beyond his horizon. In the foreground loomed the one thing that was perfect and much to be desired, and out of all proportion to everything else in sight dainty Rosalie Gardner.

"I'm mighty sorry, Ros'lie. We've been friends so long, I kind of hoped——"

"You'd no call to hope, Jack." Her tone was discouraging, though not unkind.

"I know. It's Lou Rankin you've always favored."

The girl's cheeks grew pink.

"But how long can you put up with things at home? 'Tain't in nature to bear it forever."

Perhaps by the same mental process with which Jack bridged his two speeches, Rosalie comprehended all that he had left unspoken.

"It won't be forever," she answered, a little resentfully. "If Lou wins today——"

"Then you've give him your word?" demanded the man jealously.

She nodded. "If he wins, we're going to be married right away," she went on with downcast eyes. "If not, then as soon as he's got a little money ahead."

"I've been savin' my wages three years, Rosie, so's to have something when I asked you——"

"You didn't know me three years ago!" she protested, dimpling. "You must have been saving for some other girl."

"No, I wasn't!" he contradicted her hotly. "'Twas for you. I did think of marryin' before I knew you. Not any one in particular—but," tenderly, "a man knockin' about the world sometimes thinks of a home and a wife before ever he sees the girl he wants."

Rosie's eyes grew softer.

"An' the first time I saw you, dear, I knew you was the girl I'd been thinkin' about for a wife—an' savin' for."

Rosalie stiffened at this repetition of the word "saving." Jack and Lou had been mine mates for years, comrades in luck and out. Both made good wages, and Jack had a modest bank account; but Lou the spendthrift, Lou the debonair, the lovable—Lou to whom all things might be forgiven, had let his earnings slip through his fingers, counting always in the big western way on making his "pile" at one lucky stroke. He would locate and sell a mine, or he would sell some other man's mine on a commission; he had half a dozen irons in the fire; but the fire had died out, leaving his irons to cool in the ashes. Jack had not meant to be offensive in dwelling over his own savings, but the implied reproach to Lou, though unintentional, served to bring his hearing to an end abruptly.

"It's no use your talking, Jack," said the girl decisively. "Please take me up to the grand stand now."

"All right," assented Jack grimly. "I want to see that contest. I want to see Lou lose the purse. I hate his very name."

The girl turned to him gently, laying her hand on his arm without a word. Though she said nothing, he felt that she understood him, and made allowance for his outburst. He gulped back something that seemed about to choke him, and together they walked to the grand stand. They got seats in the front row, where they could look down upon the preparations for the double-handed drilling contest in which Lou Rankin and Ben Savage, the best drillers in the mines of their county, were to compete with the Territorial champions for a purse of $2000. If they won, Lou's share would be, not wealth, but enough. It would give Rosalie a home. Immediately below the grand stand stood a rude stage, bare of everything except huge block of granite—the rock the drillers were to work in.

"Is Lou's arm well again?" asked Jack with an effort. His usually open face was clouded.

"Yes."

"Who's going to mark time for Savage and him?"

"Luke Wright," answered the girl, her eyes wandering out over the track and across the green circle of grass it bordered—away to the purple hills and her castles in Spain.

"Luke Wright! Why, he's drunker'n sin this minute!" exclaimed Jack, with anything but regret.

"Drunk!" echoed the girl in dismay. "Oh, Jack, who will be their coach?"

Before Jack could frame an answer, the man with the megaphone trumpeted once more. "Jack Sanders is wanted at the judges' stand! Jack Sanders, Jack Sanders, Jack Sanders!"

He got to his feet with reluctance. "I'll be right back, Rosie. Keep my seat."

But he was not right back. Rankin and Savage met him at the steps.

"For God's sake, Jack, come on!" cried Lou. "The contest begins in five minutes, and there's not a soul here to put ginger into a man at the pinch. Luke's drunk, and I'd rather have Judas himself at my elbow than Johnson."

The driller had Jack by the arm and was hurrying him down the steps. Jack made no resistance; but—why should he put "ginger" into another man for the purpose of helping him win the girl he wanted himself? He had seconded Lou in many a contest where there was nothing at stake but a reputation, and helped him to win. Well, it would be quite as easy to assist at his losing. He could make him lose. Lou looked up, caught Rosalie's glance and lifted his old sombrero, while Jack sent his teeth into his lip with a muttered oath.

On each side of the granite block was a solid platform, level with the top of the rock. On the platform were a number of chisel-shaped drills, in graduated lengths, two heavy hammers and a bucket of water. The champions, who were to drill first, vaulted lightly to their places. Their record was forty-two inches in fifteen minutes. They were to drill today for the same length of time, after which Savage and Lou were to follow under similar conditions. Their seconds were beside them; on the ground below stood the official timekeeper, watch in hand; and at half-past 10 precisely he started them with a word.

Sanders watched the drillers, and listened to the comments of the miners crowding around. "They're shiftin' too often; that wasn't over a quarter a minute," came from one. And, "They're both changin' tools," muttered another in disapproval.

Once, in shifting positions, they fumbled the drill. It followed the hammer upward, and they lost a stroke. Once their drill packed, causing a second's delay. Still, they were doing magnificent work, and, toward the last, their coach quickened the stroke with encouraging words. After time had been called and measurements made, the blackboard showed that their drills had sunk into the rock to a depth of forty-two and one-eighth inches. The crowd went wild: the men had beaten their own record.

Jack stole a look at Lou's face. Not much hope of bettering that, though Lou and his mate had drilled together until they knew each other's motions as a cow pony knows its rider's unspoken thought; while it had been evident that the champions were not always working in perfect harmony.

Both Savage and Lou were in excellent form. Lou had had his right arm bruised in an accident at the mines less than a month before, but it was not a serious injury. The arm, indeed, was apparently as strong as ever, though occasionally it cramped.

Rankin and Savage mounted the platform. The man whose duty it was to keep the rock wet squatted close to the water bucket, while Sanders, watch in hand, took his place on Rankin's right. Fresh water and new drills had been brought, and the men were ready for action.

Jack looked toward the grand stand, to see Rosalie waving her handkerchief, her eyes bright, her cheeks flushed, her face like a star of hope. He knew what the contest meant to her: the man she loved and immediate release from the tyranny exercised over her by a stepmother and two stepsisters. Well, she need not lack for a home; half the men in camp were wanting her. If Rankin did not win this match perhaps she would marry the next in her esteem.

The drillers were in blue overalls and sleeveless shirts of gauze. As they stood waiting, admirable specimens of skilled American laborers, Lou swung his hammer in a trial stroke. A murmur of admiration ran from lip to lip. He was a muscular man, justly proportioned, tall and stalwart, and the muscles of his arms played smoothly under the skin. He had thrown aside his hat, and his brown hair crisped about his bronzed and handsome face. He turned to Jack with a certain air of reliance that was almost childlike in its confidence.

"Wet up the rock," ordered Jack of the man by the bucket, "or they'll be getting chips into their eyes." Then, feeling the necessity for action of some kind, he stooped to examine the drills.

"At the rate you fellers drill, you'll have to change tools every other minute," he said forcibly. "If you take half-minute shifts apiece at the hammer that'll let one of you handle all of the drills and lessen the risk of a fumble. The way Lou stands he can use his right hand for the new drills, so it had better be him."

In giving this advice, Jack was trying to salve his own conscience; trying to pave the way for telling himself, after defeat, that he had done everything possible to insure success—that success which he meant should not come.

Lou knelt, a short drill in his hands, and placed the chisel-like end to the rock.

"One, two, three; strike!"

Once, twice, and again, Savage put all his muscle into strong, heavy strokes on the drill. And here accuracy and precision meant quite as much as force or swiftness; for, one mis-stroke, and he might have crushed the hands that were assisting him. Slowly at first the hammer fell; then, as the drill, turned in Rankin's skillful hands, sank, little by little, into the resistant granite, the blows became more rapid.

"Change!" called Sanders, looking at his open watch.

Lou dropped the drill, caught up his hammer, and followed Savage's last blow, without the friction of a second lost. Savage dropped to his knees and had the drill firmly in both hands when the next blow fell—in perfect time. Lou worked with every ounce of strength he had; his blows drove the drill steadily downward; while Savage "churned" the tool deftly.

"Change!" And once more Lou was on his knees, turning the drill as before. Suddenly his left hand shot up with the drill, now too short for the depth attained. He flung it upward and sidelong, at the same moment catching up a longer tool in his right hand and flinging it into place. It was so swiftly done that all the crowd saw was the flash of the discarded tool as it fell to the ground.

The men were working with strength and skill, but the people freely voiced the sentiment that they were working hardly fast enough. Jack knew that they were not, but a devil within him prompted him not to quicken their stroke. The instinct of the primitive male was strong within him. He wanted Rosie: perhaps he could have her if Rankin lost in the contest. He had heard the miners' murmurs; so had the grand stand. He looked up to meet a look of distress on Rosalie's face.

"Change!" he called again, mechanically; but as Lou, who was on his knees, sprang up and sent his hammer ringing down upon the drill, Jack seemed to hear again: "I'd rather have Judas himself at my elbow." A sense of shame overcoming his original intention, he shouted, close to Lou's ear: "Faster! A little faster!"

He nodded to the man opposite himself, and the two raised their arms in time with Lou's. "Quicken that blow!" he called, his arms going up and down. "Steady! So. Keep it up."

"Change!" Again the men altered positions; again the drill flashed out and down; and the time was speeding. The quicker stroke was beginning to tell on Lou's bruised arm. When he took the hammer again his blow was lighter than before.

"Hit it harder!" commanded his coach. The driller obeyed, but a spasm of pain shot over his face. His arm had cramped.

They had been working ten minutes under the beating sun. Savage's face was purple; water streamed down his cheeks. Lou's face showed pallid through the tan.

"Change!" Again Lou had the sledge. His teeth were set; his arms moved up and down with the regularity of a piston. Three minutes more, and the tale would be told. Jack, watching, saw the look that had settled over his friend's face, and knew what had happened. For a moment a flash of savage joy gleamed in his eyes. But it was not physical distress alone that was written on Lou's countenance.

Jack had seen a similar look on his face once before, when death seemed staring at them both. They two and another man had been caught in a landslide. They were unhurt, but Jack's feet had been held by two heavy stones in such a way that he could not move. Lou and the third man were trying to loosen the stones, when they saw a second slide start, far up the mountain. "Leave him and run for your life!" the third man had called—the cruelest speech that had ever fallen on the prisoner's ears. Lou had looked up coolly, with: "Run, you, if you want to." The coward had sped down the hill; Lou, giving a final wrench, freed his friend, gathered him into his arms, and rolled with him down the slope—ahead of the slide. At the recollection, Jack's voice rang out with a sound to nerve both heart and arm.

"Change!" he ordered. "And faster, Savage, faster!

Up and out flashed another drill like magic, while the grand stand thundered its approval. Again Lou was on his feet and swinging the hammer. He looked as if he could hardly stand. Now was the time when he needed the "ginger."

"It's only three minutes more, Louie, and we must have that money. Lam her, man, oh, lam her! That's it! We'll beat the record yet. Strike, strike, strike!" Jack kept his arms in motion, quickening Lou's stroke by word and action. "Change!" Now Jack was on his knees. "Churn that drill, churn hard and fast!"

Another change of drills was followed by another round of applause.

"You're down and going farther. Work, work, work!" So Jack kept it up until the last half minute, when Lou was wielding the sledge again. His face was drawn and distorted. But Jack steeled his heart against false pity.

"Only thirty seconds more. Git in good licks. Forget that arm and swing the hammer. Steady, now, and hit 'er hard. And faster, damn it, faster! Do you know you stand to lose? Don't you need the money? If you drop that hammer I'll shoot you in the head and let the crows pick out your heart. Lam her, lam her, lam'er! It's for a wife you're workin', Louie. It's for Ros'lie, do you hear me? Ros'lie, Ros'lie, Ros'lie!"

A thousand tongues seemed to repeat the word; the hammer rang to the tune of "Ros'lie." The arms of the seconds were moving in time, their voices were urging the men almost beyond endurance.

"You're almost through. Hit once again, and hit harder!"

"Time!"

At the word Louis dropped his hammer and reeled. Jack caught him in his arms and threw a cupful of water into his face. He was himself in a moment and, plunging his arms into the bucket. As he dragged on his clean black shirt he muttered gratefully:

"You're the damndest good feller that ever lived, Sanders. I'd have dropped that hammer twice if it hadn't o' been for you."

The blackboard was flying the record: forty-two and one-quarter. They had won by an eighth of an inch. A thundering noise was in Jack's ears; the grand stand seemed swaying before his eyes. Rosalie had left her seat, and Lou was heading for the stairs to meet her, when suddenly Jack sprang after him.

"Shake hands, old man. And tell Rosie I congratulated you."

The Reconciliation.

STORY OF STRONG, TRUE MAN AND A FOOLISH WOMAN.

By a Special Contributor.

HE was stifled within the narrow confines of his hotel room, after his wild, free life in Alaska. Moreover, he wanted to get out into the bigness of the out-of-doors, where there was room to breathe deeply and think clearly. The timeworn, yellowed envelope, mislaid in some frontier postoffice, had brought with its message a floodtide of memories thronging up from the past—not all of them pleasant ones. Still ringing in his ears were his wife's parting words: "I never want to see you again," when, after almost unendurable months, even his pacific nature had worn out its long-suffering, and he had been forced to give up the struggle.

Now that he was here again, among the foothills of the Sierra Madre Mountains, he dreaded, on the one hand, seeing his wife, and on the other hand he feared he might find himself cheated by some jugglery of human destinies, and awake to the fact that the hopes dominating him, and giving him glimpses of something transcending any previous experience, were but idle. So he had come out into the leafy depths of the cañon to drink deep of the strength-inspiring soul of nature, before taking the step which he divined was to give him henceforth a new life to live—whether of good or ill, he could not tell.

All at once, a bit of color flashed out into view, and because he was so filled with thoughts of a child he had not seen, he at once became interested and absorbed in this one he saw descending the cañon's side. As though fascinated, he watched the bright golden head bobbing, and the faded pink gingham fluttering fearlessly along the rocky path high up on the precipitous wall, which just opposite swept out into an immense, roofless semi-circle.

"She's jest about the right size, and she's light-complected and yaller-haired, same's I was when I was a kid—but 'tain't noways likely she's her," he mused wistfully. Then he gazed more eagerly upward, as the little creature turned suddenly, and ran back down the narrow path directly toward him. As she neared him, she changed her flushed and panting run to a breathless walk on tiptoe, and she bent gracefully this way and that, in a pretty effort to catch sight of something in the bushes on a ledge in the wall a few feet above the stream.

"Sh-h," she warned, one forefinger on her lips, the other admonishing him. And so she stood, like a fluttering butterfly poised on a swaying flower, until a whir-r-r and rush of wings from the brush freed her from her listening attitude. She turned a glowing, rapturously smiling face toward him, and slipping a tiny, soft hand into his big, horny one, she asked joyously:

"Oh, did you see it? That's fifteen of that kind I've seen today! Don't you just love them?"

At her first words, he tingled from head to foot. From only one person, in his rough, untutored existence, had he heard the cultured accent of the easterner. But here it was, undeniably, and it sounded strangely attractive, coupled with the childish voice.

"How old are you?" he asked, huskily. He did not dare ask her name.

"I'm seven yeahs old," she answered, with great pride. "In seven moah months I'll be eight."

He moistened his parched lips, and passed one hand unsteadily over the silky, shimmering hair. Unconsciously, the whole being of the man was crying gropingly that it might be true—that it might be true! Twice he opened his lips, and twice he kept back the question which crowded to be asked. At last he spoke:

"What is your name—your first name, I mean," he hastily amended.

"Lenoah," she replied, looking at him in grave wonder.

He felt unreal. It seemed too good to believe. Yet it must—it must be true. With the conviction, came a sharp anxiety as to how she would receive him.

"Lenore"—he did not know his own voice—"do you know where Mis' Marks lives—Mis' Allegra Marks?"

She laughed gleefully "Why, that's my mothah! Of co'se, I know wheah my mothah lives."

The world seemed reeling away from him. He was almost too dazed to think. How could he tell this dainty, fairy-like thing that he—burly, brawny, unlettered Sid Marks was—he couldn't. It was that Allegra had always scornfully found so amusing—his illiteracy, his uncouthness. He leaned back against the rock, and looked down in awkward helplessness into the delicate, glowing face raised earnestly to his. She seemed to recognize that something was wrong, and with a desire to comfort, she sociably continued the conversation by asking, with simple directness:

"What is youah name?"

"It is—Sidney Marks," he replied, slowly, waiting, yet fearing to hear her exclamation:

"Why, it is just the same as ouahs! Pehhaps weah relatives!"

The glad surprise in her voice reassured him. Dropping on one knee, he placed his arm about her shoulder.

"Lenore," he said, his voice breaking with the wonder of it all, and tender with yearning, "Lenore, I'm your father."

"Oh! Ah' you quite, quite suah?" she cried breathlessly. "You see, I've wanted a real fathah foh so long that I shouldn't like to be disappointed."

"Yes, little one, I'm sure of it—sure as I am that I'm Sid Marks. I guess I'd be more disappointed than you, if we should get slipped up on this deal. But they ain't no chance fer that."

"Then, come on, let's go and see mothah!" she exclaimed, trembling with excitement. "She always laughed at me for asking God for a fathah. But I did it, every night, when I said my prayahs. I'm so glad he sent you, because I love you."

Kneeling there, on the rock-strewn floor of the cañon, holding his daughter in his arms, with her shining head resting on his shoulder, a great, throbbing wave of thankfulness swept him away into realms of lofty purpose and singleness of heart and life. Yet Sid Marks, among the rough miners who had for years been his companions, had been the butt of good-humored chaffing for his clean life, his clean tongue, and his, to them, dainty personal habits.

As they emerged from the cañon, Lenore chatted on, happily pointing out the beauties she loved, as one delights to show for the first time to a dear friend the haunts and scenes which hold clustered about them some of the sweetness of personal experience. What a wealth of nimble imagination she had—what a far insight into the inspiration nature never wearies of offering to unappreciative eyes, dulled to the glory before and above by too constant searching downward for the earth-soiled yellow gold. Descending to the mesa, she led him over to the edge of a shelving steep where town and village drowsed below them in the haze-softened San Gabriel Valley, while above circled the mountains, lifting their snow-crowned summits up—up, until the peaks seemed to float away in the dazzling mysteries of the glory poured about them by the long rays of the sun, setting in a rose and violet and orange sweep of clouds. He felt the wondrous spell of it all, and he knew the little child felt it, too. She stood quiet now, with the beauty of the sunset reflected in her face. He had never before thought much about sunsets, and even now, the marvel of the child nature he subtly recognized as the greater miracle.

When the brilliancy had faded, she breathed a little happy sigh, and said, regretfully: "I think we'd bettah go now—oh, look! look! the mountains ah' going to bed eahly tonight. See the funny, little, fleecy gray shawls they are wrapping about theah heads." She clapped her hands in glee. Then, becoming serious, she crept closer to him, and said, with a touch of anxiety: "You will come and live with us, now, won't you, fathah? All the fathahs I know live wheah theah children live. You'll come, won't you?"

To tell the truth, up to this moment, consideration of Allegra Marks' part in his plans had been largely crowded out. The future was still hazy. When he had come to seek his child, he had not contemplated such a thing as a reconciliation with his wife. His brief, stormy experience with the only woman he had known well had made him shy of being caught again in the toils of married misery. But within the past hour, his soul—cramped by the narrow years behind, but kept from becoming petty by the strong strain of integrity running through it—had been finding itself, and was in an upheaval which whirled him about in a vortex of emotions. Had Sid Marks been familiar with the poets, he might have felt the meaning of the line, "Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul." He was unconsciously, and therefore, the more surely, learning the secret of real living. The first thought of again living the old life with Allegra Marks treated him to a metaphorical dash of icy water—then, close upon this involuntary recoil, had come the thought that here he could prove himself worthy of winning the heart of Lenore. Again this thought, colored as it was with selfishness, was replaced by the longing to do something to make his child happier, even though she might not know what it cost him. Having put his hand to the plow, he was not the man to look back. He squared his shoulders with a buoyant sense of having the will to do a noble thing, and the courage to carry it through to its completion.

He looked down at her, and softly answered: "Yes, little girl, I'm going to live with you now."

It was not so much his dense man's conceit, which left out of his decision all recognition of having to reckon with Allegra's will, as it was his all-possessing feeling that the child, innocent, and deserving of the best life could give, was the only one to be considered.

At his words, she skipped at his side in an abandonment of joy.

He was just reflecting—and he was glad the thought had come after his determination had been reached—that Allegra must have improved, or she could scarcely have left Lenore's spirit so free and light, when he noticed that they were approaching a well-remembered clump of eucalyptus trees, beneath which nestled a tiny, weather-beaten bungalow. An air of neglect pervading the place struck a premonitory chill to his heart.

Lenore's shrill treble, crying "Mothah! mothah!" in the utmost eagerness, brought in answer as shrill, though far less pleasing, a response. And here was the same New England accent which fell so charmingly from the baby lips.

"You hurry in here, if you want any supper. I've a good mind to send you to bed without any; then you may stop your mooning about the mountains."

Lenore, with tear-filled eyes, and lips quivering, looked mutely at Sid for comfort. Then, bravely choking back her sobs, and quickly forgiving this rude dissipating of the blessing which had descended from the mountains, she whispered, as though pleading for belief in her own words:

"I don't think mothah feels quite well today. I don't think she evah does when she talks like that."

Another season of illumination came to Sid's soul. In a flash of understanding, he saw the cause of Lenore's quick acceptance of him. Her little starved heart welcomed every ray of brightness, turning the simplest things into causes for rejoicing, seeking comfort from her greater mother, Nature, when her other mother failed her childish faith. He knew now that, come what might, at whatever cost, he must stand by Lenore. Instinctively, he paused, still clasping the little hand, and waited until a slatternly figure appeared in the doorway.

Sorrow had not chastened the heart, nor had it lent any dignity to the expression and bearing of Allegra Marks. It never occurred to her to look out and beyond her own misery, and up to the mountains, to breathe, "from whence cometh our help." She had so long hugged to herself her woes and grievances, that she was very nearly in the condition of enjoying her unhappiness.

In the darkening day, she did not at once discern who her visitor was, but as they now drew nearer, she burst into a harsh laugh.

"Oh, mothah!" implored Lenore, the tears again threatening, "this is my fathah. God did send him, after all. And he's going to live heah with us," she added, confident that this piece of information would restore her mother's good humor.

"He is, is he?" asked her mother, whirling toward him in the deepening dusk, and addressing him directly. "Well, you're seven years too slow."

He quietly explained his long silence, gaining self-possession as he went on. Her only answer was a derisive laugh, followed by a bitter tirade of denunciation. He was eyeing her steadily, and she at last ceased, with the irritating conviction that this was not the same man she had goaded into anger, worn out by her reproaches, and chilled by her ambitionless, effortless housekeeping. She had lost the power to even disturb him. As the knowledge grew upon her, a dull fury shook her.

"Come in here, Lenore," she called out sharply, "and don't stand dawdling there."

The baby started to obey, with a piteous glance of appeal, first in her mother's face, then in her father's. The latter, now with perfect mastery of himself, lightly raised her in his arms, and strained her closely to his breast.

"Not a step shall she go into that house," he said between clenched teeth.

The woman stared. But Lenore, clasping Sid's neck tightly, whispered coaxingly: "Please let me, fathah, and you stay, too."

"I can't, birdie," he replied, huskily, "father can't stay now, but father'll take you with him."

"But how can I leave my mothah?" she moaned.

"Is she good to you?" asked Sid, in a strained voice.

"Oh, yes," assured the child, "only sometimes she's very tiahed, as she is now."

"And would you rather stay with her than go with father?"

The poor child burst into a storm of weeping. "I want you both," she sobbed, over and over.

"Listen, then, little one. Father will come and see you every day, and you can go walking with him. I'll build me a little house just up by the cañon. I can get a strip of land there, from a man I know that wants to sell. "Won't that be almost as good as living together?"

A rainbow smile through her tears, accompanied by a most ecstatic hug, was answer enough. His wife had disappeared into the house, and setting Lenore upon the ground, he bade her good-by, assuring her repeatedly that he would come to see her tomorrow.

He lingered about for some time, listening to catch some sound which might indicate that Lenore was being further scolded, but hearing nothing, he at last strode away, with a heavy heart. At the edge of the eucalyptus grove, he paused in the darkness, and looked back long and earnestly at the glimmer through the trees. He had thought all interest in life for him had gone, save that of money-getting, yet here he found life held an interest far outreaching any he could have foreknown. With full heart, he bared his head, and looked up at the star-gemmed curtain of heaven.

"Oh, God!" burst from him, "I thank you for her. Make me worthy to love her and do for her. I ain't never done much praying, but I've always tried to be clean, and I've believed in You. Don't go back on me now. Show me how to make her happy."

Great, wrenching sobs choked him for a moment. Then, furtively wiping his eyes on the back of his hand, as though ashamed that even night should witness his weakness, he turned again, and was lost in the shadows.

Allegra Marks was really more unkind to herself than to Lenore. At times, she was seized with a passion of affectionate endearment, which could not express itself lavishly enough. Again she would be hard and indifferent toward the child, and frequently shrewishly faultfinding. Lenore's sweetness and patient forgiveness seemed sometimes to enrage her.

Reared in luxury in the East, at 22 she had been left fatherless, motherless and penniless, with a college diploma in her hands, but with no real training for meeting the problems of life. Resolved not to be dependent on friends or relatives, she had taken advantage of an opportunity to come to Southern California, where she succeeded in gaining a position as teacher in a village school. The chains of drudgery galled and fretted her, and in desperation she accepted the offer of marriage of Sidney Marks, a tawny young giant, who had brought his invalid mother from Illinois, and had cared for her until her death. With little education, and no wealth except that of strength of character, he had won the respect of all who knew him. He had paid for a piece of land, upon which he had built a rough, but fairly comfortable house. By teaming, selling wood from his eucalyptus grove, and raising enough fruit and vegetables for his own use, he lived a simple, contented life.

But Allegra Marks did not look at existence through the glasses of contentment. She wearied of the frugal round, she chafed at the menial tasks, she rebelled at being cut off from the refinements and luxuries she craved, and above all, she bitterly reminded her husband, almost daily by word or look, of how low she had stooped in marrying a man devoid of education and the polish of the world. The inevitable resulted. Sid Marks, giving her possession of the little homestead, was off for parts unknown. Allegra Marks, hoping for months for the return of the husband whose worth she now appreciated, schooled herself to patience, and with a fortitude she had never before exhibited, lived her lonely life. When Lenore was born, she sent a clipping from the paper, giving notice of her birth. The amount of money which had come regularly from Alaska, gradually increased, but no other notice was ever taken of the announcement. She at last seemed to lose interest in herself, in her life, and sometimes even in Lenore.

Tonight, she stolidly gave the child her supper, and put her at once to bed. Left alone with her thoughts, the past came before her with vivid insistence. And now she had had her opportunity, and had refused to recognize it. What evil genius had power over her, that she should ruthlessly cut herself off from future happiness, when her heart cried out that she wanted to be gracious, to be loved, to be forgiven? At last she rose, and leaving the supper table standing, went to her room. Setting the oil lamp at one side of her mirror, she pitilessly studied every detail of her face, noting the hard lines about her mouth, the listless dullness of the eyes and the untidy hair. She remembered his glance at her soiled and torn apron. With an angry jerk, she threw it into the corner. Blowing out her light, she cast herself, face down, upon her bed, and wept wildly, struggling for self-control.

Next morning, she went about with the same hard look upon her face, but, almost stealthily, she searched out a clean apron. No other concession would she make, and when Sid appeared, with a wonderful doll, which had real hair and eyes that opened and shut, she retired to the farthest side of the house, where she could not hear the raptures of the little mother. When he finally left, without endeavoring to see or speak with her, she was both angry and humiliated. At his next appearance, she was bringing a pail of water from the faucet by the gate. Ungraciously refusing his movement to take it from her, she retreated again from view. And so it went on. Each day, the battle raged within her. When she thought she had conquered she found herself still cold and unresponsive, when next she saw him. The longer she refrained from speaking to him, the more difficult it became, until her tongue seemed unable to break the silence. Each evening, she upbraided herself more furiously for the unlovely traits she was cultivating, and each morning saw her stubbornly resisting her good impulses. Her treatment of Lenore became more and more spasmodic. Withal, there came a gradual change in her appearance. Now she had added a bit of lace at her throat, now a ribbon about her waist, now a neat gingham dress, freshly laundered. And one memorable day, almost abashed before Lenore's openly-expressed admiration, she appeared with her hair becomingly and loosely dressed.

Sid Marks, catching sight of her now and then, noted these changes, and marvelled, but, man-like, never caught the true reason of it all. Her attitude toward Lenore was monstrous in his eyes, for invariably, when Allegra had to be near the child at all in his presence, she preserved a stony, unsympathetic demeanor. He could have forgiven her anything but that. For himself, he could not do enough for Lenore. He showered toys and presents of all descriptions upon her, with what Allegra regarded as ruinous extravagance. They two tramped over mesa and valley and mountain, the child as often perched on his shoulder, as dancing by his side. Lenore, though troubled that her father and mother could not be friends, with the philosophy of childhood had yet accepted the situation, and found happiness in the abounding love of her new and wonderful "fathah," and treasured every kind look or word from her mother.

Thus events ran on for two months more. Sid had by this time read between the lines enough to know that Allegra was deliberately trying to hide from him her love for Lenore. Yet he wondered how she could hold to such flint-like unforgiveness, even to the extent of causing unhappiness to the one she loved most in the world. He would at any time have done what he could to heal the breach between them, for he saw clearly how it would inevitably bring suffering to Lenore in the years to come. Without understanding just what caused the difference, he realized that Allegra was infinitely more attractive than on that first day when she had appeared at the door of the bungalow. The house, too, seemed constantly to acquire an air of homelikeness. He could not know that she had been holding herself up to a standard more and more rigid, that she was conquering herself in every way save in consenting to humble herself sufficiently to say frankly what she now truly believed: "I have been the only one to blame. For Lenore's sake, let us forget our mistakes, and try our lives over."

To Lenore's great sorrow, Sid was compelled to spend a few days of January in San Francisco. Following his departure were three days of heavy downpour, keeping Lenore unusually confined. During this constant companionship, Allegra several times allowed the mask to slip. She betrayed herself by her tone of voice in addressing Lenore, by cooking dainty dishes the child loved best, and in a hundred ways causing the little heart to expand toward her mother as a flower unfolds to the sun. Yet there was always the effort, more and more conscious, to crush down her longings. She had a vague idea that it would be dishonorable to try to displant Sid in the heart of Lenore, even if she were worthy of the mother share for which her mother heart now yearned—and she keenly felt her own unworthiness. In the few weeks in which the father had known his child, he had given her more sunshine than had she, her mother, in her years of opportunity. She wondered with increasing wonder at her hardness and selfishness. She judged herself unmercifully, and found no loophole for excuses. Her hope of reunion died as she came to see herself in a true light. The only penance she could pay was to efface herself for the future, avoid flaunting her own unhappiness, and study to keep the child's greatest love centered on the father, all the while striving to add what she could to the little life.

On the morning of the fourth day, the clouds scattered, and the sun shone out brightly. Lenore begged her mother to go with her into Rubio Cañon, to see the dashing cascades of which she never wearied. To her great delight, her mother quietly consented. Before starting, Lenore carefully tacked to the door post this note: "deerest father we hav gon to roobyo canyun"—explaining the while to her mother that she feared he might return and find them gone.

The cañon was apparently deserted except for themselves. Lenore gaily showed her mother this and that bit of loveliness—the steep sides, thickly carpeted with the resurrection plant, the patches of graceful nodding ferns, the rocks, painted by the unresting waterfalls—but above all, the water itself, foaming, and ever tossing on high its veil of spray, now murmurously chafing against its rocky barriers, now, breaking its bounds, happily singing on its way.

They were climbing a zigzag path which made a detour above the more traveled way, when a stone turned under Lenore's foot, and with a cry of startled terror, she fell over the ledge. After the first tug of awful, numbing fear, Allegra, with a calmness born of the emergency, and of the mother love at last set free, and roused to a frenzy of strength and wisdom, peered over the ledge. Her heart beat a prayer of thankfulness, when she saw Lenore, moaning with pain, but safe for the present, miraculously stayed in her fall by an intervening tree. Safe, but wedged tightly between its trunk and the jagged rock, with one poor little foot doubled under her.

Allegra did not wait to think. Never after could she remember anything of that moment save that she was half way down the cliff, at Lenore's side, lifting her with her right arm, while she steadied herself by the tree with her left; that she was now digging her heels deep into the almost perpendicular bank, in the supreme effort to descend safely the remaining twelve feet to the water's edge. Then came one agonized instant when she felt herself going. She awoke to consciousness, her loosened hair trailing in the water, a horrible, sickening pain in her right arm. It was this shattered arm, she later learned, which had saved Lenore from the cruel rocks. Lenore, her face white and scared, was whimpering faintly, and saying, "Oh mothah! mothah!" and trying to reach Allegra's side. It was the remembrance of the little wrenched foot which roused Allegra out of her delirum of suffering. Crushing back her groans, she raised herself with great difficulty to a sitting position, and then painfully staggered to her feet. She thought confusedly that she must have struck her head, for it hurt her acutely. Only one thought filled her—to get Lenore to the foot of the incline, where help could be found. After many attempts, and half fainting with the pain, she succeeded in lifting Lenore in her left arm, the child sobbing out constantly, "Oh, mothah, deah, you cahn't, you cahn't! It will huht you too much!" and with her right arm hanging, the excruciating torture running through it like liquid fire, she started, stumbling blindly down the trail, in her semi-delirious condition crooning brokenly to the child, unwittingly voicing at last all the love so long repressed: "Mother will take you home, darling. Mother won't let her baby fall again."

Just as the last bit of strength was deserting her trembling limbs, Lenore was taken from her, and she herself, tottering and weak, was upheld by a strong arm. The little note had saved them. Carefully holding Lenore, and gently guiding Allegra, Sid, with rare tact, scarcely to be looked for in the burly fellow, asked no questions, until he had them home, cosily ensconced near a glowing fire, for the early chill of the California evening had fallen before they reached the eucalyptus protected bungalow. Then the story was told. Lenore, in her childish, truthful directness, betrayed the fortitude and passionate tenderness of her mother. Sitting with his hand shading his eyes, Sid listened, and once or twice the unwonted tears glistened in them, and a smarting tightening of the throat caught him, as he thought of how the accident might have ended.

The doctor whom Sid had immediately summoned bustled in, and the broken arm and the bruised foot were dressed and eased.

After the doctor had gone, Sid, tying on a gingham apron, said decidedly: "Now, I'm a go'n' to be chief cook and bottle washer on this here ranch for a few days."

"Oh, fathah!" piped up Lenore, in a weak, but happy voice, "then you will live heah with us, after all, won't you?"

"Ask mother," he replied, using the homely phrase unconsciously. He could not wholly keep his hopes and fears from his voice, for he had inward misgivings, though he had spoken boldly.

There was silence in the room for a little space, Lenore looking out eagerly from her pillows, and Sid at a tension, knowing that on the answer hinged the future, for never again might he hope for a more propitious moment.

Allegra smiled faintly up at Sid, and stretched out her hand.

"I am not worthy of it," she whispered, humbly, "but stay—for Lenore's sake."

Lenore settled back with a little sigh of relief. "It's going to end just like the fairy stories," she said.

FRANCIS MURRAY.

SHOT.

Under the glare and buzz of the arc lights the crowd shuffled and laughed. When three policemen and a couple of brawny van drivers are hauling at rope and reins in apoplectic endeavors to raise a fallen horse, there is something in the situation extremely to the taste of a crowd. Hands in pockets, the people formed up in an irregular ring, at a safe distance, in case the animal should plunge and kick. But the united efforts of the five men only slithered the poor, ungainly body painfully along in the mud for a foot or two, and the crowd guffawed ecstatically as the men desisted, and the splendid, shapely head sank down again.

Another joined the band of helpers, and, all, together, some pushing, some pulling, with cruel tugs they succeeded in raising the horse at an angle; but it possessed, apparently, no strength to struggle erect. It had worked, literally, until it dropped, and with tawny sides panting, and liquid, terror-stricken eyes, it fell back again to the roadway, inert, helpless.

"Pore thing," said a frowsy woman with a basket in a harsh voice, "it ort to be shot, that's wot it ort to be done to." And as the fun was palling a trifle, the crowd took up the word, eager for a diversion.

"Shoot 'im! Shoot 'im!" it shouted; "don't torcher the pore beast. Shoot 'im!"

It really seemed the only thing to do. The men stood there, out of breath, consulting for a minute or two, while the crowd pressed in closer, touched the caked hide, pointed to the lean, shabby flanks, the outlined ribs; peered curiously into the large, wistful eyes, that seemed pleading for a little more of life . . . or was it death that they dumbly asked?

One of the policemen went off down a side street, and the crowd waited in high good humor, bandying remarks. . . . He returned with a man who carried a rifle slanting from the crook of his arm. The people enjoyed it immensely when the constable held the rifle while the other stooped to examine briefly the poor, dank body, downed by hunger and weakness in the dirt. Many hoarse witticisms passed at the constable's expense.

The other man rose, shook his head, and took back the gun.

"Stand back, there! Stand back!" The three uniforms cleft the swaying mass into halves, and there was the picture—one of those little, unimportant impressions that the mind seizes and, perhaps years afterward, brings up suddenly into consciousness; the clear, straight space; the gaunt, still beautiful animal, its black nostrils moving, a little cloud of breath and steam hanging above it; the deserted, loaded wagon drawn up by the curb; the brilliant shops across the way; the double rank of amused, staring faces, some few a trifle awed as though a vague thought of the mystery of death had crossed the mind; onlookers leaning from the seats of stopped 'buses; the figure stepping near, with rifle poised.

The crowd became suddenly hushed, and craned forward, goggle-eyed and expectant. . . . An arc lamp kept up a sinister crepitation. . . . The snick of the breech sounded sharply.

Crack! A blue sphere of smoke drifted slowly into the blur of faces. And the crowd, satisfied, heartened up, shoved its hands a little deeper into its frayed pockets, and sought, individually, a new sensation.—[Pall Mall Gazette.

WHY MARK TWAIN DIDN'T TALK.

A couple of days ago a gentleman called upon me with a message (from the German Emperor). . . . The wording of the message to me was:

"Convey to Mr. Clemens my kindest regards. Ask him if he remembers that dinner, and ask him why he didn't do any talking."

Why, how could I talk when he was talking? He "held the age," as the poker-clergy say, and two can't talk at the same time with good effect. It reminds me of the man who was reproached by a friend, who said:

"I think it a shame that you have not spoken to your wife for fifteen years. How do you explain it? How do you justify it?"

That poor man said:

"I didn't want to interrupt her."

If the Emperor had been at my table, he would not have suffered from my silence, he would only have suffered from the sorrows of his own solitude. If I were not too old to travel I would go to Berlin and introduce the etiquette of my own table, which tallies with the etiquette observable at other royal tables. I would say: "Invite me again, Your Majesty, and give me a chance;" then I would courteously waive rank and do all the talking myself. I thank His Majesty for his kind message, and am proud to have it and glad to express my sincere reciprocation of its sentiments.—[Mark Twain, in North American Review.

MARK TWAIN'S ACQUAINTANCES.

We had recently arrived in Berlin, and had begun housekeeping in a furnished apartment. One morning at breakfast a vast card arrrived—an invitation. To be precise, it was a command from the Emperor of Germany to come to dinner. During several months I had encountered socially, on the continent, men bearing lofty titles; and all this while Jean was becoming more and more impressed, and awed, and subdued, by these imposing events, for she had not been abroad before, and they were new to her—wonders out of dreamland turned into realities. The imperial card was passed from hand to hand, around the table, and examined with interest; when it reached Jean she exhibited excitement and emotion, but for a time was quite speechless; then she said:

"Why, papa, if it keeps going on like this, pretty soon there won't be anybody left for you to get acquainted with but God."

It was not complimentary to think I was not acquainted in that quarter, but she was young, and the young jump to conclusions without reflection.—[Mark Twain, in North American Review.

NOT THESE DAYS.

"Honesty, my boy," said Gobsa Golde, "is always the best policy."

"And yet," said the youth toughtfully, "you have done pretty well, haven't you?"

The Awakening.

TIDE OF THE YEAR AS IT RISES IN EASTERN FIELDS.

By a Special Contributor.

AS I cross the fields, climbing a wall here and a fence there; pausing to watch a muskrat slip into the water from a river-bank, and to examine a cocoon that is waiting on a bare twig for the warm sunshine to change it from an inanimate thing to an airy, gorgeous creature of wings, I am conscious of the wondrous transformation going on around me, the awakening of the world from its winter lethargy. Its throb is in the grass blades under my feet, in the swelling branch tips, in the new tinge which is daily, hourly, changing the earth's surface, in the very brook, whose waters have a quickened, freer flow. It is whispering, rustling, buzzing, singing, calling from all sides, around and above. The sky has a new color, the earth a warmer glow, as if there were veins through the soil which were quickening into life.

From a hole in a fence post a bee has crawled into the sun. He is weak, attenuated, dull of color from his long winter in the darkness of the post; but even as I look, with the warm sunlight resting upon him, he visibly enlarges, and his colors grow brighter and more life-like. Presently he quivers his wings, weakly at first, but with more and more strength, until he has raised them erect. Then he tests one leg after another, thrusting them out doubtfully, as though they might be numb with cramp; but apparently gaining confidence with each new effort. Already he seems like a new creature, and I know that before my return he will have flown away in search of food or others of his kind.

Along the way are curious little finger-size plants which rise from the ground and curl their fuzzy yellow-green tips into tight balls. The country folks call them "brakes," and gather and eat them as "greens." A few more warm days and the tightly closed balls will unwind and straighten out into the delicate, feathery fronds of graceful ferns. They are scattered thickly along the way, especially in places that have been burned over the year before, waiting with bowed shoulders and coldly clasped hands for the warm days which the bluebirds have told them will soon come.

One of these blubirds is watching me now, almost with a fellow-feeling and understanding, it seems, for he is first on one side and then on the other, hopping from the swelling tips of an elder bush to the ground, running across the path behind me, and then flying on with a well modulated "O, I say! look at this" to a decayed log a rod or two in advance. Surely he knows that I am out to greet the newcomers for whom he has been watching these weeks past, and just as surely he realizes that he is able to give me an abundance of interesting information. What a companionable little fellow he is, and how plainly desirous of congenial company! I wonder if he has a mate, or if he has not yet begun his courting. Perhaps he has daringly come on ahead of all the rest, and is lonely, and glad even for a human being to companion with. Or perhaps this warm, wondrous thrill of the awakening is in his heart, as it is in mine, and he feels nothing but love and fellowship for all things around.

As I approach nearer, his head cocks on one side and his tail bobs genially, and only when I am within a few feet does he hop to a low branch scarcely an arm's length away. Nor does this seem a movement of fear or distrust, but rather as a stepping aside for me to look at something which he has to show.

One end of the log rests across a heap of stones, and upon the stones the sun is lying warm. At first I see only a small green lizard which has partially crawled from beneath the bark and is now lying in the sunshine, its eyes blinking in the very estacy of contentment. It is another of the creatures which the sun is awakening.

But plainly it is not the lizard that attracts my friend's attention. He is raising and lowering his wings with ill-suppressed eagerness, and hopping from one end of the branch to the other. And he is not looking at the log at all, but at the stones beyond.

"There it is," he plainly chirps; "there, there, there!"

Over the warm stones a dozen or more tiny forms are twisting about joyously. At first they appear to be worms, though unusually active; but a closer inspection reveals them as snakes. They are not more than three or four inches in length, and too small to determine the species. The mother is not in sight; doubtless she is off foraging, with the little ones left to play among the warm stones.

Here on a south-sloping bank is a little colony of plants, some of them already beginning to show flower. A clump of dogwood has only a deeper tinge of red to its bark, as some of the birches have a deeper yellow. But over there a pussy willow is clothed with a halo of fully-developed catkins. No wonder it raises its head proudly above the bare limbs of its fellows, for is it not a pioneer in this tide of spring stirring and longing?

A little farther, and a brook crosses the path, spanned by a well-worn log. I pause on the bank to watch the water as it gurgles and rushes on its way, scarce able to contain its joy within the narrow banks. There is the pure water of bubbling springs in its tide, the melting of mountain snow, the elusive fragrance of arbutus and wood violets. A pussy willow bends its tip to the surface to be kissed, and from the opposite bank a green-robed damsel lifts eyes that are glistening with liquid pearls.

At first there seems to be no foreign life within the dancing waters; but as the stillness is prolonged, a speckled trout flashes from some covert and poises in midstream, apparently without motion in the swift flowing current. Perhaps he has been awake all winter, somewhere down there under the ice; or perhaps he has been dozing at times in some safe retreat. But now he is alert and eager, watchful for any unfortunate insect that the warmth may entice too near the brook's surface.

There is a slight stirring of the grass near the water's edge, a few yards below; then a short space of almost unnatural stillness, and the stirring is repeated. Some water animal, perhaps out for his first spring reconnoitering, is trying to escape unobserved.

But he has not reckoned on the keenness of spring eyes. Suddenly, from above my head, comes an eager: "There he is! There, there, there!" And looking up, I see my friend the bluebird swaying excitedly upon a slender branch, again almost within arm's length. Evidently he has followed me, either to observe what I might discover, or to give assistance, as in this case. But whether he wishes to call my attention to the trout, or to the stirring in the grass, or to something which I have not yet seen, is uncertain, for he promptly flies to another branch a little farther off, and continues to sway and sing: "There, there, there, he is! Tru-ally, Pu-ri-ty, pu-ri-ty! O-oh, pu-ri-te-e!"

I continue to watch the grass for some time, but there is no further stirring. Probably the unknown animal has slipped into the brook and is swimming beneath the surface. When I turn back to the bluebird, he is industriously picking at a rough piece of bark. Presently he draws out a long, white grub which the sun has not yet awakened, and swallows it. The grub is thus cut off from the great spring awakening; but perhaps his loss is the bluebird's gain, and through the bluebird the world's. Who knows?

The Bag of Yen.

LOST TREASURE AND THE MANNER OF ITS RESTORATION.

By a Special Contributor.

THAT honorable rascal, Hi Sing, was out of humor. He was also out of luck, and out of pocket to the extent of seventeen yen, and some odd change, from which another rogue, a newcomer to the gambling house of Lee Hai, had just despoiled him. Truly, however, the game had been fairly played—that is to say, Hi Sing had been unable to detect anything wrong in the manipulation of the dice—so there was nothing to report to the tong against the stranger.

The beneficent Hi felt particularly bitter when he emerged from Lee Hail's, and passed Win Gee's eating-house, and wished he could go up for a bowl of hot tea, to keep out the cold night air. As he crossed a shadow cast by the light above Win's door, he stumbled against something lying there, who whined at the contact of Hi Sing's foot.

"Honorable person," whimpered the prostrate one, "let me be."

"Ming Kee," exclaimed Hi Sing. "What now, honorable one? Why did you leave the bunk until you had recovered from the ah-pin-yin?" Then as the idea came to him: "Mighty great one, loan me two insignificant silver pieces; two yen, honorable Ming Kee."

Ming arose from the ground, and shambling to the flight of steps that leads up to Win Gee's, he sat down under the light. He was a wizened, dried-up, little Chinese, with a small, weak, wrinkled face, yellow-gray from opium. His eyes were uncertain and watery, and even in the dim light they blinked like an owl's at noon.

"Two yen," he echoed presently, "haai, what a triumphant sum of money! I have not seen so much at one time since—since I was the governor of this district, and they came to pay me. Truly, though, honorable person, I am wrong; not two odd hours ago——"

"Ai-ya, turtle spawn!" cried Hi Sing, hotly, "never trouble to relate the dreams that came in the bunk with the long pipe," and he began to shake the shriveled little man.

"Honorable person," said Ming, gravely, pointing a claw-like finger at Hi Sing, "you are a triumphant fool."

"Truly I know it; else I should not be asking you for the yen."

"Nor would you have begun to rattle me about. I might have——"

"Haai, begin to be quiet; we lose time. Have you the yen?"

"Truly not; although but a short time ago I had much more."

"Without doubt, before you awoke."

"No, honorable man; these were real. The foreign devil whom I occasionally honor by allowing him to employ me, counted them into my hand one by one. I put them into a bag, and the bag into my blouse sleeve. It is late, beneficent person, and very cold; shall we go up and beg for a bowl of tea?"

"What of that bag of yen?" persisted Hi Sing.

"It slipped from me. It was unlucky, for I had intended to pay a great portion to the honorable Win, upstairs, so that when the humor seized me to rest I might have a place to secure solid food. I eat little, mighty great one; they would have lasted long."

"Ai-ya," squealed Hi Sing, "never mind the eating. Where did you lose the yen?"

"Through an accursed grating, such as these foreign devils have in the pavement beneath their shop windows."

The face of Hi Sing fell as he replied gloomily:

"Then without doubt the keeper of the place opened the window of his cellar and got out the bag. Ai-ya, what triumphant roguery!"

"Haai, no," croaked Ming, shaking with empty laughter. "The store was tenantless; the bag is there yet, honorable Hi Sing."

"Come, let us go at once and bring it back with us."

"Of what use? Truly, I tried with sticks to reach between the bars, but the iron was cold, and I [illegible] feel the need of rest as well. Tomorrow I [illegible] again."

"But tomorrrow you will not be able to find the [illegible]."

"That will be a thing of ease. It is a short [illegible] from that foreign devils' temple where the [illegible] laborers go to learn the language. Of all the shops [illegible] that street to the next one, it is the only one which [illegible] without a tenant."

The honorable Hi Sing heaved a sigh of [illegible] but continued to question the drowsy Ming, who [illegible] more and more disposed to sleep rather than to [illegible]

"Have you been at the pipe since you lost the [illegible]" Hi demanded.

"After a fashion. I had upon me sufficient odd [illegible] to purchase a few whiffs of yin-shee, but what are the scrapings of the pipe to one who loves the best. Besides, an honorable man who calls for yin-shee is [illegible] treated with consideration. They gave me time for [illegible] an odd wink or two, and then I was forced to make [illegible] for another. Begin to go, affable person, and let me rest."

Truly Hi Sing was willing to be off. Standing in the cold had chilled him, but there was no hope of a [illegible] corner, or a bowl of hot tea, until he had possessed himself of Ming's bag of yen.

The vacant store and the grating were easily found, but it took longer to catch sight of the bag, although the light of a street lamp shone between the bars. At length he spied it—an old tobacco sack with the outlines of the dollars within it showing through the [illegible]

H-a-a-i, truly those iron bars were cold, and Hi Sing's yellow fingers were stiff at the contact. It was too early to begin operations, for foreign devils were passing and he might be interrupted.

A stick suitable for the purpose was not to be had near by, so he went in search of one. It was a long, cold walk that he took before he found one, but the one that he at last secured was so triumphantly perfect that the sight of it fairly warmed him a little. It was a [illegible]cent piece of wood, with a lucky nail in the end of it.

The street was deserted when he got back to the [illegible], so without fear he began to grapple for the treasure. He did not heed the icy iron pressing against his [illegible] and arm, but patiently worked the stick back and forth until the nail caught in the mouth of the sack, and he could draw it up within reach. An odd moment [illegible] and he was in possession of Ming Kee's treasure.

He hastily shuffled along toward food and shelter. The bag was tucked into his blouse sleeve, and his arms were folded across his breast in an attempt to warm his fingers. He could feel the bag pressing against his body, but the cold iron had taken out all the life from his arms until there was no feeling in them.

As he entered the alley which leads to Win Gee's he stopped and took out one of the dollars, which he held in his hand. It would not do to display all the yen at the eating-house, but some money must be shown, or he should never be served.

The wretched Ming Kee was yet on the steps, dreaming troubled dreams, in which he half-consciously strove to find something by feeling about in his lap and on the step. Hi Sing grinned sardonically; then seizing a moment when Ming appeared quiet, he dropped his arms to his sides, and bounded upstairs into Win Gee's.

He did not hear a soft thud, nor look back to see Ming Kee, in the throes of the dream, reach out and grasp that bag which had fallen into his lap, and put it next his body, beneath his quilted jacket. Thus Hi Sing never knew the fate of the bag of yen.

QUADRUPEDS THAT LAY EGGS.

The salesman, as he wrapped up the Easter [illegible] conversed politely.

"There are quadrupeds that lay, ma'am," he said.

"That lay eggs?"

"Yes. They are mammals, ma'am, too. Their home is in South America, their names are the ornithorhynchus, or duck-billed platypus, and the echidna, or porcupine ant-eater. They are the lowest mammals known."

"Really?"

"Oh, yes. The duck-billed platypus lays two eggs at a time. But the echidna lays but one egg, which it carries in a natural pouch beneath its stomach—there's an idea for the hen there—until the kid echidna, so to speak, is hatched out."

NEW WOMEN AND EASTER.

Their scalpels are laid in their cases,
Their law books are turned to the wall,
Their telescopes rust in their places,
Their politics pall.

Forgot are the wrongs they've been righting,
Their varied reforms are put by,
For the suffrage no longer they're fighting—
Of course you know why.

And in sooth 'tis not hard to discover
The cause of the change, which is that
In a trance they are all bending over
A new Easter hat.

The Imaginary Mongoose.

ERNEST HAROLD BAYNES, the noted nature writer, is one of the leaders of the American Bison Society, which has been formed to protect the disappearing bison of the prairies. Mr. Baynes was talking about the bison the other day in the drug store of the little town of Newport, N. H.

"Why," said he, "if we don't look out, our bison will be like the oriental's mongoose.

"An oriental, saffron-colored, garbed in robes of flowing white, sat in the smoking car of a Pullman. A thin, inquisitive man took the seat beside him and began to question him.

"'Where ye goin'?'

"'Los Angeles.'

"'Are ye in the rug business?'

"'No.'

"'Retired?'

"'No. I do no work.'

"So the questions went on, and the oriental no doubt got tired of them. For, when the man asked him what he had in his kitbag, he answered that he had a mongoose.

"'A mongoose?' said the other. 'What's a mongoose?'

"'A mongoose is a little animal that kills snakes. Didn't you ever read Mr. Kipling's story of "Rikki-tikki-tavi"?'

"'No. But what are you goin' to do with a mongoose in Los Angeles?'

"'I am going to see my uncle,' said the oriental. 'He is a heavy drinker, and is suffering from delirium tremens. When his attacks come on, he sees all kinds of snakes, and I am taking the mongoose out there to kill them.'

"The inquisitive man leaned back in his seat and laughed.

"'Why,' he said, 'they're not real snakes your uncle sees. They're imaginary.

"'And,' replied the oriental calmly, 'this is an imaginary mongoose.'"

"'Oh, yes,' he answered. 'Not often, though. And when I am deceived, I judge my man kindly. I am not like the jurist whom Alphonse Karr, who lived here, used to tell about.'

"Karr used to say that there was a venerable judge who, when the moment for passing sentence on a prisoner came, would consult the colleague on either side of him as to the proper penalty.

"'What ought we to give this rascal, brother?' he would say, bending to the right.

"'Three years, sir, I should think.'

"Then, bending to the left, 'What is your opinion, brother?'

"'I should say about four years, sir.'

"Then the judge, glancing at the prisoner benevolently, begins:

"Doubtless," said the clergyman, thoughtfully, "Mr. Morgan's $50,000 could have done more good than stop a music drama that is, I have been told, a great work of art. But, all the same, I admire the spirit of the man. He is a man who achieves what he wants—a rare gift.

"I remember how, one Easter, a Methodist minister in the South wrote to Mr. Morgan and asked him to subscribe to the erection of a new church.

"'Since I am an Episcopalian,' Mr. Morgan wrote back, 'I can't conscientiously join this Easter subscription to the building of a Methodist church. The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds.

CACTUS GARDENS.

A PLANT THAT COMMENDS ITSELF TO THE AMATEUR.

By Ernest Braunton.

NO family of plants recommends itself to the amateur gardener more highly than the cactus. At no time do cacti need more than ordinary care, and after once established they may almost as well be left alone, except for an occasional weeding. Most of them have to endure, in their native habitat, great extremes of heat, and in some places on our American deserts the snowfall is considerable, so that the question of climate need not perplex the prospective grower. In all cases the soil should be well drained; yet some of our California species grow in heavy adobe.

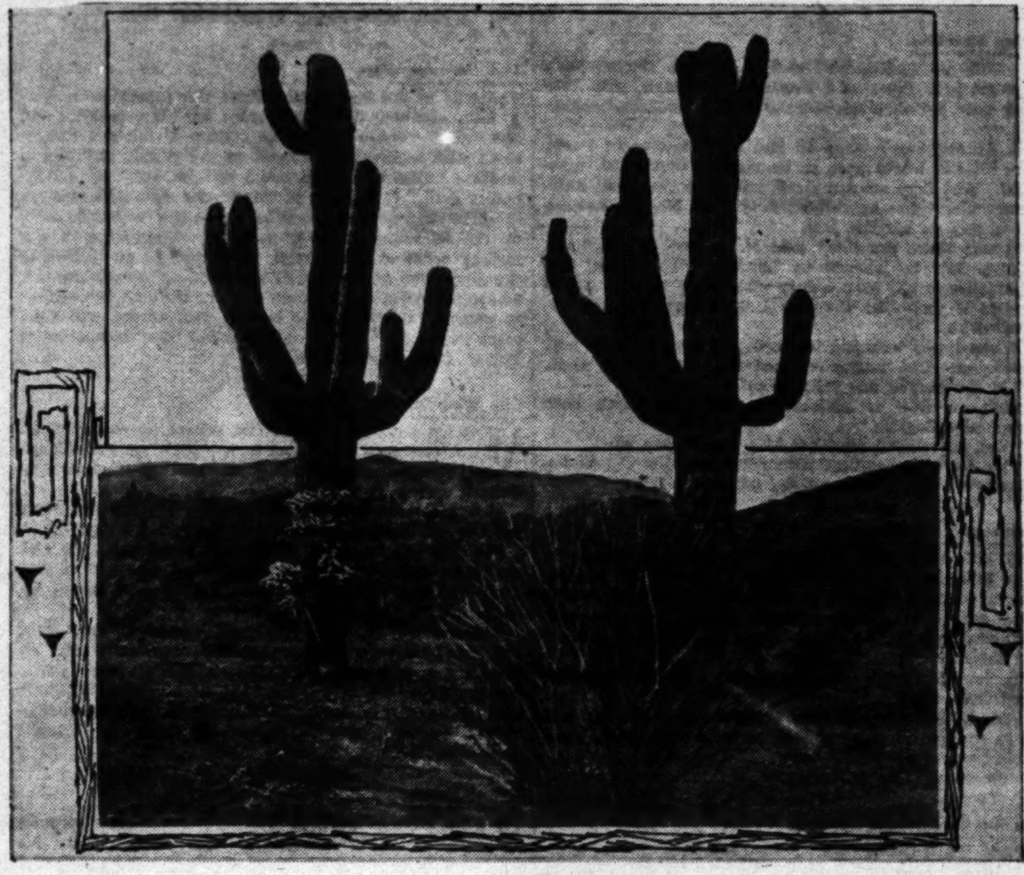
The great cactus family contains about 1000 species, confined to the Americas with the exception of a few species of mistletoe cactus found in South Africa. They range from Canada nearly to the southernmost part of America, and over to the West Indies. Mexico contains the greater number of species, but the family is well represented in the United States, where they range from the Mississippi to the Pacific in considerable numbers, with nine species still farther east. California has many kinds both interesting and handsome, though all are in the southern part of the State, their most northerly range being in the neighborhood of Bakersfield. It must not be taken for granted that these plants are confined to the warmer climates, for some prove perfectly hardy amidst the blizzards of the Dakotas. Many interesting species are native to Colorado and Nevada, while Arizona, New Mexico and Texas are well supplied.

The giant cactus of Arizona and Sonora is the largest member of the family, attaining a height of nearly sixty feet and a diameter of two feet. In proportion to their size, the giant cacti are probably the heaviest plants known, the body being composed largely of water. So full of juice are they that travelers perishing from thirst have saved themselves by cutting out a large piece and shaping the wound to catch the sap, which collects in a considerable quantity in a short time. One would scarcely seek to quench his thirst in this manner except in case of dire necessity, for the sap is not pleasant to the taste.

The flowers are white, faintly tinged with blue, and borne in a circle near the top, giving the effect of the plant being crowned with a wreath of white. The blossoms are followed by red, edible fruits, quite like a fig or pear in shape. The Indians gather all these fruits for food, and in addition make from them an intoxicating beverage. To obtain these fruits, they push them off with a long pole, which is sometimes obtained from a dead trunk of one of the plants, for when dry the body splits into thin strips the extreme length of the plant. The smallest cactus is doubtless Mammillaria minima, from Central Mexico, and quite common in California collections. It is globular in shape, thickly covered with soft spines and is one-half inch or less in diameter. Between this and the giant cactus, range plants of every size and of almost every form. The mistletoe cactus is a bushy little plant a few inches tall, with stems smaller than straws. Some of the "Barrel Cactus" have stems three feet in diameter, whereas the night-blooming cereus is a slender climber.

Aside from their beauty and interest cacti are useful in many ways. Some are used for hedges and fences; when the island of St. Christopher, in the West Indies, was divided between the English and French, three rows of the common tuna were planted to mark the boundary. The trunks are used for firewood in regions where scarcely any other material is available. Canes and ornamental bric-a-brac are made from several kinds, while the fibrous trunks of others are woven into baskets or ground up for paper-making. In Sicily cactus is planted on the porous lava beds, where no other vegetation grows, and not only does it make the landscape green, but aids to lower the temperature during the period of greatest heat. The night-blooming cereus furnishes a drug used in heart troubles, and a Mexican species yields a deadly poison. In times of drought cattle and horses relish the spineless opuntias and horses and mules have been known to kick the larger kinds to pieces in order to get the juicy flesh to eat. The Indians grind the seeds and make bread from the flour. The fruits of some kinds are used for making jelly, and even in a raw state are in some demand, for the pulp has a sweet and agreeable flavor.

One of the chief charms of a cactus garden is the great number of similar plants which not only thrive under like treatment, but are often so near the cacti in appearance as to be mistaken for them when not in bloom. A full collection of succulents, as this class of plants is called, affords a richer and more interesting field for study than any other branch or phase of plant life.



GIANT CACTUS OF ARIZONA.

Mistakes in Planting.

One of the mistakes most frequently made in ornamental planting is to set out trees in stiff, rigid rows—usually at right angles with the house and highway. In the smallest dooryard as well as public park, natural groves and methods may be imitated. In planting trees or thinning surplus growth the effect from a distance should be studied. First impressions are lasting. Then work of this kind should be conducted so that the first view of the house which a stranger on nearing the place receives should be agreeable to the senses, and if the situation is such that different views are presented as the approach is made, then a series of impressions are left which will remain as a pleasant memory.

Then again in planting, or clearing, the pleasure of the home's inmates must be consulted; pleasant views must not be obstructed by that which would hinder a free and uninterrupted outlook, while a disagreeable scene should be shut out. This can be accomplished by planting trees as individuals or in groups, so that necessary unattractive buildings or objects be placed in the background as much as possible. So with barns and hog lots, whose unpleasant features may be hidden by a hedge. It should always be remembered that while it is proper to regard the appearance in homestead and house adornment, the family's pleasure and comfort must not be sacrificed in order to make a brave showing. To this end the traditional "backyard" should, so far as possible, be as tidy and well-kept as the lawn.

TREE PROTECTION.

A PLEA AGAINST VANDALISM OF PUBLIC OFFICIALS.

MOST naturally we turn to our public officials to provide proper protection for trees on public streets and on public areas in general. These officials are supposedly the personal representatives of the people, representing a certain territory in the general meet. That this is not necessarily so, or true in even a majority of cases in many sections, is quite generally conceded. Too many officials owe their positions to the machine and not to the vote of the people and therefore are answerable only to the machine. We cannot be surprised, therefore, when such public servants turn a deaf ear to entreaties concerning the preservation of beauty spots and beautiful objects.

In Los Angeles we have had park commissioners who have had trees cut out of our parks that had taken two or three decades to grow; beautiful trees have been denuded of all their branches from the ground up to ten or twelve feet high. Both these classes of vandalism have been perpetrated because some influential citizens wished an unobstructed view from their front windows through a part or whole of the park. Other near-by residents without a pull had to be satisfied with what poor views our park landscapers have been able to produce. Some years ago a Supervisor gave permission to residents of abutting property to cut down hundreds of fine sycamore trees in the Arroyo Seco. We are pleased to record the fact that the act was a strong contributing influence to his defeat at the subsequent election.

WESTLAKE PARK.

During the past week the writer has been appealed to by four persons, at different times, to help save a giant sycamore that grows in the middle of a public highway. The pathos of the case lies in the fact that after years of protection afforded it by residents thereabout, the public official in charge of the territory has intimated that it may be cut out, for what purpose or with what end in view he did not state. Things have come to a pretty pass when a man who lives miles away from a given point may defy the wishes of scores of residents in the district affected who are bent on preserving all of natural beauty that exists. It should not be necessary to call in the aid of outsiders to prevent these acts of vandalism. Every department of our government—Federal, State and municipal—is founded on majority rule; is it possible that one man can successfully ignore the wishes of the hundreds in a matter in which he can have no possible personal interest? If he does he certainly does not in any moral sense represent them and should be consistently ignored when asking for reëlection.

Land for School Gardens.

The first serious obstacle to the school garden is usually the apparent impossibility of securing land. The experience at Hyannis, Mass., may prove suggestive. They started by plowing a part of the lawn. Very soon a neighbor became interested in the garden and offered the use of a plot of ground which he had formerly used for a garden, but which had for several years grown up to grass. The school agreed to cultivate and fertilize this plot of ground, allowing him such vegetables as he desired for his own use; the agreement to continue for at least five years.

This plan has worked so well that there would now be little trouble to secure several plots of ground if the school could use them. In Boston, Philadelphia and other large cities vacant city lots have been utilized to the great advantage of all concerned. There are comparatively few schools which cannot be provided with land within easy distance of the school building without the expenditure of money.

Street Tree Protection.

N. C. Brown of Asheville, N. C., got a Supreme Court decision that the Asheville Electric Lighting Company, even after it had provided itself with the permission of the Superintendent of Streets, :afterward approved by the Board of Aldermen, could not ignore his protest and cut a tree standing on the outer edge of his sidewalk. Mr. Brown sued the company for damages, and the jury awarded him a verdict of $499. Of course, the case was appealed, but the judgment of the State Supreme Court, as summarized by the American Telephone Journal, was that, while the city had the power, under its charter, to control streets and sidewalks, and to remove obstructions when necessary, it did not, when it condemned land for highway purposes, acquire a title to the land, but merely a right of way over it, so that the plaintiff was still the owner of the tree.

New Era Flower in Shows.

After many years of widespread endeavor on the part of seed, plant, and flower specialists to induce popular interest in the annual flower show at Chicago, it remained for a non-horticultural man, a busy newspaper man, but one whose finger correctly gauges the public pulse, to suggest an innovation which at one stroke made it not only a paying proposition but also lifted these exhibits to a new and higher plane, making them both interesting and educational to the general public instead of mere centers of purely horticultural contest and criticism.

This, together with the adequate and satisfying setting furnished by the Coliseum, the new and presentable site of the Chicago flower show, made in 1905 exhibition, November 7 to 11, a pronounced success.

The distinctly novel feature of the Chicago show consisted of so-called "model gardens" supplemented by illustrated talks on gardening, garden arrangement and allied topics. Not that the exhibitors gave them such a pretentious name, but the management, possibly in an unguarded moment, so christened them and the public lost no time in accepting the title.

Model back yards was the idea suggested by the originator of this new departure and it was carried out as well, perhaps, as could be expected on short notice—the movement having been started only about ten days or two weeks before the opening of the show.

Six firms responded to the call for this unusual form of exhibit, and while no one of the results was perfect, some of them were as a whole meritorious, although there is a general feeling that a much better showing can be made next time with the experience gained this year, and with a fuller realization of the needs of the people and the possibilities offered in presenting concrete examples of well-planted small grounds.—[Park and Cemetery.

Cemetery Improvement.

In response to the demand of the improvement workers among the agricultural organizations of Michigan, a law was passed appointing a "Memory Day," to be annually proclaimed by the Governor of the State, on which special attention is invited to the needs of the cemetery and a day of active work suggested for cleaning up and improvements. The idea has been very generally encouraged by the press, generally, and it is quite expected that an extension of the proposition into more days than one will ultimately result in far better conditions in the rural burying grounds. It is a fact, very difficult of explanation, that comparative neglect marks the condition of nearly every country cemetery, which in large measure is undoubtedly due to the absolute lack of knowledge of how to go about the work of improvement. This strengthens the argument that real progress in this direction can only come about when the elementary principles of outdoor sightliness are better understood.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

VALUE OF INCUBATORS.

POULTRY INDUSTRY CANNOT DEPEND UPON MOTHER HENS.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experience with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

HOW few good mother hens there are! So few that the poultry industry cannot thrive as a dependence upon them. Many a fellow who started March hatches with hens will yet try an incubator, heartsick over the perverseness of much in nature. A hen that eats eggs from under her once will do it every time, and pullets hatched from her eggs may be expected to do it, though other influences may predominate in a few instances. Such a hen should go to the kitchen, and also the hen that will once eat off the head of a chick. The hens that fight for precedence when in near-by nests would probably turn out good mothers if separated. The instinct to have rights and defend them goes with the true maternal instinct in all forms of life; and considering this, mother hens should not be asked to decide civic questions, but have conditions made for them beforehand, and be widely separated upon nests.

One feels sorry for the fellow, willing to study nature, first, who began in March studying only inglorious nature, and is longing for an incubator; but it is not late by any means to get the incubator. In this country of even climate, incubators are going every week in the year, successfully, and because of our numerous March showers this year, the novice with brooder chicks will get along better with April-hatched chicks. The fellow who has studied inglorious nature is certainly in fine condition to start an incubator; he can appreciate the literature of model mother hens, having studied the perverse. It is not all loss to make a bad March beginning. Start an April incubator, and don't fill it with common eggs. Buy the eggs of a good breeder in incubator lots, of one who would not breed eggs from poor stock, of one who could not afford to sell poor eggs. Or buy eggs of different good breeders, taking care that the eggs are of the same age, laid the same week, or better still, within a few days of each other. The different incubators each have special ways of conforming to nature, and to heed the special directions make one a good motor. What is good for one machine is not good for another, and the advices of Tom, Dick and Harry are imprudent gifts that should be declined with dignity.

All incubators are run to keep the air cell in the egg a proper size, and fresh eggs have a very small air cell. If the air cells of the eggs vary much in the start, the eggs are not of the same age. The mother hen probably knows by instinct which eggs to air most. Some she seems to keep out from under her a long time each day, while others are always under her. The first egg she laid is much older than the last one, and she knows well how to air and cool each egg to keep the air cell proper size. It is a tedious job to try to make mother hen discriminations with 100 eggs and an incubator, and if the eggs are nearly of one age, airing and cooling the eggs according to directions, and turning them, will make the hatch even easily.

Watching the air cell grow large properly involves the same study with all incubators. An egg tester is necessary to the inexperienced eye, and a good one of value to any eye. The air cell in the egg is there to give the embryo chick a lung expansion before coming into raw air, and also room in which to work its head in the effort of pipping the shell. It pips first into the air cell, through the white egg skin, gets lung expansion with tempered air and more vitality for breaking the eggshell. If the air cell be too small, the first lung expansions will be too slight, and upon breaking the skin, unless in perfect position, the egg moisture will run in and drown the chick, both with moisture and want of air. If the cell be too large the skin of the egg will be dried and possibly too tough for a chick to break, and he will drown in his own moisture. The eggshell is porous, and lets in cautiously both air and moisture as far as the skin. Too much air will dry down the skin or membrane and make the cell too large, while too much moisture will are so simple that it is practically impossible for anyone to make a mistake. They are built especially to withstand California climate. keep the skin moist and the air cells small. A model hen mother will expose or cover each egg as it needs for keeping the air cell just right. The mind, or instinct, or both of the hen can be equaled only in the most diligent student of the situation, who can by watching let enough air into the incubator to dry down the membranes slowly, and enough moisture to keep the membranes soft. Moisture does not soften the eggshell. In watching the air cell the student will easily notice the eggs which keep clear. Those perfectly clear were never fertilized, and should be taken out. They will not be rotten and smell, but they take up room in the desirable parts of the incubator. As days go by, the eggs fill with darkness. Those that have only a little dark spot by the tenth day are eggs which were fertilized partially, which started to incubate, but had too little vitality to go on. They will grow rotten and smell if not taken out. It is very necessary to keep the air of the incubator pure.

By the eighteenth day the strong eggs are dark as night to the air cell, and the embryo chick is ready to turn for position to break the membrane into the air cell and then the eggshell. Because of this eggs must not be moved after the seventeenth day. After the chicks begin to hatch the active ones may by tumbling about turn eggs over. The student should watch and try to keep all eggs with the pip side up, as only a very strong chick can manage a downfall so early in life.

All fertile eggs will hatch in an incubator with a faithful motor. When one is of the faithful with a good incubator he is sure of chicks, if the eggs are strongly fertilized. Much depends upon the start. It all depends, one might say. With our student habits and scientific machines, the little old hen and the big young sire are our dictators.

S. J. M., Santa Barbara: I notice that a few of my birds are addicted to feather pulling, and that the breast of one hen is nearly picked bare. What is the cause, and is there a remedy?

Feather pulling is the result of two conditions: Your birds are either suffering for the want of animal food in their rations, or else you feed so that a healthy exercise is uncalled for. The cause will suggest a remedy. Individual fowls strongly addicted to this pernicious habit should be isolated from the flock until broken. Keep them busy—make your birds work hard for their living.

A Model Poultry Plant.

Among the newer plants devoted to the production of high-class exhibition and breeding poultry and pigeons none occupies a more prominent place in the development of the industry than the Holmby Poultry Farm at Hollywood, of which Mr. Arthur Letts is the owner and Mr. Will Purdy the manager. Here the Orpingtons—Buff, Black and White—are to be seen at their best, the yards containing many of the finest birds bred both in England and America. Besides Orpingtons, the breeds are Barred and White Plymouth Rocks, Black Minorcas, Single Comb White Leghorns, Bronze turkeys, Pekin ducks, Homing, Tumblers and German Toy pigeons and Scotch collie dogs.

The poultry and pigeons of Holmby farm have been a conspicuous feature of Pacific Coast Poultry Shows during the past two years, winning many prizes both locally and at distant fixtures. The strains of the respective breeds are of the best quality, breeding to utility and exhibition points to a remarkable degree. The Holmby Orpingtons are undoubtedly among the best in this country—indeed, it is doubtful if there are any better in England, as Mr. Letts has been a liberal buyer of the first-prize winners at the Crystal Palace, Dairy, and other leading shows of the United Kingdom.

Drawn or Undrawn.

It has for some time been an open question whether undrawn poultry placed in cold storage was a fit meat food for human consumption—this, too, in spite of the fact that the practice is more or less common in certain sections, especially in the fall of the year. Recent experiments, however, made by the Agricultural Experiment Stations, and a number of municipal Boards of Health in eastern cities, seem to prove quite conclusively that undrawn fowl in cold storage are soon subject to the attack of grewsome bacteria. So pronounced was this discovery in experiments made by the local Board of Health in Peoria, Ill., that the municipal government passed an ordinance prohibiting the sale of animal, poultry and game (wild) birds used for food which had not been properly drawn at the time of slaughter. Experiments now being carried on in New York City revealed the presence of the bacillus coli in the breast muscles of over 150 individual undrawn carcasses of poultry. If further experiments reveal similar conditions, undrawn poultry will soon be driven out of the market as unfit for human food.

If any undrawn cold-storage bird and animal meats reaches our market from the East, the writer does not know it. Locally, nearly all poultry is bought by the dealers on the hoof, and slaughtered daily on orders direct from purchasers. In this case the bird is killed, cleaned and drawn at once, thus avoiding any of the dangers to the public health engendered by the cold-storaging of undrawn specimens.

What Times Readers Want to Know.

Mrs. M. D., Los Angeles: "Will you kindly inform me through the illustrated weekly magazine for The Times the best way to raise turkey chickens, what to feed and how to treat them from the beginning and when they grow older, so that I might have a chance to raise them."

If the writer could give specific information satisfactorily answering the above questions, he would cease pushing a Faber No. 2 pencil and go into the business of raising turkeys for a living. In his own experience, and it coincides with that of others, the young birds will turn up their toes to the daisies in spite of the best of care. That this is due somewhat to local environment and condition is conceded—a fact which has been fully explained in this department a number of times. Allowing that your turkeys are hatched, they will require the utmost care to bring them to maturity for the first eight or ten weeks, as they are exceedingly delicate and liable to be decimated by a sudden cold spell, a draughty situation, or damp quarters. The faults under domestication have also a tendency to diarrhoea, or other inflammatory irritation of the intestines, which has always to be guarded against. In feeding, the birds will require no ration for the first twenty-four hours. If the weather is warm and pleasant, they may be placed in the open, but if otherwise, under cover, though not in a close atmosphere. Provide a warm bed of chaff or litter over a bed of sand or coal ashes so as to avoid dampness, place your coop over this (which has previously been disinfected for vermin, and the mother powdered for insect foes), and the mother and brood inside. On the second day the fowls may be fed a meal of hard-boiled eggs and stale wheat bread dipped in hot milk, the latter squeezed out, and both crumbled fine and seasoned with pepper. Never give sloppy foods. In a state of nature the chicks would feed largely on insects (flies, spiders, grasshoppers, grubs, snails, slugs, ant eggs, etc., all things which are practically unavailable in our arid summer conditions) with berries, seeds, etc., for variation. Do not give dry meal nor meal insufficiently swelled—if the latter swells in their crops death is sure to follow. After three weeks omit the eggs and give meat scraps and ground bone. Clean water and milk must be provided. Every few days the runs should be moved to fresh ground. As the chicks grow and mature they can be allowed to range, and the number of feeds reduced from every two hours to three times a day, which in turn can again be cut down to two meals a day—night and morning. This is a mere outline reply to our correspondent's inquiry. Turkey culture under California conditions is at best somewhat hazardous, as many have learned by sad experience, especially in cases where good range is not available.

Liverpool Landing Stage.

THE BEST PLACE IN THE WORLD TO STUDY HUMAN NATURE.

From Manchester Chronicle.

THE Liverpool Landing Stage is unique. There is nothing like it in the whole wide world. I have traveled much, and seen many great ports; but never before have I known a place where passengers from all the ends of the earth landed or embarked on one particular wharf—a place where all the romance and humor and tragedy of ocean travel was concentrated in a narrow compass under the observation of anybody who cared to take a five minutes' stroll.

But the glory of the "stage" is departing. When the White Star and Cunard fliers leave Liverpool for Southampton the romantic incidents which have been so common there as to be hardly noticed will become much less frequent. Every one of these incidents suggests the climax of a comedy of human errors, but the hardened frequenters of the Stage seldom take the trouble to turn their heads to look at them.

I was going aboard the White Star liner Arabic, some months ago, for a run to Boston. On the tender I noticed an old gentleman who was so feeble that he could hardly totter up the gangway. He was a third-class passenger, and he told me that he was spending the last money he had in the world to go out to his son, who owned a farm in Massachusetts.

When he reached the deck of the liner I was amazed to see the second officer look at him keenly for a moment, salute him, and hurry away to fetch the captain.

The skipper came up in double-quick time, wrung the old fellow's hand warmly, and took him away to his own cabin.

He never appeared among the third-class passengers again, and we were three days out before I heard the truth of the story from a grizzled quartermaster.

"That old chap sailed skipper of a barque when our old man was apprentice under him," he told me. "He's one of the finest sailormen Liverpool ever produced. He sailed on the old Dreadnought when she made her record passages. He belongs to the old time, when sailormen could work a becket and tell you how many marks and deeps there are on a hand lead line—simple things the ship's housemaids of today know nought about. The poor old fellow has fallen on hard times, but do you think our old man would let him travel steerage?

"Not likely! Once a master, always a master. That's the rule aboard ship. He's getting the best the vessel's got, and the old man will see that he reaches his son safely."

The observer of his fellow-men could find no better place to pursue his studies than the landing stage, for there he may see human nature "with the paint off." When people are parting—"it may be for years, and it may be forever"—their true character is shown so plainly that he who runs may read. Over and over again I have seen a heartbroken mother or sister weeping over a boy who is about to seek his fortune in America or Canada, while the callous young wretch puffs at a cigarette, and plainly regards the whole proceedings as a bore. On the other hand, I have seen people crying as if there were no joy left in the world for them, and then—a minute or so after the tender puts off—laughing and joking as if life did not contain a single care.

"Romances?" said an old official who has worked on the stage for many years. "We see so many of them that we never notice them. This stage is not only the Atlantic terminus, but the Clapham Junction of all the world's shipping. With such a vast throng of people passing to and fro over it every day, queer things are bound to be happening all the time. Eloping couples get caught just as they are about to step aboard for New York—that's a common thing! Absconding bank cashiers are 'nailed' at the gangway, with a small bag full of the plunder tightly gripped in the right hand. I've seen so much of that kind of thing that now I always have my suspicions of a man who won't part with his bag for any consideration.

"There's hardly a trip of one of the great liners in or out of the port without some strange story among the passengers. Do you remember the days when Pat Sheedy, the notorious card sharper, was in his prime? It's not so long ago, though he seems to have quit the western ocean boats the last year or two. He would often make a haul running well into the thousands in a single voyage. And he spent the money, too. I've seen him shove £100 in notes into a poor woman's hand because she was crying over parting with her husband.

"'Go along with him, ma'am,' he said. 'You needn't wait for him to save up the money and send it over. Hurry up! the tender's waiting.'

"'But I've no clothes here!'

"'Reckon there's some shops in New York.'

"And he hustled the woman aboard before she could realize what was happening. When she tried to thank him Pat started to swear, although he is usually one of the smoothest-tongued men in the world.

"Three or four years ago I got into conversation with a Norwegian who was waiting to take the tender for a Cunard liner bound for New York. He had the face of an angel and the tongue of an apostle. He told me that he was a missionary, and that he had been specially trained for work among the Indians in Arizona and New Mexico. His eyes fairly blazed with enthusiasm as he told me in glowing words of all the good he hoped to do to them. I was tremendously impressed, but, unfortunately, the conversation was interrupted by a detective, who arrested my apostle. He had murdered his father in Norway, stolen a large sum of money, and fled.

"The Indians are still doing without him the best way they can, for he was taken home and convicted, as I afterward heard.

"You see some funny things, too. Time and again, I've been blackguarded by some belated passenger because I tried to explain to him that I really couldn't signal to the Lucania or the Majestic to come back and pick him up. As for two women claiming the same husband and coming to blows over him, that is so common among the emigrants—especially the Jews—that we have long ago ceased to take any interest in it. But it is seldom you see two men claiming the same woman, except in the case of a fashionable elopement.

"I remember one such case not so very long ago. A very smartly-dressed couple drove up in an automobile to go aboard the Campania. While they were waiting on the stage, another motor car arrived, and a gentleman, who was evidently the lady's husband, stepped out. The couple looked very much frightened, but he went up to them quite quietly, and handed the lady a small box.

"I was standing by, close enough to hear what was said. Of all things in the world, what do you think it was?

"'I didn't see why you should go away without your jewels, my dear; so I brought them along for you.'

"She looked at him for a moment, uncertain whether he was serious, and then she burst out crying, and said she wanted to go home, if he would have her.

"'Certainly, my dear,' he replied. 'The car is waiting.'

"And they went off together without a word to the other man. He looked as sick as a hen with the pip, but he didn't dare to interfere. The husband wasn't the sort of man you would care to trifle with too far."

Another feature of the endless romance of the landing stage is the constant meetings there between old friends who have last seen one another thousands of miles away, somewhere "at the back of beyond." There are certain places where people who do much traveling are pretty sure to meet sooner or later. One is Piccadilly, another Broadway, a third Shepheard's, at Cairo, and a fourth—most certainly—is the Liverpool landing stage. I myself, although I have only been haunting the place off and on for a few months, have met there a man I knew in Jamaica, a New York acquaintance, and a comrade who served with me in Cuba in 1898.

These meetings, like the romances, will grow fewer when the great liners leave. But whatever the White Star and the Cunard may do, the landing stage can never entirely lose its interest for those who hold that the proper study of mankind is man. C. B.

THE LIMIT.

A rich man out in the suburbs who owns a large place has among the many people employed to keep it in shape an Irishman of whom he is particularly fond, on account of his unconscious wit. This Irishman is something of a hard drinker, and, as his income is limited, he is more particular as regards the quantity than the quality of his liquids. The other day the employer, who had been awaiting a good opportunity, remarked in a kind tone, as the closing sentence of a friendly lecture:

"Now, Pat, how long do you think you can keep on drinking this cheap whisky?"

To which Pat instantly replied:

"All my life if it doesn't kill me."—[Harper's Weekly.

FIELD NOTES.

New Bulletin.

THE first important publication coming from the Whittier pathological station is found in Bulletin No. 184, and may be had by writing to the College of Agriculture, Berkeley. It treats of the brown lemon rot, pear blight, beet blight, peach blight, tomato diseases, and many other maladies common to the fruits and vegetables of the State. The pamphlet is sent free and should be in the hands of every fruit and vegetable grower. Further publications will come from the investigation of Prof. Ralph E. Smith, and they will become more valuable as the work progresses.

Concerning Chestnuts.

I HAVE received the following letter from Mrs. Miriam H. Bare of Weston, W. Va. Her reference to the English variety no doubt means the European chestnut, variously known as the Spanish, French and Italian. There are numberless varieties of all species of this nut, except the bush chinquapin, the variations being the same as those of different varieties of other fruits. The letter says, in regard to a recent article "The most beautiful of any has been left out, the English. Like the other varieties, it is deciduous, but clean, strong-limbed and graceful. I have one seven years old on my lawn and from early spring till late in the fall, long after the maple leaves have fallen off it is the admiration of all who pass, with its large, deeply cluster-veined leaves and beautiful blue-white blossoms. The chestnuts, like the Italian are large, but not as delicious as the wild chestnuts growing wild in this State, or the chinquapin of the South. The English chestnut is one of the handsomest shade trees we have in the United States, with perhaps one or two exceptions, seen in Southern California. I wish J. C. G. of Los Angeles could see my English chestnut tree and he would not want any other kind. Please do not confound it with the wild horse chestnut, or buckeye, a native of the State, but ungainly in shape and its chestnuts rank and poisonous."

Florida Orange Conditions.

STEPHEN STRONG returned from Florida on the 21st inst., with a great deal of information direct from the groves where he has been conducting fumigating experiments on the white fly. He has been employed by the Department of Agriculture there since the first of the year. Mr. Strong says the white fly is the only orchard pest of the State that is seriously considered, except, perhaps, the purple scale, which is not as destructive as it is in California. The fly is doing enormous damage in many sections, and it was to demonstrate the control of this insect by cyanide that the experiments were made. The gas proved entirely effective when applied at a strength somewhat greater than the ordinary dose for black scale here, although the trees were very large and were with difficulty treated. The red scale is almost unknown in the orchards of Orlando.

The quality of the seedling oranges and grape fruit is all that has been claimed for "Florida's," the latter growing to perfection in orchards that are almost jungles. Mr. Strong did not see a single navel orange tree and but very few Valencias in that section. He was pleased with his treatment by the people, but finds their methods of cultivation, harvesting and shipping are not equal to the California methods in any respect and does not believe Florida will ever be a serious competitor of ours in the markets of the country.

Cultivation of Exotics.

ONE of the "newly arrived" has heard that pineapples are largely grown in Southern California and called to get directions for finding a pineapple field. I turned his attention to alfalfa, and yet I would be pleased to have some one who tells the pineapple story furnish the location of a field where this fruit is grown as a crop. It is of some value to this section, climatically, to publish the fact that pineapples have been fruited in the open ground, and of prime quality. I purchased a "pine" for 25 cents a few years ago and cut it from the stalk, but "six bits" would have bought the whole crop at this rate. So if I should write that I had purchased a large portion of the pineapple crop of Southern California and that the grower was so busy with the balance of the yield that I had to harvest what I had bought myself, it would all be as true as misleading. Southern California has the reputation of honoring her pioneers in experimental fruit culture, but it must be admitted that millions of dollars have been lost in jumping into the cultivation of fruits before their adaptability had been thoroughly established.

Florida, another comparatively new State in fruit growing, has suffered likewise, but not in pineapples. About thirty years ago the Providencia, laden with cocoanuts, was wrecked near Lake Worth. Because a few old bearing trees were there the coast residents gathered these nuts from the ship, one of the growers planting about 30,000 nuts on a tract of 4000 acres. But eight years from this seed were required to produce a crop of nuts. The adventure did not pay on account of occasional frosts and other adversities, and the cheapness of imported nuts. So the most important of all the tropical nuts did not pay in a semi-tropical country. Pineapples, like cocoanuts, require both atmospheric humidity and warmth, though the former must have a dry soil. This combination is not found in an arid country, however warm it may be. The "consensus of experience" is a good guide in horticultural matters here and elsewhere.

Cottonwood for Shade.

TO the many farmers who are establishing new homes in the Colorado delta the question of immediate shade is very important. The cottonwood, Populus deltoides, is perhaps the best. I have seen some noble specimens of this tree in the far-away Mexican portions of the delta where few men have been. One, situated near an Indian village of tule houses, each surmounted with its granary of willow matting, gives character to the country for miles around with its gray branches, glossy leaves and furrowed bark of gray-brown. This cottonwood of the Colorado bottoms spits down its cotton like a snow cloud, growing with great rapidity and affording good shade. One tree only three years old sheltered a stageload of us on one occasion. The cotton-shedding habit of this tree is very disagreeable in a town where it has been planted extensively, but this trouble may be obviated by planting cuttings from male trees only, leaving the more gaudy sex to flaunt their white-plumed progeny to the winds in some locality where it will not annoy. The uselessness of cottonwood timber cannot be avoided except by planting some other kind of a tree. The cottonwood shade is not restful like the oak or maple. The leaf stalk of the whole populus family is flattened, giving the leaf free movement in the slighest pulsation of the air, and the leaves also reflect the light readily, which is not an advantage in a sunny clime. The farmer may make his fence posts and his shade trees at the same planting if he does not put the upper end of the post in the ground.

Care of Bay Trees.

THE purchasing of imported trees trained to formal shapes has been unusually heavy this winter. The following from Gentlewoman may be of value to those possessing these high-priced plants:

"Sweet Bay trees are much in use in the grounds of stately mansions where there are wide verandas, broad steps and statues to which their trim pyramidal height gives the right foil or background. The Sweet Bay is a native of Southern Europe and produces the aromatic leaves that we use in our culinary department. When these trees are imported they come already started in the shape they are intended to grow. They may represent any number of fantastic shapes, but those of conical, globular and oval form are the most generally used. These trees thrive best in sunny, southern locations about the grounds. When purchased the trees are in pots or tubs with the soil in the right condition for that season's growth and for the first year require only careful watering. Any one that has had the care of potted plants may do this successfully, as the same rule applies as with the potted plants and flowers; too much water makes soggy, dangerous soil and too little makes dry soil. In the common earthen flower pot the evaporation takes place from the sides as well as from the top and the young trees may be safely watered every day; give all the water that the earth will soak up gradually from the gentle spray of a watering spout.

"Be careful to preserve the shape of the tree during the summer by clipping with shears or by pinching the ends of new shoots as soon as they extend beyond the outline shape. Soon as the weather becomes quite cold the trees should be placed in the cellar of a light dry shed where the temperature will be a few degrees above freezing.

"The trees should be repotted the following spring in new soil and in a larger-sized pot or tub. The soil should be rich like that in which roses thrive."

Tree-borer Abroad.

LOS ANGELES county is threatened with a new invasion of tree borers—not the flat-headed insect that is occasionaly found in the body of trees, but a soft-headed human who will try to work the fruit growers with an old-time fake. One of these pests called a few days ago to get an indorsement by The Times. He displayed phenomenal patience with me when I told him he ought to be arrested for getting money under false pretenses. Such epithets as "it is a fraud; you cannot do one thing you claim to do; the growers would chase you out of their groves, and, one of your kind has flim-flammed some of the farmers lately," made no impression on this man, who claims he has invented a gas that will permeate the roots below and the tops above where his medicine is inserted in the trunk of a tree by means of an auger. The gas kills scale, codling moth and everything harmful to the tree. Make the faker hit the trail back to the city if he shows up.

The best means of stopping the work of these fraudulent operators is to understand the sap movements of plants by which the operators claim to introduce their curative liquids and gases. There seems to be but two impulses of sap motion, one from each end of the tree's activities—the root and the leaf. The escape of sap from a wound is caused by root power, as in the case of a maple with a foot of snow on the ground and no growing activities in the tree whatever. How would the tree doctor get his dope into the tree in this case, where the flow of sap is outward through the wound? Again, where the tree is growing and the evaporation through the leaves may induce circulation we know that all the elements contained in the sap are dissolved in the soil by the roots, bacteria and other means. We do not know that any material can be injected into the circulation of a tree by any other than this natural action of the roots, and through the assimilation and absorption of the leaves whereby certain gases may be converted and utilized. There being no fluid movement possible within a tree except the upward flow of nutriment gathered by the root tips, and the descending nutriment elaborated by the leaves, the claim of the tree borers that they can get their medicine into the circulation of the tree through a hole in the trunk thereof is most absurd. Lastly, no one claims that there is any circulation in the fruit tree below the cambial layer, or at best, the white wood, and yet these tree quacks invariably bore deep holes, believing as they no doubt do that the heart of a plant is as vital as the heart of an animal.

Dry Orcharding.

THE most eminent horticulturist of Nebraska is E. F. Stephens who has had a great deal of experience in planting orchards on dry land without irrigation. "My first work in soil cultivation," he says, "was done in Southern California in 1865. I have been experimenting constantly since and have been successful. I continued my experiments in California until 1870 when I began tests in other States. California has no rainfall between April and November, which is the only drawback to horticulture. I began by loosening the surface soil, producing a mulch. This is cheaper than mulching with straw, moss or other substances and is quite effective. The soil was kept loosened in this way throughout the season. I allowed no weeds or any form of vegetation to grow on the ground, and permitted no stock upon it. Any form of vegetation tends to rob the soil of its moisture and I was determined that my trees should have every drop coming to them. With natural conditions, I succeeded in concentrating moisture to a depth of ten feet. This was adequate to sustain my trees and the orchards thrived and produced well-developed and luscious fruit in abundance. In Nebraska during the past six years, I have planted under contract on the prairies over seven million catalpa, mulberry, boxelder and ash trees and have saved 80 per cent. of the trees planted. By this method of soil cultivation I have succeeded in producing orchards on plateaus of bench lands far removed from any water channel, the only difference in the method adopted being in the distance apart which the trees were planted. By planting them about ten feet apart and allowing no vegetation to grow between them the orchards proved successful. There is no sign of moisture near the surface late in the season, but the trees naturally send their roots deep in search of the life-giving moisture and when the soil has been properly cultivated, they find it. I am sure that this process would prove successful in Eastern Colorado and that by it immense tracts could be reclaimed. All that is necessary is to find a friable soil, of sandy loam with a clay subsoil and the orchards would be productive."—[Field and Farm.

California State Fair.

PROF. WICKSON, writing of the State Fair for 1907 says:

"The next California State Fair promises to be great. It will be held from September 7 to 14. It is expected that the executive committee of the National Irrigation Congress wil fix the date of the meeting of that congress, in Sacramento, the same week as the State Fair. With these several thousand delegates from all parts of the United States, the inducement to display products by way of showing to the visitors what California can do, will be very great. President Roosevelt is expected to come West to visit and inspect the Roosevelt dam in Arizona, and will be invited and urged both by the Irrigation Congress and the State Fair officials, to extend his trip into California and visit the State Fair. All this looks very promising for the popularization of the project, now what will the farmers and stockmen do to make it not only spectacular but agricultural? That is a very important question, which all individuals and associations in the agricultural line should take up seriously."

Dying Tomato Seedlings.

AGAIN the complaint of tomato plants damping off in the seed bed is heard in the lands. This trouble is caused by a fungus, and aggravated by environment. Pathologists believe it may be controlled by heating the soil in which the seedling plants are to be propagated. One of my tomato-growing friends plants his tomato seed in nursery rows and brings the plants to transplanting size in some plat of clean, new soil where the fungi do not exist. As his seedlings are a few inches apart, infection is not so liable even if the disease is in the nursery soil. In his last year's experience he had no trouble with either the damping off or the wilt, and attributes it to the isolation of the seedlings before removal to the field hills. If one must propagate his tomato plants in beds he should secure fresh, sandy soil free from decaying matter, avoid overwatering and keep the temperature as low as will allow the plants to thrive.

A Freak Tomato.

MRS. K. S. of Huntington Beach writes : "On a little ranch overlooking Huntington Beach live the Carrolls, late of Arkansas. Last summer they raised a tomato plant that grew, and grew, running upon a trellis to a height of twelve feet, with branches about a foot apart, the lower ones being as large as a man's arm, bearing clusters of tomatoes, a single one being too large to put into a half-gallon syrup can. When the lower ones ripened the branch was lopped off, the next branch furnishing fruit. The vine supplied the table from June to December, besides canning tomatoes and receiving quite an income from the sale of the surplus. When frost came the vine full of green fruit was taken into the house, and the tomatoes ripened slowly, keeping the table supplied for weeks with the fresh fruit. The early settlers in the Berkshire Hills of old Massachusetts used to call the little wild tomatoes love apples. An appropriate name for this freak tomato would be the climbing love apple."

Poor Rose Soil.

SOME of our fertile soils do not produce good roses and a few of them will not grow this flower at all. One of my acquaintances says his roses failed so many years that he has abandoned their cultivation. His home is on the high bluff of the Arroyo Seco, near Pasadena avenue. The fault is with the soil, and not with the methods of the grower. Highland Park has two distinct belts of soil of which Pasadena avenue is the dividing line as if the soils had been placed with a straight edge. East of that avenue to the arroyo bank it is about the only true type of the Maricopa gravelly loam in the county. This soil is very rich, but not for roses. It contains only 12 per cent. clay, 9 per cent. coarse gravel and 64 per cent. sand, the balance silt and organic matter. On the other side of Pasadena avenue, where roses succeed so admirably, the soil is all Placentia sandy loam, a brown soil containing about 1 per cent. organic matter, and almost destitute of gravel. This soil contains only 40 per cent sand, yet has 38 per cent. silt and 20 per cent. clay. From a comparison of these figures, which vary in individual locations, it will be seen how different are the soils in the valley of Highland Park and so clearly divided by the main street of the town. This is but a sample of the diversity of soils in other localities. While the ideal rose land is a strong clay loam there are few soils upon which the rose cannot be grown to perfection by the aid of manures and careful cultivation. But when your friend boasts of his great success with roses, see if it is not more largely due to ideal soil than to the grower's skill.

A Garden That Paid.

ONE of the great railroad companies of New England built a branch road in a lonely section of the Granite State, giving tourists and guests access to one of the great hotels among the mountains in the summer, and running only a few trains in winter to accommodate the people in the small towns through which it passed. The engineer of the train was required to make his home at the end of the route, where there was a schoolhouse, a country store and two or three houses, besides the small houses erected by the company for the railroad men. It seemed to the engineer's wife that a more desolate spot could not be found. She loved flowers and found in their cultivation almost her sole pleasure. Possessing artistic tastes, she laid out her beds as carefully as if her lawn were in the city. Beds of choice pansies, raised from seed, yielded huge blossoms all summer, for the flowers were never allowed to go to seed. A long row of sweet peas was at the back of the garden, and these, too, were of choice strains, as she studied seed catalogues faithfully and purchased her seeds by mail. A large mound was edged with foliage plants with blossoming annuals in the center. Room was no object, and seeds were not expensive, so the garden was a large one. The stage for one of the great hotels left the little station twice daily, and occasionally a stranger attracted by the sight of the garden strolled up to the house and asked to buy a bouquet. This led her to making up bouquets, which her small boy took to the station when the train was coming in, or going out, and she soon had a good trade. Then the orders began coming from the proprietor and guests at the hotel for cut flowers, for no flowers could be obtained in the vicinity before. The dimes easily ran up into dollars, and the little garden at the lonely railroad station with the Presidential Range of the White Mountains in full view, became a source of health, happiness, and small wealth to its owner.—[I. R., in Gentlewoman.

Seeding the Lawn.

I HAVE been most successful in getting a solid stand of grass by the following method: The lawn should be graded and all fillings should be made during the months of October and November. I use a mixture of one part well-rotted stable manure to three parts good garden loam. These are thoroughly mixed and put in piles on the lawn, a good-sized dump cart full in a pile. Enough piles to make when leveled down about two inches of a dressing. This should be well worked into the earth as soon in the spring as the soil can be stirred. This can be done with a good disk harrow. As soon as the soil is disked it should be leveled or smoothed with rake or smoothing harrow. I use pure Kentucky blue grass, but any reliable mixture of lawn grass seed may be sown. Sow at the rate of sixty pounds per acre, sow one-half one way, then cross-sow the other half. If soil is dry enough roll with heavy lawn roller as soon as seed is sown.

The flower beds should be laid off and this part covered with a cloth or heavy paper the exact shape of the bed. This is to preserve the exact shape of the design and insures a solid stand of grass around the bed.

Trees and shrubs should be set before grass seed is sown and a space of from one to three feet be covered with cloth or paper to keep off the seed; from this we save a great deal of labor edging around the beds and trees.

For renewing old lawns we rake close and hard with a sharp-toothed rake and resow seed while marks made by rake are yet open.—[J. W. G., in Gentlewoman.

Home Garden.

THE financial importance of the home vegetable garden is rarely appreciated, except by those who have all their vegetables to buy. Such a garden, even in its highest degree of perfection, may not bring in one cent, but it's difficult to estimate the dollars it keeps in the family purse. Its importance should be estimated from the amount saved and not from the amount made or cleared; and aside from the economy, pleasure and commendable pride that the owner derives from a well-kept garden, he has the satisfaction of knowing that he is providing his family with fresh and wholesome food, lessening his drug and doctor's bills, and very probably prolonging the lives of those dependent upon him.

Our favorable soil and climate, increasing population of cities, and better transportation facilities have made possible the development of the vegetable-growing industry, whether the product is intended for home or eastern markets. Few avocations require more intelligence and business tact than truck farming, and experience is necessary to its successful undertaking. The average man who, for the first time, engages in truck farming does not appreciate, or even recognize the many essential details of the business, and fails in his undertaking and declares there is no money in it, or that soil or climate are unsuited, while, in the majority of cases, the real cause of failure was the man.

The capital employed may not have been sufficient for the area cultivated; the soil may not have been put into condition for producing a paying crop; fertilization may have been inadequate, or cultivation improper or insufficient—or, it may be that the gardener was of the opinion that his successful culture of general farm crops in the past insured his successful culture of potatoes and onions in the future. Though a truck farmer be well equipped for the undertaking, he is fortunate if he pays the expenses of the first year's operations.

The lack of appreciation of the advantages of our soil and climate, and ignorance of the requirements and hardiness of common plants, deprive many homes of fresh fall and winter vegetables. That a number of our most common vegetables will withstand our winter climate all over California and even repeated freezing is not generally understood, and the consequence is that no effort is made to grow them. We may grow many garden crops throughout all seasons, and such table delicacies as lettuce and radishes may, in many sections, be sown with profit each month in the year.—[California Cultivator.

A Horticultural Hero.

MANY years ago a man was wandering around in the Massachusetts woods with an apparently aimless step and careless vision. He was, however, a close observer and had the Ben Franklin eye for the practical and useful. He was not without appreciation of the beauties of nature, enjoyed the foliage and flowers that appeared before him and listened with pleasure to the songs of the birds. The Yankee instinct to look for something that would bring profit was nevertheless predominant, and under its guidance he found a grapevine. It was just a wild straggling thing, creeping up the tall oaks or choking the passageway between the dogwoods and redbuds; the fruit it bore was acid and gave little promise of commercial value. The wayside wanderer, however, dug it up and transplanted it to his yard. It was nursed tenderly, cultivated with care and, like all things in animated nature, eventually responded to kind treatment. By and by the wild vine was bearing delicious grapes, with a flavor all their own and a fecundity that ranked it above all known varieties. This vine, planted some seventy-five or eighty years ago, is still growing and is celebrated all over the world as the father of the Concord grape.

Now it is proposed to erect a monument to the man who discovered and planted this bearer of good gifts. An humble man with a homely name, nothing was farther from the dreams of Ephraim Bull than the obtaining of fame. He was not conscious that he possessed the elements of greatness, but meekly did the little duty that lay next to his hand, did it well, enjoyed doing it, got his rich reward in the grapes he grew, and lived and died content. Not much of the popular hero about plain old Ephraim Bull. His comings and goings were attended by no brass bands; he excited no cheers and no press agents glowingly depicted him in print. And yet this Ephraim Bull was one of the greatest, because one of the most useful, men that the world has known. Compared with him the noisily adored heroes of war and statecraft are but glistening tinsel beside the dull, true gold. The statesman may devote his life to a principle which before his generation passes proves to be false. The resplendent hero of historic battle may contrive the killing of thousands to fix upon the necks of the people a national oppression for centuries. But the humble toiler, at work in his little garden or on his farm, training a wild vine to the production of luscious fruit that will gladden the hearts of millions for all time to come, is worth more to the world than them all. What is a general's victory to the discovery of a new wheat? Was all the glory of Napoleon equal in joy-giving to the introduction of another flower to decorate the house, to gladden the eyes of the sick, to fill with perfume all the places of the farm? Shall the killers and slayers be honored and the Burbanks and Bulls be forgotten? Shall the woman who brought in the navel orange and the man who found alfalfa fill unknown graves, while the pompous politician and the murderous admiral strut and fret in vainglory before the unthinking multitudes?

While a monument of marble may beautify Concord and possess artistic value, in a larger sense it is not necessary to perpetuate the memory of Ephraim Bull. His own grapevine does that far beyond the feeble power of man to imitate. Long after the stone has crumbled, when the corroding tooth of time has eaten up the brass ornaments, when the very pedestal is but a pile of sand, there will be abundant monuments to Bull not made by mortal hands. In every arbor, on every farm, by the borders of the garden, in the nooks by the wayside, everywhere that vines grow, there will be monuments to the old gardener far surpassing the best that men can make, for they are modeled by Nature herself. They curve in graceful wreaths around the trellis or the tree; they make hedges through the vineyard in thousands of rows filled with clusters which produce the nectar that Jupiter sips. Nor do they perish with the seasons, as is the case with all the works of man. They are perennial, blooming with the regularity of the earth's revolutions, never failing, never disappointing, suggestive of agricultural prosperity and homely happiness.—[American Farmer.

HERSCHEL'S MEMORY.

Until he had become a very old man, Sir John Herschel retained the strength of intellect and freshness of memory which enabled him to accomplish his great scientific work. Sir Henry E. Roscoe, in his autobiography, records an instance when Herschel was 74 years old.

One evening in 1866 I happened to meet him. He mentioned as an interesting piece of news that a star recently burst out into first or second magnitude:

"Do you know," said Herschel, "that when I was at the Cape I observed a precisely similar phenomenon?"

He considered a moment, and added: "Yes, it was in the year 1835." Again he paused but a moment, and concluded: "On August the 16th, at 1 o'clock in the morning."—[Philadelphia Record.

A TRAIT OF JOHNS HOPKINS.

Honesty was evidently of the fundamental traits of the character of Johns Hopkins, founder of the great institution at Baltimore which bears his name. On one occasion he was sent by his mother to borrow a flatiron of a neighbor. The good neighbor gave him the flatiron and at the same time offered him a piece of pie.

"No, thank you. I don't want any pie," said the red-faced boy, as he started home. Half-way there the pie and his conscience were too much for him. He wheeled about and knocked again at the neighbor's door, his face redder than ever. "I told you a story," he explained; "I did want that pie."—[Philadelphia Record.

NOT MUCH PROGRESS.

Such an exchange of courtesy as was chronicled in a German paper not long ago would hardly suit the taste of brisk Americans, says the Youth's Companion.

The exchange was in the form of two advertisements.

"The gentleman who found a purse with money in the Blumerstrasse is requested to forward it to the address of the loser, as he is recognized."

A day or two later appeared the response, which, although so courteous, had an elusive air, to say the least.

"The recognized gentleman who picked up a purse in the Blumenstrasse requests the loser to call at his house at a convenient day."

BORN IN HIM.

The little son of the lawyer had finished working an elaborate sum on the blackboard, and, after the usual detailed explanation of the operation, he concluded with: "Therefore, the answer is two thousand six hundred and forty-five." "And can you prove it?" asked the teacher. The boy looked wise.

"Prove it? Yes, ma'am. I will subpoena the entire class as witnesses, but I must request a postponement for ten days in order to prepare my defense."—[Life.

Owens River Water.

SOME people who are friendly to the Owens River water enterprise have expressed fear lest the bringing of the water part of the way in open ditches might endanger the health of our citizens, owing to the accumulation of "slime" in the ditches. In order to obtain light on this important subject, the editor addressed an inquiry to William Mulholland, superintendent of the Los Angeles Water Department, to whose public-spirited and untiring efforts is largely due the successful inauguration of the enterprise. Mr. Mulholland's reply follows:

"Instruction No. 2 of the list of instructions given this board, as a subject of study in connection with this enterprise, reads as follows:

"To make an examination of the quality of the water at the proposed point of intake, and the possibility of its quality being affected in process of transmission to its destination.

"Two of the members of this board of engineers are regarded as high authorities on this phase of the subject, and one—F. P. Stearns—as the very highest authority on the potability of waters for domestic use. His lifework, and the work that brought him his renown, was the collection of waters from a populous watershed, to be used for the domestic supply of the city of Boston and surrounding cities, which had combined for this purpose. The persusal of this part of the report will no doubt prove interesting to you, and answer all the questions of your letter.

"I believe there is some misapprehension as to the design of the aqueduct. In the first place, it is designed to carry such water as flows in the river from the intake in an open canal, which will be 65 feet wide on the bottom, and will pass through twenty-three miles of lands which abound in springs, having their source in the high mountain range, so that this canal will perform the double function of an aqueduct and a collector of these inflowing waters. It would be manifestly impracticable to either line or roof this canal, and it would be folly to do so, even if it were practicable, as water from it is delivered into a reservoir 7½ miles long with an average depth of over 50 feet, and having precipitous rocky banks. This reservoir is located in a pass that is a perfect wind gap, where not alone complete sedimentation of the contained waters will take place, but thorough and complete aëration.

"From this reservoir the conduit is designed to be roofed through its whole length, the roof being put on as the city's funds will permit, the conduit itself being wholly of either monolithic concrete construction or steel siphon. The dimensions of this conduit are such as to carry the available amount of water when the bottom and sides are clean and free from growth of any kind. In the presence of such growth, the conduit would have a capacity at least 20 per cent. below that for which it was ultimately designed, and the growth can only be prevented by roofing. It will therefore be manifest to you that it will be to the city's interest to have this roof constructed, regardless of its sanitary effect. At the end of this long conduit, there will be located a reservoir, having a capacity of over 6000 acre feet, where sedimentation will again take place. This reservoir is located over twenty miles north of the final delivery of the water into the San Fernando Valley reservoirs. It is designed to have this portion of the aqueduct covered from the beginning, as it will be almost all in tunnel or pipes.

"So, it may be seen that, even during the period when this concrete conduit will remain uncovered, winding as it does through an uninhabited desert, the chance for disease contamination is extremely remote, if not altogether impossible.

"There appear to be in the public mind some rather woozy notions of the origin of typhoid and other disease germs. 'The slime,' that has its growth in ditches, is nothing more than a very simple form of organic life, and is about as innocuous as a pine tree or a gooseberry bush, or the much-vaunted moss on the 'old oaken bucket.'

"Of one thing you may be absolutely certain—that neither pains nor expense will be spared to make the Owens River water supply as pure as that received by any city in the known world, both in the method of its collection and the means for its conveyance. It would be a great thing, no doubt, if we could collect the water for domestic supply directly from the clouds, without permitting it to come in contact with this vile earth of ours, but since this is impossible, we have got to do the best we can, and put our trust in God to exempt us from disease, as many generations of our forefathers have done.

"I escorted a party of intelligent-looking citizens to a very large reservoir the department is constructing, out in the northwest part of the city. They were horrified when told that the water intended to be stored in it was to be used for domestic consumption, their particular aversion being aroused by the fact that the water was to have contact with the naked ground. I have no doubt, if inquiry had been made, at least some of them had come from the river towns of the East, whose water supply is drawn from the rivers on which these towns front, which carry sewage of the neighboring towns above. Such is the squeamishness derived from a half knowledge of pathogenic truths.

"We frequently have people bring rags to us that have been tied for two or three days over their faucets, on which there is a deposit of iron rust and organic matter that might weigh as much as a grain or two, and which represents the extraction strained from many barrels of water. Now, any reasoning person must see the folly of expecting an impounded and pipe-delivered water supply to be free from such an amount of suspended matter. They seem to overlook the fact that in a mile's walk in the dusty atmosphere of a city they must breathe many times more solid matter than is contained on their rag, which matter, instead of being perfectly harmless, is mainly composed of desiccated fecal animal discharge, mixed with human sputum, etc.

"If these things were really as dangerous as our pathological investigators would have us believe, we would better envelop ourselves in a carbolized gauze mantle, and take to a cyclone cellar."

A Hint from Nature.

THE following item recently appeared in The Times:

"Wandering in delirium, Thomas O'Donnell, a patient at the County Hospital, stumbled about the grounds for hours Tuesday night. He was found at 4 o'clock yesterday morning, lying unconscious in a clump of weeds.

"O'Donnell was suffering from heart disease, and had been gradually growing worse. His condition was serious on Tuesday. While the nurses were out of the ward, the sick man arose from his cot and stole away. His experience has wrought an apparent cure. Yesterday, in spite of a night spent in the open air with nothing on but his night robe, he was so far improved that he was able to sit up in bed. His fever had left him and physicians say that he will recover."

In earlier days, when the medical fraternity tortured fever and smallpox patients, and fed graves, by depriving unfortunate sufferers of fresh air and a sip of water, it was not uncommon for the delirious victims to break away from their custodians in the middle of winter, and wallow in the snow. In almost every such case, they speedily recovered.

One might suppose the doctors would profit by this hint of mother nature's. They don't seem to do so, however.

A Worthy Enterprise.

AN institution that is doing a large amount of good in a quiet way, without any beating of drums or flourish of trumpets, is the group known as the "Bethlehem Institutions." The "Mother House," at 510 Vignes street, includes church auditorium, men's hotel, coffee club, reading-room, library and social hall, boy's athletic club, plunge, tub and shower baths, industrial department and employment bureau, free dispensary, Spanish, Russian, Japanese and Greek night schools.

The Railroad Men's Hotel and Coffee Club, at Railroad and North Main streets, includes men's hotel and coffee club, library and reading-room, hall for social, educational and religious service, bath-house for men and women, boys' club.

El Club Belen, for Spanish people, now building at 1618 New High street, will include men's hotel and coffee club, reading-room, library and games, auditorium for English and Spanish religious services, night school and social center, boys' club. The Bethlehem Church organization at Dolgeville, in the San Gabriel Valley, includes auditorium for social and religious services, library, reading-room and games, playground with gymnasium and social and education center.

The Grace Methodist Church, on Hewitt street, has been offered to Bethlehem at a bargain, and the next lot can be bought for a fair price. This is a strategic spot, between the Santa Fé and Southern Pacific depots, and in the midst of the industrial region. To secure this property, furnish the new buildings and put the institutions on a strong financial basis will require $50,000. This must be raised by May 1. To do this, a "whirlwind campaign" is being organized for the month of April. The editor does not believe in "whirlwind campaigns," either for the purpose of saving souls, or raising money. They are not wholesome or lasting in their effects. He believes rather in the steady, systematic and persistent support of such worthy institutions as this by those to whom an abundance of this world's goods has been given.

Subscriptions to this enterprise should be sent to Dana W. Bartlett, of 510 Vignes street, Los Angeles. Mr. Bartlett is devoting his life to this good work. The 1st of May will be the 11th anniversary of his activity in Los Angeles.

Minerals in Foods.

H. T. McQUEEN writes from Santa Barbara as follows:

"Permit me to call your attention to an inaccuracy in your issue of March 3. You say: 'Chloride of sodium is not found, as such, in food, but chlorine and sodium are found abundantly, especially in fruits and vegetables.' A little farther down on same page you say: 'The reason why people crave table salt is because they starve their nerves by eliminating from their food a large proportion of the highly necessary organic salts, including chlorine and sodium.'

"Chlorine is not a salt, nor any kind of chemical compound. It is an elemental greenish-yellow poisonous gas which if inhaled will produce a violent fit of coughing which may end in spitting of blood. Unlike carbonic acid gas, (C.O.2) the victim rendered insensible by chlorine cannot be revived.

"Sodium is not a salt, as you indicate, but an elemental metal of a silvery white appearance, which must be kept in naphtha, kerosene or some substance free from oxygen. If brought into the air and dried it oxidizes almost immediately. If brought in contact with water it will take fire and burn rapidly with a yellowish flame.

"If we burn a piece of sodium (Na) in a vessel filled with chlorine gas (Cl) we get a white powder (NaCl) which is the chloride of sodium or common table salt. This compound, like all chemical compounds, has none of the characteristic qualities of its components. Common salt is always found as such in water, vegetables, etc. Sodium and chlorine are never found in the uncombined state."

This communication was referred by the editor to Otto Carqué, who has made a special study of the mineral elements in foods. Mr. Carqué comments as follows:

"Any one who has mastered the first principles of physiological chemistry knows that the different elements which enter into the composition of plants and animals do not exist isolated as such, but are chemically associated with different forms of protoplasm. Thus, if we speak of sodium and chlorine in tissues and blood, it is self-evident that we mean the different combinations into which they enter, and of which chloride of sodium is not the only one. Chlorine is contained in the gastric juice in the form of hydrochloric acid. It occurs as chloride of potassium in the tissues of plants and animals. Sodium is likewise found in different combinations, as phosphate and carbonate of sodium, besides chloride of sodium. It may be added, however, that the latter as it exists in the blood, is quite different in the atomic structure from the common table salt which crystallizes in cubes, while the former builds octahedrons. The chloride of sodium of the blood does not exist as such, but is intimately associated with the lymph and blood serum. It can be utilized by the body only in an organized state as found in natural food products.

"Speaking of the different elements which constitute the human body, they would all be more or less injurious if we would take them as proximate principles. Oxygen in its pure and undiluted state would have a highly intoxicating effect and would rapidly burn up our tissues. Phosphorus is a strong poison, and an atmosphere of pure nitrogen would instantly suffocate us. Likewise common table salt has an irritating effect upon the mucous membranes of the alimentary canal, is especially detrimental to the kidneys, and if taken for a long period will cause albuminuria."

From this the esteemed Santa Barbara correspondent will note that the "inaccuracy" referred to is non-existent.

Diet for Robbers and Murderers.

THE editor has on several occasions referred to the extraordinary doings of the bureau of the Agricultural Department presided over by Dr. Wiley, especially his wasting of six months' time and a large sum of the people's money in experimenting with a squad of young men whether such food preservatives as boracic and salicylic acids are poisonous—whether substances that will retard the disintegration of meat without the body will retard digestion within the body. In his bulky report, Wiley had to admit that these substances are poisons, even when taken in homeopathic doses. Now, it is announced that, of the young men who made up the squad, at least one has died from tuberculosis—as his family believe, because of the reduction in vitality produced by the prolonged poisoning. The Liberator says: "His experiment is a disgrace to the government that has permitted it, and it hints strongly of mental and moral aberration in the man who has conducted and is still conducting it."

This is rather rough on Wiley. He is, doubtless, no worse than the thousands of other physicians who, after conducting useless and cruel experiments on animals, are now turning their jaded mental appetites to human beings.

Here is another gem, relating to the same center of pernicious activity. It appeared, as a special dispatch from Washington, in The Times, a few days ago:

"'It's what you eat that makes you what you are.' That's what the food sharps of the Agricultural Department said today when they read of the conclusions of Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale that the vegetarian is the strongest type physically. According to a table of recipes outlined today food not only decides a man's muscular character, but his mental caliber and particular fitness in business life as well.

"Here are some of them:

"To make money in the stock market, eat meat fresh from the slaughter-house just as the eagle kills a lamb and eats it on the spot.

"To become a prize fighter or a great warrior, eat all raw meats.

"To be mediocre, eat cooked beef and——

"To cultivate brain storm, eat lobsters at midnight.

"To be a molly coddle, eat nuts and breakfast foods.

"The government authorities point to the facts that just as the carnivorous animals as the tiger and lion are predatory and ferocious, so can a human being become by devouring raw meat. And by the same process the herbivorous animals, like the cow and horse, are traceble and strong, just as the man is who lives on vegetables."

The idea that you can specially make flesh by eating flesh, or blood by drinking blood, is on a par with the belief of the savage, that he may gain increased courage by eating his fallen adversary's heart. These people ignore the fact that nature breaks up all food into its ultimate molecules, and rearranges them, before they furnish the body with strength. Only the carbo-hydrates are burned up directly in the body, to produce force and heat.

Yet, if you are ambitious to resemble a tiger, a wolf, or a hyena, or to become a robber, either on the highway or on the stock board, you may undoubtedly succeed, if you eat largely of bloody flesh. So far, the statement is correct. That is the only rational way to eat it—as the carnivorous animals do. How many, however, would eat flesh if they had to run down the animal, tear it to pieces, and devour its quivering body?

It is waste of time and space, at this late day, to attempt to controvert those who deny that the natural food of man is fruit, nuts, and green corn—the same as that of the anthropoid apes, from which family man is descended. These apes are today by far the brainiest as well as the strongest of the animal kingdom. A gorilla will vanquish a full-grown lion. As to fighting, the Roman soldiers won their marvelous campaigns, making forced marches in heavy armor, on a diet consisting of a pound of wheat and a pint of light wine daily, complaining loudly when Caesar tried to feed them mutton, that it was not food for men. And we all know what the rice-eating Japanese did to the Russians, and how they astonished the medical world by their freedom from disease and their recovery from wounds.

However, perhaps we shouldn't take this yawp of Dr. Wiley's young men too seriously. They don't, anyhow, go quite so far as the late Dr. George M. Beard, of the University of New York, who, in a book, gravely argued in favor of cannibalism as an ideal diet.

Prof. Irving Fisher, of Yale, referred to in the dispatch, after a series of dietetic experiments, has arrived at the same conclusion as Prof. Chittenden, of the same college—that people eat far too much, especially too much nitrogenous food. Which is absolutely true.

"Limitless Life."

ALZAMON IRA LUCAS, who recently created a mild sensation near Santa Barbara, when he came from Denver and started a "Limitless Life" camp, called up the editor and asked for a ten minutes' interview. He was told the editor was compelled to refuse personal interviews, except in special cases, and was asked to send on his "thots" in writing. Whereupon—not in writing, but in print—Alzamon sent to the editor's residence, by special delivery, no less than 27 separate and distinct "exhibits," including leaflets, cards, circulars, portraits, and even a white silk badge. Of course, the editor has not had time to more than glance at this stuff.

Lucas announces himself as a "master servant," whatever that may be, with the "supreme service center" at Denver. He boasts of being "radiant with Indian blood, negro blood, and white blood." He was arrested in Montana, for practicing without a license, and acquitted. The milk in the "limitless life" cocoanut appears to be found in the following paragraph:

"We issue certificates (desire receipts) to any person desiring to live a life of selfness—not selfishness nor selflessness—by applying to Life-workers or Service Center accompanied by One Dollar which is deposited as heretofore stated, in Denver, held in trust and subject to withdrawal for Extension purposes only at convention call."

Lucas writes to the editor: "The extension fund is not mine or ours. It belongs to every voice in person, or by letter, at convention, to be used to best advantage." Yes, but, if deposited in Lucas's name, he could draw it, and do the extension act with it, to Canada, or Mexico. Not that the editor wishes to intimate that he would do any such thing.

So now, in addition to "Higher Life," and "New Thought," and many other similar vagaries, we have "Limitless Life." In the editor's opinion, all this is a waste of time, that ought better be devoted to more useful purposes. All these movements are characterized by a diarrhoea of words and a constipation of ideas. There is always some one behind such movements who uses them to avoid the necessity of working.

At the same time, from what the editor can gather, he is inclined to believe that Lucas is a well-meaning man. Only, like many others, he has wheels—and they whirr.

the theory he is now working on is that an employé in the subtreasury is the victim of a dual nature of which he is ignorant, like Dr. Jekyll in the Stevenson story.

"The employé who is the subject of this new inquiry, it is said, is subject to absent-mindedness."

This is a variation on Hudson's theory of the dual mind. It is certainly a convenient theory. Where a criminal can't put in an "emotional insanity" plea, we may expect his able lawyer to plead the "dual personality." "My client was Hyde when he stole $1000 from the bank. He was Jekyll when he gave $100 of it to the church." Yes.

The New State Medical Law.

THE new medical law passed by the late unlamented Legislature of California, was forced by outside practitioners upon the "medical trust," as compromise. This is a pretty good evidence that the guerrillas outside the trust are becoming powerful, for this trust, like other trusts, never lets go of anything until it is forced to do so. The bill is a step in advance toward reasonable freedom in the practice of medicine, but it still leaves much to be desired. In response to a request from the editor, R. D. Emery, D. O., sends the following statement, as the views of a broad-minded osteopath, in regard to the new law:

"The Governor of the State of California has signed a bill entitled, 'An Act for the Regulation of the Practice of Medicine and Surgery, Osteopathy, and Other Systems or Modes of Treating the Sick or Afflicted, in the State of California, and for the Appointment of a Board of Medical Examiners in the Matter of said Regulation.' Thus, the Senate bill here mentioned, which had previously passed both Senate and Assembly, became a law of California, taking effect May 1, 1907.

"This new statute, among other things, provides as follows: First, that the Governor shall appoint a board of medical examiners composed of eleven members: five allopaths, two homeopaths, two eclectics, and two osteopaths.

"Second—That every one desiring to commence the practice of medicine and surgery, osteopathy or any other mode or system of treating the sick, must secure a license to do so, from this board.

"Third—Applicants for licenses are required to submit to the board a diploma from the college from which they are graduated. These diplomas must be indicative of certain standards, as follows: The colleges giving courses in medicine and surgery must maintain a standard as high as that fixed and prescribed by the Association of American Medical Colleges. The colleges in osteopathy must be legally chartered, each having a course of instruction of at least twenty months, requiring actual attendance, and after 1908, of three years of nine months each, and including the studies examined upon under this act. The colleges teaching other modes or systems of treatment must be legally chartered.

"In addition to submitting a diploma the applicant must take an examination before the board in the following subjects, to wit: anatomy, histology, gynecology, pathology, bacteriology, chemistry, toxicology, physiology, obstetrics, general diagnosis and hygiene.

"If the applicant presents a diploma, as required, and passes a successful examination before the board, a certificate to practice is granted. The board issues three forms of certificates. One form is granted to graduates in medicine and surgery, a second form is granted to graduates in osteopathy, and a third form to graduates in other systems of therapeutics.

"Fourth—Penalties are provided for those practicing without the required license.

"Fifth—The act further provides that none of its provisions shall be construed to interfere with or inhibit service in case of emergency, or to interfere in any way with the practice of religion.

"It is needless to say that the statute has many features which are highly commendable: The establishment of a common basis of education is good. The freedom which it gives for the development and practice of the method or system of treating disease which any certain individual favors is to be warmly welcomed. The fact that it aims toward the protection of the general public by compelling physicians to have a thorough fundamental knowledge of life, the human body, and of the methods and agents which they employ in their treatment, commends it to all.

"On July 9, 1905, you published an article of mine in the 'Care of the Body,' proposing a national or State medical bill, which provided, in part, as follows: First, that any person desiring to commence the practice of any healing method should take an examination. Second, that this examination should be so arranged that there would be a general examination in basic subjects, and special examinations in each of the schools of therapy in which the applicant wished to practice. Third, that the examinations should be conducted in an absolutely impartial manner. Fourth, it provided for any new school of healing which might arise in future.

"It will be seen that the new medical statute covers most of the points mentioned in the above proposed bill. One material difference, and only one, exists between the two. It is this: The question of qualification for the practice of medicine and surgery in this State is left, for final settlement, in the hands of the Association of American Medical Colleges; without recourse through the medium of examinations or otherwise.

"If a person has passed the required examination above mentioned, but has not attended a medical college whose requirements are those prescribed by the Association of American Medical Colleges, such a person would be obliged to take a full course of four years in one of the above mentioned medical colleges in order to enter upon the practice of surgery or medicine in the State. This is unjust, for fully three of the four years devoted to a medical education are spent in the study of the subjects examined upon under this act.

"Those taking their basic work in an osteopathic college or in a naturopathic college, can receive no credit, for such basic work, in colleges recognized by the Association of American Medical Colleges, because of the rulings of that association. The injustice of this position is readily recognized by those who are familiar with the high-grade work being done in our osteopathic colleges; work which is equal to the work of the better grade of American Medical Colleges.

"Fortunately, osteopathy is a complete system of medicine in itself, and does not need to lean, in any way, upon the older schools of medicine, or other methods of healing."

However, the fact still remains that it is unwise to afford to the Association of American Medical Colleges the opportunity, sanctioned by legislative enactment, to act arbitrarily in refusing to give credit for work done outside of old-line medical colleges, and, especially, when the law requires that the applicant must hold one of their diplomas in order to practice medicine and surgery. At least, opportunity should be afforded to qualify and enter the practice of medicine, surgery, or any method of treating the sick, through examination, as suggested in the proposed bill above mentioned.

D. L. Tasker, D. O., writes on the same subject as follows:

"In a recent issue of the Southern California Practitioner the editor takes occasion to urge opposition to the State licensing osteopaths. His reasons are under three heads. First. He states that requirements for matriculation in osteopathic colleges are lower than those of allopathic, homeopathic and eclectic colleges. These latter demand a high-school education. I note that the catalogue of the Pacific College of Osteopathy states, under the head of Admission: 'The applicant must have at least the equivalent of a high-school diploma.' This is in accordance with the regulations of the American Osteopathic Association. Second. He objects to the three-year course of osteopathic colleges because others give four years. He fails to call attention to the fact that the osteopathic colleges give three years of ten months each, while the best of the medical colleges give four years of eight months, an actual difference of only two months. It is quite a debatable question as to whether a student would not secure more training in thirty months of nearly continuous work than from thirty-two months frequently broken by four months vacations. Third. 'They profess, when applying for legislation to legalize their graduates, to treat only certain diseases, whereas in practice they treat almost everything they can lay their hands on.' The editor of the Practitioner is evidently unacquainted with what has been said to our legislators. This question about the extent of the practice of an osteopath has never been argued before the legislators. The whole question of legal regulation hinges on educational qualification. The osteopaths have demonstrated that they have the necessary educational qualifications.

"A new medical bill has been passed by the Legislature and signed by the Governor. Heretofore our medical laws have provided for separate boards of examiners because each group of physicians objected to being examined in their form of therapy by those of a different belief. The State has no business to differentiate between pathies, but it seems necessary to demand of each individual who desires to treat diseases that he have a knowledge of the structure and function of the human body. This new law is excellent in that it compels every one who desires to practice any form of therapeutics to take an examination in basic medical subjects. No examination is given in methods of treatment because it is fairly self-evident that one who can pass an examination in fundamental subjects has had some form of education in a rational therapy. After passing this general examination the applicant is licensed and his form of therapy, be it drugs, surgery, osteopathy, chiropractic, naturopathy, or some other not yet heard of, is a matter largely dependent on what his college taught him. This is a large advance in matters of medical legislation. Let us hope it will eliminate some of the debates about things that are merely believed and concentrate the State's examination on what is known about the human body. The only thing the State ought to demand of any practioner is a reasonable knowledge of the structure he proposes to treat."

The Editor's Horoscope.

THE TIMES is publishing a daily "horoscope," furnished by a contributor. On March 21, the writer said:

"Both males and females born on this day are generally endowed with an abundance of electro-magnetic power which not only enables them to attract friends but to effect wonderful cures."

It happens that the editor's birthday falls on March 21, so readers of the "Care of the Body" may be encouraged to expect wonderful cures, by "absent treatment" through these columns—if they follow instructions.

Sweetstuffs.

THAT article on sugar has aroused much attention. No wonder. Americans eat more sugar, and suffer more from dyspepsia, than any other people on the face of the earth. According to the "Statistician and Economist" for 1903-4, compiled and published by Louis P. McCarty of San Francisco, Cal., there was consumed during the year 1902, in the United States, 2,566,106 tons of sugar, or 72.8 pounds per capita. About one and one-third pounds of sugar a week for each individual in this country.

As Dr. Tilden says in "A Stuffed Club:"

"Is there any wonder that catarrh is prevalent all over the country?"

Care of the Body.

Several have asked if beet sugar is also bad. Yes. Chemically, cane and beet sugar are the same.

Others have asked if brown sugar is as injurious. No. Brown—or "moist" sugar, as it is called in England—is nearer to the cane—is not so refined, and consequently emasculated—contains something besides straight carbon. Consequently, it is—not more wholesome but—less unwholesome. The same remarks apply, still more, to molasses, maple sugar, and honey. Only, be sure you get your honey pure, not mixed with glucose. Maple trees are injured by continual tapping, and gradually give less valuable food.

The above sweetenings are all better than refined white sugar, a starvation food, but they should be taken in great moderation, if at all. They are all far behind sugar cane, beet roots and—above all—the grape sugar in sweet fruits. The simple cutting out of cane sugar will often be followed by a remarkable improvement in health.

Dr. J. H. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, one of the highest authorities in the world on food values, writes to the editor as follows:

"I have a copy of the Los Angeles Times for February 17, containing your excellent article on cane sugar. I think you have fairly mastered this subject. I will call your attention to an editorial article in the next number of my journal, Modern Medicine, on cane sugar, which may interest you."

Where Dr. Haig Is Wrong.

A WRITER in the New York World has been enlarging upon a statement, made some time ago, by Dr. Alexander Haig, of London, and commented upon here, to the effect that the increasing number of deaths from heart failure is largely due to underfeeding. Nonsense! For every case of heart failure due to underfeeding, a thousand or more are due to overfeeding, wrong feeding, or drugs.

You may, of course, eat daily half a dozen pounds of white bread, and sugar, and meat and vegetables, boiled and the water discarded, and yet be starved. That, however, is another question. Dr. Haig doubtless refers to nourishing food.

Rip Van Winkles.

IN New York State, the "regulars" are trying to get the Legislature to knock out the osteopaths, as quacks. Too late! These "regulars" are regular Rip Van Winkles. They don't see the handwriting on the wall. They fail to realize the Niagara of public opinion that is running away from the drug and knife superstitions. As a New York lawyer said, the Legislature may regulate, but not prohibit. If the Legislature could prohibit osteopathy, the next Legislature could prohibit allopathy.

Why don't the "regulars" drive out the scoundrelly advertising quacks, who are nearly all M. D.'s, instead of persecuting honest healers? Why?

"Wholesome Reading.

A CORRESPONDENT, who is apparently ashamed of his name, as he doesn't sign it, suggests that the editor should cut out humor and the psychic.

That's just what some of your ponderous fellows call "wholesome reading"—stuff that contains no humor, and no soul. The editor passes. He isn't built that way, and he wasn't brought up that way.

Thunderstorms.

THUNDERSTORMS are rarities in Los Angeles. When seen and heard, they are usually in the mountains, twenty or more miles away. Some have supposed there have been more thunderstorms than usual, during the past few months. In reply to an inquiry from the editor on this subject, A. B. Wollaber, local forecaster of the United States Weather Bureau, writes as follows:

"I beg to state that, in looking over the records of this office, it is found we have from two to three light thunderstorms each year. With exception of 1905, there has been no notable increase. During that year conditions were exceptionally favorable for their occurrence. We have had two this winter, both of which were considerably distant from the city, and could hardly be called more than distant thunder."

One Poison to Cure Another.

THE regular monthly cancer cure comes this month in the shape of an injection of "the mixed toxin of erysipelas and bacillus prodigiosus." "Prodigious!" indeed, as the Dominee would say. The dispatch adds: "It was noticed that when a man with a cancerous tumor got erysipelas, the tumor sometimes disappeared." Sure! Another proof that all disease is one—an effort of nature to cast forth morbid matter from the system. It was at one time proposed to cure tuberculosis by syphilis. Think of it!

Why will these doctors always wander from the plain and easy path of nature into such devious and dangerous byways? Why use one poison in the vain attempt to cure the effects of another? Why not rather aid nature to cast forth the first poison? Why?

The Deadly Gasoline Stove.

IN reply to a request for information, Fire Chief Walter Lips informs the editor that, of 283 residence fires during the past years, 41 were caused by gasoline stoves—those "perfectly safe" gasoline stoves.

It is a subject for wonder, first, that people will have such dangerous "contraptions" in their houses, and secondly, that insurance companies accept such risks.

Cunning Wolves.

A PESTERED TRAPPER BACK FROM THE FAR NORTH.

From the New York Sun.

"THE wolves were howling terribly about Bark Lake all winter," said Jules Godden, an old trapper who has just come in from the upper Gatineau country. "They had bothered me badly on the trapping lines up near the height of land in November when the snow was only a few inches deep on the level.

"Every round I made a big pack would be ahead of me and everything would be torn out of the traps. Where I had set for mink, so that when pinched the creature would get into the water and be drowned by the weight of the trap, the wolves would pull on the chain, drag up the dead thing and eat it clean out of the steel. And I never saw the mink better and larger than they are this year.

"I got a paw belonging to one little wolf pup out of a fox trap. I brought it along, for that is about all I got in two weeks, with more than 300 traps, besides snares and deadfalls. It cost enough to be worth as much as a jackrabbit's foot, anyway.

"Yes, I guess the wolves took a good hundred dollar's worth of fur out of my traps. Watch for them? Why, man, I sat up in trees all night, I dug holes in the snow and buried myself for hours and hours, I 'most poisoned myself with animal musk to kill the human scent, and the nearest I ever got to one of those brutes was when they would set up howling two or three hundred yards away from where I was hiding for them.

"Oh, yes, come to think of it, one day I saw nine of them, great big brutes, seven feet long, chase a deer the whole length of White Deer Lake. The poor thing was loping along easily, half stopping every half mile or so to look back and see if they were still on her tracks.

"I ran down a ridge to the outlet, where it had only froze over the night before, to see how she would take off, whether by the old log road, which ran 'round to near where I was, or into the scrub. She did a mighty neat trick there.

"Right on the edge of the glare ice she turned sharp off, headed across the lake and jumped into the bush, into an old greatly used deer pad. The wolves came lumbering along with their heads well down, and first thing they knew were trying to stop and wheel around on the new slippery ice.

"Two of them went sliding on clean into the outlet and had quite a time of it crawling out of the current again. All of them got ugly falls and lost time getting their footing.

"I was too far away to hurt them, but I fired two or three shots to frighten them and give the doe a chance. But they slunk off after her, and I shouldn't wonder if they got her some time that day or the next.

"They are persevering, are wolves, when they get on a fresh track. I have known them to chase a cow moose for five days, giving her no rest day or night till she was dog tired, and got pulled down at last.

"It was mighty poor business for me, though, and the second week in December I up stakes and made south. It is pretty much of a contract to take up three or four hundred traps and and snares when they are scattered over fifteen or twenty miles of country and then portage them with chains and springs all frozen thick with ice and snow.

"About New Year's I got them all down again, around the Bark Lake country, and had first-rate luck. My camp was in an old lumber shanty, and when the wolves howled every night I was not sorry to have the heavy logs between me and the bad weather.

"No, they didn't bother the traps very much about those parts. There were so many rabbits they had no need. All the old hunters say they never saw so many as there are this year, and the way the wolves picked them up was something cruel.

"I got one little wolf, the smallest one I ever saw, in a snare. The wire had been fastened to a birch sapling, bent down so that when the rabbit kicked the tree would spring back and hang him up out of the way.

"When I got there one morning I noticed the snow all around was padded into ice by wolves. They had been trying to catch hold of the little brother that had been caught by jumping, and you could see where the cute things had been gnawing and tearing the bark as they tried to bend the sapling down again.

"The dead wolf seemed to have his teeth well grown, and must have been a dwarf. But his scalp was worth $15, just the same as if he had been nine feet long.

"The wolves didn't leave many partridges in that country. I saw dozens of places where a wolf had sneaked along to the spot where a partridge had made a dive at sundown to get a soft, warm bed underneath the snow. There would be just a few feathers to show where the brute jumped on top of the sleeping bird before he got hold of it."

"Why did you not poison the pests?"

"Well, say, I did try. Now and then I snared partridges and I would fix them up with dope carefully and then cover them in the snow and smooth everything off so nicely.

"I got a fine cross fox one moonlight night, and most times wolves came to the right place, but they never touched the doctored bait unless it was to scratch out a dead bird and leave it lying on top of the snow, as much as to say: 'No, you don't come it as easy as all that.'

"I have always heard that it is pretty hard to fool a wolf. One day I came on a still warm half-eaten deer. The brutes must have heard me coming and cleared off in a hurry.

"I cut in with my knife and ladled out strychnine with the point, and then pushed it into the cuts, taking care that none of it showed and that my hands did not touch the meat. It must have been pretty well done, for I got a fox and two martens that week. But though the wolves kept the snow all padded down about the carcass, never a one touched the meat again.

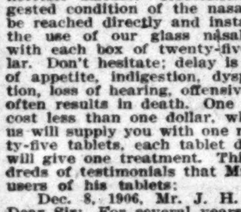
"Just about two weeks ago I made a fine haul in the traps, and because they were too heavy for me to lug around I hung a bunch of mink, muskrats and two fishers in a tree till I could get back for them. I finished my round and was near the place again when it struck me that maybe the wolves had found my game.

"So I crept along very carefully—the wind was strong against me, and I got near enough to see seven wolves whining about the tree. I was only just in time, too, for they had hit upon the right plan to get down my pelts.

"Two old wolves were reaching up high as they could, and then another one sprang on their shoulders, and from that cleared easily the ten feet from the ground to the fishers and grabbed them. I got that wolf with a shot clear through his forequarters just as he straightened out. His mates cleared off without waiting to tear my dead things.

"But it got on my nerves to have the cowardly beasts dodge me about all the time, and I gathered in the whole line of traps right away and came down. Of course it's early yet to leave the woods, but I got $300 worth of fur, which is good for five or six weeks trapping nowadays.

"For my part I never had such a grand season for trapping, but every one up that way says wolves have never been more plentiful than they are just now."



Catarrh
Positively Cured
IN THREE DAYS TO THREE MONTHS.
HAY FEVER CURED TO STAY CURED IN ONE WEEK.
COLD IN HEAD CURED IN FROM ONE TO THREE APPLICATIONS.

The most wonderful remedy known to medical science, used and recommended by physicians, not a medicine that will upset your system, but simply a tablet dissolved in warm water and used as a nasal douche and throat gargle that will reach the diseased parts, cleansing, healing and leaving them in a perfectly healthy condition. Don't dose yourself with medicine to be taken internally, trying to secure relief from this horrible disease. CATARRH is an inflamed and congested condition of the nasal mucous membrane; it can be reached directly and instant relief be gained, through the use of our glass nasal douche, which we supply with each box of twenty-five treatments, price one dollar. Don't hesitate; delay is dangerous, often causes loss of appetite, indigestion, dyspepsia, ulceration, consumption, loss of hearing, offensive breath, coated tongue, and often results in death. One visit to a physicion will not cost less than one dollar, whereas one dollar spent with us will supply you with one nasal glass douche and twenty-five tablets, each tablet dissolved in warm water and will give one treatment. This testimonial is one of hundreds of testimonials that Mr. Ormsby has received from users of his tablets:

Dec. 8, 1906, Mr. J. H. Ormsby, Los Angeles, Cal. Dear Sir: For several years I have suffered with nasal catarrh, which caused headache, also a weak stomach, and I was always congested and felt like gagging in the morning. I have tried a number of catarrh remedies, but did not get relief until I tried your Nasal Douche Tablets. They have, I believe, completely cured me, and my nose and throat for the first time in years feel fine. I cannot say too much in my praise of your catarrh cure, and in conclusion give you authority to publish my letter if you so desire. Respectfully,
ROBERT A. BALMER,
1615 Morton Ave., Los Angeles.

ALL READINGS REDUCED THIS WEEK.
I CALL YOU BY FULL NAME.

I possess the SECRET POWER of reconstructing unhappy domestic affairs and making the home happy, of gaining the one you wish in marriage, of making the ONE YOU LOVE ADMIRE AND LOVE YOU, of overcoming rivals, gives you the SECRET POWER OF INFLUENCING PEOPLE WITHOUT THEIR KNOWLEDGE OF DOING YOUR EVERY WISH, OF OVERCOMING ENEMIES AND PLACING YOU IN A PLACE OF POWER AND INFLUENCE.

ST. ELMO, THE ACKNOWLEDGED ADEPT AND RECOGNIZED AUTHORITY OF HINDOO PHILOSOPHY AND OCCULT MYSTERIES MAKES A REMARKABLE STATEMENT: "YOUR GREATEST WISH CAN BE REALIZED—YOU WOULD NOT DESIRE A THING IF YOU WERE NOT CAPABLE OF ATTAINING IT."

I KNOW HOW TO CONTROL AND USE THAT POWER FOR YOUR SUCCESS AND MINE. IF YOU WISH TO SUCCEED IN ANY BUSINESS UNDERTAKING, CONSULT ME. I can put you on the right road. If you desire to win in love, or be reunited with one from whom some trouble or estrangment separates you, I CAN AND WILL HELP YOU TO GAIN THE DESIRE OF YOUR HEART. Are you tired of being poor and living a "from-hand-to-mouth" existence? If so, COME TO ME AND I WILL SHOW YOU A BETTER WAY. Life is not half so much of a mystery as some people would have you believe. If you had studied more in Nature's laws and learned the lessons there revealed you would know better WHY SOME PEOPLE SUCCEED AND OTHERS FAIL. There is a good reason, just the same as THERE IS A REASON why water will run down hill more easily than it will run up hill. I CAN EXPLAIN THAT REASON to you. I AM SUCCESSFUL MYSELF. I do not make this claim in the spirit of a braggart or egoist but to enable you to appreciate what I can do for you.

MY EXTENSIVE PATRONAGE AND GREAT SUCCESS ARE THE ENVY OF ALL COMPETITORS. I AM NEVER IDLE. MY MOTTO IS—"WORK AND WIN." I HELP MY PATRONS TO SUCCEED IN ATTAINING THEIR VARIOUS AMBITIONS, THAT IS WHY I HAVE SO MANY OF THEM, AND WHY EACH ONE RECOMMENDS ME TO THEIR FRIENDS.

The All-wise Creator did not endow you with high ideas, noble inspirations, desire for happiness and return for that great love craving within your heart without at the same time placing within your reach the means of attaining these desires. If you are in trouble of any kind or not satisfied with your condition in life, come to me and I will make this clear to you. I have helped others. I CAN HELP YOU. Positively NO CHARGE if I fail to TELL YOUR NAME IN FULL, your occupation, what you called for, whom and when you will marry, anything you wish to know.

THE WONDERFUL HISTORY OF ANCIENT SEERS DOES NOT RECORD TO THEIR CREDIT A MORE STRANGE AND EXTRAORDINARY GIFT THAN IS POSSESSED BY

TREVEL-YAN

THE MOST FAMOUS AND GIFTED

IN CALIFORNIA.

PERMANENTLY LOCATED AT

THE YOSEMITE,

115½—S. BROADWAY—115½

WITHOUT ANY PREVIOUS KNOWLEDGE AND HAVING NO NATURAL MEANS OF KNOWING WHO YOU ARE, WHENCE OR FOR WHAT YOU CAME, HE TELLS YOUR NAME AND OCCUPATION. HE TELLS YOU NAMES OF FRIENDS AND ENEMIES—WHO IS TRUE AND WHO IS FALSE. TELLS WHOM AND WHEN YOU WILL MARRY, GIVING NAMES AND DATES, AND FACTS AND LOCATION, TAKING NO FEE IN ADVANCE, ACCEPTING NONE UNLESS SATISFACTION IS GIVEN.

NO NEED TO TELL HIM.

THERE IS NO NEED TO TELL TREVELYAN YOUR STORY. THERE WILL BE BE NO "QUIZZING" OR ASKING OF QUESTIONS BY THE LIFE READER. HIS TALENTS ENABLE HIM TO INSTINCTIVELY KNOW YOUR WANTS AND TROUBLES. WITHOUT ANY ATTEMPT AT MYSTIFICATION, BUT WITH UNERRING SIGHT INTO THE INNER NATURE OF THINGS, HE REVEALS THAT WHICH YOU MOST WISH TO KNOW. HIS ADVICE AND HELP ON ALL MATTERS, BUSINESS, LAWSUITS, MARRIAGE, HEALTH, IS INVALUABLE. IT IS EXACT AND CORRECT—NOT GUESSWORK. HE GIVES NAMES, DATES, FACTS AND FIGURES AND SHOWS CLEARLY AND DISTINCTLY THE ROAD TO SUCCESS IN BUSINESS AS WELL AS IN DOMESTIC AND FAMILY AFFAIRS.

Many have lost faith in clairvoyance by false predictions that have been made by poor and unreliable clairvoyants, who have visited this city time and time again. But I have come here to make this my future home and therefore will prove my sincerity by the following offer:

I DO HEREBY SOLEMNLY AGREE AND guarantee to make no charge if I fail to call you by name in full, names of your friends, enemies, or rivals. I promise to tell you whether your husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false; tell you how to gain the one you most desire, even though miles away; in fact, tell you every hope, fear or ambition better than you can tell yourself, WITHOUT YOU SPEAKING ONE WORD—and if you are not absolutely satisfied when reading is over (you to be full judge), then pay me not one penny. And for the benefit of those who are skeptical, for the next seven days I reduce my celebrated five-dollar ($5.00) reading to the low fee—

$1.00 LOW FEE $1.00
$1.00 LOW FEE $1.00
$1.00 ONE DOLLAR $1.00
$1.00 ONE DOLLAR $1.00

Those who wish to take advantage of this low fee must call at once.

A SECRET YOU SHOULD KNOW!

The Power of Control—How to be master and ruler of your own Home and Affairs—Is your husband, wife or sweetheart indifferent to you? Are you occupying the position in life you are ably qualified for? Do you wish to possess the Key to the vaults of Love, Friendship, Success and Fame? Know the Secret of Control—the power to inspire trust and confidence and win success in business, social or financial life. "Arise! Throw off thy Shackles." Exchange sorrow for joy—Darkness for Light. "Be Master of your own Destiny."

HE NEVER FAILS.

To cause speedy and happy marriage with the one of your choice, reunites the separated, locates absent friends or buried treasures, ores, minerals, etc., gives you luck to win your biggest wish—and it takes him but a short time. In fact, he guarantees all he claims.

Gives names, dates, facts and figures, reliable advice and information on all Business, Investments, Speculation and Money Matters; warns you of coming dangers, averts trouble, sickness, etc.; guides you aright in all affairs of life, Love, Marriage, Divorce Law and Changes; tells if friends are true or false, who and when to marry; the future plainly revealed; lovers reunited; domestic troubles removed and gives to you the hand and heart of the one you love in marriage; troubles healed; the separated wife and husband reunited in peace and happiness; gives you power to succeed in your undertaking; tells you all about your family and home life; tells you what to do and what to expect.

BEFORE YOU GO INTO ANYTHING OF IMPORTANCE—OR UNDERTAKE ANYTHING SERIOUS—IF YOU ARE NOT SUCCESSFUL IN BUSINESS, OR LOVE OR MARRIAGE, OR BEFORE YOU INVEST IN ANYTHING YOU SHOULD CONSULT THE MASTER MIND OF CLAIRVOYANCE,

TREVELYAN,

KNOWN ALL OVER THE WORLD.

THE NAME SHELDON
A DOUBLE GUARANTEE.

MAN OF PSYCHIC GIFT POWER IS SHELDON.

The most critical test that one who practices a profession must submit to is the crucial test of time. No business that is ever so slightly tinged with fakirism or doubt can withstand the development of time and the interchange of ideas among those who consult, investigate and pass judgment. Professor Sheldon has been in California eighteen years. He has been consulted by thousands. The best evidence of his wonderful power is the testimony of his large clientele, who come from every walk in life; secondary to this is the true and brilliant work of eighteen years of restless activity and without exciting the hostility or failing to secure the admiration of every person who has consulted him. A man should be judged by his works, and so he is. Prof. Sheldon has been tried. He has met every expectation, every advertised promised, and his reputation is established.

I hereby solemnly agree and guarantee to make no charge if I fail to call you by name in full, names of your friends, enemies or rivals. I promise to tell you whether your husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false, tell you how to gain the love of the one you most desire, even though miles away. How to succeed in business, speculation, lawsuits; how to marry the one of your choice; how to regain youth, health and vitality. Removes all evel influences, cures drink habit, locates treasures, cures all nervous diseases.

How can I have good luck?
How can I succeed in business?
How can I make my home happy?
How can I conquer my enemies?
How can I marry the one I choose?
How can I marry well?
How soon can I marry?
How can I conquer my rival?
How can I make any one love me?
How soon will my love propose?
How can I get a letter?
How can I get a good position?
How can I remove bad influences?
How can I control any one?
How make distant ones think of me?
How can I settle my quarrel?
How can I hold my husband's love?
How can I keep my wife's love?
Sheldon never asks questions.

STANDING CHALLENGE.
$5000—FOR HIS EQUAL—$5000.

SHELDON

has been a native of California for the last eighteen years and is legally ordained to one of the oldest spiritualist societies in the world.

My only reason for calling you by name and what you called for—I do this incidentally as a chain to read by.

He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect; if nothing can be done for you he will not take one cent of your money. Has not this honesty on the face of it?

The folowing list shows purely and simply that Sheldon has been consulted by the most popular and most noted men and women of the world, and his reading of their lives was pronounced most wonderful—Julia Marlowe, Sarah Bernhardt, Helen Gould, Hon. C. H. Harrison, President McKinley, President Harrison, President Cleveland, Senator Depew, Senator Hanna, Senator Foraker, Senator Spooner.

No man has ever been consulted in more notable affairs than he. In Europe and America he has advised thousands in various walks of life, and always to their advantage.

Sheldon stands alone, possessing a force, a power, a gift—call what you will—that none can explain, none can account for.

During the last ten months I have brought around through this wonderful power of personal control, 721 marraiages, 142 separations, without any after trouble, came by the mutual consent of opposing parties; located 18 buried treasures; located 19 wills and 11 deeds; success in gaining 310 pensions; reunited 118 separated; have helped 182 investors; there have been 714 cases of such private nature I do not feel like classifying; in fact, it suffices to only say there is no heart so sad or wish too great that your hopes cannot be speedily realized by the force of this wonderful power.

He can relieve your anxiety, care, embarassment, can astonish, guide, comfort, cheer and strengthen you.

Make no change in business, do not buy or sell a rooming-house, do not buy mining stock, do not buy a lot, a farm, a ranch, or make a lease without first seeing Sheldon. He will advise you to your advantage. He asks no questions.

SUCCESS AWAITS YOU.
OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS AT YOUR DOOR.
WILL YOU ANSWER?

BEWARE

of pretenders and partially developed mediums. They copy his advertisement and in many smaler cities use his name. Please remember, Professor Sheldon can be seen only at his home office, in the Windham, 109½ S. Broadway.

My practice and professional reputation are built upon "honor," reasonable charges, fair dealings, faithful service and speedy success for my clients have won for me the largest practice in the State of California. My superior knowledge and power, give me advantages which warrant me in guaranteeing safer, surer and more rapid results than can be obtained elsewhere.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist, of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 17,)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn, in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper, can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HAS HIMSELF WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in everyday life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health, marriage and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill-luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
Daily and evenings; Sundays 9 to 1.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE, of 305½ S. Spring St., near Third.

THE CELEBRATED, RELIABLE PALMIST AND ASTROLOGER.

whose work is known throughout this entire land, and who has made a life study of PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY, has convinced hundreds of the best intellects and persons in all walks of life that HIS REMARKABLE READINGS AND PREDICTIONS FOR FUTURE EVENTS IN THEIR LIVES ARE UNPARALLELED.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S readings, which are thorough and scientific, have nothing in common whatever with the fictitious readings of illiterate, unreliable humbug palmists, astrologers, psychics, fortune tellers, and those who THROUGH TRICK METHODS, CLAIM TO TELL YOUR NAME, etc., after you yourself have written the information—who scarcely know one line or mount from the other, and who, by their disgraceful readings, drag these useful sciences into the mire of fortune telling and fraud. Prof. Althouse is not actuated by any feeling of ill-will toward any reader who may be GENUINE (for he believes all reliable readers should be encouraged); but he will—in the future, as in the past—denounce humbug work whenever and wherever he can.

A SATISFACTORY AND ABSOLUTELY CORRECT reading can only be had from one who has thoroughly mastered the laws of these wonderful sciences through years of critical study of planetary influences on the lines of the PALM, combined with large experience, trained judgment, etc. All kinds of diseases can be accurately diagnosed. Careful advice given in domestic, love affairs, etc., also of financial success or failure; changes, deaths, investments, vocation in life, and many other important things you should know, which cannot be mentioned here. WITH EACH PALM READING THERE IS ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE stands at the very head of the profession, having read—FROM LIFE—more celebrated people than any other reader. He does not deceive the public in this respect. HIS READINGS, TOO, MUST IN NO WISE BE CLASSED WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER READER NOW OPERATING IN THIS PART OF THE COUNTRY, AND HIS SKILLED WORK HAS NO COMPARISON WITH THEIRS WHATSOEVER.

E. H. SOTHERN says—"I find your readings coincides with Cheiro's," and "I am greatly interested in Palmistry." Frederick Warde says, "Your reading of my hands was most satisfactory. Your knowledge and skill in palmistry is REMARKABLE and gave me a much more exalted idea of that science than I have hitherto entertained." Louis James, actor, says, "I wish to say that your reading of my hand was ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY." Paul Gilmore, actor, says, "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading; it is by far the most scientific I have ever had." Juliet Crosby, actress, says, "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Prof. Althouse also read Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, ex.-Gov. Pardee, Gen. Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, Joaquin Miller, Ysaye, Sousa, Edison, Capt. Hobson, Creatore, Huntington, Susan B. Anthony, Nance O'Neil, Caruso, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Lillian Nordica, Constantino, Alice Neilson, Calve, Julia Marlowe, Modjeska, Adaberto, Sembrich, Gadski, Jefferson, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, James O'Neil, Lillian Russell, Wm. H. Crane, and hundreds of others. These are a few names of PUBLIC persons and are merely given to indicate the class of people being read, as well as the very best people of Los Angeles, WITH WHOM ALL HIS BUSINESS IS STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL. Intelligent, high-class patronage solicited—those capable of appreciating the superior qualities of a fine reader.

ASTROLOGY AND THE HOROSCOPE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE has also given many years of critical study to, and is an experienced practitioner in, the science of MODERN ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE IS DECIDEDLY A GUIDE IN LIFE, showing remarkable things when properly cast—from the position of the planets at your birth; in fact, TELLS EVERYTHING ABOUT ONE'S SELF WORTH KNOWING, being in truth one of the best investments the world offers. YOUR HOROSCOPE is also a key to the character of others, and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you. SCIENTIFIC PREDICTIONS, embracing all question of life, for the present, immediate future and events up to the close of life—made by these sciences—with most complete Primary and Secondary Directions (arcs, etc.)—through the trained judgment of Prof. Althouse—will stagger the senses. Beware, however, of the incompetent and unreliable reader.

To those who have not yet had a fine, thorough scientific reading—come to PROF. ALTHOUSE and have your hands read or horoscope cast, and watch the planets, as they transit the radical places of your birth, and note the events which will take place for you in the future—at the dates predicted—and you will be astonished at what these thorough readings will give you FOR THE FUTURE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in hand reading and casting of horoscopes has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

Daily and evenings; Sunday, 11 to 2.

And can buy or sell any stocks anywhere. Edward MacDermott has the largest stock brokerage business in Los Angeles; in fact, does more business buying and selling stocks on commission, than any two brokers in Los Angeles. Edward MacDermott's facilities for doinng business is unsurpassed, having the use in all the leading exchanges of the United States.

You must always bear in mind that Edward MacDermott has no business partners, therefore all orders must be signer by Edward MacDermott to be right. Of course, the public of Los Angeles need not to be told these things, but outside investors might be misled by curbstone brokers and irresponsible brokers who have no standing in this community.

Edward MacDermott has been years in his present place of business and has progressed and built up, until now he is at the head of the largest stock brokerage business in the whole Southwestern States. Edward MacDermott's motto, "IT PAYS TO BE HONEST," has proven correct. Other so-called brokers and fake promoters come and go, but Edward MacDermott grows in the public esteem daily.

The market this week has been on the fence, so to speak. Buyers being afraid to buy and sellers being afraid to sell, all are waiting for the outcome of the shut-down in Goldfield betwene the so-called mine owners and the unwise and foolish I.W.W. Bear in mind the miners are in this case, sufferers between the devil and the deep sea—and, so also, are the real mine owners of Goldfield. I MEAN THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE VARIOUS COMPANIES. THEY ARE THE REAL OWNERS, AND THE DAY WILL COME WHEN THEY WILL DICTATE THE RUNNING OF THEIR OWN PROPERTIES. My advice is still, to buy the good listed stocks, and here are a few Edward MacDermott tells you are good buys—

GOLDFIELD HERALD at market.
LITTLE FLORENCE at market.
MOHAWK FLORENCE at market.
MOHAWK DAISY at market.
LEE BURRO at market.
BULLFROG ALLIANCE at market.
STANLEY FORBES at market.

Of course, these are special good buys. In fact, you ought not to buy a share of stock unless you come to the Southwest Miners Stock Exchange and hear at public call at 11:30 a.m. daily, where all the stocks are offered in public. Buy stocks as you would anything of value, carefully, and do not buy stocks from promoters unless you want to pay double what it is worth. No prometr can take care of more than one mining company before he brings it to a producing paying stage, so leave alone stocks that are promoted by fakers who bring out a new mining company nearly every week. You can make money by leaving them alone.

Outside investors must bear in mind it is very hard to buy broken lots of stock. Mining stocks are generally sold in 100, 500 or 1000-share lots, so when ordering please remember this; also, if buying stock send the cash or a certified check. If selling stock, send the stock by registered letter and signed on the back, the same as the face of the stock. No orders will be taken over the phones. You must come or send to Edward MacDermott at the Southwest Miners' Stock Exchange, 114 South Broadway, then you will be better satisfied. If stock has to be purchased in Goldfield or San Francisco, you must have patience to wait until such time as the stock arrives, and be sure Edward MacDermott can get stocks as promptly, if not more so, than any other broker.

Southwest Miners' Stock Exchange.

IF A RANCHER SAID TO YOU
I have discovered a pile of wheat out here in the mountains that I can sell for $17.50 per ton; I have worked on it for years, have run over 3000 feet of tunnels through it, and I KNOW there is more than 26,000 tons of wheat all ready to be marketed; there is probably fifty times that much, but I KNOW there is $450,000 worth; it will cost $3.50 per ton to haul it to market; now if you will join me and invest some money to buy wagons and harnes sand horses to haul the wheat I will sell you an interest on a valuation of $200,000 for the whole thing—all now found, all to be found; two dollars for one to start with, and probably $25 for $1 before the wheat is hauled; I have other piles that look just as good, and they are all in on the deal.
WOULD YOU TURN THAT DOWN?

WE SAY TO YOU,
The Ozark Mining and Milling Co. offers you a better proposition than the rancher's, certainly just as safe, and probably much more profitable; let us satisfy you with proof; this is one of the sure things, the rare things, that are offered once in a decade; call at our office, or telephone and a representative will call and talk it over in private. Investments accepted $25 and up.

GOLDFIELD—
The labor troubles of the camp which are about settled, Mr. W. T. Bailey, president of the Third Chance Mining Company, has come down to the land of sunshine and flowers for a much-needed rest, after a strenuous year's work. Mr. Bailey has the greatest confidence in the situation, and says that the camp was never before in a better condition, that the half has not been told as to the wealth of the district, undoubtedly the richest gold mining camp in the world, although with the millions already taken out, the operators are practically only mining at the grass roots, for not one mine is working lower than 400 feet, and that Goldfield is yet only in its infancy. That the Mohawk is a wonderful mine, taking out $7,000,000 worth of the precious metal in ten months, and sending out the richest carload of gold ore ever shipped, valued at $590,000, and the stock jumping from 28c to $15 per share in ten months and 12 days, all which is phenomenal. Mr. Bailey is confident that many Mohawks are to be discovered this coming year, with the large amount of development work that is being done. Goldfield is fast taking on city airs, having a population of 20,000, where mines are rich at the grass roots and poor men become bonanza kings in a year. In regard to stocks, Mr. Bailey says that naturally among so many there are bound to be some wild-cat propositions, but any one buying a stock of any mine that is doing actual development work, in the proven district of Goldfield, and using common "horse sense," certainly has a right to expect a princely fortune. As to the Third Chance mine, Mr. Bailey has the greatest confidence the company is now in a position to soon show one of the best producing mines in the district, one of the largest and most up-to-date steam hoists has been erected, and a day and night shift are pushing development work, ledges have been cut with values as high as $60 a ton, and their surface indications are better than most mines in the district. The Third Chance is so situated that it is surrounded by such mines as the Atlanta, C. O. D., Combination, Gold Bar Ex., etc. etc. Mr. Bailey, although somewhat advanced in years, and always having lived in the eastern metropolis, has decided to cast his lot with Goldfield, whose praise he so sincerely sings. Any one wishing information as to the camp, can meet Mr. Bailey by appointment, by phoning Tony G. Anderson, 304 Fay Building, where he will be pleased to meet them and give any information desired. THE OZARK MINING AND MILLING Co.'s properties are now ready for a milling plant. Enough ore is now available for milling in one vein of one of the properties to keep a 50 ton milling plant in steady operation for nearly two years, with an assured profit to the stockholders of $350,000, almost 50c profit on each share now issued and to be issued to supply reduction works. That much now available on one vein, developed to a comparatively slight depth and for but a fraction of the exposed and tested surface showing.

The Wild Rose property produces ore now milling $35 to $40 per ton in free gold, with $15 per ton in sulphides. Wild Rose can supply a tremendous tonnage of $8 ore from a 35 foot vein.

A limited amount of stock is offered at 25c; when the first block is sold the next block will be offered at an advanced price. Buyers of Ozark stand no chance to lose; there is an actual, visible, tangible profit of 50c for each 25c share in the present development on one vein only. You get a chance like this once in ten years, not oftener. Buy stock in a real mine, operated by real miners, and with real profits in sight. Come in and talk it over. Some prefer to talk in private; telephone and a representative will call and explain every detail. If Ozark was in Goldfield you would pay $1 per share willingly. Gold is where you find it; Ozark has found it. Do not be afraid to ask questions; we will show you. If you can't call, write STERLING INVESTMENT CO., 223 W. First st., Los Angeles. Home A3054, Sunset Main 4266. 31

CHAMBERLAIN'S BATTLE FOR LIFE.

"JOE" IS NOW A MENTAL AND PHYSICAL WRECK.

The Statesman Who Was Long the Most Potent Force in English Politics, Has Gone to the South of France in Desperate Hope of Recuperating His Health.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 14.—Here is a touching photograph of Joseph Chamberlain, taken just before he left England for the South of France in the desperate hope that its blamy air and sunshine will do for him what the doctors have utterly failed to do—restore him to some small measure of health. It shows the statesman who was for many years the greatest individual political force in the British Empire—both the most admired and the worst hated—walking in the grounds of his country home at Highbury, near Birmingham, his feeble footsteps supported by his devoted American wife.

The precise nature of the malady which afflicts him has never been divulged by his family, but it is known that it has made of him a mental and physical wreck. That wonderful memory that enabled him so often to score over an opponent in debate is almost a blank. That he will ever again be able to take his place in the political arena in which he was such a brilliant figure, there is not the remotest chance. Finis was written to his public career months ago and since then his obituary has been standing in type in the composing-rooms of all the big newspapers in England and the colonies.

There was something very pathetic in the manner of his departure from England. That his melancholy condition might not be revealed to the crowds that would have assembled to wish him God-speed he traveled incognito and in secret. One might almost say he was smuggled out of England. Valescu to which he has gone is a charming little village snugly nestled among pine woods. It is frequented as a winter resort by invalids for whom the immediate neighborhood of the sea is not considered desirable. Two miles away on the seashore to the south is St. Raphael which has a population of over 4000, and is one of the pleasantest of the smaller winter resorts in the South of France.

In his resourcefulness, his masterly self-control, the frigid intensity with which he grappled his task, his nimbleness in debate, Chamberlain resembles much more the American than the English type of man who wins to leadership. He is a man who has adhered to the maxim, "When in Rome do as the Romans do." Though absolutely inaccessible to interviewers in England when in America he submitted with good grace to the custom of the country. There I had several conversations with him and on one occasion I told him that he was more like an American than any Englishman I had ever met. He seemed rather pleased with the observation, but he accounted for his divergence from the English type by saying that he had French blood in his veins. The sudden and dramatic collapse of his mental and physical powers is something to which Americans in public life are far more prone than their more easy-going English prototypes.

The long strain of her husband's illness, during which she has nursed him continuously, has seriously affected Mrs. Chamberlain's own health, and a well-known physician who has been frequently to Highbury for consultation during the last few months, told me that unless she could be induced to take some rest away from the invalid, she would probably break down too. She promised not to attempt any more nursing for the present, but emphatically refused to be separated from her husband.

LASTING ANATHEMA.

Curse of Monks, Disposessed from Ancient English Abbeys, Hangs Over Those Who Have Turned Piles to Sacriligious Uses.

OVER the ancient abbeys of England, some of which date back to the days of William the Conqueror, hangs the curse of the monks who were evicted from them when the Reformation gave England a new faith.

Many of these venerable piles have been converted into country houses, others are now the seats of worship for Church of England congregations. Still others are crumbling ruins, but around them all is an atmosphere of baneful misfortune, as if those from whom the abbeys had been sacrilegiously torn still hungrede for vengence, and reaching forward from bygone centuries were able to wreak punishment on the descendants of their despoilers.

Whenever the abbey comes into public notice it is usually in connection with some misfortune.

Not long ago Selby Abbey, founded by William the Conqueror, was partially destroyed by fire; Glastonbury is going begging, and after being on the market for many months, faces the prospect of being turned into a country seat by some wealthy American purchaser; Fyvie Castle, once an abbey, is fated with a curse; nothing but horror comes to those who live in Newstead Abbey; Battle Abbey and Cowdray Park have been the undoing of all who lived in them; Croyland Abbey was lately the scene of the sudden death of the man who had spent the best years of his life striving to effect its restoration, and so Combe Abbey, Fountains Abbey, Easby Abbey and Bolton Abbey all have their stories that make the blood run cold.

Newstead Abbey, where priests once bowed in prayer, was built by Henry II, in expiation of the murder of St. Thomas A. Beckett, archbishop of Canterbury. When it was wrested from the monks, a curse fell upon it which specially provided that it should never pass from father to son.

The fifth Lord Byron, a marvel of horrible crime, who committed cowardly murders and defied the memory of the holy men who had lived in the abbey, by rifling their graves, and having drinking cups made of their skulls, saw both his son and grandson die violent deaths in quick succession, and in this way the abbey passed to a distant relative.

The sixth Lord Byron, the famous poet, had no son, and left Newstead to a remote kinsman. The latter, pursued by the malediction, lost his only son and the property went to the late Frederick William Webb, the traveler and explorer. He so feared the effects of the prophecy that instead of willing Newstead to his son, he left it to his daughter, married to Gen. Herbert Chermside.

The monks held Battle Abbey, erected by William the Conqueror, till the time of Henry VIII, who drove out the friars and presented the abbey to his favorite retainer, Sir Anthony Browne.

The latter elected to take possession by a great feast, but when the revelry was at its height, a monk, tall and terrible, made his sudden appearance, and pronounced a solemn curse upon Sir Anthony and all who might succeed him in ownership of a property stolen from the church.

The prophecy of the monk has been marvelously fulfilled, for nothing but misfortune has come to the successor of Sir Anthony. He himself died suddenly; ;his son, Lord Montague, became involved with Guy Fawkes and the gunpowder plot, and was hanged. Several succeeding Lord Montagues came to their deaths by violence, and the last of the line, the eighth, was drowned in the Rhine.

Hoping to break the string of misfortunes, the owners disposed of Battle Abbey to Sir Godfrey Webster, who rebuilt it somewhat and rechristened it "New Battle Abbey," in the hope of taking the curse from himself, but all to no avail. Misfortune pursued him. Sir Godfrey lost most of his money, and was in turn forced to sell the abbye at an enormous loss. It passed through several hands before being purchased by the Duchess of Cleveland, mother of Lord Rosebery.

Suffolk folk blame the sudden death of Cecil Rhodes to the curse of Dalham Hall, which he had bought only a few months before his demise.

Dalham Hall had been a monastery in the time of William and Mary, but like many other similar institutions, was turned to other uses after Henry VIII came to the throne. This former abbey has never in its long history passed from father to son, and no permanent happiness has come to those who dwelt within its curse-laden walls.

All England is bemoaning the fact that Glastonbury Abbey may be converted into a home for some wealthy foreigner, yet though constant appeals have been made, funds are not forthcoming to purchase it for a national memorial.

Selby Abbey was dedicated to St. Germain and St. Mary and dated from 1097. It was one of the glories of the county of York, and architects came from far and near to study it as a fine example of the developed Gothic. In 1872-1873 Sir Gilbert Scott, at a cost of $50,000, restored the interior.

For long years Selby had been devoted to Church of England worship, and York confidently believed that the old curse of the dispossessed monks had lost its potency.

But, alas, not, for fire recently took the venerable pile in its clutch, and never desisted till the fine organ had been destroyed, the beautiful oak ceiling burned away completely, the walls toppled, the peal of eight bells melted, the tower burned out, pillars destroyed and the nave left in ruins.

More than $200,000 will be required to restore the abbey, and patriotic Englishwomen are striving to raise the money, but even should this rebuilding take place, Selby will never be the same, for the glory of its antiquity will have departed forever.

Croyland Abbey also has its curse, and it seems to act against the good as well as the bad.

Rev. Thomas Henry le Boeuf spent his life striving to restore Croyland to the glory of its past. He sent out 18,000 letters, appealing for funds, and finally raised $45,000 by which in various stages the work was completed.

The happy rector rising in his pulpit to tell a joyful congregation the story of the completion of his labor of love, was stricken as he stood before them and died in the pulpit.

Doctors ascribed his passing to heart failure, but many of the superstitious could nto forbear thoughts of the curse on the abbey.

One American girl has her residence in one of these curse-laden abbeys converted into castles. When Cornelia, only daughter of Mrs. Bradley Martin, married the Earl of Craven, she became one of the owners of Combe Castle, Coventry, which goes back to the year 1150, when it was the first settlement of the Cistercian monks in England. So far nothing ill has come to Lady Craven, which fact may encourage Miss Beatrice Ogden Mills, who, rumor says, may come into Welbeck Abbey, through the fact that the young Lord Howard de Walden is deeply infatuated with her.

Welbeck Abbey has an awesome history, made especially so by the fact that it was for years the home of the mysterious Duke of Portland, who had a horror of being seen by the public, and deep down in the ground beneath the abbey he built a subterranean home, with a huge riding school, picture gallery, chapel and library.

The Duke spent $15,000,000 on these burrowings. During a recent visit to Welbeck, King Edward inspected this underground home with deepest interest.

Lord Walden is quite different from the Duke, and should he win Miss Mills, will strive to entertain magnificently and banish the gloom from Welbeck.

Fountains Abbey is the generally accepted title for what was originally known as "Our Lady of the Fountains," way back in the days when Cistercian monks had their home there.

Like many others of the ancient buildings, Fountains has its martyr, for its last abbot, William Thrusk, was killed there during the days of the Reformation.

Bolton, in Yorkshire, is not so pretentious as Glastonbury, for instance, but it was once the center of a thriving community when the Augustinian monks were in control.

Bolton is a somewhat shapeless and casual structure, that has been the work of many centuries of building, various forms having been used at different times.

It is most noted for its wonderful surroundings, and with the soft Yorkshire moon shining on it, makes a picture that has appealed to many artists, including Landseer.

There are many other noted abbeys in the United Kingdom, whose histories are full of tragic and dramatic happenings. Among them might be mentioned Tintern Abbey, Sweetheart Abbey, Lincluden Abbey and Kirk-Stall Abbey.

UNCLE JOE CANNON GAYEST AT SEA.

MOST YOUTHFUL AND POPULAR OF BLUECHER'S TOURISTS.

He Exercised in the Gym While All the Rest Were Seasick—An Authority on Complexions—Dancing Before Oratory—Black Eye for St. Thomas Purchase.

Porto Rico Correspondence of New York Sun.

It was a happy day for the passengers of the Hamburg-American Line steamer Bluecher, now cruising in West Indian waters, when Uncle Joe Cannon went abroad. From the start the Speaker was the life of the boat, and by his quaint and genial manner easily seemed to be the youngest and actually became the favorite person on the vessel. Before the ship had been out of New York two days he seemed to be on intimate terms with most of the 300 persons taking the trip.

Uncle Joe is a member of the party going to see the Panama Canal. He is the guest of Congressman William B. McKinley of Champaign, Ill., the traction magnate. Others who accompany Mr. McKinley are: Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, whose mother is a full-blooded Cherokee Indian; Congressman J. Van Vechten Olcott of New York City; Congressman James S. Sherman of Utica, N. Y.; Congressman James R. Mann of Chicago, Congressman J. Lampton Moore of Philadelphia, Congressman James A. Tawney of Winona, Minn.; Col. L. White Busbey of Washington, D. C.; John C. Eversman of Champaign, Ill., and Dr. C. F. Hough of Champaign, Ill.

Mr. McKinley invited them to accompany him on such a jaunt several months ago, but it was not finally arranged until this month. The party left Washington on a special car shortly before midnight of Monday, March 4. They sailed the next morning.

Speaker Cannon was first heard from on the voyage as the Bluecher was leaving the pier in Hoboken. Up to that time he had kept well to his stateroom. A tug having on board a delegation from the New York Letter Carriers' Association and its band was snuggling close beside the big liner. The delegation had just sent aboard to Speaker Cannon and his colleagues a huge floral basket. Upon sight of the man they had been calling for a lusty cheer was raised. All sorts of greetings were exchanged as Uncle Joe stood smiling and bowing at the rail.

"That's fine music," he said as the band finished playing "Auld Lyne Syne."

"Much obliged, Uncle Joe," shouted an enthusiast, waving his cap. "Good-by, and we hope you have a fine time."

"Thanks, and good luck to ye all," answered the lanky man from Illinois, his face beaming.

That's the way Uncle Joe got away from New York. He has been meeting a continual ovation since. It's Uncle Joe this and Uncle Joe that. Whenever he's round the youngsters have to take a back seat. And with the women he is simply invincible. His old-fashioned courtesies and bows and scrapes put him in a class of which he is the only member.

A storm was encountered the second day out. The vessel pitched and rolled. Hardly anybody was about. As a matter of fact almost everybody was seasick, and pretty ill at that. About this itme Uncle Joe appeared on the job.

"Young man," he said to a steward, bracing himself to better ride an unusually harsh lurch of the boat. "Young man, I've been looking for the gymnasium. Where is it?"

After being duly directed to the place he exercised as thoroughly as if at home. Uncle Joe then borrowed some witch-hazel from Congressman Moore and vigorously rubbed himself down. This was followed by a hearty breakfast, capped off by one of the Speaker's famous seven-inch cigars.

"Great weather," he remarked with gusto to a fellow-passenger. But the latter didn't seem to be taking much interest in things. He was leaning far over the railing and apparently was intent upon examining something below in the foaming combers which were lashing the ship's sides.

Uncle Joe usually wears a suit of brownish-green clothes, much resembling homespun. One day a member of the McKinley party—a younger Congressman—made a jocular remark about the togs.

"That's all right, youngster," Cannon replied quickly, at the same time pointing to the person that spoke, who was attired in a suit of the latest cut. "That's all right—but how do you suppose the Old Man would look in a coat like that?"

This sally turned the laugh on the younger man.

Uncle Joe is old-fashioned in the extreme, and very simple in speech and habits. He constantly reminds those around him of written descriptions portraying Abraham Lincoln. At least the Speaker is of that type. Each morning upon arising he appears outside his stateroom with coat, waistcoat, collar and tie over his arm. Then he walks leisurely to the upper deck, regardless and apparently unconscious of the persons about. While breathing in a bit of fresh air he dons the rest of his garments. This manner of dressing causes much merriment among the passengers.

A reception was organized for Speaker Cannon by Mr. McKinley and all the passengers were invited. It happened that the night set for the affair, Friday, March 8, while the Bluecher was still at sea, fell upon the birthday of Congressman Moore. The festivities started early. A great birthday cake with candles was set at the Congressional table in the main dining saloon. Afterward, all hands assembled upon the upper deck, which was decorated with flags. Capt. Reessing and Ernest G. Schmolck of the steamer introduced the guests to Speaker Cannon and the party.

There was dancing later. Although Uncle Joe has seen his seventieth birthday, dancing appears to be one of his star accomplishments. After the festivities had gone on for an hour or so Congressman Sherman introduced Congressman Moore for a speech. After a few words, the latter insisted that Mr. Cannon speak. Uncle Joe had just given the signal for the band to start playing again for dancing. After much objecting he allowed himself to be led to the center of the floor, but insisted upon taking his dancing partner with him.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "it gives me the keenest pleasure to be in such a gathering of Americans, and I appreciate your attention and the honor you have done me. I hope we may become better acquainted. However, I object to making a speech tonight. I'd rather dance. Let's get up a quadrille. It would be lots of fun. Talk's cheap—we can talk all day tomorrow. Strike up the band, there, Mr. Musician, let's dance tonight."

Everybody laughed. Mr. Cannon grabbed his partner with a flourish. A storm of applause followed as usual. However, the German musicians had trouble playing a quadrille to suit Mr. Cannon. In the meantime the other Congressmen were called upon to do stunts. Mr. Olcott and Mr. Sherman recited pieces. Mr. Mann made a stump speech. Mr. Moore with eloquence and much eulogy introduced the host of the evening, Mr. McKinley. The latter said the introduction reminded him of a man breaking in a pony for his children. This person instructed a little boy to hide behind a bush.

"When I ride by you jump out and shout 'Booh,'" he said.

The small boy did as he was told, with such telling effect that the rider was thrown. The man complained. The boy insisted that he had followed instructions.

"True," said the man, "but I didn't tell you to make such a big booh for such a little horse."

It seemed that Mr. McKinley had asked Mr. Moore to introduce him to the guests.

After that Uncle Joe got the orchestra lined up and had his inning. An instance of his dancing spryness was shown on the main deck one afternoon. Everything was quiet, when without warning the band below struck up "Bill Simmons." The tune seemed to tickle the Speaker. In an instant he was on his feet jigging like a good fellow. Not satisfied with this he grabbed Congressman Olcott, who was reclining in a steamer chair hard by. The two went hop, skip and jig-legged down the deck like youngsters.

Interested spectators of many of the Speaker's antics were Dr. Andrew D. White, formerly president of Cornell University, and Ambassador to Germany and St. Petersburg, and the Rev. Dr. C. C. Tiffany of New York City.

RICHES IN CORNSTALKS.

[Leslie's Weekly:] Prof. Wiley of the Department of Agriculture says that inasmuch as every 100 pounds of cornstalks will yield six and a half pounds of absolute alcohol it is obvious that the ignorant argiculturist has been allowing an enormous amount of wealth to go to waste.

Say that one acre will yield from ten to twelve tons of grain stalks, or about 20,000 pounds, and you have a quantity of raw material which will produce 1300 pounds of absolute alcohol, or 216 gallons. Alcohol at the present time is worth 40 cents a gallon.

Ground in a wet condition and dried cornstalks may be kept indefinitely, and are ready at any time for conversion into alcohol.

Prof. Wiley says that the alcohol derivable from the cornstalks that now go to waste in this country would not only drive all the machinery of our factories but would furnish the requisite power for all our railroads and steamboats, run all of our automobiles, heat and illuminate all of our houses and light the streets of every city in the Union.

MRS. WARD'S SON SEEKS PARLIAMENT.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 11.—Arnold Ward, only son of the distinguished novelist, Mrs. Humphrey Ward, has again taken the field as a Parliamentary candidate, and is now wooing a constituency in West Hertfordshire, in the Unionist interests. If heredity counts for anything the young man ought to make his mark in the world, somehow. All the world has heard of his mother, but it is not generally known that his father, Humphrey Ward, is a remarkably talented man, though completely overshadowed by the genius of his wife. Arnold Ward is, besides, a great-grandson of the famous Dr. Arnold of Rugby.

One thing he has made manifest. He has the pluck to fight hard when he knows the odds are dead against him. ... the central election he stood for North Wilts, which the Liberals were cocksure of winning, and was whipped by something over 1400 votes. He is going again to almost certain defeat in West Hertfordshire, which the Liberals last carried by 1300, and the political pendulum has not yet begun to swing against them. But Arnold puts himself in the hands of his party and says, "I'll take my medicine in the fighting line wherever you choose to place me." The man who does that endears himself to the party managers, who will take care of him when their lean and hungry years are over.

Arnold Ward is a well-set-up, athletic, good-looking young man, and can make a fair speech, though he would probably be rated higher as a cricketer than as an orator. He is about 26 years old, a graduate of Balliol College, Oxford, and by profession a barrister. Among other things he is a keen motorist, but not a road-hog. He takes his car into no constituency where the electors prefer the horse. The North Wilts country folk loved not the snorting thing of fire and petrol, so Mr. Ward decided to do his electioneering there in horsed carriages. The first thing his horse did was to bolt through the streets of Swindon, colliding with a lamp post and badly shaking up the candidate and the two friends who were unlucky enough to share the conveyance with him. Still he pluckily stuck to the horse for the rest of the campaign.

He has never taken to literature himself, but, of course, is immensely proud of his mother's fame. He tells some queer stories of the use which the commercially minded have made of her reputation. When "Robert Elsmere" was making such a sensation, an enterprising American who ran a literary annex to his mammoth dry goods "emporium" sent her, as a compliment, one of his circulars, stating: "For economy in literature we defy anything to beat our 'Robert Elsmere' at 6 cents."

MAYOR FIGHTING FOR MARRIAGE.

THE UNWEDDED AT FORT DODGE FACE GRAVE CRISIS.

Iowa Town's Chief Executive Insists Upon Ordinance Fining Spinsters and Bachelors Unless They Find Mates—Communities and Families at War.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

FORT DODGE (Iowa) March 22.—Dissension is rife in Fort Dodge today over the proposed ordinance which comes up for final vote at the regular session of the City Council tonight. The opposition has been bringing every influence to bear in a final effort to break the strength of the Mayor in his determined stand for what he calls "crying need," viz., to compel the hundreds of bachelors and spinsters of Fort Dodge, which town he claims has more of their kind than any other city in the West, to marry under penalty of a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100.

The opposition has already won the support of Judge Basby, a member of the Council heretofore in favor of the marriage ordinance. Spinsters and bachelors have combined their forces in battle array to support the opposition in its fight for the defeat of the measure. Mayor Bennett, on the other hand, is equally determined that his ideas on the subject shall become a law. With this condition of affairs the town is wrought up to such an extent that communities, neighborhoods and families are at war with each other in support of their views of the matter.

The dissension has entered the ranks of the business men. The spinsters inaugurated a boycott today on the Grand Leader department store because its manager, Jerome Court[illegible], had openly avowed his intention of supporting the Mayor in his fight. One enterprising furniture dealer has advertised that he will give to the [illegible] couple who will be married in his [illegible] display window by Mayor Bennett a fine bedroom suit as a bridal present.

Threatening communications continue to pour in. The Mayor's mail this morning required a bushel basket to hold it and his entire time is occupied in assuming charge of his large and extensive correspondence. Nearly all of the communications are anonymous. Some of them are very insulting, and have aroused the Mayor's wrath by their arrogance and threatening aspect. "I hate a coward," he said this morning as he finished reading an especially insulting letter from Grand Rapids, Mich., "and if the writer of this anonymous letter were before me at the present time I would deliver to him the dressing down he so justly deserves. I have always been proud of my record as a soldier in the Civil War. I have been in some pretty tight places with the enemy, but no one can justly accuse me of ever deviating from my [illegible] Powder River.

"When I was out on Powder River our camp was suddenly attacked one day by a roving band of [illegible] Indians. We mounted our horses and took after the redskins and at the first shot was fired. Just how far I had gone before I was cornered I do not know, but upon looking back I found I was alone and the Indians had suddenly slowed up in their [illegible]. I concluded I was either run or fight.

"Leaping out of the saddle, I sought shelter behind a friendly mound of earth and proceeded to empty my Winchester into the band. A few well directed shots convinced them that the danger was [illegible] and they [illegible] and fled. I have just as much nerve in me now as I had then and don't propose to allow any one to dictate to me what my conscience will not support.

"This ordinance will go through [illegible] will know the reason why. When it becomes a law, I propose to see that it is enforced by the entire police force."

Queen Maud of Norway is [illegible] collecting pieces of ivory. The specimens she most prizes are tusks of elephants shot by her father, King Edward, and the Duke of Connaught. The Czar of Russia is represented by wild boar tusks taken from [illegible] shot by himself.

Mrs. Jones: Mr. Jones [illegible] trousers back. He says they [illegible] anywhere near long enough.

Snip (tailor): That's funny. When I went to collect my bill from him [illegible] told me he [illegible] was in his life and [illegible] ers accordingly.—[Toledo Blade.]
